Worldwide VAT, GST and Sales Tax Guide

EY

Building a better working world

Preface

While greatly accelerating the pace of all their tax legislation, the world's governments continue to rely heavily on indirect taxes as an invaluable source of revenue. As a result, there is increased risk that taxpayers will be caught unprepared, making a current, detailed guide like the Worldwide VAT, GST and Sales Tax Guide all the more valuable.

The guide's organization is straightforward. Chapter by chapter, from Albania to Zimbabwe, we summarize indirect tax systems in 150 jurisdictions. All of the content is current on 1 January 2024, with more recent additions noted.

Each chapter begins with contact information for the key people in that jurisdiction's EY member firm offices. We then answer the basic questions practitioners ask about indirect tax systems:

- At a glance, what are the basic features of the major indirect tax in this jurisdiction?
- What is the scope, and who is taxable?
- What are the rates, and how has the country defined the time of supply?
- When can taxpayers recover VAT that they have paid on inputs?
- What are the rules on filing, payment and penalties?

The Worldwide VAT, GST and Sales Tax Guide is published annually, along with two companion guides on broad-based taxes: the Worldwide Corporate Tax Guide and the Worldwide Personal Tax and Immigration Guide. Additional tax guides on more specific topics can be found at ey.com/taxguides.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- The supply of goods and services performed by a taxable person in Albania
- Importation of goods into Albania, regardless of the status of the importer
- Services supplied to taxable persons in Albania by service providers, of which the place of business is outside Albania
- Certain supplies of services rendered to nontaxable persons in Albania by providers whose place of business is outside Albania, such as digital services and services related to an immovable property located in Albania

The use of goods or services purchased or produced in the course of a business activity for private purposes constitutes a taxable supply to the extent the VAT on those supplies was deducted.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Albania the VAT law provides for the application of the use and enjoyment rules as a deviation from the main rules for determining the place of supply of services. These rules apply to services such as advertising, telecommunication and broadcasting regardless of whether they are provided to taxable or nontaxable persons, i.e., business to business (B2B) and business to consumer (B2C).

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Albania, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- A group of assets forming part of a business activity, or an entire business activity is transferred
- The transfer is performed between two taxable persons (B2B)
- The transferee ensures the continuity of the business activity or part of it transferred

Transactions between related parties. In Albania, for a transaction between related parties the value for VAT purposes is calculated at market value. The market value is defined as the consideration that an independent buyer would be willing to pay for the supply of goods or services under open market conditions. In case no comparable value are available, the market value can be determined as follows:

- For supplies of goods, an amount not less than the purchase price or the acquisition costs at the moment of the supply
- For supply of services, an amount not less than the full costs incurred for performing the services

C. Who is liable

Any person (entity or individual) that makes supplies in the course of the person's independent economic activity is liable to VAT.

Taxable activities also include "the exploitation of tangible or intangible property for the purposes of obtaining income from that on a continuing basis."

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Albania does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A taxable person established in Albania is obliged to register for VAT purposes and charge VAT if the annual turnover in the previous 12 months exceeds ALL10 million. Once this threshold of ALL10 million is exceeded, any supply shall be subject to VAT and the taxable person is required to apply for VAT registration within 15 days.

Taxable persons with an annual turnover less than ALL10 million but greater than ALL5 million may voluntarily register for VAT, and that taxable person must remain registered for a minimum of two years.

Persons involved in import or export activities must register for VAT regardless of the amount of turnover.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Albania.

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in Albania where it has any establishment characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources that would enable it to provide the services that it supplies, and/or to receive and use services supplied to it for its own needs.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a fixed establishment in Albania.

No VAT registration threshold applies to taxable supplies made in Albania by a non-established business. A non-established business must register for VAT in Albania if it engages in any of the following supplies:

- Supply of goods located in Albania at the time of supply
- Certain supplies of services to nontaxable persons in Albania, such as digital services and services related to an immovable property located in Albania
- Import and export activities in Albania

Tax representatives. A non-established business must appoint a resident VAT representative to register for VAT purposes in Albania unless the reverse-charge mechanism applies. The VAT representative may act on behalf of the taxable person for all purposes related to VAT and is jointly liable for compliance with all VAT obligations of the non-established business.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism applies to supplies of services made by a non-established business to taxable persons in Albania. A non-established business is not required to register for VAT if all its taxable supplies in Albania fall under the reverse-charge mechanism.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Albania.

Digital economy. Albania follows the destination principle regarding cross-border digital services supplied to nontaxable persons in Albania. The place of supply of cross-border digital services to nontaxable persons is the place where the nontaxable person is established or where it has its permanent address or usually resides.

Therefore, nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2C supplies are required to register and account for VAT in Albania. This is done by appointing a VAT representative in Albania to account for and pay VAT liability. No VAT registration threshold applies.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B supplies are not required to register for VAT in Albania. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

Imported goods are exempt from import duties and VAT, if the goods are purchased through the internet and imported into Albania through postal mail with a value lower than EUR22 (and its equivalent in ALL).

Online marketplaces and platforms. The above rules for the digital economy also apply to online marketplaces and platforms, i.e., the place of supply for services supplied by electronic means to nontaxable persons is the place where that person is established or where they have their permanent address or usually resides.

Registration procedures. The application for registration can be performed online, in person at the counters of the Agency for the Delivery of Integrated Services Albania (ADISA) or in person at the National Business Center (NBC). A taxable person may personally or through an authorized person submit the registration form and requested documents with the NBC. The registration procedure generally lasts two to three working days. The required documents for registration are as follows:

- Copies of the identity card of the administrator or the authorized person
- Authorization for the person submitting the application for registration if different from the administrator of the company
- Copies of identity cards of the shareholders of the company
- Founding act and statute if drafted in two different documents
- Commercial extract of the foreign company registering a branch/subsidiary in Albania
- Good standing certificate of the foreign company registering a branch/subsidiary in Albania

The application for VAT registration of the taxable person must be performed within 30 days after the foundation date and before the effective start of the business activity.

Deregistration. Every taxable person registered for VAT may request to be deregistered if turnover fell below the VAT registration threshold during the previous 12 months. Such deregistration becomes effective 12 months after the request. Taxable persons ceasing their economic activity must request deregistration within 15 days from the termination of their activity.

Changes to VAT registration details. In case the taxable person notices that its turnover falls below the VAT registration threshold or vice versa, they must inform the tax authorities and request the change within 15 days.

The taxable person must also inform the tax authorities within 15 days for the following changes to its VAT registration details: name change, operating activity address or contact changes, legal status change, opening/closing of branches or sectors and change in the economic activity type.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 20%
- Reduced rate: 6%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Certain supplies are referred to as "exempt-with-credit" (i.e., zero-rated), which means that no VAT is chargeable, but the supplier may recover the input tax (effectively zero-rated).

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports of goods
- International transport
- Services relating to maritime activities
- Supplies under diplomatic arrangements
- Supply of gold to the Central Bank of Albania
- Intermediary services related to zero-rated supplies or services rendered abroad

Examples of goods and services taxable at 6%

- Supplies of accommodation services by the accommodation facilities
- Supplies made within five-star accommodation structures of an internationally known trademark
- Supplies of accommodation and restaurant services, excluding beverages, by the certified structures operating in agritourism

- Supplies of advertising services by audiovisual media
- Supply of licensed public transport equipped with electric motors, with nine plus one places or more
- Supply of books of any type
- Supply of construction work services for public investments in sports clubs/sports federations or for investments in sports infrastructure undertaken by private entities

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Hospital services and medical care
- Insurance and reinsurance services
- Supply and rent of land and buildings
- Financial services
- Postal services
- Education services
- Hydrocarbon exploration operations
- Printing and sale of publications
- Betting, lotteries and gambling
- Importation of machinery and equipment used for inward processing of goods or in the implementation of contracts of ALL50 million or more
- Importation of production machinery for small business
- Import of raw materials used for the manufacture of medicines, with the exception of dual-use substances, carried out by holders of production authorization
- Agricultural machinery
- Agricultural inputs, such as fertilizers, pesticides, seeds and seedlings
- Veterinary services, except veterinary services for domestic animals
- New vehicles with electric motor, zero km, that have not been previously registered for circulation in any other country
- Supply related to the construction/reconstruction process in the case of natural disasters upon receipt of the authorization by the General Tax Director
- Supply of services and goods directly to the constructor engaged with the building process in the case of natural disasters, when authorized by the General Tax Director

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The Minister of Finance may grant through a decree the right to opt for taxation for the following VAT exempt supplies:

- Financial transactions
- The supply of building and of the land on which the building stands
- The supply of land
- Leasing of immovable property

E. Time of supply

VAT becomes due at the "time of supply" unless otherwise provided in law. The time of supply is considered to occur when an invoice is required to be issued or when goods or services are delivered. The invoice should be issued at the moment that the supply of goods or services takes place. If the payment is made before the delivery of goods or services, the moment of supply is the moment when the payment is made.

The time of supply for a continuous supply of goods and services, including construction services, is considered to be the month when the invoice is issued. Invoices should be issued on a monthly basis.

Deposits and prepayments. Where a payment is to be made on account before the goods or services are supplied, VAT shall become chargeable on receipt of the payment and on the amount received.

In case of any amount paid or retained in the form of a guarantee deposit in relation to the performance of a supply of goods or service, VAT shall become chargeable at the moment the deposit is received. In case the amount of deposit is returned to the customer, then the necessary adjustment should be made for VAT purposes.

Exemption from the above is granted to the guarantees deposited in a bank deposit account or to a third party, without the right of use. In such case, VAT shall become chargeable at the moment that the deposit guarantee is executed.

Continuous supplies of services. Supplies of services performed on a continuous basis, within a period of time (as prescribed in the supply agreement between the customer and supplier, for example invoices to be issued on a monthly basis), including construction operations, shall be deemed to have been made in the same month in which the invoice is issued.

Where payment is made in advance of the invoice being issued, there are no special time of supply rules in Albania for this scenario. As such, the general time of supply rule applies (as outlined above), which is when the payment is made.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Albania for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. Invoices for reverse-charge services are required to be issued by the 10th day of the month following the month in which VAT becomes due.

Leased assets. In the case of leased assets, the VAT becomes due at the time when the periodic monthly payments are invoiced to the lessee. In the case of a financial lease, whereby the option to buy the leased assets is exercised, VAT becomes due on the sale of assets, at the moment the final invoice is issued to the customer.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is the date of importation or the date on which the goods exit a duty suspension regime.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is the VAT that the taxable person paid on the purchase of goods and services that were used to provide taxable goods and services in Albania. A taxable person may also recover VAT related to the overseas supply of services (outside the scope of Albanian VAT) that would have been taxable if made in Albania. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is the VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Albania, VAT paid on imports of goods and VAT applied to reverse-charge services.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Albania is five years. The taxable person's right to claim a VAT refund or offset the VAT credit with output tax expires five years from the filing date of the respective VAT return or its amendment.

Nondeductible input tax. Not all input tax is deductible. Generally, input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods or services that are not used for business purposes.

Examples of items for which input tax is not deductible

- Expenditure on fuel unless the payer is a company that purchases the fuel for trading purposes
- Expenditure on trips and per diems and hotel accommodation
- Expenditure on cars, unless the business activity consists of the trading or renting of cars such as car rentals, taxi services and ambulances

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Expenditure relating to publicity and promotional articles
- Expenditure relating to representative expenses up to the amount of expenses that are recognized as deductible for corporate income tax purposes
- Expenditure on fuel used solely for carrying on taxable economic activity up to the limit defined by a decree issued by the Minister of Finance

Partial exemption. If a supply of a good or service is used partly for purposes of taxable supplies and partly for exempt supplies, the taxable person may not deduct input tax in full. This situation is known as "partial exemption." The calculation of the amount of input tax that may be recovered is made on a pro rata basis by using the following formula:

During the tax year, the pro rata VAT due may be calculated based on the preceding year's results. The calculation must be adjusted by 31 January of the following year to reflect the actual results of the tax year. If the change in deductible input tax is less than ALL20,000 from the change of the initial and actual pro rata VAT, there is no need for a VAT adjustment. The taxable person should inform the tax authorities for the initial pro rata VAT that will use during the year, by no later than 31 January.

The calculation does not include supplies of capital goods used by the taxable person for business purposes, nor does it include incidental real estate and financial transactions.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Albania. Special methods are not allowed in Albania.

Capital goods. Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is generally deducted in the VAT year in which the goods are acquired. If the business comprises both taxable and exempt supplies and the capital goods do not only serve taxable supplies, the amount of input tax that can be recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition. The amount of input tax recovered is adjusted over time if during the adjustment period the taxable person's pro rata calculation changes or the capital good is transferred to an exempt activity with no right to deduction.

The capital goods adjustment period is as follows:

- Immovable capital assets: 10 years
- Movable capital assets: 5 years

In case of pro rata changes during the adjustment period, the adjustment is made for 1/5 for movable capital goods and 1/10 for immovable capital goods, while for transfer of capital goods to an exempt activity the adjustment is made for the remaining years of the adjustment period.

Refunds. A taxable person may claim a VAT refund if both of the following conditions are satisfied:

- The taxable person carried forward the relevant amount as a VAT credit balance in the following three consecutive months.
- The amount claimed exceeds ALL400,000.

The taxable person must file a "Request for Refund" form, as prescribed in the VAT law, with the relevant tax office. The tax office must verify the fulfillment of the refund conditions and approve the refund within 60 days.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Albania is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Taxable persons who have not received partial or total payment for a taxable supply may claim the VAT charged as input tax if all the following conditions are satisfied:
- The debt has remained outstanding for more than six months
- The amount has been written off
- A court has recognized the debt as uncollectible because the debtor is insolvent

Noneconomic activities. To the extent that they do not distort competition, payments received by not-for-profit organizations, such as grants, donations and membership dues, are considered to be noneconomic activities for which no VAT is due. The same applies to the performance of public services by the public authorities.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Albania is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports. The invoice must comply with the requirements set out in the VAT law and issued in accordance with the provision of the Law No. 87/2019, "On the invoice and the turnover monitoring system" and its bylaws.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged on a supply of goods or services; a debit note may be used to increase the amount of VAT. Tax credit and debit notes must be cross-referenced to the original VAT invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Albania.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Albania. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Albania.

All taxable persons are required to use electronic invoicing for cash and noncash transactions. All invoices must be verified in real time by the tax authority before issuance. According to the law on fiscalization, the invoices must be generated directly from the online system of the tax authorities.

The authenticity of the origin and the integrity of the electronic invoice's content must be guaranteed by registration of the taxable person at the tax authorities' central online platform.

Simplified VAT invoices. The taxable persons subject to the regime of small businesses (i.e., annual turnover less than ALL10 million) may issue simplified invoices without VAT, but only of goods or services paid in cash. Simplified invoices should also follow the rules on electronic invoicing.

Note that according to the new law on fiscalization, there are no simplified VAT invoices but only simplified invoices, which are issued from taxable persons who are not registered for VAT purposes and the transaction is conducted in cash. If the taxable person is voluntarily registered for VAT purposes, even if it does not reach the VAT registration threshold, the standard e-invoice shall be used.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Albania. Self-billing is only allowed under the following conditions:

- Both the supplier and the customer should be taxable persons registered for VAT.
- The supply should be taxable, not exempt.
- A written agreement should be in place between the supplier and the buyer, in which is provided for a procedure for the acceptance by the supplier of the invoices issued by the buyer.
- Any invoice issued by the buyer in the name and on behalf of the supplier must be approved by the latter.
- The buyer should notify the tax authority in advance.
- The buyer should undertake the obligation to declare and pay VAT in the name and on behalf of the supplier.
- The invoice issued by the buyer should identify the data (name, VAT ID, address, etc.) of the supplier and should indicate "Self-Billing."

Proof of exports. No VAT is chargeable on exported goods if exporters have documented their supplies with an official customs declaration.

Foreign currency invoices. An Albanian VAT invoice must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Albanian lek (ALL). If an invoice is received in a foreign currency, the amounts must be converted into lek. The exchange rate used for imports is determined by Customs, while the exchange rate for domestic VAT supplies is the rate published by the Central Bank of Albania for the date of the invoice.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. For supplies made by a taxable person to a nontaxable person (private consumer) the supplier must issue a fiscal invoice regardless of the invoice amount.

Records. A taxable person is required to keep records, including records of all supplies made by them, all supplies made to them, and all imports and exports of goods carried out by them as part of their economic activity, in compliance with the law "On accounting and financial statements."

In Albania, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include records of all invoices and any supporting documents issued by/to the taxable person, in respect of supplies made or received.

In Albania, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. There is no provision in the Albanian VAT law on where records should be held. However, in practice, records may be held in or outside of Albania. If the records are held outside of Albania, they must be easily accessible upon request by the tax authorities.

Record retention period. The period during which the taxable person must ensure that the invoices and supporting documents are retained, is five calendar years, starting from the next year following the invoice/document issuance. They shall be retained in the original form in which they were sent or made available, whether in paper or electronic form. In addition, in case of invoices stored by electronic means, the data that guarantee the authenticity of the origin of the invoices and the integrity of their contents, must also be stored by electronic means.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Albania. The taxable person has the right to designate the place of storage of the invoices or of the information retained, provided that they make them available to the competent authorities immediately upon request. If records are kept on a computer or as electronic data, the taxable person should provide tax authorities access to the place where records are held and access to computers or other devices to inspect the records that are held as electronic data.

I. Returns and payments

Periodic returns. The tax period is a calendar month. Purchase and sales ledgers must be submitted monthly by the 10th day of the following month. Following the recent fiscalization reform the VAT return is automatically generated by the tax authorities based on the information provided in the sale and purchase ledgers. However, taxable persons have the right to review and amend the VAT return accordingly. The deadline for VAT payment is the 14th day of the month following the tax period. For imports, VAT is payable upon importation.

For a taxable person that is newly registered, the first tax period begins on the date of the registration, as stated in the certificate of registration, and ends on the last day of that month.

VAT payable by a taxable person for a tax period equals the VAT on the total taxable value of supplies made during the tax period minus any input tax allowed as a deduction.

Periodic payments. VAT payable by a taxable person for a tax period equals the VAT on the total taxable value of supplies made during the tax period minus any input tax allowed as a deduction. The VAT must be paid by bank transfer from an Albanian bank.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Albania for all taxable persons. Taxable persons must electronically submit the purchase and sales ledgers and VAT returns. The electronic submission must be made online through the tax authorities' system at https://efiling.tatime.gov.al/cats_public/Account/LogOn.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Albania.

Special schemes. Travel agencies. This scheme applies to transactions where the travel agency deals with customers in its own name and uses the supplies of other taxable persons in the provision of travel services. In this case, the taxable amount for services supplied to customers is the travel agency's margin, i.e., the difference between the total amount charged to the customer and the actual purchase price the travel agency paid for the services. The input tax incurred by travel agents may not be deducted.

The special scheme does not apply to travel agencies that only act as intermediary, in which case the supplies and services of other taxable persons can be treated as disbursements.

Secondhand goods, works of art, collector's items and antiques. Taxable persons must electronically submit the purchase and sales ledgers and VAT returns.

Compensation scheme for farmers. The taxable person (purchaser) of the agricultural services and goods is required to issue an invoice for purchases from farmers benefiting from this scheme for the taxable amount exclusive of VAT and then add VAT at the rate of 6%. The buyer pays the farmer the total price including the VAT calculated. The additional 6% is considered to be a compensation for the farmer for the input tax that has been incurred. The taxable person (purchaser) must account for the VAT on the invoice but is entitled to recover the VAT subject to normal recovery rules.

Investment gold. A special VAT scheme applies to investment gold. The taxable value of processed gold, imported gold and processed gold supplied domestically, does not include the value of gold used as raw material. At the same time, the taxable value of an import or supply within the country includes material components such as: silver, precious stones, plastics, labor, processing wastage, etc.

- Taxable value of imported processed gold:
  - The taxable value of imported processed gold, shall be determined in accordance with customs and tax legislation. The supporting document is the foreign supplier's invoice issued to the domestic buyer, indicating the value of gold converted into pure gold, out of the total value of imported gold. In absence of such a breakdown, the importer cannot exclude from the taxable value of the import the value of gold used as raw material.

- Taxable value of processed gold supplied domestically:
  - The value of a supply within the country is the full payment for that supply. The taxable value of processed gold supplied domestically is calculated by deducting from the full supply charge the value of gold used as raw material. The supporting document is the invoice of the supplier indicating separately the value of the gold used as the raw material. In absence of such a breakdown, the supplier cannot exclude from the taxable basis the value of gold used as raw material. Irrespective of the supply nature, wholesale or retail, and irrespective of the supply value, the taxable person shall issue a tax invoice as provided in VAT law.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Albania. In the case of underpaid VAT for a certain tax period and if no tax audit has been undertaken by the tax authorities, the taxable person can voluntarily amend the VAT return to adjust the situation. No penalties for late payment of VAT will be applicable.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A taxable person can submit a new amended tax return in cases when it notices that the original submitted tax return is not correct. The amended tax return must be submitted within 36 months from the moment of original tax return submission with the condition that this return has not been the subject of assessment from the tax authorities. An exceptional case is that the taxable person has the right to amend the tax return, even though it has been audited, if the amendment will result with higher tax liability. The tax return can be submitted online through the e-account of the taxable person.

Digital tax administration. The fiscalization reform aims to provide the tax authorities with a better control system and more efficient tax inspection. The fiscalization system is a set of measures used to reduce tax evasion in cash and noncash transactions. In the process of fiscalization, all transactions (invoices) are reported in real time to the tax authorities. For the purpose of identifying and tracking each transaction, each invoice is given a unique invoice number. The fiscalization process is regulated by Law No. 87/2019 "On fiscalization and turnover monitoring system" ("law on fiscalization") and Instruction No.16, dated 3 April 2020.

The law on fiscalization entered into force as of 1 January 2021 for cashless transactions between taxable persons and public institutions; 1 July 2021 for cashless transactions between taxable persons; and 1 September 2021 for cash transactions by taxable persons regardless of tax liability or annual turnover realized.

The law on fiscalization covers all taxable persons who issue invoices as per the law on VAT, public institutions, banks, financial institutions other than banks and other entities that offer services of electronic invoices payment. Every taxable person is subject to the law on fiscalization, except agricultural producers who are registered in the compensation scheme according to the law on VAT; taxable persons providing public transport and taxable persons who make supply goods/services that qualify for VAT exemption under the law on VAT.

The taxable persons who are already registered as such with the tax authorities become automatically subject of the law on fiscalization. The new taxable persons who register in the National Business Center are to be registered automatically as taxable persons subject to the law on fiscalization.

The taxable persons subject to the law on fiscalization must submit through the central platform of invoices managed by National Agency for Information Society (NAIS) the details related to the place and type of business, the operator who will be responsible for the invoice issuance through the fiscal system and the producer/maintainer of the software used. The latter should be independently registered with NAIS and certified as a software producer/maintainer.

As per the new law on fiscalization, there will be no need of manual filing of the purchase and sales ledgers, as they will be automatically generated from the system of the tax authorities. The taxable person, however, must review the purchase and sales ledger by the 10th day of the following month and adjust it with information as appropriate.

According to the new law, the invoice must contain details such as "Fiscal Invoice" title, date and time of the invoice issuance, invoice number, the unique identification number, name and address for both, the seller and buyer. The invoice details must also include the code of the place where the supply of goods/services took place and the code of the operator who generates the invoice from the system, the quantity and description of the goods/services supplied, the total value including any discounts and the total amount due, the payment manner, the unique invoice number and the security number of the invoice issuer and the QR code.

Penalties for late registration. Noncompliance with the requirement to register or to update registration data triggers a penalty that can range from ALL10,000 to ALL15,000.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Each late tax filing is subject to a penalty that can range from ALL5,000 to ALL10,000. In addition, default interest applies.

Penalties for errors. Erroneous completion of a tax filing or a tax refund claim is subject to a penalty of 0.06% of the tax due for each day of delay, up to a maximum of 365 days. In addition, default interest applies.

The late notification of or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details is considered an administrative offense and can be subject to a penalty of ALL15,000. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

According to the Albanian tax legislation, the statute of limitation is five years from the filing of a tax return or its amendment. The statute of limitation is suspended if a new tax assessment is issued either as a result of a tax appeal or a tax audit or investigation. Moreover, the statute of limitation is suspended or voided if the taxable person is or becomes subject to penal proceedings in relation to its tax affairs.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- Sales transactions, construction works and services of industrial, commercial or artisanal nature, when they are carried out in Algeria on a usual or occasional basis
- Import operations

In respect of the Algerian VAT territoriality, a business is deemed performed in Algeria:
- Sales transactions: when they are carried out with conditions of delivery in Algeria
  Or
- Other operations: where the service rendered, the right assigned, the object rented, or the carried-out studies are used or exploited in Algeria

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. As outlined above, a service is taxed in Algeria if it is "used and enjoyed" in Algeria. If a service delivered by a non-established supplier is used and enjoyed in Algeria, there is no requirement for this supplier to register locally for VAT purposes unless this service triggers a permanent establishment (PE) in Algeria, in such case the foreign supplier should be tax registered in Algeria (for all taxes including VAT). However, in case no PE is triggered in Algeria for the foreign supplier, the local customer will be in charge of withholding tax (WHT) reporting and payment (including notably VAT) in case no double-tax treaty exists between both jurisdictions or paying the VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism in case a double tax treaty exists and provides a neutralization or reduced tax rate for the WHT.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Algeria, a TOGC is not a concept that explicitly exists locally. As such, there is no specific guidance on the criteria and requirements for a transfer of business to satisfy the requirements of a TOGC. Nevertheless, in general, a transfer of business should not be subject to VAT, as it could not be considered as a turnover (not included in the list of taxable transactions as provided above).

Transactions between related parties. Referring to a tax administration note dated 6 August 2013 on transfer pricing and profit shifting in Algeria, intercompany transactions must be carried out in accordance with the "arm's-length principle." Also, it provides that the transfer price compliance with the arm's-length principle shall be determined considering:

- The nature of the product, its quality and novelty, the delivery time, the presence of intangible elements attached to the product and the degree of finishing
- The conditions of the transaction, the volume of sales, the geographical location, the date of the transaction, the accessories to the sale and the presence of intangible elements attached to the transaction

The Algerian legislature does not provide valuation methods. The accounting and financial methods should be accepted and used by the valuation experts. However, transfer pricing methods provided by the Algerian legislation are similar to Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) methods.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any person carrying out transactions within the scope of VAT, whether such transactions give rise to the payment of VAT or are exempt. Persons liable for VAT in Algeria are:

- Producers, such as:
  - Individuals or legal persons who, mainly or incidentally, extract or manufacture goods, fashion them or transform them as manufacturers or entrepreneurs of manufacturing activities to give them their final form or their commercial presentation under which they will be delivered for use or consumption by the consumer, whether the processing operations involve the use of other materials or not.
  - Individuals or legal persons who replace the manufacturer to carry out, either in its factories or outside its factories, all operations relating to the manufacture or the definitive commercial form of products such as packaging or in receptacles, the shipments or deposits of such goods whether they are sold under the brand name or on behalf of those who carry out such operations.

  – Persons or companies that have the operations referred to above, carried out by third parties.
- Wholesalers, performing the following:
  – Deliveries relating to articles which, because of their nature or use, are not usually used by individuals.
  – Deliveries of quantities of goods of the same prices, performed in bulk or in detail.
  – Deliveries of products for resale, regardless of the quantity delivered.
- Subsidiaries, performing the following:
  – A subsidiary company would be any company that ensures the operating part of one or more branches of another company, which is under the control or direction of the latter.
  – Independent professionals opting for the common tax regime option (added by Article 93 of the Finance Act for 2022).

Self-supplies are subject to VAT. The taxable base is determined as follows:
- For self-supplies of movable assets: by the wholesale prices of similar goods or otherwise by the price increased by the normal profit of the manufactured goods
- For self-supplies of immovable assets: by the cost price

Exemption from registration. There are no VAT registration requirements applicable to non-established businesses that source cross-border supplies of goods or services. Indeed, there is no registration dedicated to VAT only, but rather a tax registration (covering all applicable taxes, notably VAT) required for non-established businesses if a taxable presence is triggered in Algeria.

For imported goods, there is no requirement for the nonresident supplier to collect the Algerian VAT. In practice, the VAT is paid by the Algerian importer when the goods are cleared at customs.

For imported intangibles (i.e., supplies that do not require payment of the VAT at customs), if the Algerian client is a business, it is required to reverse-charge VAT.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Taxable persons under the common law taxation regime may voluntarily apply for VAT. They must be natural or legal persons whose activity is outside the scope of VAT, insofar as they deliver:
- Through exports
- To oil companies
- To other VAT liable taxable persons
- To companies benefiting from the VAT-free purchase option

Group registration. In Algeria, the concept of a "VAT group" does not exist, but rather a "tax group." A tax group includes at least two Algerian entities under the form of a joint stock company (i.e., Società per Azioni [SpA]) where one, called the "parent company" holds the other(s) at 90% minimum of share capital.

A tax group can apply for the consolidation accounts' option (i.e., consolidation of balance sheet accounts) excluding companies operating in Oil & Gas (O&G) activities. If this option is approved, it should apply irrevocably for four years.

It is possible to consolidate VAT at the level of a group's head company, which must be an Algerian company. Note that it is not possible for a non-established business to be a member of tax group.

The group will be considered as a single entity for all tax purposes. Nonetheless, no specific VAT registration of the group is required (tax registration is required covering all taxes).

A tax group option is valid for four irrevocable years.

Members of a tax group in Algeria are not jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties. Instead, each entity of the group is responsible for its own VAT debts and penalties.

Transactions between members of a tax group should not be subject to VAT.

Fixed establishment. Algerian common tax regime does not provide a specific definition of the concept of permanent establishment (PE). However, its Article 162 provides that foreign companies carrying out an activity in Algeria which requires the presence of their experts for a duration exceeding 183 days per a period of 12 months should be considered as having a taxable presence in the country; consequently, they should register their contracts and keep their books locally.

In Algeria, a foreign entity which has a taxable presence/PE in this country should be subject to the common tax regime including the VAT.

Non-established businesses. VAT registration is not allowed in Algeria for non-established businesses (i.e., those that do not have a presence in Algeria). However, if such businesses carry out transactions deemed to be within the scope of Algerian VAT, they may be subject to Algerian VAT by way of the reverse-charge mechanism.

Tax representatives. A tax representative can be appointed for PE purposes. However, no specific tax representative can be appointed for VAT registration purposes only.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable to the supply of services by taxable persons established outside Algeria in case country that has a double-tax treaty with Algeria, with no legal presence locally (and if no taxable presence/permanent establishment is triggered by the onshore activities). The local customer must withhold and pay the due VAT on behalf of the foreign provider and declare it on monthly tax returns.

Domestic reverse charge. There is no domestic reverse charge in Algeria.

Digital economy. The following supplies are exempted from VAT until 31 December 2026:
- Expenses relating to the leasing of bandwidth intended exclusively for the provision of fixed internet services
- Internet access royalties
- Web server hosting costs at data centers located in Algeria and the domain ".dz"
- Website design and development costs
- Maintenance and support costs relating to website access and hosting activities in Algeria

There is no registration threshold for VAT purposes only in Algeria. A nonresident that provides electronically supplied services is subject to withholding tax (WHT) at the rate of 30% covering all taxes, including VAT; the filing and payment of which should be borne by the local customer on behalf of the foreign provider. This applies for both business-to-business (B2B) and business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Algeria.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No further special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Algeria.

Registration procedures. Every individual who would practice an industrial, commercial or non-commercial profession and every legal entity or permanent establishment must, within 30 days of the commencement of its activities, file at the territorially competent tax authority a declaration of existence. The declaration of existence request must be accompanied by:
- A copy of the Articles of Association and trade register for the legal entities
- The corporate name
- The statistical identification number of the company
- A copy of the lease agreement related to the office
- The bank account number

- If it is a permanent establishment, a copy of the contract related to its local project
- A copy of the agreement or the administrative authorization if the activity or the place where the activity is performed is subject to a prior authorization

After filing the declaration of existence, the taxable person is provided with a registration certificate, which applies as a registration for all tax purposes (there is no specific registration for VAT). Afterward, the taxable person obtains a tax identification card, which includes the tax identification number.

The application for registration must be submitted by the taxable person itself or its legal representative or by any other person with a power of attorney to register a taxable person. Accordingly, there is no specific online registration for VAT purposes.

Deregistration. There is no special procedure or form required to deregister. It should be part of the overall tax deregistration. However, companies that cease to be subject to VAT are required to attach to their declaration a detailed statement of the stocks of goods that they hold in their factories, stores or depots.

Changes to VAT registration details. There is no VAT registration, but rather a tax registration covering all applicable taxes when required. Any change relevant from a tax perspective should be communicated to the tax authorities as soon as possible. The law fixes a timeline of 10 days only when it is about the closing of a company or regarding a permanent establishment when the contract already submitted for registration purposes has been amended. Any change should be communicated via an official letter (i.e., paper).

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 19%
- Reduced rate: 9%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific provision allows for a reduced rate or exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 9%

- Sales transactions involving the distribution of electricity and natural gas for a consumption of less than 250 kilowatt hours (KWH) and 2,500 thermal units per quarter
- Sales of heavy fuel oil, butane, propane and their mixture consumed in the form of liquefied petroleum gas (GPL-C)
- Pawnbroking transactions with households
- Sale of tickets to cinematographic theaters
- Operations carried out by maritime and air construction sites
- Services related to tourist activities, hotel, spa, classified tourist catering, travel and rental of tourist transport vehicles (with effect until 31 December 2024)
- Recyclable waste, including aluminum, iron, wood, glass, cardboard, plastic, paper, rubber, used tires, used engines, gearbox and lubricating oils, edible oils and fats and lead batteries

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Transactions carried out by a startup (where the taxable person meets certain conditions to be qualified as "startup company")

- Constructions and services relating to the prospecting, research, exploitation, liquefaction or pipeline transport of liquid and gaseous hydrocarbons, carried out by or on behalf of the national hydrocarbon company SONATRACH
- Acquisition operations carried out by banks and financial institutions within the framework of leasing operations
- Sales operations relating to pharmaceutical products mentioned in the national drug nomenclature
- Exportations of goods and services
- Internet access royalties (with effect until 31 December 2026)
- Promoters engaged in activities subject to VAT as part of investment projects eligible for employment support schemes

Note that the following are subject to the "lump sum tax regime" – natural persons exercising industrial, commercial or artisanal activity, whose annual turnover does not exceed DA8 million, excluding some activities listed by the Article 282ter of the Code of Direct Taxes.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. Taxable persons making exempt supplies may opt to tax such supplies by request to the tax authorities.

E. Time of supply

VAT tax point rules depend on the nature of the transaction and the related sector as follows:
- The tax point for the sale of goods is at the earlier of when the goods are physically delivered or when the invoice is issued (i.e., the legal delivery) to the customer.
- The tax point for construction works is the time full or partial payment is made.
- The tax point for services is the time full or partial payment is made.

Deposits and prepayments. Where the deposit is not considered as a part of the price nor as a part of a turnover, then no VAT is due on the deposit, except for a bank deposit, which is considered as a service provided by the bank.

Where the prepayment is part of the total price and therefore subject to VAT, two scenarios are to be considered:
- Goods: the tax point is normally the date of delivery of goods. However, in case of prepayment or advance payment, VAT will be applicable on the amount paid in advance.
- Services: prepayments are considered as partial payments of the price, thus the date the prepayment made is considered as the tax point.

Continuous supplies of services. There are no special time of supply rules in Algeria for continuous supplies of services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The tax law does not explicitly refer to goods delivered for approval; the delivery is considered as completed once the propriety of the goods is transferred from the seller to the buyer. In that case, the taxable event is the approval of the client.

Reverse-charge services. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable to the supply of services by taxable persons established outside Algeria in a country that has concluded a double tax treaty with Algeria, with no legal presence locally (i.e., if no taxable presence/permanent establishment is triggered by the onshore activities). The local customer must pay the due VAT on behalf of the foreign provider and declare it on monthly tax returns.

Leased assets. Leasing operations, services, studies and research as well as any operation other than sales and construction works are subject to VAT at the date of collection or partial payment.

Imported goods. The tax point for imported goods is the date on which the goods are customs cleared.

Deemed supplies. There are no special time of supply rules in Algeria for deemed supplies. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax charged on goods and services supplied to it, for business purposes. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by offsetting it against output tax charged on supplies made. Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Algeria, VAT paid on imports of goods and VAT self-assessed by the taxable recipient under the reverse-charge mechanism.

A valid tax invoice or customs document is compulsory for a VAT refund claim.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Algeria is until 20 December of the following year from when the was input tax was omitted. It must be entered separately from the deductible taxes relating to the current period for which the declaration was made.

Nondeductible input tax. The right to deduct is not available where there is no conformity with the operating principles of VAT. Moreover, input tax is not recoverable on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use).

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Acquisition of passenger's cars that are not considered as the main means of the company
- Restaurant meals and entertainment for employees and clients
- Goods, services, materials, real estate and offices that are not used for the purposes of the carrying on of a taxable activity
- Hotel accommodation for clients
- Reception costs

Examples of Items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Service costs related to the business such as consulting reports, studies
- Lease payments related to the company's office
- Acquisition of goods to be resold to the company's customers

Partial exemption. If an Algerian taxable person performs both exempt and taxable supplies, it may only recover a portion of input tax. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption."

For the calculation of deductible VAT, partial taxable persons are subject to specific rules that have the effect of limiting the deduction to a fraction of the tax collected on their services and goods.

This fraction is equal to the amount of the said tax affected by a general percentage of deduction called "pro rata."

Taxable persons are required to provide, within the first 25 days of March of each year to the tax department where they are registered, the percentage of deduction they apply during the current year, as well as the overall elements used to determine this percentage.

Capital goods. There are no specific regulations that apply to the refund of VAT for capital goods in Algeria. As such, the general input tax recovery rules apply.

Where a capital good is acquired for less than five years and then it is transferred, the VAT deducted upon the asset's acquisition should be reversed according to a pro rata for the remaining years.

Where a taxable person carries out both activities that are "taxable and exempt" (i.e., partial exemption), the deduction of the VAT should be made under the prorate rule. See the subsection Partial exemption above for more details.

Refunds. In case of a VAT credit, it is possible to ask for a refund of VAT in the following four cases:
- Exempt supplies (including exports)
- Supplies to a sector or clients benefiting from a VAT exemption purchase certificate
- Termination of taxable activities
- In case of VAT rate differences between input and output tax

Taxable persons must meet the following conditions for being eligible for a VAT refund:
- Hold regular and compliant bookkeeping
- Provide a copy of the tax role (no tax debts)
- The reporting of the estimated deductible VAT amount on the monthly declarations by the beneficiary
- The VAT refund request must be made to the director of the competent tax authorities' office no later than the 20th of the month following the quarter for which the refund is requested; taxable persons who are "partially exempted" as defined above should submit their refund request annually (before April 30 of the year related to this VAT credit for which a refund is requested)
- The amount of VAT credit related to a given quarter for which a refund is requested should be equal or more than DZD1 million; this limitation amount does not apply on taxable persons who are "partially exempted" as defined above

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Algeria is not recoverable.

Bad debts. A taxable person is entitled to recover any output tax already accounted for to the tax authorities in respect of bad debts (i.e., where it has not been able to collect VAT due from its customers). VAT on a bad debt is recovered at the VAT rate that was applied to the original transaction. The tax law also requires that the taxable person reverses the input tax already deducted given that the supply operation will not trigger an output tax charge.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Algeria.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Algeria is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Any person liable for VAT who supplies goods or services to another taxable person must issue to the latter an invoice or document serving as an invoice.

Invoices or documents serving as an invoice, drawn up by the taxable person, must necessarily show, in a distinct manner, the following information:
- Name and information of the seller (i.e., corporate name, legal form of the taxable person)
- Name and information of the customer (i.e., denomination, address, trade register number, tax ID)
- Date
- Unit price excluding taxes
- Total price excluding taxes
- Nature and rate of the applicable taxes, notably VAT
- The total amount of the invoice including VAT

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and to be reclaimed on a supply. It is also possible to cancel an incorrect invoice and issue a revised one.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Algeria, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Algeria. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Algeria. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Note: In Algeria, any person liable for VAT who supplies goods or services to another taxable person is allowed to issue an electronic invoice. However, physical invoicing is the common practice.

An electronic invoice does not need to be verified by the tax authority before issuing. It is, however, recommended to print and store all invoices, in the event that any invoices are requested for inspection in the case of a tax audit by the tax authority. The Algerian law provides some requirements for any issued electronic invoice, most notably to include the purchaser/the buyer information, the price excluding taxes, the VAT rate and the net amount. If the electronic invoice does not contain such required information, then the invoice may be rejected, notably by the tax authorities for the deduction of the related VAT.

Simplified VAT invoices. Authorization of simplified VAT invoices is granted expressly to taxable persons by the administration in charge of the commerce and can only be used for transactions that are repetitive and regular sales of goods to the same customer. Summary invoices are allowed for covering transactions with a customer, for a maximum period of one month. It must contain the prescribed information as outlined above for full VAT invoices.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Algeria.

Proof of exports. To benefit from VAT exemption on exports, the taxable person must:
- Provide a document issued by the bank, proving the repatriation of export's payment in foreign currency.
- Join the above document to the annual tax return to justify the exemption of the related profit from corporate income tax (before 30 April of the following year).

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices related to import/export transactions can be issued in a foreign currency. However, the applicable VAT is generally issued in a separate invoice in the domestic currency, which is the Algerian dinar (DZD).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Algeria. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In Algeria, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include accounting documents and in particular, the invoices, contracts, purchase orders, monthly tax returns and identification information related to suppliers and customers.

Records must be kept for a minimum of four years, in line with the tax audit prescription. However, for Algerian trade legislation, the prescription is fixed at 10 fiscal years. In Algeria, company books and records must be held within the country. Such records must be kept at the level of the local company (i.e., in Algeria) and should be available to be provided in a timely manner in the case of tax audits.

Record retention period. Records of invoices must be kept for a period of 10 years, in line with the Algerian trade legislation.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Algeria. Documents can be archived electronically and physically. However, in case of a tax audit, the physical document should be made available for the tax authorities.

I. Returns and payments

Periodic returns. In principle, any person registered for VAT is required to file periodic returns and pay the relevant tax due to the Treasury. The said return is called a G-50 Form and is filed monthly to the competent tax authority (within the first 20 days following the end of the month). The form must state all information related to turnover, collected, payable and deductible VAT.

As per the provisions of the Finance Act 2024, with effect from 1 January 2024, it is mandatory to declare VAT exempt revenue when submitting the monthly VAT return to the tax authorities. As such, the VAT reporting obligations for exempt supplies now falls under the same approach as supplies subject to VAT.

Periodic payments. Payments are to be made alongside the monthly tax return filling and should be remitted to the tax authorities before the 20th of the following month.

In the case of payments after the deadlines, penalties for late payment apply, counted from the date on which they should have been paid. However, when the electronic payments made within the given deadlines suffer a delay not incumbent either on the taxable person or on the financial institution, provided that this delay does not exceed 10 days from the date of the payment, the late penalties do not apply.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Algeria for certain taxable persons. VAT must be reported electronically on the monthly tax return (G50 Form). If the taxable person is registered at the Direction of Large Companies (DGE), which is the tax authority where large companies register, the monthly tax return should be submitted on DGE's online platform called "JIBA-YA'TIC." It is recommended to print it afterward to keep it in the taxable person's records.

If the taxable person is registered at a regional tax inspection, the monthly tax return should be printed and remitted physically to the tax collector.

It is always recommended to keep physical copies at the level of the taxable person, as they are required in case of a tax audit.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Algeria.

Special schemes. Lump sum tax regime. The lump sum tax regime is a single global tax regime that covers VAT, personal income tax (PIT) and tax on professional activity (TAP) and is applicable to natural persons exercising an industrial and commercial, as well as artisanal activities, whose annual turnover does not exceed DA8 million, excluding some activities listed by the Article 282ter of the Code of Direct Taxes. The Code of Direct Taxes sets the rate of lump sum tax as follows: 5%, for the activities of production and sale of goods and 12%, for other activities.

Furthermore, new taxable persons that meet the scope of the lump sum tax regime may opt to be taxed according to the standard regime when they file their declaration of existence, as provided for in Article 183 of the Direct Taxes and Similar Taxes Code.

The lump sum tax regime also applies for natural persons with the status of "auto-entrepreneur." Algerian law defines an auto-entrepreneur as "any individual carrying out, on an individual basis, a profit-making activity listed in the activities qualifying for status." Moreover, and as per local regulation, any individual is eligible for the status of auto-entrepreneur provided they meet the following conditions:

- They have reached legal working age
- They are either of Algerian citizenship and an Algerian resident or a foreigner residing in Algeria
- They perform an activity that is listed in the specified list of activities for the regime
- Their annual turnover does not exceed DZD5 million

Under Algerian regulations, the auto entrepreneur status is only available for specific supplies of services. As such, the following activities are covered by this status:
- Consultancy, expertise and training
- Digital services and related activities
- Home services
- Personal services
- Leisure and entertainment services
- Business services
- Cultural, audiovisual and communication services

Annual returns. Annual returns related to VAT are not required in Algeria. However, an annual tax return in term of corporate income tax (CIT) is required before April 30 of FY(n+1).

Supplementary filings. In the case of a taxable person carrying out wholesale activity, a dedicated template, including the information related to the clients, must be filed. This template should be submitted on an annual basis.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Omissions and errors can be corrected voluntarily by submitting a supplementary monthly tax return (G50 Form) and including the additional tax amount to be paid. An explanative letter should also accompany the corrective returns.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Algeria.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Taxable persons who fail to subscribe their declaration of existence within the required time are liable to a fiscal fine amounting at DZD30,000.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The late filing of the monthly tax return (G50 Form) gives rise to the application of a penalty of 10%. The penalty is based on the amount of unpaid VAT due. This penalty is raised to 25% after the Administration has given notice to the person liable by registered letter with acknowledgment of receipt to regularize its situation within a period of one month. Finally, it is specified that the date of the deposit to be held will be that of the "delivery" to the receiver, therefore the "reception" by the latter and not the sending by the taxable person. Tax authorities can proceed with internal assessments based on the information provided by the taxable person, its clients and its suppliers.

Penalties for errors. When following an audit, it appears that the annual turnover declared by a taxable person is insufficient or in the case of a deduction made in error, the amount of the evaded rights (i.e., the unpaid tax due to the error) is increased by:
- 10% when the amount of rights evaded, per year, is less than or equal to DZD50,000
- 15% when the amount of rights evaded, per exercise, is greater than DZD50,000 and less than or equal to DZD200,000
- 25% when the amount of duties established, per financial year, is greater than DZD200,000
- In case of fraudulent maneuvers, the penalty is set at 100% on all rights. In addition, the tax authorities could instruct to apply the below correctional sanctions, see the subsection Penalties for fraud below, in case the evaded amount exceeds 10% of the amount due.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Rulings. Taxable persons registered with the DGE can submit a ruling request to the tax authorities to be advised on the compliant way of proceeding. A ruling can be opposed to the tax administration to challenge its position.

Penalties for fraud. The breach of the laws and regulations governing VAT are sanctioned by tax or correctional penalties, depending on whether the offenses have been committed in good faith and without fraudulent intent or, on the contrary, the offense is due to fraudulent acts committed knowingly.

The penalties for those who knowingly decrease or try to decrease the total or a part of the taxable basis or the applicable tax are:

- A criminal fine of DZD50,000 to DZD100,000, where the amount of the duties evaded does not exceed DZD100,000.
- Imprisonment from two months to six months and a fine of DZD100,000 to DZD500,000, or only one of these two penalties when the amount of duties evaded is greater than DZD100,000 and does not exceed DZD1 million.
- Imprisonment from six months to two years and a fine of DZD500,000 to DZD2 million, or only one of these two penalties when the amount of duties evaded is greater than DZD1 million and does not exceed DZD5 million.
- Imprisonment from two years to five years and a fine of DZD2 million to DZD5 million, or only one of these two penalties when the amount of duties evaded is greater than DZD5 million and does not exceed DZD10 million.
- Imprisonment from five to 10 years and a fine of DZD5 million to DZD10 million, or only one of these two penalties when the amount of duties evaded is greater than DZD10 million.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable in the case of non-voluntary errors and omissions. However, in the case of fraudulent actions, legal representatives and managers of the companies are jointly and severally liable with the company and would be subject to sanctions mentioned in the subsection above Penalties for fraud.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Algeria is four years. Hence, the tax authorities may review the last four years of returns to identify errors and charge penalties.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
• The supply of goods or services made, used or exploited in Angola by a taxable person
• The importation of goods

For VAT purposes, the territory of Angola includes the land and water, as well as the subsoil in the terms prescribed in Article 3 of the Republic of Angola's Constitution, as well as other territorial or international areas where law or international agreements recognize Angola's tax jurisdiction, such as the concessions map.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Angola, the Angolan VAT Code set forth, as a general rule, that the place of supply of services is deemed to be located in Angola whenever the acquirer has herein its place of business/head office or has a permanent establishment from which the services are acquired or, in the absence of such, when the acquirer has domicile or habitual residence in Angola. However, the Angolan VAT Code also foresees exceptions to the mentioned place of supply of services' general rule determining that "without prejudice to the provisions in the preceding paragraphs to this, the supply of services whose effective use and enjoyment takes place in national territory are always subject to VAT." The definition of "effective use and enjoyment" is not established in the VAT law nor exist any guidelines from the AGT in this regard. However, the AGT tends to consider that services, even if physically carried on in full outside Angola, are herein located in case they are somehow connected with Angola.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Angola, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- The goods and services transferred are capable (as a whole) of forming a separate business in their own right
- The recipient (i.e., transferee) is a taxable person or becomes a taxable person as a result of the transfer, and performs exclusively output transactions that entitle the right of VAT deduction

Transactions between related parties. In Angola, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, the VAT Code sets forth that VAT related to simulated transactions (or simulated price) is not recoverable.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any business entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services or importation of goods in the course of a business in Angola. A taxable person that begins activity must notify the VAT authorities of its liability to register for VAT purposes.

Nevertheless, if the taxable person only incurs a one-off single taxable transaction it will not be required to file the declaration of beginning of activity at the tax authorities regarding such matter. In Angola, there are three VAT regimes in place:

- General VAT regime, which is applicable to taxable persons with an annual turnover (and/or import of goods) of more than AOA350 million.
- Simplified VAT regime, which applies to taxable persons whose annual turnover (and/or import of goods) is higher than AOA25 million and lower than AOA350 million.
- Exclusion VAT regime, applicable to taxable persons with annual turnover lower than AOA25 million. Under this regime, taxable persons are treated as final consumers (they do not charge VAT on the output transactions nor can they deduct any input tax).

Entities with an annual turnover and/or import of goods transactions higher than AOA350 million fall under the general VAT regime and must comply with local bookkeeping and Standard Audit File for Tax (SAF-T) rules from that date, as well as with the remaining VAT obligations.

As a general rule, imports of goods are subject to VAT. The VAT taxable base is the customs value of the goods, obtained according to the customs legislation in force, including the following (if not included already): customs duties, other taxes (except for VAT) or administrative charges due on the import of goods and ancillary costs (such as packaging, transport, insurance and other charges), including ports and airports costs.

Exemption from registration. If the taxable person only incurs a one-off single taxable transaction, it will not be required to file the declaration of beginning of activity at the tax authorities regarding such matter.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. There is the possibility of voluntary registration to the VAT general regime if the following cumulative requirements are met:
- Have organized bookkeeping and updated registration with the Angolan tax authorities
- No tax or customs debts
- Have ERP systems prepared to issue invoices according to the current rules in force
- Be prepared to submit by electronic means the VAT returns and accounting and invoicing information (i.e., SAF-T file)

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Angola.

Fixed establishment. In Angola there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. The AGT does not provide such a definition. Mainly, the only criterion applicable is whether or not the taxable person performs taxable transactions located in Angola.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that is not registered nor has permanent establishment in the territory of Angola. Non-established businesses that perform taxable operations in Angola should nominate a representative who is a taxable person for VAT purposes. The representative must comply with all the obligations created under the VAT Code for taxable persons, namely the declaration and registration obligations. The representative will be liable for the payment of the VAT due. The Angolan VAT Code sets forth that non-established business may opt for a simplified VAT registration (under which there is no requirement to nominate a tax representative). At the time of preparing this chapter, however, such option depends on further regulation, which has not been published (but is expected to occur within the upcoming months).

If no tax representative is nominated, the VAT should be self-assessed and paid by the purchaser (if the purchaser is a taxable person for VAT purposes).

Tax representatives. As mentioned above, non-established businesses should nominate a tax representative for VAT purposes in Angola. In case of default (i.e., nonpayment of VAT due within the legal deadline), the representative and the non-established business are jointly liable for the payment of the VAT due.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable whenever a non-established entity does not nominate a VAT representative and the services are deemed located in Angola, notably:
- Provision of services related with real estate properties located in Angola
- Accommodation and catering services supplied in Angola
- Provision of services connected with movable assets made (total or partially) in Angola
- Provision of services connected with the services relating to the access of cultural, artistic, sporting, scientific, educational and similar events, including the access of fairs and exhibitions (as well as the provision of services considered auxiliary so such activities) in Angola

- Leasing of motor vehicles, pleasure crafts, aircraft or any other vehicles when they are put at the disposal of the recipient in Angola
- Provision of services related with the transport of passengers in Angola
- Other services used, or which exploitation occurs in Angola

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Angola.

Digital economy. With effect from 28 December 2023, distance sales of goods made via e-commerce are considered to be subject to VAT in Angola. This is provided that the purchaser has herein its registered office, domicile or permanent establishment in Angola, or the payment had its origin in Angola.

With reference to the supply of services, the general rule for the place of supply is that the services are deemed to be located/supplied in Angola whenever the customer has in Angola its place of business/head office or has a permanent establishment, from which the services are acquired, or, in the absence of such, when the customer has domicile or habitual residence in Angola. However, the VAT Code sets forth exceptions to such a rule, by establishing other (i.e., taxation) drivers, regardless of the place where the customer is located. One of these exceptions is established by the "use and enjoyment" criteria outlining that the supply of services whose effective use and enjoyment takes place in national territory are always subject to VAT. The definition of effective use and enjoyment is neither foreseen in the VAT law nor do any guidelines exist from the Angolan tax authorities in this regard. Therefore, in practice, nonresident providers of electronically supplied services will be deemed to be located in Angola under the use and enjoyment criteria.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumers (B2C) supplies are required to register and account for VAT on their supplies in Angola.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT in Angola. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due, by way of the reverse-charge mechanism. See the Reverse-charge subsection above.

Online marketplaces and platforms. According to the changes inserted in the VAT Code with effect from 28 December 2023 onward, there is a specific provision that foresees the VAT payment liability on transactions performed via electronic platforms. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, it remains unclear which entities are covered by this provision (due to an ineffective normative reference).

Registration procedures. For VAT purposes, a declaration of the beginning of an activity (Form Modelo 06) must be filed 15 days prior to starting to perform the activity, through electronic means. No other documents are required to be filed as long as the taxable person is already registered at the Commercial Registry. If this is not the case, further documents may be required.

Deregistration. Individuals or companies subject to VAT must, within 30 days from the date of termination of activity, submit a Declaration of Cease of Activity through electronic means.

The activity is deemed ceased when one of the following conditions is verified:
- The company is no longer trading for a period exceeding two consecutive years (note that in this situation, the AGT will presume that the goods of the entity that still exist were sold)
- Extinction of the assets of the company (the goods were sold or were used to private use of the titular, the staff or, more generally, for purposes different of the company's business)
- Transfer of the property of the entity (e.g., TOGC)
- AGT can declare, on their own authority, the cessation of activity, if considering that there are grounds to sustain that the company's activity is being used for fraudulent purposes

Changes to VAT registration details. When there is a change in certain VAT registration details (i.e., name, address, starting/stopping to make imports, exports), the taxable person is obligated to inform the tax authorities of changes within the following 15 days after the change through the submission of a declaration of changes of activity by electronic means.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 14%
- Reduced rate: 5%, 7%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provided for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

There is also a 1% VAT rate that is applicable to the import of goods and the subsequent onward supplies in the province of Cabinda (except for oil sector, light passenger vehicles, alcoholic beverages, tobacco, jewelry and watches). This is with effect from 28 December 2023 and was previously 2%.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports:
  - Dispatched to a foreign country by the seller/exporter
  - Repair, maintenance lease and other operations relating to the ships identified above as well as for aircraft used by companies that develop cross-border traffic activities
  - Supply, conversion, repair, maintenance, freight and rental, including leasing, of vessels and aircraft affected to air and sea navigation companies that are principally engaged in international traffic, as well as the transmission of supply goods placed on board the referred vessels and aircraft, as well as services rendered to meet their direct needs and those of its cargo
  - Supplies of goods destined to international organizations recognized by Angola or to members of the same organisms within the limits and with the conditions established in international agreements concluded by Angola
  - Transport of passengers, cargo or mail proceeding from abroad

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%

- Widely consumed foodstuffs (e.g., meat, fish, milk, sugar) (with effect from 28 December 2023)
- Agricultural inputs listed in Annex I and II to the VAT Code (e.g., live animals, seeds and fertilizers) (with effect from 28 December 2023)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 7%

- Hotel and restaurant services, only if the correspondent service providers comply cumulatively with the following:
  - Registration of all immovable property and/or motor vehicles that are owned or used by the service provider
  - Issuance of invoices through electronic invoicing systems
  - Submission of the due tax returns from previous years

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Medication and other related products for therapeutic and prophylactic ends

- Wheelchair and similar vehicles destined for people with disabilities as well as braille machines and other gadgets used to correct learning disabilities
- Books (including e-books), except those including pornographic content
- Sale or leasing and letting of immovable property (excluding financial leases and the accommodation services provided by hotels and entities with similar activity)
- Collective public transportation services
- Banking and financial operations carried out by banking financial institutions and nonbanking financial institutions, including the financial leasing, apart from these activities if a tax or a consideration is charged by the service provided
- Insurance activities
- Supply of fuels according to Annex V of the VAT Code
- Medical and health services (except beauty/aesthetics services)
- Teaching services provided by establishments covered by the basic law of the education and teaching system

Option to tax for exempt supplies. It is possible to waive the VAT exemption related to the supplies of medication and other related products for therapeutic and prophylactic ends as well as the supplies of books. Taxable persons that want to waive the VAT exemption must file a declaration, by electronic means, to the General Tax Authorities and meet certain requirements. If AGT does not reply within 30 days, the request is tacitly accepted. Once accepted, this waive is valid from 1 January of the following civil year (unless the taxable person starts its activity during the year, in which case the taxable person can request to waive the exemption from the beginning of its activity). Once the exemption has been waived, the taxpayer is required to maintain the option for a period of at least five years.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." Under the general rule, an invoice should be issued by the fifth business day following the date of the supply. The actual tax point becomes the date on which the invoice is issued. However, if no invoice was issued, tax becomes due on the fifth business day after the basic tax point. If the payment occurs before the invoice is issued, even if partially, the corresponding VAT is due at the same time of the payment. The same is applicable in case payment occurs or invoices are issued before the finalization of the taxable operations.

The basic time of supply for goods is when they are made available to the client or at the time the transaction was fully or partially settled (before the client has received the goods).

There are no special time of supply rules in Angola for construction works.

The basic time of supply for services is when they are rendered or at the time the referred provision of services was fully or partially settled (before the service has been provided).

Deposits and prepayments. For advance payments, the tax point is the date on which the advance payment is received. The supplier must issue an invoice as soon as advance payment is received.

Continuous supplies of services. With regard to continuous supplies of services, the time of supply occurs at the end of the period concerning each payment. However, when the payment schedule is not defined or exceeds 12 months, the VAT is due at the end of each 12-month period.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. As a general rule, when goods are made available before the sale takes place, a taxable supply of goods is deemed to have taken place when the underlying contract is finalized. Additionally, when goods are sent on a consignment basis, tax is due if after 180 days the acquirer does not return the goods.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Angola for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. Since leasing agreements are usually considered a continuous supply of services, the time of supply occurs at the end of the period foreseen for each payment, under the rules abovementioned.

Imported goods. The tax point for the importation of goods will be in the moment that the formalities of customs duties are completed.

Personal use. When company goods are permanently assigned to an employee for personal use the tax point occurs when the assignment takes place. The same rule is applicable when privately owned goods are assigned to company use.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax incurred with the acquisition of goods and services deemed indispensable for the maintenance of the business. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax charged on the supplies of goods or services carried out as well as tax paid on the import of goods.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Angola, VAT paid on import of goods and VAT self-assessed on the reverse-charge services.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Angola is 12 months. While input tax should generally be deducted in the VAT return of the month of issuance of the underlying invoice or in the following month, changes implemented with effect from 28 December 2023 means it is possible to submit the corresponding VAT return (including as an amendment return) up to 12 months after the issuance of the corresponding invoice or receipt for payment of import VAT in order to deduct the tax.

To deduct VAT, the taxable person must be in possession of invoices compliant with the legal requirements applicable for the invoices' issuance.

Nondeductible input tax. There are some types of costs that, by their nature, may easily be used for personal purposes. As such, the legislator has opted to deny the right to input tax on these expenses – except when the same constitute the core of the entity's activity.

Input tax is not deductible on the following operations:

- Expenses with acquisition, manufacturing or import, leasing (including financial lease), insurance, transformation and repair of tourism cars (i.e., those considered as vehicles, with trailer included, that are not exclusively used for the carriage of goods or to perform an agricultural, commercial or industrial activity, or even used for cargo and passenger or only for passenger transport purposes, it does not have more than 10 seats, with the inclusion of the driver), leisure boats, helicopters, airplanes, motorbikes and motorcycles
- Expenses relating to housing, food, beverages and hospitality expenses
- Expenses relating to acquisition or import of tobacco

Special input tax rules apply to oil companies.

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- All except the abovementioned ones and resulting from simulated operations.

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to exempt supplies of goods or services is not generally recoverable. If an Angolan taxable person makes both exempt and taxable supplies, it may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption."

The VAT Code provides for two methods to recover VAT when a company makes both exempt and taxable supplies. The first that should be applicable by rule is a pro rata method according to which VAT is only deductible in the same ratio as the annual amount of operations that originate deductibility vs. the exempt operations that don't give rise to deductibility. Whenever the pro rata is equal or higher than 98%, the VAT may be deducted in full.

There is also a second method, referred to as the "direct allocation method," which prescribes the real allocation of all the goods that are purchased for resale. The Angolan VAT authorities may impose the use of the direct allocation method to prevent distortions of competition. Approval from the tax authorities is required to use the partial exemption standard method. This is effectively the direct allocation method in Angola and can only be used in the following month and onward to the one when the AGT approval was obtained. This can be done through a written request. Special methods are not allowed in Angola.

Capital goods. The VAT Code is silent on a specific rule for input tax deduction for capital goods. This said, taxable persons are obliged to record any purchases to allow monitoring of the input tax deductions made.

The records, to be filed together with the VAT tax return, should contain, for all goods, the following elements (i.e., requirements):
- Data of the acquisition
- Value of the input tax
- Value of the input deducted

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a monthly period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that period, the taxable person has an input tax credit that will be carried forward to the next taxable periods.

However, if the taxable person has been in a credit position for three consecutive months and the tax credit is equal or higher than AOA700,000, it could apply for a VAT refund.

A refund may also be requested (regardless the previous requirements) if any of the following circumstances verifies:
- The taxable person ceases operations.
- The tax credit situation results from zero-rated VAT transactions.
- The taxable person switches to the "non-subject VAT" scheme (see Section I. Returns and payments below).

The VAT refund is requested through the correspondent VAT return.

The request for a VAT refund will trigger an inspection by the tax authorities to confirm that the taxable person is indeed entitled to the VAT refund being claimed. For this purpose, the following documents/information may be requested (in digital format) by tax authorities within the VAT refund inspection:
- Invoices or equivalent documents regarding the goods or services acquired, which underlie the VAT credit
- Customs declaration of import of goods
- Payment document of import VAT
- General analytical balance sheet and journal of accounting movements for the period of VAT credit

- Explanatory note on the VAT adjustments made in favor of taxable person
- Any document necessary to assess the legitimacy for the request for the reimbursement of the VAT credit
- Proof of export document (to be submitted electronically)
- Document or letter of comfort of the intermediary banking institution in the export process to ensure export revenues are repatriated to the country in accordance with the Foreign Exchange Act

The following conditions must be met for a refund request to be granted (if one or more of these conditions is not met, the refund request can be suspended or rejected):

- The taxable person must be fully compliant with its declarative and reporting obligations (i.e., VAT, excise duties, industrial tax and property taxes) related to previous tax periods.
- Have electronically communicated the SAF-T files (one for "Invoicing" and other for "Acquisitions of Goods and Services") for the previous periods, without divergences with the amounts disclosed in the VAT return.
- Existence of a bank account of which the taxable person is the holder, confirmed by the correspondent bank (should be an entity established in Angola).
- Input tax deductible cannot refer to transactions made with other taxable persons with a nonexistent or invalid tax number (except for transactions where the VAT due was reverse charged by taxable person).
- The suppliers' annex (which is filed as an annex to the VAT return) should not include reference to taxable persons who have suspended or ceased their activity in the period to which the VAT refers to.

The payment deadline of the VAT refund is foreseen to end at the last day of the third month following the filing of the refund claim, after which indemnity interest will be due for the delay.

The VAT refund will be reimbursed in cash or through a tax credit certificate. This tax credit certificate (i.e.,electronic format) can be used to pay customs duties and other taxes (except for withheld taxes) within the five years' expiry period.

In case the taxable person has any tax debt when the VAT refund is to be granted, the VAT credit amount will be offset with the correspondent tax debt.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs is non-recoverable in Angola.

Bad debts. Taxable persons may deduct the VAT amount related with bad debts revealed in its accounting records, as well the irrecoverable debts resulting from the execution and insolvency proceedings. A bad debt is considered to exist when the following conditions are met: (i) a nonpayment risk is duly justified, (ii) the credit is overdue for more than 18 months and (iii) there is objective evidence of its impairment and the collection efforts/actions made.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Angola.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Angola is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Taxable persons should, by rule, issue invoices per operation (for all taxable supplies – including exports).

Non-established entities that are required to nominate a representative must issue invoices with their VAT registration number, along with the VAT number and address of the chosen representative additionally to the other ordinary requirements of any invoice.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note can be issued to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply (e.g., return of the goods or a discount). A credit note must be cross-referenced to the original invoice and contain the following phrase, anulação ou rectificação (i.e., cancelation or correction). The supplier can make the reductions if it has in its possession the proof that the customer agreed and acknowledged with such procedure.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Angola for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in Angola. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Angola for taxable persons with an annual turnover higher than AOA25 million. For this purpose, it is mandatory to have a billing software previously certified by the AGT. For other taxable persons (i.e., those with an annual turnover equal or less than AOA25 million), electronic invoicing is allowed, but not mandatory.

Simplified VAT invoices. The Angolan VAT law does not contain any provision on simplified VAT invoices. However, under certain conditions, it is possible to raise other types of documents (e.g., entrance tickets, tickets of transports, tolls; documents issued by automatic distribution electronic machines or electronic systems) instead of invoices if the acquirer of the goods is not a taxable person (but an individual entity) and these goods or services acquired are not linked or connected with any business activity.

These documents should be sequentially numbered, dated and contain the following information:
- Suppliers' VAT identification number, full name and address
- Quantity and nature of the goods supplied or the extent and nature of the services rendered
- The price and the amount of the VAT due (if applicable)

However, it is mandatory to raise an invoice for this type of operations if the client requires it.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Angola. Under the Angolan Legal Regime for Self-billing, self-billing corresponds to the issuance of invoices/receipts by the acquirers on behalf of their suppliers. Any entity who is a tax resident in Angola may adopt self-invoicing on the acquisition of products of specific sectors (i.e., agriculture, forestry, aquaculture, apiculture, poultry, fisheries and cattle, as also foreseen by the previous regime) or acquisition of any service.

However, this possibility (of issuing self-invoices) is only applicable when the supplier is an individual entity who is unable to issue invoices or equivalent documents.

The issuance of invoices/receipts by the acquirer of goods and/or services (in place of their correspondent suppliers) must be made in accordance with specific legal requirements, namely reference should be made in the self-invoice to the word Autofacturação (i.e., self-invoicing in Portuguese), and the self-invoice must be issued through a certified billing software program.

The issuers of self-invoices take due action to report to the tax authorities the tax registration process of their suppliers/providers (whom they are replacing on the invoices' issuancse) that are not yet registered and whenever one of the following situations occurs:
- Are issued three (or more) self-invoices to the same supplier, within a minimum period of three months
  Or
- The total amount of a single acquisition is equal to or greater than AOA500,000

Issuer of self-invoices who are wholesale traders will be subject to an obligation of reporting the sale of goods made to private entities in the amount of AOA1 million or higher.

The issuance of self-invoices is also subject to the following limits:

- Self-invoices should not correspond to more than 20% of the total costs of goods sold and materials consumed and costs with supplies of goods and services rendered by third-party entities of the issuer.
- If the products acquired in covered sectors (i.e., agriculture, forestry, aquaculture, apiculture, poultry, fisheries, cattle) contribute exclusively to the realization of the acquirer entity's corporate purpose, the costs resulting from self-invoicing can be considered at 60%.

There are no special provisions demanding for a written agreement. The invoice/receipt should be raised when the payment is received.

Proof of exports. VAT is not chargeable on exported goods. However, an invoice should be raised per supply of goods or services and in order to qualify as VAT-free, exports must be supported by evidence that confirms the goods have left Angola (e.g., customs authorities' document or statement issued by the customer disclosing the goods' destination).

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Angolan kwanza (AOA), except when related with import and export operations, which are subject to the international trade rules. As such, the invoices should be issued in Portuguese containing the unit price and total price in local currency.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. The VAT invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons are the same as those outlined above, under the Simplified invoices subsection. Otherwise, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In Angola, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include all invoices and equivalent documents (issued and received), accounting records regarding output and input supplies, and correspondent VAT applicable and receivables.

Taxable persons are obliged to archive and conserve on national territory all invoices and equivalent documents, as well as records concerning the analysis, programming and implementation of computer systems used.

In Angola, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. All invoices and equivalent documents must be kept, according to the legislation in place, by the taxable person for five years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is mandatory in Angola. Backup copies of the invoices and equivalent documents must be archived in digital format and be available for immediate consultation of the AGT (if needed).

I. Returns and payments

Periodic returns. VAT returns and their annexes must be submitted on a monthly basis, by electronic means, in the taxable person portal. Monthly VAT returns must be submitted by the last business day of the month following the one when the operations took place.

Periodic payments. After the submission of the periodic return, and in case VAT is due, the billing document should be issued automatically. VAT amounts due should be paid in AOA, by the last business day of the month following the one when the operations took place. The payment of the VAT due can be made via bank transfer, at an ATM machine (i.e., a Multicaixa). Payments can also be made in installments (see the subsection Payments on accounts below).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Angola for all taxable persons. VAT returns must be filed online via the taxable person portal.

Payments on account. Payments on account are optional in Angola. The AGT has provided taxable persons with the option to pay VAT due in installments. Taxable persons can now pay VAT due in five installments, with a possibility to make payments through multiple bank accounts. The installment payments must reflect the equitable division of all items that make up the total amount payable (i.e., VAT payable, legal surcharges and penalties, and interest, if applicable). The option to pay VAT in installments is only possible if the VAT payable is equal to or exceeds AOA3 million.

Special schemes. Simplified VAT regime. Further to the changes introduced in the VAT Code with effect from 28 December 2023, the rules applicable to taxable persons covered by the simplified VAT regime are now part of the VAT Code. The simplified VAT regime is available for taxable persons with an annual turnover higher than AOA25 million and lower than AOA350 million (unless they opt for the general VAT regime). Under the simplified regime, taxable persons must assess a 7% VAT on the turnover actually received from all transactions (including exempt transactions and advanced payments), except for the lease of real estate, to which is applicable the rate defined in the Stamp Duty Code. The taxable person can deduct up to 10% of the VAT on the acquisition of goods and services (including the expenses for which input VAT is considered as nondeductible, such as tourism cars, accommodation services and others).

There is payment obligation of stamp duty at a 1% rate on the receipt of discharge of VAT exempt transactions which applies only to taxable persons under the general VAT regime that carry out exclusively VAT-exempt transactions. The VAT payment is made on a monthly basis and must comply with local bookkeeping and SAF-T rules from that date, as well as with the remaining VAT obligations.

Exclusion VAT scheme. The exclusion VAT regime is applicable for the entities with a turnover lower than AOA25 million (during the previous 12 months). These taxable persons are also obliged to submit the declaration of the beginning of the activity, as well as the declaration of cease of the activity. Under this regime, taxable persons have to file on a monthly basis and by electronic means, a report containing the information of the suppliers (mapa de fornecedores) stating the acquired goods and services from suppliers under the VAT general regime. Additionally, taxable persons are also obliged to issue invoices that state: IVA – Regime de não sujeição and store the documents related to the sales performed and the goods or services acquired.

Cash accounting. Taxpayers under the general VAT regime who have had in the previous financial year a turnover or import operations equal to or less than AOA200 million and do not carry out exempt transactions (without credit) may apply for the VAT cash regime. This regime could also be applicable for companies with business activity only related with the distribution of drinking water and electric power. In case the entities chose to apply for such regime, it must remain in it for three years and the invoices should state IVA Regime de Caixa. Additionally, certain taxable persons should be required to withhold (IVA Cativo) 100% of the VAT of their acquisitions (i.e., oil companies, the Angolan State – except public companies) and others should be required to withhold 50% of the VAT of their acquisitions (the National Bank of Angola and the commercial banks, insurance and reinsurance companies, and telecommunication operators with a unified global title). In this case, the taxable person should charge VAT on the invoice and the acquirer will withhold the VAT – at the moment the invoice is received – and will be responsible for the payment of the VAT to AGT.

There is also a special VAT regime applicable to the province of Cabinda.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Angola.

Supplementary filings. Suppliers List. Taxable persons with an annual turnover (of taxable supplies or imports) with a value greater than AOA25 million must file the monthly VAT return along with a correspondent annex outlining list of suppliers.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Corrections to a previous VAT return must be made through the correspondent amendment VAT return. However, the VAT deduction should be made on the VAT return of the period or the following one to when the underlying invoices or equivalent document was issued.

Digital tax administration. Standard Audit File for Tax (SAF-T). Taxable persons under the general VAT regime are required to file a Standard Audit File for Tax (SAF-T) file type "Invoicing" and "Acquisition of Goods and Services" until the last day of the month following that in which the operations were carried out. The SAF-T file type "Invoicing" refers to all invoices issued by the taxable person during the relevant period and SAF-T file type "Acquisitions of Goods and Services" refers to all invoices received.

A SAF-T file type "Accounting" should disclose all accounting records in accordance with the data structure foreseen by applicable law and made available to the tax authorities if requested.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. If the taxable person files declaration of beginning of activity after the deadline (15 days prior to starting the activity) the penalty is equal to AOA600,000, for cases of negligence. If the situation is legalized with 30 days from the deadline, the penalty is reduced to half.

If the taxable person fails to submit a VAT return or does so after the legal deadline has passed, the payment of a fine equal to AOA600,000 for each in fraction will be due, doubling every three months until the VAT return is duly filed. At this point, if the situation is rectified in 30 days' time, the value of the fine is reduced by half.

Penalties for late payment and filings. If the VAT returns are not submitted in time, the AGT will proceed with the tax assessment on its own authority. This assessment is based upon the VAT returns submitted in the previous months. The applicable penalty for not or late filing the VAT return is the same as mentioned for the declaration of beginning of activity.

With regard to outstanding VAT (under assessment of VAT is equal to the failure to deliver VAT), the applicable penalty is 25% of the outstanding VAT amount, with a minimum of AOA5,000.

If the taxable person fails to pay the VAT assessed by the AGT within the established deadline, proceedings aiming at the coercive collection of the tax due, plus legal costs, will ensue.

Penalties for errors. For the invoicing and accounting errors, the penalties are the following:
- 5% of the invoice's value if any of the following invoicing elements is missing or incorrectly identified: price, name, address or tax number of the issuer (per invoice)
- 1% of the invoice's value if the other legal requirements for issuance of invoices are missing or incorrectly identified (per invoice)
- If there was a supply of services or goods but an invoice was not raised, the applicable penalty is 7% of the operation's amount or 15% of such amount in cases where invoices were not raised for more than four times

The tax authorities may proceed with corrections whenever it finds that the tax due on the return submitted is inferior or the deduction is superior to what is due. The inaccuracies may be assessed during the course of an inspection or simply from the confrontation of different returns submitted.

The late notification of or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty of AOA600,000. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. When the taxable person participates in tax fraud or tax avoidance , the right to input tax deduction is denied.

The taxable person is presumed to participate in tax fraud or tax evasion when the price paid by the services and goods acquirer is lower than the market prices. This presumption may be refutable.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Angola.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Angola is five years. With reference to the time limit applicable for taxable persons, the Angolan tax authorities understand that the provision of the VAT Code that sets forth the VAT deduction must be reported in the VAT return of the period of issuance of the correspondent underlying invoice or in the following VAT return. VAT amendments in favor of the taxable person should be made up to 12 months after the issuance of the corresponding invoice or receipt for payment of import VAT.

B. Scope of the tax

GST applies to the supply of taxable goods and services by a taxable person in Anguilla and to the importation of goods and services (other than exempt imports).

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for GST in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Anguilla the "use and enjoyment" provisions (B2B/B2C) apply to the supply of the following goods or services, and therefore are deemed to take place in Anguilla if the recipient uses or obtains the advantage of the goods or services, and where the supply would be subject to VAT if the supplier meets the registration threshold:

- A transfer or assignment of a copyright, patent, license, trademark or similar right
- The service of a consultant, engineer, lawyer, architect or accountant; the processing of data or supplying information or any similar service
- Advertising service
- The obligation to refrain from pursuing or exercising taxable activity, employment or a right described in this subsection
- The supply of personnel
- The service of an agent procuring for the agent's principal a service described in this section
- Leasing of movable property, other than transport property

Where the above services are supplied from a place of business in Anguilla but utilized outside of Anguilla, the services are considered to be supplied in Anguilla and are considered to be zero-rated exports.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going-concern rules do not apply in Anguilla. As such, GST applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Anguilla, for a transaction between related parties, the value for GST purposes is calculated at the fair market value of the supply.

C. Who is liable

The registration turnover threshold is XCD300,000 per annum (the currency in Anguilla is the East Caribbean dollar [XCD]). A person must register for GST within 15 days of the following month if any of the below scenarios apply:

- The person's turnover was equal to or greater than the XCD300,000 in the previous 12 months period.
  Or
- Based on reasonable grounds, the person's annual turnover is expected to be equal to or greater than XCD300,000 in the upcoming 12 months.

Exemption from registration. A taxable person may apply to the Anguilla Comptroller (the Comptroller) for exemption from registration if all or most of their taxable services are zero-rated, and where they can demonstrate that, if they were to be registered, their input tax would exceed their tax payable on a continuing annual basis.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The Comptroller may permit voluntary registration to such persons who may have turnover below the registration turnover threshold upon receipt of application for GST registration. However, no registration would be permitted where the Comptroller is satisfied that the person is not eligible for registration and in cases where the person has no fixed place of abode and the Comptroller has reasonable grounds to believe that the person will not keep proper records or will not submit regular and reliable tax returns.

Group registration. Group GST registration is not allowed in Anguilla. However, taxable persons who conduct their taxable activity in branches or divisions are required to register in the name of the taxable person and not in the names of its branches and divisions. Where a taxable activity is conducted by a taxable person in branches or divisions, the taxable person is deemed to be a single person conducting the taxable activity for purposes of the GST Act. All members of a GST branch or division in Anguilla are jointly and severally liable for GST debts and penalties. However, this information was provided by the Deputy Comptroller and has not been addressed in law.

Fixed establishment. In Anguilla there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for GST purposes. A nonresident business that carries on a taxable activity would be required to register for VAT purposes if it meets the registration threshold as outlined below.

Non-established businesses. Non-established businesses are required to register for GST if they make taxable supplies in Anguilla that exceed the registration threshold.

Tax representatives. For established businesses, they can appoint a third-party representative, such as an external accountant or business advisor, to submit a GST registration form on behalf of the taxable person. It is also possible to delegate responsibility to manage certain aspects of the taxable person's account. For non-established businesses, they can also appoint a local tax representative. For both types of taxable persons, appointing a tax representative is optional and not mandatory.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism applies in Anguilla. Where a resident person in Anguilla receives a supply of services from a nonresident person and such services are utilized or consumed in Anguilla, other than to make taxable supplies, GST is payable by the recipient of the services.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Anguilla.

Digital economy. There are no specific rules relating to the taxation of the digital economy.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies would be required to register and account for GST in Anguilla.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are not required to register and account for GST on supplies in Anguilla. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the GST due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Anguilla.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No specific rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Anguilla.

Registration procedures. Taxable persons are required to register in the prescribed form (by paper) with the Comptroller. The Comptroller is required to register a person who applies for registration within 10 days of receipt of the application.

Deregistration. A taxable person may deregister when they cease to carry on taxable activities and notifies the Comptroller in writing of such cessation within 15 days. The taxable person will ordinarily be deregistered with effect from the last calendar day of the tax period during which all such taxable activities ceased or from such other time as the Comptroller may determine.

The Comptroller is not required to cancel the registration of a taxable person where the Comptroller has reasonable grounds to believe that the person will carry on any taxable activity at any time within 12 months from that date of cessation.

Changes to GST registration details. A taxable person must notify the Comptroller, in writing, within 15 days of any change in the name, address, place of business, constitution, name of partners or nature of the principal activity or activities of the taxable person; any change of address from which, or name in which, any taxable activity is carried on by the taxable person; and any changes in circumstances if the taxable person ceases to operate or close on a temporary basis, except where it closes to due to a cessation of carrying on a taxable activity.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of GST, including the zero rate.

The GST rates are:
- Standard rate: 13%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of GST applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports, except goods that have been or will be re-imported into Anguilla by the supplier

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Financial services
- Insurance services
- Medical services and devices
- Prescription drugs
- Sanitary products
- Registered education services
- Services in a qualifying nursing home, residential care facility for aged, indigent, infirm or disabled persons who need permanent care
- Services rendered as day care, including after-school care, and by a summer camp for children under 17 years of age
- Lease, license, hire rental or other form of supply of accommodation, to the extent that it is a supply of the right to occupy or be accommodated in premises for 183 days or more
- Leasehold land by way of lease (not being a grant or sale of the lease of that land) to the extent that the subject land is used or is to be used for the principal purpose of accommodation in a residential dwelling erected or to be erected on that land, where the lease is for 183 days or more
- Supply of the following immovable property: vacant land; a residential dwelling that is resold by the initial purchaser, including all subsequent sales of such property, and sold by the first-time owner after two years of occupancy of such premises by the owner or its immediate family; or a tourism accommodation development such as condominiums, villas, hotels, resorts and similar establishments, and luxury real estate products
- Lease, license, hire rental of land except for use as described above where the lease is for 183 days or more
- Lease, license, hire rental of land to the extent that it is to be used for agricultural purposes and tourism accommodation development
- Religious service by an approved religious organization
- Public domestic transport and international transport
- Games of chance
- Gasoline, diesel and liquid propane gas (with effect 1 July 2022 until 30 June 2023)
- Bikes and bike parts
- Goods approved for conditional exemption as provided by the government of Anguilla

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Anguilla.

E. Time of supply

The time when GST becomes due is called the "time of supply." In general, the time of supply for goods and services supplied by a taxable person is the earliest of the following events:
- The date of issuance of the invoice by the supplier
- The date on which any consideration is received for the supply
- The date on which the goods are made available to the recipient or the services are performed

A taxable person must account for GST in the GST period in which the time of supply occurs, regardless of whether payment is received.

Deposits and prepayments. Generally, deposits other than deposits on a returnable container are not regarded as consideration for a supply because they are given merely as security for the performance of an act. However, when the supplier applies the deposit as consideration for the supply or when the deposit is forfeited, the supply is deemed to take place.

Continuous supplies of services. Goods supplied under a rental agreement, or services supplied under an agreement that provides for periodic payments are treated as successively supplied for successive parts of the period of the agreement, and each of the successive supplies occurs when a payment becomes due or is received, whichever is the earlier.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Anguilla for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Anguilla for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. Goods supplied under a rental agreement are treated as successively supplied for successive parts of the period of the agreement, and each of the successive supplies occurs when a payment becomes due or is received, whichever is the earlier.

Imported goods. GST is payable on the import of goods or services, other than exempt imports. An import of goods occurs when the goods are entered for purposes of the Customs Act.

F. Recovery of GST by taxable persons

GST paid by a taxable person is recoverable as input tax if it relates to goods and services acquired solely for the purposes of making taxable supplies. Input tax is recovered by offsetting it against output tax (i.e., tax charged on supplies made) in the GST return for each GST period.

If input tax exceeds output tax in a GST period, the excess will be carried forward to the next period and will be treated as deductible input tax credit for that period. Further excesses will be carried forward consecutively for a maximum of three tax periods and if after that period the excess credit remains, the taxable person may apply for a refund.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Anguilla is three years.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- A passenger vehicle, unless the person is in the business of dealing in, or hiring of, such vehicles, and the vehicle was acquired for the purposes of such business
- Goods and services acquired for the purpose of entertainment or providing entertainment unless the person is in the business of providing entertainment and the taxable supply or import relates to the provision of taxable supplies of entertainment in the ordinary course of that business, or the person is in the business of providing taxable supplies of transportation services and the entertainment is provided to passengers as part of the transportation service

- Fees or subscriptions paid by the person in respect of membership of any person in a club, association, or society of a sporting, social or recreational nature

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Business entertainment
- Passenger vehicles

Partial exemption. A partial recovery calculation is required where costs incurred relate to both taxable and exempt supplies. Regulations provide a standard method of apportionment to calculate the amount of input tax the taxable person is entitled to claim. The standard method of appointment is calculated as follows:

A x B/C

- A is the total amount of the input tax payable in respect of supplies and imports received during the period, less the sum of the input tax attributable to supplies or imports acquired or made, which are directly allocable to the making of taxable supplies and in respect of deductions that are disallowed under the GST Act.
- B is the total amount of taxable supplies made by the taxable person during the period.
- C is the total amount of all supplies made by the taxable person during the period.

A taxable person may, where the fraction B/C is more than 0.90, deduct the total amount of the input tax on the supplies/imports acquired or made during the period.

A taxable person may not, where the fraction B/C is less than 0.10, claim input tax deduction on taxable supplies made during the period.

The above do not apply to a financial institution making both taxable and exempt supplies during a period. Instead, the amount of the input tax claimed by a financial institution shall be the amount of input tax payable in respect of supplies or imports received that are directly allocable to the making of taxable supplies.

The Comptroller may use an alternative basis to determine the amount of input tax permitted. This is determined on a case-by-case basis.

The Deputy Comptroller has indicated that the Inland Revenue Department (IRD) would be made aware of the nature of supplies of a taxable person upon registration of the entity. However, approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method or special methods in Anguilla.

Capital goods. In Anguilla "capital goods" are defined as assets, or components of assets, which are of a character subject to an allowance for depreciation and which are used in the course or furtherance of a taxable activity.

There are no special input tax recovery rules for capital goods. The normal input tax rules apply.

Refunds. A credit exists where a registered taxable person's input tax exceeds the output tax for that month. Except for exports, the difference will be carried forward to the next month's return and will be treated as a deductible input tax credit for that month. Further excesses will be carried forward consecutively for a maximum of three months and if after three months the excess credit remains, that registered taxable person may then apply for a refund.

A registered taxable person whose taxable activities represent more than 50% zero-rated supplies, may request a refund on a monthly basis. The Comptroller is required to serve a taxable person claiming a refund a notice in writing of the decision in respect of the claim within two calendar months of receiving the claim except where there is an audit. Where a refund is due and is not paid within two calendar months of the application and it is not subject to audit, the Government of Anguilla will pay interest at the rate of 1% per month.

The Comptroller may, subject to appropriate conditions and restrictions, authorize to refund part or all the GST incurred in relation to a taxable acquisition or import made by the Governor's Office, diplomats, approved nonprofit bodies and public international organizations.

Pre-registration costs. A taxable person can claim GST incurred on costs prior to registration in the first tax period in which the person is registered in respect of taxable supplies and imports of goods, including capital goods. This is on the basis that the capital goods are for use or resupply in a taxable activity carried on by the person after registration. This applies where the supply or import takes place no more than 12 months prior to the date the registration takes effect, the goods are on hand at the date of registration and the evidentiary requirements are satisfied.

Bad debts. A GST registrant is entitled to claim an input tax deduction for sales made with respect to a taxable supply written off as a bad debt, i.e., when the amount owed is written off in accounting records. The taxable person can make an adjustment by claiming as input tax the amount previously declared as output tax.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Anguilla.

G. Recovery of GST by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for GST in Anguilla is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

GST invoices. For all taxable supplies, the supplier must provide the buyer, if they are GST registered, a GST invoice within 40 calendar days of the supply. For a GST invoice to be valid, it must show certain information as outlined in GST law.

Credit notes. A tax credit note is required to be issued by a registered supplier to a purchaser when a GST invoice previously issued charged GST greater than the tax properly chargeable. The credit note must be in the form and contain the information as specified in GST law.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Anguilla, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Anguilla. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Anguilla. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Simplified GST invoices. A registered supplier making a taxable supply is authorized to issue a sales receipt, and not a full GST invoice, if the total consideration for the taxable supply is in money and does not exceed XCD1,000.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Anguilla.

Proof of exports. GST is charged at the zero-rate (0%) on supplies of exported goods. However, to qualify as zero-rated, exports must be supported by evidence (e.g., export certificate or other customs document) that confirms the goods have left Anguilla.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the East Caribbean dollar (XCD). However, the legislation does not expressly prohibit the issue of invoices in a foreign currency.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Anguilla. As such, full GST invoices are required.

Records. In Anguilla, examples of what records must be held for GST purposes include financial statements, accounting records, accounts, books, computer-stored information, diaries, dispatch notes, delivery notes, bank statements, purchase invoices and debit notes, sales invoices and credit notes, sales receipts, contracts, payroll data, order books, till rolls and any other documents.

Every taxable person is required to maintain in Anguilla the following documents:
- A GST account, in which must be listed the total amount of GST due on sales in the period, the total amount of GST reclaimable on purchases in the period, the net amount of GST payable to IRD in the period, or if applicable, the net amount of GST reclaimable from IRD in the period
- Original tax invoices, tax credit notes and tax debit notes received by the person
- A copy of all tax invoices, tax credit notes and tax debit notes issued by the person
- Customs documentation relating to imports and exports by the person
- Accounting records relating to taxable activities carried on in Anguilla
- Any other records as may be prescribed by regulations

Record retention period. Records are required to be maintained in English and retained for seven years after the end of the tax period to which they relate.

The Comptroller must always have, during normal working hours, and without any prior notice to any person, full and free access to any premises, place, book, record or computer.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Anguilla. No further guidance has been released.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The tax period for taxable persons is the calendar month. GST returns are due within 20 days after the end of the period, whether or not tax is payable in respect of that period.

Periodic payments. Any tax due for the period must be remitted with the return to the tax authority, by the 20th day of the month following the end of the tax period. GST due may be paid electronically by using the government's platform (IRD online portal). It may also be paid by cash, cheque, credit card or via online banking.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Anguilla, but not mandatory. GST returns can be filed electronically via the IRD's online filing portal. Electronic filing is preferred in Anguilla but is not mandatory.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Anguilla.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Anguilla.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Anguilla.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Anguilla.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A taxable person may apply to the Comptroller to make an addition or alteration to its GST returns within three years after the date the return was filed or where an assessment is made after the three-year period, within 40 days after the notice of assessment is served.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Anguilla.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A taxable person who fails to apply for registration is liable for a penalty equal to double the amount of output tax payable from the time the taxable person is required to apply for registration until the person files an application for registration with the Comptroller. This penalty will not apply if the taxable person has been convicted of the equivalent criminal offense.

For the equivalent criminal offense, a taxable person who knowingly or recklessly fails to apply for GST registration as required commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD5,000 and imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years.

Penalties for late payment and filings. A taxable person who fails to file a return within the required due date is liable to a penalty that is the greater of XCD500 per day for each day or part thereof and is liable to a penalty equal to 10% of the tax payable for the period of such return, for each month or part thereof that the return remains outstanding. Any GST payable outstanding by the due date is liable to a penalty equal to 20% of the amount payable.

For the equivalent criminal offense, a taxable person who knowingly or recklessly fails to file a GST return, commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD5,000.

If a person fails to lodge the return within a further period specified by the Comptroller by notice in writing, that person commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine of XCD5,000 for each day during which the failure continues or to imprisonment for three months or both.

Penalties for errors. A taxable person who knowingly or recklessly fails to furnish any import declaration as required, commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD5,000 and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years.

A taxable person who knowingly or recklessly fails to provide a tax invoice as required, or also makes a false claim for refund, commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD5,000 and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months.

The late notification of or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's GST registration details may result in a fine not exceeding XCD5,000 and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years where the failure was made knowingly or recklessly, or in any other case, to a fine not exceeding XCD5,000. For details, see the Changes to GST registration details subsection above.

Penalties for fraud. For false or misleading statements, the penalty imposed will be an amount determined by the Comptroller. It will only be imposed if the false statement reduced the amount of tax liability or if a criminal penalty was not imposed for the false statement or omission.

A taxable person who knowingly or recklessly uses a false GST registration number, including the GST registration number of another person on a return, notice or other document, commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD20,000 and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years.

A taxable person who makes a false or misleading statement or omission in a material, commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD5,000 or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both.

Personal liability for company officers. Where an offense has been committed by a company, every person who at the time of the commission of the offense was a representative officer, director, general manager, secretary or was acting in or purporting to act in such capacity is deemed to have committed the offense. The officers would be subject the general penalty of XCD10,000 or imprisonment for one year or both.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Anguilla is five years. However, generally, there is no limitation period within which the tax authority can issue an assessment for output tax. But, where the tax authority wishes to issue an assessment because it is dissatisfied with a return or accompanying documents, the assessment must be issued within five years after the return or documents are furnished. However, this limitation period does not apply where the default that prompted the assessment was due to fraud, or gross or willful neglect.

K. Transitional provisions

Time of supply and charging GST. If taxable services were rendered before the date on which the GST Act comes into effect and payment is made within three months after the Act comes into effect, GST is not imposed on the supply.

If, in relation to a supply of goods or services, title to goods passes, delivery of goods is made or services are rendered after the date on which the GST Act comes into operation, and payment is received, or an invoice is issued within three months before that date; the payment is treated as having been made or the invoice is treated as having been issued on the date on which the Act comes into operation.

Contracts silent on GST. Where contracts were concluded between two or more parties before the entry into force of the GST Act, and no provision relating to tax was made in the contract, the supplier may recover from the recipient tax due on any taxable supplies made under the contract after the date on which the Act comes into operation.

Where contracts concluded after the date on which this Act comes into operation do not include a provision relating to tax, the contract price is deemed to include a provision relating to tax, the contract price is deemed to include tax and the supplier under the contract is required to account for the tax due.

B. Scope of the tax

ABST applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of taxable goods and services by a taxable person in Antigua and Barbuda
- Importation of taxable goods from outside Antigua and Barbuda, other than exempt imports

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for ABST in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Antigua and Barbuda, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of an ABST-registered or ABST-registrable business will be subject to ABST at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be zero-rated under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as zero-rated. In Antigua and Barbuda, a TOGC is treated as zero-rated of ABST where the following conditions are met:

- The supply would otherwise have been a taxable supply that was not a zero-rated supply
- The supplier has agreed in writing with the recipient that the taxable activity is supplied as a going concern
- The supplier has notified the Commissioner, in writing, of the details of the supplies treated as zero-rated because of the transfer, including the quantities and values of the things supplied

Transactions between related parties. The value of the supply of transactions between related parties is the ABST-exclusive fair market value of the supply. There is no difference between the supply of goods and services.

C. Who is liable

Antigua and Barbuda ABST law imposes a registration requirement on any person who makes taxable supplies in Antigua and Barbuda, other than a person whose annual turnover is less than XCD300,000 a year.

In general, any person that begins making taxable supplies in Antigua and Barbuda and expects to exceed the registration threshold above must apply to the ABST authorities for registration within 21 days after the date on which taxable supplies are first made. Additionally, government entities, local authorities, councils, promoters or proprietors of public entertainment and professionals such as lawyers, accountants or auditors are required to register irrespective of whether they exceed the registration threshold.

Exemption from registration. The ABST law in Antigua and Barbuda does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A person may apply for voluntary registration if they are making taxable supplies below the mandatory ABST registration threshold (XCD300,000) if they meet the following conditions:

- Are making or will make taxable supplies
- Carry on taxable activities from a fixed place
- Will keep proper records
- Will file regular, reliable ABST returns and comply with other tax obligations

Group registration. Group ABST registration is not allowed in Antigua and Barbuda.

Fixed establishment. In Antigua and Barbuda, there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for ABST purposes. A non-established business that carries on a taxable activity would be required to register for ABST purposes if it meets the registration threshold as outlined below.

Non-established businesses. A non-established business is a business that does not have a fixed establishment in Antigua and Barbuda. A non-established business must register for ABST in Antigua and Barbuda where it carries on a taxable activity in Antigua and Barbuda and meets the registration requirements as outlined above (i.e., exceeds the registration threshold). Input tax incurred by non-established businesses is not recoverable unless the non-established business is registered for ABST.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Antigua and Barbuda. However, a taxable person can voluntarily choose to appoint a tax representative if they wish to do so. In addition, the Commissioner may, by writing, declare a person to be a representative of another person for the purpose of ABST.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism applies in Antigua and Barbuda. Where a resident taxable person in Antigua and Barbuda receives a supply of services from a nonresident taxable person (i.e., a business-to-business [B2B] supply), ABST maybe payable by the recipient of such services. This occurs where the supply of services would have been taxable in Antigua and Barbuda had they been performed there, they are utilized or consumed there and the recipient uses the services to make exempt supplies, for private or domestic use, or to provide entertainment other than in the course of a taxable supply of entertainment.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Antigua and Barbuda.

Digital economy. There are no specific rules relating to the taxation of the digital economy. In practice, nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B and business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies would be required to register and account for ABST in Antigua and Barbuda. This only applies to services that are physical performed or used in Antigua and Barbuda.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Antigua and Barbuda.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Antigua and Barbuda.

Registration procedures. Taxable persons are required to register by paper or email to irdtaxpayerservices@ab.gov.ag with the Antigua and Barbuda Inland Revenue Department (IRD) and are required to provide the incorporation documents of the person being registered. Registration with the Inland Revenue Department is required prior to completing ABST registration. If submitting the ABST registration application by paper, the application must be sent to the following address:

Woods Centre
Friars Hill Road
St. John's
Antigua, W.I.

Deregistration. A taxable person must deregister when they cease to make taxable supplies and must notify the Commissioner in writing of such cessation within 15 days of the cessation. The taxable person will be deregistered, subject to minimum registration period of two years, with effect from the date set out in the notice of cancellation.

Changes to ABST registration details. A taxable person must notify the Commissioner in writing, within 14 days of any change in the name, address, place of business or nature of the taxable activity of the taxable person.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of ABST, including the zero rate.

The ABST rates are:
- Standard rate: 17% (with effect from 1 January 2024)
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of ABST applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the reduced rate, zero rate or an exemption.

The standard rate of ABST increased from 15% to 17% with effect from 1 January 2024. The reduced rate of 14% was removed with effect from 1 January 2024.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported goods and services
- Supply or import of food for human consumption (as specified in the ABST regulations)
- Supply of electricity provided to residential premises for domestic use (or in any other case, as provided in the ABST regulations)
- Supply or import of water
- Supply or import of fuel, as defined under the following Customs tariff headings:
  - 2710.10 Motor spirit (gasoline) and other light oils and preparations
  - 2710.20 Kerosene and other medium oils (not including gas oils)
  - 2710.30 Gas oils
  - 2710.40 Fuel oils, not elsewhere specified or included
  - 2711.00 Petroleum gases and other gaseous hydrocarbons

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to ABST and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Financial services
- Supply of goods to taxable persons if used solely in connection with making exempt supplies, unless the supply is made to a registered person
- International transport services, including international mail services provided by the General Post Office
- Domestic postal services by the General Post Office
- Sale of real property relating to residential premises ("real property" includes an estate, interest, easement, or right, whether equitable or legal, in, to, or out of land, including anything attached to land or things permanently fastened to anything attached to land)
- Lease, license, hire or other form of supply of the right to occupy or be accommodated in residential premises
- Supplies relating to land
- Residential accommodation to an individual for a continuous period of more than 45 days
- Transportation of passengers by land, sea or air within Antigua and Barbuda
- Education services
- Medical, dental, nursing, convalescent, rehabilitation, midwifery, paramedical, optical or other similar services in particular circumstances
- Services in a nursing home or residential care facility
- Prescription medicines
- Veterinary services
- Supply of gambling conducted by a nonprofit association approved by the Minister
- Supply of unimproved land or of land to be used for agricultural purposes
- Supply of unprocessed agricultural products
- Supply of live animals or insects, other than domesticated animals generally held as pets
- Local entertainment services

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Antigua and Barbuda.

E. Time of supply

In general, the time of supply for goods and services supplied by a taxable person is the earlier of the following events:

- The date of issuance of the invoice by the supplier
- The date on which any consideration is received for the supply

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in Antigua and Barbuda for deposits and prepayments. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Continuous supplies of services. Where a progressive or periodic supply is treated as a series of separate supplies made successively, each successive supply is treated as being made on the earliest of the following events:

- The date on which an invoice for the progressive or periodic payment corresponding to the supply is issued by the supplier, but only if a separate invoice is issued for each such supply
- The date on which the progressive or periodic payment corresponding to the supply is due
- The date on which any of the progressive or periodic payment corresponding to the supply is received
- The first day of the period, if any, to which the progressive or periodic payment relates
- The first day on which the recipient is able to commence use or enjoyment of the successive part of the actual supply which corresponds to the supply

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Antigua and Barbuda for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Antigua and Barbuda for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. If payment for the leased goods is made progressively or periodically, the time of supply rules applicable to continuous supplies of services should be applied (as outlined above). In any other case, the general time of supply rules apply.

Imported goods. ABST is payable on the importation of goods other than an exempt import. ABST on the entry of imported goods becomes due and payable at the time when the goods are entered for the purposes of the Customs (control and management) Act and is payable by the importer.

F. Recovery of ABST by taxable persons

The ABST paid by a taxable person is recoverable as input tax if it relates to goods and services acquired for the purposes of making taxable supplies. Input tax is recovered by offsetting it against output tax (that is, tax charged on supplies made) in the ABST return for each ABST period.

Any refunds arising from the above may be carried forward and offset against any net VAT tax payable in a subsequent tax period.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Antigua and Barbuda is three years. This is from the date the taxable person has the right to apply for the refund.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for taxable or business purposes.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Personal passenger vehicles, spare parts, repair and maintenance services
- Personal or private entertainment
- Membership in recreational associations or clubs
- Domestic or private acquisitions and imports

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to taxable business use)

- Entertainment, not supplied to related persons or employees

- Passenger vehicles, spare parts, repair and maintenance services
- Acquisitions and imports

Partial exemption. If all supplies made by a taxable person during a tax period are taxable supplies (i.e., standard-rated, reduced-rated and zero-rated supplies), the input tax incurred in the period is deductible in full. However, if some, but not all, of the supplies made by the person during the tax period are taxable supplies, a partial recovery calculation may be required. This means that a partial recovery calculation is required where costs incurred relate to both taxable and exempt supplies. The ABST Act provides a standard method of apportionment to calculate the amount of input tax the taxable person is entitled to claim. The standard method of apportionment is calculated as A x B/C, where A, B and C represent the following:
A = The total amount of the input tax payable in respect of acquisitions and imports made by the taxable person during the period, less the sum of the input tax attributable to acquisitions or imports acquired or made, which are directly allocable to the making of taxable supplies, and in respect of deductions which are disallowed under the ABST Act.
B = The total amount of taxable supplies made by the taxable person during the period.
C = The value of all supplies made by the taxable person during the period.

C does not include the value of supplies made through a taxable activity carried on by the taxable person outside Antigua and Barbuda. This covers foreign operations carried on by the entity outside of Antigua and Barbuda such as branch operations.

A taxable person may, where the fraction B/C is more than 0.90, deduct the total amount of the input tax on the supplies/imports acquired or made during the period. A taxable person may not, where the fraction B/C is less than 0.10, claim input tax deduction on taxable supplies made during the period.

The above standard method does not apply to financial institutions making both taxable and exempt supplies during a tax period. Instead, the amount of the input tax claimed by a financial institution is calculated as A x B/C, where A, B and C represent the following:
A = The total amount of input tax payable in respect of taxable acquisitions or imports made in the preceding calendar year valued at XCD100,000 or more.
B = The value of all taxable supplies made by the taxable person during the preceding two calendar years.
C = The value of all supplies made by the taxable person during the preceding two calendar years, other than supplies made through a taxable activity carried on by the person outside Antigua and Barbuda.

Capital goods. In Antigua and Barbuda, capital goods (known as capital assets) are defined as an asset, whether tangible or intangible, acquired by a person for use in the person's taxable activity but does not include:
- Consumables or raw materials
  Or
- An asset acquired for the principal purpose of resale in the ordinary course of carrying on the person's taxable activity, whether or not the asset is to be sold in the form or state in which it was acquired

In Antigua and Barbuda there are no special input tax recovery rules for capital assets. The normal rules outlined above apply. Where a capital asset is used to make both taxable and exempt supplies, the taxable person is required to apportion the input tax according to the partial exemption formula outlined above. However, a taxable person must make an adjustment to the initial input tax credits claimed if the actual use of a capital asset does not match the initial intended use of the capital asset and the difference between the actual and intended use was greater than 10% of the total actual use of those goods or services.

Refunds. A refund arises when the total input tax credits allowed in the tax period exceed the total output tax payable for that tax period. The difference will be carried forward to the next month's return and will be treated as a deductible input tax credit for that tax period. Further excesses will be carried forward consecutively for six consecutive months. If after six months there is an excess credit of XCD100 or more, the taxable person may then apply for a refund. If the excess credit does not exceed XCD100, it is carried forward and used as input tax creditable in that period.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Antigua and Barbuda is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) can be recovered in Antigua and Barbuda. A taxable person is allowed to claim bad debt relief for tax paid in respect of a taxable supply made by the taxable person where the whole or part of the consideration for the supply is subsequently treated as a bad debt.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Antigua and Barbuda.

G. Recovery of ABST by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for ABST in Antigua and Barbuda is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

ABST invoices. A taxable person making a taxable supply to a registered recipient (i.e., a B2B supply) is required to issue the recipient with a full ABST invoice at the time of the supply. An ABST invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax recovery.

Credit notes. A credit note, or debit note must be issued when the quantity or consideration shown on a tax invoice is altered. Credit and debit notes must contain broadly the same information as a tax invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Antigua and Barbuda, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Antigua and Barbuda. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Antigua and Barbuda. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

However, there are no provisions in the law for electronic invoicing in Antigua and Barbuda. In practice, standard paper invoicing is preferred, but electronic invoicing may be accepted.

Simplified ABST invoices. A taxable person making a taxable supply to a registered recipient (i.e., a B2B supply) is authorized to issue a sales receipt in lieu of a full ABST invoice, if the consideration for the taxable supply is in cash and does not exceed XCD50.

A taxable person making a taxable supply to an unregistered recipient (i.e., a B2C supply) is prohibited from issuing a full ABST invoice but instead must issue a sales receipt to the recipient.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Antigua and Barbuda.

Proof of exports. ABST is charged at a rate of 0% on supplies of exported goods. However, to qualify as zero-rated, exports must be supported by evidence that confirms the goods have left Antigua and Barbuda. Evidence of the consignment or delivery of goods to an address outside Antigua and Barbuda; or the delivery of the goods to the owner, charterer or operator of a ship or aircraft engaged in international transport for the purpose of carrying the goods outside Antigua and Barbuda is considered sufficient evidence that the goods have been exported, in the absence of proof to the contrary.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices may be issued in a foreign currency from the domestic one, the Eastern Caribbean dollar (XCD). The currency in which the invoice is issued should be clearly indicated on the invoice. In the case of imports, the amount is to be converted at the exchange rate as determined by the Customs (control and management) Act. In all other cases, the amount is to be converted at the exchange rate applying between the currency and the XCD at the time the amount is taken into account.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. A taxable person must not issue full ABST invoices to nontaxable persons. Instead, sales receipts must be issued. See the Simplified ABST invoices subsection above.

Records. In Antigua and Barbuda, examples of what records must be held for ABST purposes include:

- Copy of all ABST invoices, ABST credit notes and ABST debit notes issued by the taxable person, maintained in chronological order
- All ABST invoices, ABST credit notes and ABST debit notes received by the taxable person, whether originals or copies
- All customs documentation relating to imports and exports of goods by the taxable person
- Generally for all imported services, sufficient written evidence to identify the supplier and the recipient, and to show the nature and quantity of services supplied, the time of supply, the place of supply, the consideration for the supply and the extent to which the supply has been used by the recipient for particular purposes

In Antigua and Barbuda, ABST books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. Records must be retained for seven years after the end of the tax period to which they relate.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is mandatory in Antigua and Barbuda. Registered taxable persons must retain their records by electronic means by use of electronic tills or point of sale systems and computerized accounting systems.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The ABST period in Antigua and Barbuda is the calendar month. The ABST return must be filed one calendar month after the end of the tax period (i.e., the deadline dates vary each month according to the last date of each month, e.g., 28th, 30th, 31st).

Periodic payments. Any tax due for the period must be remitted by the same date as the return deadline, i.e., one calendar month after the end of the tax period.

Payments to the IRD can be made by credit/debit card (in person at the tax authorities' offices), direct deposit, mail (a form and check), cash/check (in person at the tax authorities' offices) and e-payment (online).

Ideally, payment should be submitted with the return, but in some instances (e.g., for wire transfer and direct deposit) this may not be possible. In such instances the payment memo should indicate what the payment is in respect of.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Antigua and Barbuda, but not mandatory. ABST returns can be submitted electronically via email to ird.acbrevenue@ab.gov.ag.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Antigua and Barbuda.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Antigua and Barbuda.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Antigua and Barbuda.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Antigua and Barbuda.

Correcting errors in previous returns. If a taxable person discovers an error or an omission from a previous ABST return, the taxable person is required to file an amended return. A request to amend a return must be made in writing within three years after the end of the tax period to which the return relates.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Antigua and Barbuda.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A taxable person who fails to apply for registration is liable for an administrative penalty equal to double the amount of ABST payable from the time the taxable person is required to apply for registration until the person files an application or is registered by the Commissioner, whichever is earlier. This penalty will not apply if the taxable person has been convicted of the equivalent criminal offense.

A person who knowingly or recklessly fails to apply for ABST registration commits a criminal offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD10,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both.

Penalties for late payment and filings. A taxable person who fails to file an ABST return within the required due date is liable to a penalty equal to the greater of XCD500 or 5% of the ABST payable for the period to which the return relates. Any ABST payable which is outstanding by the due date is liable for interest equal to 1% per month on the amount unpaid, calculated from the date the payment is due until the date the payment is made.

Penalties for errors. Failure to maintain proper records could result in a penalty of XCD50 per day for each day that the failure continues. No penalty is imposed in the following circumstances:

- Where a false statement is made, if the person who made the statement did not know and could not reasonably be expected to know that the statement was false or misleading.
- Where incorrect information relating to a recipient is included in an ABST invoice, credit note or debit not if the person after taking all due care reasonable believed that the information relating to the recipient is correct.

The late notification or failure to notify changes to a taxable person's ABST registration details to the Commissioner as required is liable to a maximum penalty of XCD1,000. A taxable person who fails to notify the tax authorities of changes to their ABST registration details commits a criminal offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD10,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or both. For further details, see the subsection Changes to ABST registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. A taxable person who willfully evades, or attempts to evade the assessment, payment, or collection of ABST commits an offense and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD25,000, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or both.

A taxable person who uses a false TIN, issues a false ABST invoice, credit note, debit note or provides these documents in a manner that is contrary to the requirements of legislation commits an offense and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding XCD25,000 or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years.

Personal liability for company officers. Where an offense has been committed by a company, every person who at the time of the commission of the offense was a director or other similar officer of the company or was acting in or purporting to act in such capacity is deemed to have committed the offense. The officer would be subject to the corresponding penalty for the offense.

Officers will not face liability if the offense was committed without their knowledge, and they exercised all such diligence to prevent the commission of the offense as ought to have been exercised in the circumstances.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Antigua and Barbuda is three years. The start date for the tax authorities to assess an administrative penalty or institute criminal proceedings vary and are as follows:

- If the facts giving rise to the administrative penalty or the offense involve the doing of an act, within three years after the doing of the act.
- If the facts giving rise to the administrative penalty or the offense involve the failure to do an act, within three years after the Commissioner becomes aware of the failure.
- If the facts giving rise to the administrative penalty or the offense involve the nondisclosure or incorrect disclosure of information relating to ABST liability for a tax period, within three years after the correct ABST liability has become final for that tax period.

Recovery of VAT or IIBB by non-established businesses	No

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- Supply of goods or services made in Argentina by a taxable person
- Reverse-charge services received by a taxable person in Argentina
- The importation of goods
- The supply of digital services rendered by foreign parties with effective use in Argentina to VAT non-registered taxable persons

IIBB applies to the performance of an economic activity (i.e., a taxable event), which is typically expressed through the supply of goods or services made in Argentina by a taxable person, and recently in some provinces to the provision of certain services from foreign suppliers to users located in certain Argentinean provinces.

VAT is a national tax, whereas IIBB is a provincial tax and applies to every stage of the supply chain, i.e., a turnover tax, and is the reason why the rate is lower. IIBB is included in the sales price and cannot be added at the end, whereas VAT is added to the sales price at the end. For example, if the price for a supply is ARS100, IIBB is included in the 100, then VAT is charged on the 100.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Argentina, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions. However, for import and export of services, it is relevant to identify a similar concept, which is where the services are "effectively used or exploited." This rule applies to all services imported and exported.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply may be treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Argentina, a TOGC may be treated as outside the scope of VAT for transactions within the same economic group, to the extent the transaction qualifies as "tax-free" in accordance with the Income Tax Law (ITL) regulations.

Transactions between related parties. In Argentina, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated at the market value.

C. Who is liable

A registered taxable person is a business entity or individual who makes taxable supplies of goods or services while doing business in Argentina and who is required to register for VAT.

VAT registration is mandatory in the following circumstances:
- Corporations or other legal entities: on commencement of activities
- Individuals: if annual taxable turnover from supplies of goods exceeds ARS11.37 million and annual taxable turnover from supplies of services exceeds ARS7.99 million

A registered IIBB payer is a business entity or individual who carries out an economic activity in the provincial jurisdiction (i.e., makes taxable supplies of goods or services while doing business in Argentina). Registration is required on commencement of activities. No turnover threshold applies.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Argentina does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Argentina does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration, as there is no registration threshold (i.e., all entities that make taxable supplies are obliged to register for VAT).

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Argentina.

Fixed establishment. In Argentina there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the ITL defines a "permanent establishment" (PE) as a fixed place of business through which a foreign entity carries out its activity in full or in part and includes in particular: a place of management or administration, a branch, an office, a factory, a workshop, among others. A foreign company that triggers a PE should register a local legal vehicle (branch or subsidiary). Such legal vehicle should register as a resident taxable person for the relevant taxes including VAT.

Non-established businesses. Non-established businesses must register as a taxable person for VAT or IIBB (through a local legal vehicle if created) if it makes regular supplies of goods or services in Argentina and if it is required to account for VAT on its supplies.

If a non-established business meets the requirements to register as a local entity, e.g., PE, in Argentina, it must account for the tax on supplies made in Argentina.

If a non-established business carries out taxable activities in the Argentine territory and is not required to register as a local entity, any beneficiaries, recipients, lessees, borrowers, agents and intermediaries of nonresidents acting as substitute taxable persons will pay the VAT (the general rate being 21%) and use the amounts paid as input tax to offset their own output tax. When it is not possible to withhold the VAT, the law states that the substitute taxable person will be responsible for paying the VAT. A similar scheme has been implemented in certain provinces for turnover tax purposes for services rendered by nonresidents.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are mandatory in Argentina. In the case of corporations or other legal entities, the tax representative is the natural person who uses a "fiscal password" provided by the Federal Administration for Public Revenues (AFIP) to carry out various tasks before the AFIP. The name for this role is "relationship manager." To file the affidavits corresponding to those taxes for which the taxable person has been registered, the relationship manager must access the AFIP's webpage (www.afip.gob.ar) and have a fiscal password with no less than Security Level 3, but it can delegate such activities to other individuals.

Reverse charge. Under the reverse-charge mechanism, the customer must calculate and pay the VAT. This method applies to supplies made outside Argentina if the use or effective exploitation of the supply occurs within Argentina and if the supply is within the scope of VAT. If the reverse charge applies, a non-established supplier is not required to register for VAT. The reverse charge does not apply for IIBB purposes.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no generalized reverse-charge provisions for domestic transactions when the supplier is an Argentine party. Only some specific regimes may involve the buyer assessing the VAT (e.g., for those carrying out habitual purchases of goods to end users).

Digital economy. Digital services received by established VAT-registered taxable persons have to apply the reverse-charge mechanism. For digital services received by Argentine individuals (i.e., nontaxable persons), such services are subject to VAT in Argentina when rendered by foreign parties where the effective use of the services is conducted in Argentina.

Nonresidents who provide electronically supplied services do not need to register for VAT in Argentina. There are no other e-commerce rules for imported goods in Argentina.

The definition of digital services includes, among others: website provision and hosting; digitalized product provision; remote system management and online technical support; web services comprising data storage and online advertising; software as a service (SaaS); access or download of images, text, information, video, music, games (including gambling games), including the use of streaming technology without downloading those items to a storage device; dating websites; internet services provision; e-learning; and data handling and calculation through the internet or other networks.

The list of digital service providers for whom the collection agents must collect the VAT is published and updated by the AFIP.

The responsible party for reporting and paying the VAT is the service recipient. If the recipient is VAT registered it will be responsible for the payment of the tax. However, if it is an end consumer (i.e., not VAT registered), the payment will be made by a resident intermediary (e.g., a credit card company or bank). They are required to act as a collection agent. If more than one intermediary is involved, the one required to act as a collection agent will be the agent with the closest commercial relationship with the digital service provider.

The system does not require the non-established business to register for VAT, only the credit card company would. The AFIP provides a list of companies who are non-established and providing digital services to end consumers in Argentina. Then the credit card companies check this list and apply VAT to supplies made by the companies on the list. The list is updated once per year. The credit card companies charge the VAT onto the end consumer and don't take it out of the selling price from the non-established business.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No specific rules apply for foreign marketplaces and platforms, other than the digital services provision (see above). For local marketplaces, specific rules apply that are aimed at applying certain controls and domestic withholdings to sellers in such marketplaces to ensure appropriate tax collection by the AFIP of transactions routed by such platforms.

Registration procedures. To register for VAT, the taxable person or its legal representative must access AFIP's website and, using the fiscal password, select the option F420/T, Alta de Impuestos/Regimenes/Alta de Impuestos. The registration is performed online. The taxable person must be previously registered with the AFIP and have a tax ID number (clave única de identificación tributaria, [CUIT]), as described below.

The IIBB is applicable for each of Argentina's 24 local jurisdictions, and the procedure for registering a taxable person varies by jurisdiction. Taxable persons that develop their activities in only one jurisdiction need only register there. For taxable persons that carry out activities in more than one jurisdiction, registration will be governed by the multilateral agreement regime. These taxable persons will register on AFIP's website, using the fiscal password to register in each jurisdiction in which activities will be carried out using the CM01 form. Additional documentation could be requested, depending on the local jurisdictions.

If a taxable person is operating in more than one jurisdiction, the jurisdictions between them must have multilateral agreements in place. They provide guidance on how to account for the VAT and how it is allocated across the jurisdictions. Each jurisdiction has different procedures, e.g., different forms, time frames and regimes.

A corporation's legal representative is the chairman of the board. The request for registration before the AFIP must be filed by the legal representative of the legal entity, with the CUIT number (tax ID) and fiscal password (i.e., Security Level 3). The registration is filed through the web service Inscripción y Modificación de Personas Jurídicas available on the AFIP's website.

Deregistration. Taxable persons can deregister from VAT through the AFIP webpage, with the taxable person or the tax representative using the fiscal password.

To deregister from IIBB, the taxable person should comply with the mechanisms established by the local jurisdiction. Taxable persons who wish to deregister from IIBB under the multilateral agreement regime need to file the request online on the AFIP website.

Changes to VAT registration details. Any changes to the taxable person's registration details (name of company, address, type of business, etc.) must be notified to the AFIP within 10 days. The filing must be made utilizing paper forms and accompanying the relevant documentation supporting the changes.

D. Rates

For VAT, term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to VAT, including supplies at the zero rate.

In Argentina, the following four rates of VAT apply:
- Standard rate: 21%
- Reduced rate: 10.5%
- Increased rate: 27%
- Zero-rate: 0%
- Specific rates (applicable to taxable persons engaged in certain publishing activities, not exceeding certain sales thresholds): 5%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure imposes the increased rate or provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported goods
- Exported services

Examples of goods and services taxable at 10.5%

- Interest and commissions on loans made by banks
- Sale, preparation, manufacturing or construction and final import of certain capital assets
- Long-distance passenger transportation (over 100 km)
- Sale or import of newspapers, magazines and similar periodic printed publications

Examples of goods and services taxable at 27%

- Telecommunications not used exclusively in a dwelling
- Supply of gas, electric power and water not used exclusively in a dwelling
- Sewage disposal and drainage services

The term "exempt supplies" is used for supplies of goods and services that are not liable to tax. Exempt supplies do not generate a right of input tax deduction (see Section F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons).

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Education
- Rental of real estate under certain conditions
- Books
- Some staples, such as water and milk for specified buyers
- Local passenger transportation rendered by cabs (less than 100 km)
- International transportation
- Interest on preferred shares and equity securities, bonds and other securities issued by the federal government, provinces and municipalities

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Argentina.

For IIBB, the term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable for IIBB, including supplies at the zero rate.

In Argentina, numerous rates of IIBB currently apply. Standard rates between 1% and 4% apply to industrial activities, the medium rates between 2.5% and 5% apply to commercial activities, and the increased rates between 4.9% and 8% apply to commissions and intermediation services. A zero rate applies in some cases.

The following lists provide some examples of supplies that are taxed at various rates of IIBB or that are exempt in the Province of Buenos Aires.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported goods
- Exports of services in some jurisdictions

Examples of goods and services taxable at between 1% and 4%

- Other manufacturers (not included in exemptions)
- Ship constructions
- Agricultural products

Examples of goods and services taxable at between 2.5% and 5%

- Repairs of engines, machines, locomotives, ships, aircraft, pumps and certain other items
- Electricity distribution
- Hotel services
- Restaurants
- Communications
- Equipment loans
- Sales of goods (in general)
- Sales of machines and equipment

Examples of goods and services taxable at 8%

- Sales of tobacco
- Commissions
- Banks and intermediation

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to IIBB.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Education
- Rental of real estate under certain conditions
- Interest on bank accounts and fixed-term deposits
- Manufacturer activities under certain conditions
- Sales of fixed assets

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT or IIBB becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic time of supply for goods is the earlier of when the goods are delivered or when the invoice is issued. The basic time of supply for services is the earlier of when the service is performed or completed, or when full or partial payment of the consideration is received.

Deposits and prepayments. The only provisions in Argentinean VAT law concerning deposits and prepayments are those where a prepayment fixes the payable price. In these situations, the "time of supply" occurs at the moment when the prepayment is made.

The time of supply rule for deposits and prepayments does not differ for supplies of goods or services.

There are no specific rules for where the deposits and prepayments are refundable or nonrefundable, or where the supply does not take place. Therefore, in practice these aspects do not normally change the time of supply rules outlined above.

Continuous supplies of services. For continuous supplies, the time of supply is established by law on a monthly basis. This means that the time of supply is triggered on a monthly basis, i.e., on the last day of each month, such that there is a triggering event each month.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Argentina for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. The measures regarding reverse-charge services apply to VAT, not to IIBB. The time of supply for a reverse-charge service is the earlier of when the service is provided or when the consideration is paid in full or in part.

The recipient of the service must pay the tax within 10 days after the time of supply arises. The amount paid may be treated as input tax (see Section F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons) in the tax period immediately following the tax period when the tax point arose.

Leased assets. The time of supply would generally take place upon the due date or the collection of the rental, whichever occurs first.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is when the goods clear all customs procedures. At that time, VAT is due along with custom duties.

The VAT rate applies to the normal price defined according to import duties plus the taxes due to the import itself or deriving from it.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

Note that only VAT is recoverable, as it is based on a credit and debit system. IIBB is not recoverable, as it is cumulative, and there is no credit system. As such, all references in this section to "input tax" is in respect of VAT and not IIBB.

A taxable person may recover input tax (also known as credit VAT), which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. Input tax is generally recovered by being deducted from output tax (also known as debit VAT), which is VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied within Argentina, VAT paid on imports of goods and self-assessed VAT on reverse-charge services.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Argentina is in the monthly period in which it is invoiced. However, in practice, it should also be possible to reclaim input tax for previous periods.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (e.g., goods acquired for private use by entrepreneurs). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of expenditure related to a taxable business use for which input tax is deductible.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Accommodation
- Private use of business assets
- Parking
- Restaurants

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to business use)

- Advertising
- Business gifts
- Purchase, lease or hire of a car, up to a threshold of ARS4,200 (except for cabs)
- Business entertainment
- Purchase, lease or hire of vans and trucks
- Mobile phones
- Travel expenses
- Taxis

Partial exemption. When purchases of goods, final imports, leases and performance of services are used for both taxable and exempt activities, the VAT paid on purchases can only be credited if directly related to taxable activities (including exports). If purchases are used for both taxable and exempt activities, an annual pro rata calculation must be carried out by which the percentage of taxable revenues is compared to total revenues. This percentage is then applied on the input tax on purchases. The result is the amount of creditable input tax, being the remaining portion not creditable. Businesses will have to make provisional estimations of such pro rata during the monthly calendar, and an annual final adjustment is carried out in the last month of the tax year.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Argentina. Special methods are not allowed in Argentina.

Capital goods. VAT related to the purchase of capital goods can be credited in the month in which the purchase takes place by applying the same rules that would apply for the purchase of any other goods (a special refund mechanism is explained below). If capital goods are used for both taxable and exempt activities, the partial exemption rules (see above) will apply. Therefore, if the capital goods are used for both taxable and exempt activities the portion of the taxable activities over total revenues determines the computable portion (this calculation only impacts the year of acquisition).

Refunds. The taxable person pays monthly on the total amount invoiced, offset by the amount of input tax invoiced to the taxable person during the same period. If the VAT credit is higher than the amount of VAT debit during any tax period, such excess is only credited against future tax liabilities, not refunded, except in the case of exporters who may request a refund.

In addition, the reimbursement of VAT credits resulting from the purchase, manufacture, preparation or import of fixed assets (other than automobiles) that remain as a VAT credit for the taxable person after six months may be requested, under certain conditions.

A taxable person that has paid too much VAT in a period in error may request a refund of the overpaid amount. Interest is paid by the VAT authorities on overpaid tax at the monthly rate published by the AFIP that is updated on a quarterly basis (3.84% monthly for the third quarter of 2023).

If the IIBB tax assessment shows an excess in favor of the taxable person, it will be allocated and deducted in future filings, subject to the compliance of requirements.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Argentina is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Argentina.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred upon purchases that are used for noneconomic activities (e.g., supplies not related to the business, donations) must be reimbursed through their inclusion as higher output tax.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Argentina is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must generally provide a VAT sales invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports. A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction.

The invoicing rules are set at the national level, so typically apply to VAT. IIBB is not separately broken down, and the invoice is a self-assessment on the same price. As such, the VAT sales invoice format is used for all supplies, and the AFIP accepts the VAT sales invoice, set by national rules, not local.

Credit notes. A credit note may be used to reduce the VAT and IIBB charged and reclaimed on a supply of goods and services. A credit note must contain the same information as a sales invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Argentina.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Argentina. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Argentina.

There are different options to interact with the AFIP for the purposes of issuing the invoices. One option is the exchange of information between the ERP system of the taxable person and AFIP´s website. Another option is to issue the invoices by manually logging into the AFIP's website with the fiscal password of the taxable person.

Simplified VAT invoices. Sale of goods and provisions of services (among other transactions) must follow strict invoicing requirements. Certain activities expressly stated in the regulations are relieved from complying with such requirements and may issue invoicing according to their particular practices (e.g., banks, passenger transportation activities, sale of tickets for certain entertainment activities, director's fees, judicial fees).

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Argentina.

Proof of exports. The shipping permit issued for exports is the customs document that formally authorizes the exit of those goods.

Argentine VAT and IIBB are not chargeable on supplies of exported goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports must be supported by evidence that the goods have left Argentina. The related input tax may be reimbursed by the federal government. Invoices for export transactions must be identified with the letter "E" to distinguish them from invoices for domestic supplies.

If services rendered in Argentina are invoiced to a foreign person and if the effective exploitation occurs abroad (i.e., export of services), the services are subject to IIBB in most jurisdictions, except the City of Buenos Aires, Córdoba, Entre Rios, Neuquén, Mendoza and Province of Buenos Aires, under certain circumstances.

Foreign currency invoices. If an invoice is issued in a foreign currency, the values for VAT and IIBB purposes must be converted to the domestic currency, which is the Argentine peso (ARS). If no authorized exchange rate applies, the conversion must be done using the selling exchange rate of the Argentine National Bank that applies at the end of the day immediately preceding the date of the tax point.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Taxable persons are required to issue official invoices or receipts to end consumers. Typically, such invoices are identified by letter "B" and do not show the VAT amount breakdown from the net price (i.e., the "B" invoices only show the total amount including VAT).

Records. In Argentina, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include accounting books, such as the journal, inventories and balances, etc. These are required to be archived by commercial regulations. In addition, tax regulations require an archive with all invoices issued and received, including a special record for monthly purchases and sales. In Argentina, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. In general cases, records and documents should be maintained for a period of 10 years, considering tax rules in force and also general civil/commercial law rules.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Argentina. Records required by corporate law (i.e., accounting books) can be archived physically (i.e., paper) or also electronically, subject to a special authorization granted by corporate authorities, which may also include the "purchases" and "sales" books. Tax rules allow electronic archiving of electronic invoices issued and received, as well as monthly detail of purchases and sales, which are submitted to the AFIP on a monthly basis.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT and IIBB returns are submitted for monthly periods. Certain entities qualifying as small or medium companies may apply for VAT submissions on a quarterly basis.

Returns are due between the 12th to the 22nd day of the month following the end of the return period. The actual due date depends on the last figure of the taxable person's identification number and the due date may vary from month to month.

Periodic payments. Payment in full is due between the 12th to the 22nd day of the month following the end of the return period. Return liabilities must be paid in Argentine pesos. VAT payments may be offset by a credit balance arising from another tax collected by the Federal Administration for Public Revenues. This measure does not apply to IIBB.

In addition, VAT and IIBB payments may be offset with withholdings of these taxes. If the withholdings generate a credit in favor of the company, the company may ask for reimbursement from the local tax authorities. In the case of VAT, this credit may be used to offset other national taxes or sold to another company.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Argentina for all taxable persons. VAT and IIBB are submitted on the tax authority's webpage. In general, a copy of those electronically filed tax returns can be viewed and retrieved from the website, but it is highly recommended that taxable persons maintain their own copies in secure storage.

Payments on account. Different rules established by the AFIP and provincial tax authorities establish situations in which the taxable persons are withheld a portion of the taxes (upon collections) and charged additional taxes (when making purchases), being those amounts withheld or charged considered as payments on account of the final tax liability. For instance, withholding regimes on sales (applicable by certain customers) and additional charges upon purchases (applicable by certain suppliers) may be applicable both for VAT and turnover tax purposes. Importation of goods is also subject to VAT and turnover tax additional charges. Furthermore, credits in bank accounts may be subject to a turnover tax withholding system.

All withholdings and additional charges suffered become a payment on account in the related tax returns. In case of an excess, it may be carried forward for future monthly periods or in some cases be used to pay other taxes (belonging to the same jurisdiction) or even reimbursed. Different mechanisms also exist to mitigate the effects of these regimes, by requesting exclusion certificates or a reduction in the local withholding rates.

Taxable persons should also be aware, based on their size, location, amount of revenues, appointment, among others, of the obligation to act as withholding agents in payments to suppliers or invoices to clients, in which case they will have to implement such regimes and submit the withheld amounts to the AFIP in separate tax returns.

Special schemes. Simplified regime. Individual taxable persons whose annual taxable turnover from supplies of goods does not exceed ARS11,379,612.01 and annual taxable turnover from supplies of services does not exceed ARS7,996,484.12 can opt for a simplified regime (Monotributo) by which through a monthly fixed payment (determined based on several categories) they replace the payment of VAT and income tax, among other simplified characteristics.

Annual returns. For IIBB, taxable persons registered under the multilateral agreement regime must file an annual affidavit – a CM05 form – due in June of the following year. For local taxable persons, some jurisdictions, such as the city of Buenos Aires, require an annual filing.

Supplementary filings. The AFIP requires the monthly filing of a complete detail of all purchases and sales, containing the client/supplier's information, information of the amounts on each invoice, VAT and other taxes withheld or collected, etc. These filings are done electronically on a monthly basis.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Amended tax returns are filed by taxable persons following the same procedure for original returns, through the AFIP's webpage.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Argentina.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A person that has not been registered for VAT and IIBB with the AFIP cannot perform commercial activities of any kind. Penalties and interest are assessed for late registration or payment, such as when a person developed a commercial activity before registering and paying. Penalties also apply to VAT or IIBB fraud.

Penalties for late payment and filings. For VAT, penalties may include:
- A penalty ranging from ARS200 to ARS400 for failure to file a tax return
- A penalty of up to 200% of the tax due for unpaid VAT
- Fines ranging from two to six times the amount of tax evaded

In addition, interest is assessed at a 5.91% monthly rate on unpaid amounts (compensatory interest rate is updated on a quarterly basis; this rate corresponds to the third quarter of 2023).

Criminal tax evasion may be punished by a term of imprisonment, depending on the severity of the case.

For IIBB, penalties similar to the VAT penalties outlined above are established in each local jurisdiction as part of IIBB enforcement.

Penalties for errors. Omission penalties may be up to 100% of the omitted tax (or 200% if it corresponds to transactions with foreign parties). If errors are detected and duly amended, the penalties may be reduced by different percentages, depending on the moment of recognition (e.g., no penalty may apply if the error is corrected before any audit by the authorities).

The late notification of or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in the application of fines for noncompliance with formal obligations. In general terms, these fines are not significant. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. In the case of fraud, penalties are increased to a range between two and six times the amount of the omitted tax. In addition, depending on the amounts, the tax criminal law may apply.

Personal liability for company officers. Directors, managers and legal representatives of corporate VAT taxable persons can be personally and jointly liable if the company does not pay within 15 days upon receiving a payment request from the authorities. An exception applies if the individuals can prove that they are not personally responsible for the lack of payment.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Argentina is between five and 10 years. It is 5 years for registered taxpayers and 10 years for non-registered taxpayers. The time limit that the AFIP can go back to review returns, identify errors and impose penalties is five years in the case of registered taxable persons. It is the same time limit for non-registered taxable persons who have no legal obligation to register with the AFIP or who have such obligation to register and have not complied with it, and who may spontaneously choose to regularize their situation. In the case of non-registered taxable persons, the statute of limitation is 10 years.

The statute of limitation will be counted from 1 January of the year following the date the tax return should have been filed or the tax should have been paid.

There is no time limit for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- Supply of goods if the place of supply of goods is considered to take place in the Republic of Armenia (the RA) (referred to as "Armenia" henceforth in the chapter)
- Performance of works and (or) rendering of services in Armenia
- Importation of goods under the customs procedure "Release for domestic consumption"
- Importation of goods with the status of Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) product to the territory of Armenia from EAEU member countries

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Armenia, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going-concern rules do not apply in Armenia. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Armenia, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated at arm's length. Transfer pricing regulations do not apply to VAT arising from the transactions made between related parties with a retroactive force from 1 January 2020.

C. Who is liable

Legal entities, individual entrepreneurs and notaries are considered VAT payers. If the sales turnover does not exceed AMD115 million (the VAT registration threshold) in the preceding tax year, depending on the type of business activity, these entities (except for the nonresident legal entities and permanent establishments of nonresident legal entities) and individuals may become turnover taxable persons by submitting an appropriate written statement to the tax authority by 20 February of the tax year. However, if such a statement has been submitted and the sales turnover at any time during the year exceeds the VAT threshold, such entities and individuals will be considered VAT payers from that moment.

Exemption from registration. The tax code of Armenia does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. It is possible for a taxable business that is not a VAT payer under the tax code of Armenia to register for VAT on a voluntary basis. Voluntary registration is conducted on the basis of application submitted to the tax authorities in a form established by the government of Armenia. The application can be submitted electronically. The electronic application is submitted through the taxable person's online account.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Armenia.

Fixed establishment. In Armenia there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the same permanent establishment rules that apply for direct taxation also apply for VAT purposes. The permanent establishment (PE) of a nonresident organization is a place of business activity that is registered as a taxpayer in the tax authority, and through which a nonresident organization carries out entrepreneurial activity in Armenia, regardless of the duration of the business. The place of business activity includes but is not limited to the following:

- Any place of production, processing, consolidation, re-packaging, packaging and/or supply of goods
- Any place of management
- Any place of geological investigation of the subsurface, exploration, preparatory works for extraction of mineral resources and/or extraction of mineral resources and/or performance of works, provision of supervision and/or monitoring services over exploration and/or extraction of mineral resources
- Any place of conduct of the activity related to the installation, adaptation and exploitation of gaming machines, computer networks and communication channels, amusement rides, as well as related to transport or other infrastructure
- Place of sale of goods in the territory of Armenia
- Any place of performance of construction activities and/or construction and installation works, as well as of provision of supervision services over performance of these works
- Location of the representative office or the branch office, except for the representative office that exclusively performs preparatory or auxiliary activity
- Location of a legal entity or an individual carrying out brokerage activities in Armenia on behalf of a nonresident legal entity or an individual in accordance with the law of Armenia on insurance and insurance activities

A PE is also triggered when works are performed and/or the services are provided by employees and/or other staff hired by a nonresident organization where such activities are carried out in the territory of Armenia for at least 183 calendar days in a tax year, starting from the day of commencement of the entrepreneurial activity within the framework of one or more related projects.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established" business is a foreign business that does not have a fixed establishment in Armenia.

If a non-established business is conducting VAT taxable entrepreneurial activities (including electronic services) in Armenia, but the Armenian persons that have contractual relations with them are not VAT payers (i.e., a business-to-consumer supply (B2C) or business-to-business (B2B), where the customer is a business entity operating under the preferential tax system), the non-established business is responsible for bearing any VAT liability in Armenia according to the terms and procedures established by the tax code. Such businesses must register and account for VAT when making taxable supplies of goods and services in Armenia. The same treatment applies if a non-established business from EAEU is conducting an electronic supply of EAEU goods (electronic trade) to individual customers (B2C) in Armenia.

For business-to-business (B2B) supplies (where the customer is a business entity operating under the general tax system) a non-established business is not required to register and account for VAT in Armenia, as the customer self-accounts for the VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection below).

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Armenia.

Reverse charge. Reverse-charge VAT generally applies to supplies of goods and services and imports made by non-established businesses in Armenia. Persons considered VAT payers that have contractual relations with foreign businesses are responsible for bearing any VAT liability instead of such non-established businesses according to the terms and procedures established by the tax code.

An Armenian established VAT taxable person engaged in business activities with a non-established business may issue a tax invoice indicating its own tax identification number and VAT number on behalf of a foreign entity that is not registered in Armenia as a person supplying goods or services. This tax invoice shall be considered to be issued by the foreign supplier and accordingly shall allow that person to deduct the amount of VAT from output tax.

Digital economy. Effective from 1 January 2022, the concept of electronic services and related regulations took effect in the Armenia tax code. According to the code, the provision of electronic services shall be considered the provision of services via an information and telecommunication network (electrical connection), including via the internet, the provision of which is impossible without the use of information technology. The list of electronic services is defined by the respective decree of the government of Armenia and is published on the official webpage of the tax authority.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B supplies (in which the customer is a VAT payer) will not be required to register and account for VAT in Armenia. Instead, the customer self-accounts for the Armenian VAT by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (via issuing a self-invoice) on the invoice amount payable to the supplier. See the Reverse-charge subsection above. The self-assessed VAT is eligible for a credit to the extent that the customer's business allows the customer to take input tax credits and the customer has performed all necessary steps defined by the law necessary for VAT credit.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2C supplies will be required to register and account for VAT in Armenia. The registration can take place remotely. As the customer cannot be considered a VAT payer, a nonresident business shall be obliged to calculate and pay VAT in Armenia (the same rule applies also to B2B transactions in which the customer is not a VAT payer).

Online marketplaces and platforms. Effective from 1 January 2023, the concept of electronic trade and related regulations took effect in the Armenia tax code. According to the code, electronic trade of goods is the sale of goods via the internet by a nonresident organization or an individual entrepreneur of an EAEU Member State that does not have a permanent establishment in Armenia through an electronic trade platform to an individual in the territory of Armenia who is not an entrepreneur or notary and simultaneously complies with the following conditions:

- Electronic conclusion of transactions on sale of goods
- Noncash payment for the purchase of goods
- Ensures the delivery of goods (directly or through entities who provide courier services and (or) perform postal activities)

An electronic trade platform is a hardware and software complex consisting of organizational, information and technical solutions designed to facilitate electronic trade of goods on the internet, which:

Is used for the purpose of displaying products, presenting the terms of product sales to buyers and concluding contracts for the electronic trade of goods
Is operated by a nonresident organization or individual entrepreneur of another EAEU Member State that does not have a permanent establishment in Armenia (including the owner of the good)
Provides the conditions via electronic means for the sale and purchase of goods with the EAEU status, transportation and delivery from one EAEU Member State to the territory of another EAEU Member State between an organization or an individual entrepreneur of one EAEU Member State and an individual who is not an individual entrepreneur or notary from another Member State
Nonresident providers of electronically supplied goods from the EAEU Member States for B2C supplies will be required to register and account for VAT in Armenia. The registration can take place remotely. As the individual customer cannot be considered a VAT payer, a nonresident business from an EARU Member State shall be obliged to calculate, declare and pay VAT in Armenia.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied goods from the EAEU Member States for B2B supplies will not be required to register and account for VAT in Armenia. Instead, the customer self-accounts for the Armenian VAT. The self-assessed VAT is eligible for a credit to the extent that the law permits to take input tax credits.

Registration procedures. VAT registration is automatic if the conditions for being considered a VAT payer are met. Generally, taxable persons are given the following options in Armenia. They can either (i) act as a turnover taxable person, (ii) operate under the micro-entrepreneurship system or (iii) act as a VAT payer. Therefore, if the taxable person meets the conditions prescribed by the tax code for being considered a turnover taxable person or an entity operating under the micro-entrepreneurship system, then the taxable person only submits the corresponding form of statement available in the online tax service system on operating under either of the selected tax systems. If this statement is not submitted within the deadlines set forth by the tax code, then the taxable person is automatically considered a VAT payer. Taxable persons working under the turnover tax or micro-entrepreneurship system can submit a statement available in the online tax service system to become VAT payer.

Deregistration. Deregistration is not possible in Armenia. However, in case of meeting certain criteria and submitting respective applications, taxable persons may operate under turnover tax or micro-entrepreneurship systems starting the year that follows the year when the taxable person was a VAT payer.

For further details on the turnover tax and micro-entrepreneurship schemes, see the Special schemes subsection below, under Section I. Returns and Payment.

Changes to VAT registration details. If legal entities that are VAT payers want to make changes to registration details (name of company, address or type of business), they must submit the corresponding documentation to the Agency for State Register of Legal Entities of the Ministry of Justice of Armenia. Documents are submitted in paper form. Thus, registration details are automatically updated and become accessible to the tax authorities. As a result, no separate documents are submitted to the tax authorities.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 20%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Export outside the customs border of Armenia
- Delivery of international transportation services for carriage of consignments, mail and (or) passengers

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods or services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The taxable person can submit a written statement to the tax authority to obtain a waiver from the VAT exemption.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "tax point." The tax point is the moment when goods are delivered to or accepted by the customer or works or services are performed. For continuous supplies (for example, operating leases), the tax point is the last day of a reporting period.

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in Armenia for deposits and prepayments. As such, the general time of supply rules (as outlined above) apply.

Continuous supplies of services. In cases of continuous supply of goods, the same rules as mentioned above are applied. In cases of continuous supply of services, the last day of each month is considered to be the time of supply unless the service agreement stipulates other periods (phases) for provision of services (quarter, semester, year, etc.). In the latter case, the last day of respective period is considered to be the time of supply.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Time of supply of goods is the time foregoing:

- The moment when the goods are transferred to the buyer, except for cases when, according to supply contract, the ownership over the goods is transferred to the buyer in other point of time. The latter point will be considered as time of supply
- The moment when the goods are accepted by the buyer, except for cases when, according to the sales agreement, the ownership over the goods is transferred to the buyer at another point of time. The latter point will be considered as time of supply

Notably, in cases when the ownership right over the goods is subject to state registration, the time of supply will be considered the time of state registration.

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for services subject to the reverse-charge rules is determined in accordance with rules that are similar to the standard rules described above.

Leased assets. For asset leasing services, the time of supply is considered to be the last day of each month. However, if the leasing contract stipulates that provision of the leasing services ends before the last day of the reporting period, the time of supply is considered to be the last day the service is rendered.

Imported goods. The tax point for imported goods is the moment of importation of goods into Armenia.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person that performs economic activities in Armenia may generally recover input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made. Input tax includes the following:

- Amounts of VAT indicated in tax invoices issued by the suppliers of goods, works and services purchased or received during the reporting period in Armenia
- Amounts of VAT paid to customs or tax bodies of Armenia for goods imported into Armenia under the customs procedure "Release for domestic consumption"

The excess amount of input tax over output tax in the reporting period can either be carried forward and offset against output tax in subsequent reporting periods or refunded (see the Refunds subsection below).

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Armenia. This mean that effectively the input tax may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be deducted in the following circumstances:

- The person carrying out entrepreneurial activities is not considered to be a VAT payer.
- VAT was paid for transactions that are exempt from VAT, not subject to VAT or referring to special tax systems.
- The tax invoice was issued without actual supply of goods, works or services.
- VAT was paid for transactions that were recognized as invalid.
- VAT was paid on the purchase or import of passenger cars, except for the cars acquired for the purpose of resale or provision of car rent services.
- Passenger cars used under any leasing contract, except for cases when passenger cars are used for car rental services.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Taxable person conducts an exempt activity. At end of the month, the taxable person receives a tax invoice for electricity. The taxable person cannot deduct the amount of VAT indicated in the tax invoice as the activity that he/she conducts is exempt from VAT.
- Taxable person purchases a passenger car for office use. The taxable person cannot deduct the VAT amount paid for the purchased car. The VAT amount is capitalized in the value of the car and is depreciated during the useful life of it.

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Taxable person conducts an activity that is subject to VAT. At the end of the month, the taxable person receives a tax invoice for electricity, rent of office premises and purchased fixed assets. The taxable person deducts the amount of VAT indicated in the invoices after all the requirements of the tax code are met.

Partial exemption. If a taxable person makes both taxable and nontaxable transactions, it may not deduct input tax in full from output tax. It may deduct only the amount of input tax related to the goods and services used in taxable transactions. For this purpose, taxable persons shall maintain separate accounts for taxable and nontaxable transactions, as well as for the services and goods purchased for conducting such transactions.

If it is impossible to maintain separate accounts, the amount of input tax subject to deduction in each reporting period must be prorated based on the ratio of taxable turnover to total turnover (VAT exclusive) of the business in the reporting period.

Capital goods. An input tax adjustment is required if input tax is deducted for the purchase, construction or importation of fixed assets in a reporting period and if the asset is used in a subsequent reporting period for making supplies of goods or services that are not subject to VAT. The adjustment applies to 20% of the amount of depreciation calculated for the fixed asset.

An adjustment may (i.e., at the taxable person's discretion) also be made if no input tax is deductible in the reporting period in which the acquisition is made because, at the time of acquisition, the fixed asset is directly attributable to making non-VAT taxable supplies and if the asset is subsequently used for making supplies that are subject to VAT.

If the taxable person makes both taxable and exempt supplies, the input tax recovery is based on 16.67% of the amount of depreciation calculated for the fixed asset under the tax code and on the ratio of VAT taxable supplies to all supplies made.

Refunds. Under the Armenian tax code, refunds are available. In cases when a taxable person has a recoverable VAT amount as of the 21st day of the month following each month, this amount can be debited to the taxable person's unified account based on the application of the taxable person and after appropriate tax review made by tax authorities.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Armenia is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Armenia.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is recoverable in Armenia in certain situations. For example, input tax incurred from acquisitions by a company for nonbusiness purposes, e.g., purchases for charity. Input tax is recoverable irrespective of whether it is incurred in relation to economic or noneconomic activity.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Armenia is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. VAT payers supplying goods, works and services to legal entities and individual entrepreneurs must issue tax invoices if these supplies are subject to the standard rate of VAT. VAT invoices are not issued for supplies that are subject to the zero rate of VAT. A VAT invoice must be issued on delivery of goods or completion of supply of works or services to the customer. A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction. Tax invoices can be issued electronically only. Depending on the business carried out by the taxable person, tax invoices may be issued in advance, provided the goods are supplied, or the works or services are rendered on the supply date mentioned in the tax invoice.

Credit notes. The tax code in Armenia does not contain any rules with respect to the issuance of credit notes. Instead, the tax code allows issuance of adjusting invoices.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Armenia, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Armenia. This includes self-invoices issued on behalf of nonresident entities. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Armenia.

Exceptions for mandatory electronic invoicing for B2B and B2G supplies include:

- Information, which is considered confidential or of limited use
- Import or export of goods
- Impossibility to issue an electronic invoice due to the failure in connection or software of the tax authority

In these cases, paper invoices may be raised.

For B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Armenia. This includes supplies made in relation to retail, works performed or services rendered to individuals. Electronic invoicing can only be used for these supplies if the buyer requests it.

In terms of how to issue an electronic invoice in Armenia, after state registering in Armenia and receiving a tax identification number, the taxable person applies to the corresponding tax service unit and receives the login information to sign in to the platform for electronic filing of the tax returns (https://file-online.taxservice.am). Then the taxable person then goes to the tab for issuing and accepting invoices by signing them digitally.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Armenia. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Armenia. Taxable persons can only issue self-invoices on behalf of nonresident entities to declare the reverse-charge VAT.

Proof of exports. For export purposes to countries that are not members to the Eurasian Economic Union, appropriate declarations are filed with the customs authority by specialized brokers based on the invoice information issued by the exporter. For export purposes to countries that are members to the Eurasian Economic Union, appropriate tax declarations are filed with the tax authority based on the invoice issued to the recipient. The customs authority grants approval for export after confirming that the invoice data and declarations are consistent and that all necessary documents are presented.

Foreign currency invoices. In general, tax invoices are issued by VAT payers in the domestic currency only, which is the Armenian dram (AMD). However, commercial invoices can be issued in foreign currencies for transactions carried out with non-established businesses. In such cases, the daily foreign currency exchange rates published by the Central Bank of Armenia are taken into consideration.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. VAT invoices are not issued for supplies to nontaxable persons, unless specifically requested by them.

Records. In Armenia, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include the documents necessary for the calculation of the tax base and filing of tax calculation reports, as well as documents substantiating the amount of income received/expenses incurred and taxes paid (withheld). In Armenia, VAT books and records must be held within the country. While the tax code does not provide any guidance on the place where such records must be kept, in practice, the records are kept locally in Armenia.

Record retention period. The retention period should be not less than five years starting from the reporting period the documents refer to.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Armenia. However, there are no special rules defined by the tax code for electronic archiving. Electronic documents are stored in the server of the tax authority and do not have time limits when it comes to archiving.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT payers must file their VAT and excise tax unified returns monthly by the 20th day of the month following the reporting month.

For electronic services provided to B2C or B2B (in which the customer is not a VAT payer) by nonresident providers, the VAT returns are filed quarterly by the 20th day of the quarter following the reporting quarter.

For electronic trade of goods (B2C supplies) by nonresident providers from EAEU Member States, the VAT returns are filed quarterly by the 20th day of the quarter following the reporting quarter.

Periodic payments. VAT due is payable to the state budget by the 20th day of the month following the reporting month.

For goods imported into Armenia under the customs regime "Release for domestic consumption," VAT must be paid before release of the imported goods under customs regime "Release for domestic consumption."

For goods imported into Armenia from EAEU countries, VAT must be paid by the 20th day of the month following the month of importation.

For electronic services provided to B2C or B2B (in which the customer is not a VAT payer) by nonresident providers, the VAT due is payable to the state budget by the 20th day of the month following the reporting quarter.

For electronic trade of goods (B2C supplies) by nonresident providers from EAEU Member States, the VAT due is payable to the state budget by the 20th day of the month following the reporting quarter.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Armenia. All taxable persons must file all returns electronically through their accounts online (https://file-online.taxservice.am). All tax returns are kept electronically in the taxable persons' same accounts online. Nonresident providers of electronic services and nonresident providers of electronic trade from EAEU Member States must file the quarterly returns electronically through their accounts online (https://file-online.taxservice.am/pages/evatuser/evatNonResidentProvidingEServices.jsf). All tax returns are kept electronically in the nonresident providers' same accounts online.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Armenia.

Special schemes. Turnover tax. Turnover tax is a substitute for VAT and corporate income tax. To qualify as a turnover taxable person, sales turnover of taxable persons from all types of activities for the preceding tax year and current tax year must not exceed AMD115 million. It only applies to Armenian resident taxable persons. The tax code defines the list of business activities the performance of which are restricted under the turnover tax.

When it comes to the tax base, sales turnover of the transactions considered objects of taxation under the turnover tax is taken. Objects of taxation under the turnover tax system are supply of goods, performance of works and provision of services.

Depending on the type of activity carried out by the turnover taxable person, the tax rates can differ and range from 1.5% to 25%.

The reporting period for preparing and paying the turnover tax is the reporting quarter. Turnover taxable persons must file their reports and transfer the payments to the state budget by the 20th day of the month succeeding every reporting quarter.

Micro-entrepreneurship. In the framework of micro-entrepreneurship, taxable persons are exempted from taxation under VAT, corporate income tax, as well as turnover tax. To qualify for the taxation under the micro-entrepreneurship system, sales turnover of taxable persons from all types of activities for the preceding tax year must not exceed AMD24 million. It also only applies to Armenian resident taxable persons. The tax code defines the list of business activities the performance of which are restricted under the micro-entrepreneurship.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Armenia.

Supplementary filings. To support the set off of any VAT amounts paid for imports made from EAEU Member States to Armenia, taxable persons must submit the import tax declarations to the tax authority.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Errors or omissions from prior periodic filings can be corrected by submitting adjusted electronic returns to the tax authority. Errors are corrected either voluntarily or based on the notifications received from the tax authorities as a result of internal reviews.

Digital tax administration. All invoices must be issued, and all tax reports are prepared and submitted to the tax authority digitally, which are used by the tax authority for tax administration purposes. This is treated as real-time reporting in Armenia.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Late registration penalties are not applicable because late registration is not possible in Armenia.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The penalty for filing a VAT return late is 5% of the calculated tax for each 15-day period, up to a maximum penalty of the total tax amount.

In addition, interest is charged on late tax payments at a rate of 0.04% of the tax due for each day of delay (up to 730 days).

Penalties for errors. The penalty for understatement of VAT payable equals 50% of the amount not declared. A penalty of 100% of the above amount is applied if a violation is repeated within one year.

The penalty for the violation of instructions established by the government of Armenia for the issuance of tax invoices (including adjusted tax invoices) equals double the amount of the remuneration with respect to the respective tax invoice (including the amount of VAT) but not less than AMD5 million.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. The head of the legal entity, sole entrepreneur, individual or other responsible person is punished by a penalty in the amount from 20 to 50 times the monthly income or restriction of freedom from one to three years, or short-term imprisonment from one to two months, or imprisonment from two to five years, if they carry out any of the following crimes:

- Does not submit in the procedure defined by the law or time frames the return, calculation or declaration defined by the law with the aim of not paying taxes, duties or other payments in large amounts
- Does not submit in the procedure defined by the law or time frames another mandatory document giving rise to the obligation to calculate or pay a tax, duty or other payment
- Inserts false information in the return, calculation, declaration or another document giving rise to an obligation to calculate or pay tax, duty or another payment
- Conceals the object of taxation
- Manifests deception

Monthly income is determined as 35% of the average monthly income received by the individual during the 12 months preceding the date of committing the crime. The average monthly income includes the salary and other payments equivalent thereto and passive income (dividends, interest, royalty and rent fee) received by the individual. When calculating the monthly income, the taxes, duties or other fees withheld from them are not considered.

In case there is lack of income or it is impossible to determine the amount thereof for the individual who committed the crime, the amount of penalty is calculated in the amount of the minimum salary at the time of committing the crime (AMD75,000 (net of taxes and mandatory payments) in 2023).

In case due to the calculation, the amount of monthly income of the individual is less than the amount of the minimum salary (AMD75,000 (net of taxes and mandatory payments) in 2023), then the amount of the penalty is determined on the basis of the minimum salary.

Personal liability for company officers. Penalties for fraud apply to and are imposed on the directors and chief accountants of the taxable person company. See the section Penalties for fraud above.

In addition, failure by any company officers/officials to file the tax reports and other documents specified in the Armenian tax code and other legal acts with the Armenian tax authorities or reporting false information are punished under an administrative penalty from AMD10,000 to AMD15,000. If the same action leads to tax evasion, a penalty from AMD15,000 to AMD20,000 is imposed.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Armenia is three years. This is three years from the year the violation of the requirements of the Republic of Armenia laws were made.

Taxable persons cannot make voluntary adjustments of tax returns or deductible amounts if three years have passed from the end of the reporting period to which the adjustments relate.

B. Scope of the tax

Taxable persons subject to RT and HT are businesses (i.e., taxable persons) that supply goods or provide services in Aruba. The tax base equals the gross revenue (in cash or in kind) generated from the supply of goods or services in Aruba by taxable persons.

As of 1 August 2023, the import of goods into Aruba by taxable persons (businesses and nonbusinesses) is also a taxable event for the tax on import of goods. The tax base equals the customs value, which is the value of the imported goods as per the moment the goods cross the border, which includes all expenses made to import the goods, such as: cost, insurance and freight (CIF value). Imported goods that are exempt from import duties are also exempt from the tax on import of goods (e.g., machinery and raw materials for local producers). Same applies to import of goods for which the import duties are waived (e.g., goods that serve a scientific purpose).The formal requirements for the levy, refund, additional assessments and penal provision of the import duties are also applicable to the tax on import of goods. For instance, a person is entitled to recover any overpaid tax on import of goods (same as import duties) within one year of payment.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for RT and HT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Aruba, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in Aruba. As such, the RT and HT apply to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Aruba, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for RT and HT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, in general an arm's-length compensation should be considered.

C. Who is liable

In principle, for RT and HT purposes, a taxable person is an individual or business entity that delivers goods or performs services (engages in taxable activities) in Aruba. A taxable person can also be regarded as anyone who exploits an asset to realize sustainable revenue. The taxable person that realizes the revenue is subject to RT and HT.

A legal entity is not regarded as a taxable person for RT and HT purposes if it does not participate in economic activities in Aruba and has a foreign exchange license or is exempt from the requirement to hold one.

For the tax on import of goods, a taxable person is anyone that imports goods into Aruba. The taxable person (businesses and nonbusinesses) in whose name goods are imported, is responsible for the payment of the tax on import of goods.

Exemption from registration. The RT and HT laws in Aruba do not contain any provisions for exemption from registration. Companies that have a nonresident status for foreign exchange transaction purposes at the Central Bank of Aruba and that do not participate in the economic sphere of Aruba are not required to register for the RT and HT.

Furthermore, free zone companies are exempt from RT and HT with respect to the rendering of services or the supply of goods to nonresidents.

The revenue of certain oil and gas exploration and exploitation companies is exempt from RT and HT to the extent that the revenue is made with the exploration and exploitation of oil and gas.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The RT and HT law in Aruba does not contain any provision for voluntary RT and HT registration.

However, private individuals who are regarded as taxable persons for RT and HT purposes and who expect to not exceed a generated annual turnover of AWG50,000, can, in principle, obtain a dispensation for RT and HT. The dispensation implies that, on the generated turnover with the supply of goods or the rendering of services, no RT or HT is due. The taxable person who exploits an asset in order to realize revenue on a continuous basis cannot apply for this dispensation.

Group registration. If a parent company owns 100% of the legal and beneficial rights of shares in a subsidiary established in Aruba, on request a VAT group for RT and HT purposes is recognized and RT and HT are levied on the parent company as if one taxable person exists. Revenue generated by intercompany transactions is disregarded from RT and HT. There is no minimum time period required for the duration of the VAT group. The VAT group starts in the month that the request is filed and ends when the unity no longer meets the 100% ownership requirement.

Members of a RT/HT group in Aruba are not jointly and severally liable for RT/HT debts and penalties. There is no specific legal provision nor policy based on which members are jointly and severally liable for the RT/HT debts and penalties. Based on the RT/HT law, taxes are levied on the parent company as if one taxable person exists, meaning that the other group members are disregarded. This means that they would not be jointly and severally liable for the RT/HT of the group nor individually.

Fixed establishment. In Aruba there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for RT or HT purposes. However, generally, a fixed establishment is understood to be a business in Aruba of an entity established outside of Aruba, characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources to enable it to provide the services that it supplies and/or to acquire and use services for its own needs. A fixed establishment should be capable of acting as a taxable person independently of the head office.

Non-established business. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a business or fixed establishment in Aruba. A non-established business that performs taxable supplies of goods or services (e.g., maintenance work on real estate established in Aruba) is, in principle, required to register for RT/HT unless the reverse-charge mechanism is applicable (on specific supplies of services as of 1 January 2023).

Tax representatives. As of 1 January 2023 , taxable persons that supply goods or provide services in Aruba and are neither established in Aruba nor have a permanent establishment in Aruba, can appoint a fiscal representative in Aruba instead of registering at the tax authorities (Departamento di Impuesto) for RT and HT purposes. The fiscal representative acts on behalf of the taxable person and takes care of its filing and payment obligations for RT and HT. The fiscal representative can be assigned by means of a written power of attorney. The Minister of Finance may designate cases for which the appointment of a fiscal representative is mandatory.

Reverse charge. As of 1 January 2023, the reverse charge mechanism should be applied on specific types of services in case these are provided to other businesses (B2B). These services are: electronic, telecommunication, radio and television broadcasting services, services performed in Aruba related to real estate located in Aruba, transportation of persons or goods in Aruba and related services such as loading and unloading of goods and services performed in Aruba related to movable property.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Aruba.

Digital economy. As of 1 January 2023, the place of supply of electronic, telecommunication and radio and television broadcasting services is the country of establishment or residence of the customer (B2B and B2C).

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are required to register and account for RT/HT in Aruba.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are not required to register and account for RT/HT on supplies in Aruba. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse charge subsection above).

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Aruba. Goods (e.g., software, clothing, books) that are ordered by Aruba residents via the internet are not considered electronic services and therefore not subject to RT/HT in Aruba. However, tourist levies and environmental levies can be levied from third parties (platforms) that facilitate the rent of a hotel or lodging and that receive the payment from the guest.

Registration procedures. To register for RT and HT, a taxable person, or an authorized representative, must submit a hard copy registration form to the tax authorities to receive a tax identification number. This registration form can be downloaded from the website of the Aruban tax authorities (http://www.impuesto.aw). The documents necessary for registration include original chamber of commerce excerpt; identification of the applicant (in case of a director whose name is identified in the chamber of commerce, a copy of their identification); and, in case the application is being done by a third party, a signed power of attorney. The registration request can be filed by letter or digitally. It takes an average of 10 working days for the tax authorities to complete the registration process.

Deregistration. To deregister for the RT or HT, a written application for deregistration must be submitted to the tax authorities.

Changes to RT and HT registration details. To notify the tax authorities of any changes to the registration details, such as company name or address, the taxable person must submit a letter informing the tax authorities of the applicable changes.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods or services that are subject to a rate of RT and HT.

In Aruba, the term "revenue" refers to all remunerations (in cash or in kind) received by a taxable person for the supply of goods or the rendering of services in the course of its business.

The RT standard rate is 4%. The standard rate of RT applies to revenue realized from performing taxable activities in Aruba, unless a specific measure provides for an exemption. Note that this is a combined rate of BBO (2.5%) and BAVP (1.5%).

The HT rate of 3% applies to revenue realized from performing taxable activities in Aruba, unless a specific measure provides for an exemption.

The standard rate of the tax on import of goods is 7% (combined rate of 2.5%, 1.5% and 3%).

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to RT and HT.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Sale of real estate (to the extent that transfer tax is due)
- Prescription medicines, including certain medical aids
- Renting apartments or hotel rooms (to the extent that room tax is due)
- Providing opportunities to gamble (to the extent that gaming tax is due)
- International transportation of goods and persons by ships or airplanes
- Renting real estate that is used as the renter's own dwelling
- Investment income, such as interest, dividends and capital gains generated from the sale of shares and other stocks
- Services provided by companies established in the free zone to customers outside Aruba
- Revenue generated from the supply of exported goods is exempt from RT and HT. However, to qualify for this exemption, the exports of goods must be substantiated by proof that confirms that the goods have left Aruba. The Minister of Finance may propose additional regulations. At the time of preparing this chapter, no additional regulations have been adopted.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Aruba.

E. Time of supply

RT and HT are levied on a cash basis. However, on request, a taxable person may opt for an invoice (accrual) basis for RT and HT. The tax authorities need to approve this request.

Deposits and prepayments. The tax point for deposits and prepayments arises upon receipt of the payment for the goods or services.

Continuous supplies of services. The tax point arises upon receipt of each payment for the continuously supplied goods or services.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Aruba for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Aruba for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. The tax point arises upon the payment of each lease installment for both operational and financial lease.

Imported goods. The import of goods is a taxable event for taxable persons in whose name the goods are imported. The import of goods is defined as releasing the goods for free circulation in Aruba. Goods are generally considered for free circulation when the corresponding customs declaration is filed, all customs requirements are fulfilled and the goods are no longer under the supervision of the customs authorities.

For RT/HT purposes, the time of supply of imported goods is where the transport originates, i.e., outside of Aruba. However, the foreign supplier would not need to register for RT or HT in Aruba, as no RT or HT is due on the goods upon importation.

F. Recovery of RT, HT and tax on import of goods by taxable persons

RT and HT cannot be recovered in Aruba.

Tax on the import of goods paid by taxable persons for RT and HT purposes (i.e., those engaged in taxable activities and in whose name the goods are imported) for the import of trade goods can, under certain circumstances, be recovered by aforementioned taxable persons. The recovery mechanism applies for "trade goods" only. Trade goods are defined as goods meant for resale. Resale is defined as the reselling of imported goods without further processing, e.g., wholesalers and retailers.

In a Ministerial Regulation of 13 September 2023, the term "trade goods" has been broadened with the following:

- Goods that are imported by a taxable person intended for commercial resale, whereby the goods have remained materially the same and the essential characteristics of the goods have not changed after any treatments or processing of the goods within the company (e.g., imported chicken that is made into a chicken salad).
- Parts that are imported by a taxable person and assembled or processed in the own company into a new trade good that is intended to be resold commercially (e.g., a bike shop that imports the parts of a bike and self-assembles the bikes for sale)
- Any processing operation of the taxable person of food and beverages that are intended to be resold commercially, whereby the supply of food and beverages almost exclusively prevails and is not subordinate to the supply of a service (e.g., fast food restaurants and takeaway restaurants).

The aforementioned taxable person can offset the tax on import of goods only if it fulfills the invoicing/cash register system requirements.

The total tax on import of goods paid to the customs authority in a reporting period (month) will be pre-populated in the RT and HT return in the Bo Impuesto (BOi) portal of the taxable person. The amount of tax on import of (trade) goods should be reclaimed by offsetting the amount in the RT and HT return of the reporting period in which the import of these goods took place. The trade goods do not have to be resold when the concerning tax on import of goods is reclaimed. If the amount of the tax on import of goods is higher than the amount of the RT and HT due in a reporting period, the difference ("a refund") will be paid back to the taxable person. Small businesses that are not registered for RT and/HT (see the subsection Voluntary registration and small businesses above) are not entitled to reclaim the tax on import of goods.

G. Recovery of RT, HT and tax on import of goods by non-established businesses

RT and HT cannot be recovered in Aruba.

A non-established business (i.e., a business not registered for RT and HT in Aruba) cannot recover tax on import of (trade) goods in Aruba. However, a non-established business that performs taxable supplies of goods or services in Aruba, may in principle recover the tax on import of goods for the import of "trade goods." See the subsection Recovery of RT, and HT and tax on import of goods by taxable persons above. The only possible way to recover tax, is the tax on import of trade goods. A non-established business is required to supply goods in Aruba to be eligible for the recovery of import tax. Reciprocity does not apply.

H. Invoicing

RT and HT invoices. A taxable person must issue an invoice for all taxable supplies performed including exports.

Taxable persons are prohibited to carry out the following:
- To state on their invoices and receipts that the RT and HT is levied on the (taxable) turnover
- To offer goods and services (which are taxable) against prices that do not include the RT and HT due

Taxable persons can opt to reflect the RT and HT on their invoices/receipts. There are two permissible ways to do so. The taxable person may:
- Separately state on the invoice/receipt that the price includes BBO/BAZV/BAVP
- Indicate on the invoice/receipt what part of the total price will be remitted as BBO/BAZV/BAVP

The RT and HT percentage to be indicated on the invoice must be 7%.

Credit notes. An RT and HT credit note must be issued when the quantity or remuneration of an initial invoice issued should be updated. In general, credit notes must include the same information as the original RT and HT invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Aruba, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Aruba. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Aruba. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Note there is no specific legislation regarding the application of electronic invoicing in Aruba. However, there are specifications regarding the information presented that all invoices (hard copy or electronic) must adhere to, and all taxable persons are required to insure the authenticity of the electronic invoices. This includes the fact that PDF invoices can be issued in Aruba.

Simplified RT and HT invoices. Simplified RT and HT invoicing is not allowed in Aruba. As such, full RT and HT invoices are required. Taxable persons that use the cash registration system can suffice with only issuing a cash receipt containing certain information.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Aruba.

Proof of export. Goods destined for export are exempt from RT and HT. The taxable person must provide documents to prove the goods are destined for export.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices can be provided in any currency, including the local currency, the Aruban florin (AWG).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Aruba. As such, full RT and HT invoices are required.

Records. In Aruba, examples of what records must be held for RT/HT purposes include copies of the returns and the underlying documentation. In Aruba, RT/HT books and records can be kept outside of the country. The records do not have to be held physically in Aruba. The legislation allows the records to be held digitally, as well, as long as the digital records are an exact copy to the physical ones. Furthermore, the location is not specified in the legislation, as long as the taxable persons can provide the records to the tax authorities within a reasonable time.

Record retention period. Taxable persons must retain copies of invoices for 10 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Aruba. However, there are no specific rules on how the invoices should be administrated other than that upon request by the Aruba Tax Inspector, these should be provided, and the information should be clear and definite.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. RT and HT combined returns are generally submitted on a monthly basis. The RT and HT return must be filed within 15 days after the end of the month. The filing of the return of the RT and HT amount can be done separately.

Periodic payments. The RT and HT due must be paid within the same time period as the return, which is within 15 days after the end of the month.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Aruba for all taxable persons. Filing is done via the online portal BO impuesto (BOi). All companies who could be liable for RT and HT tax are requested to register in the BOi system. The documents necessary to register are a copy of a previously filed RT and HT, original chamber of commerce abstract, identification of the applicant (in case of a director whose name is identified in the chamber of commerce, a copy of their identification), tax authorities' template of authorization form and a username.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Aruba.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Aruba.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Aruba.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Aruba.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Errors of previous returns can be corrected by filing an objection within two months of the payment of the RT and HT returns. A RT and HT correction can be filed within seven days via the BOi online portal. If the correction is made after seven days, a correction request letter must be sent via email to the tax authorities (info@impuesto.aw).

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Aruba.

J. Penalties

Aruba's strict penalty system punishes the following two categories of infraction:
- Omissions
- Gross negligence or intent

The penal provisions of the import duties are also applicable to the tax on import of goods.

Penalties for late registration. In general, an Aruba taxable person who starts performing economic activities must register with the tax authorities in Aruba. Since there is no specific deadline for registration, no penalty is imposed for late registration.

Penalties for late payment and filings. However, if the late registration results in the late payment of RT or HT or the late submission of RT or HT returns, administrative penalties may be imposed.

The tax authorities can impose penalties for not filing the RT and HT return on time, for not paying the amount due on time, for not paying or partially paying the amount due and for noncompliance with the prohibition mentioned under Section H for RT and HT on the invoice. As to the latter penalty, it is our understanding that this penalty will not be imposed during a transitional period. These penalties can, however, accumulate. The following are the maximum penalties that can be applied, which vary depending on the number of omissions:
- Not filing return on time: maximum penalty of AWG250
- Not paying on time: maximum penalty of AWG10,000
- Not paying or only partially paying: maximum penalty of AWG10,000
- Not including the RT and HT in the remuneration of the (taxable) supply of goods and/or services: maximum penalty of AWG10,000
- Stating the RT and HT in the calculation of the final price: maximum penalty of AWG10,000

If the late payment is caused by gross negligence or intent, penalties ranging from 25% to 100% of the RT and HT payable may be imposed.

Penalties for errors. The penalties for errors are the same as those for late filing and late payment (as outlined above).

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's RT/HT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to RT and HT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Criminal penalties may also apply in certain circumstances, such as in cases of fraudulent conduct. If the invoicing requirements are not met and a proper administration is not in place, criminal penalties consisting of a penalty of AWG25,000 or a jail sentence for the maximum duration of six months may be imposed.

Should gross negligence or intent be constituted, the amount of the penalty will be AWG100,000 and the jail sentence up to six years.

There are, in principle, no consequences for the tax advisor, provided that the tax advisor did not contribute to fraud.

Personal liability for company officers. In the Aruban tax legislation, the company is liable for filing and payment of the RT and HT returns correctly. However, a (former) director is jointly and severally liable for unpaid RT and HT, including any penalty and collection fees due by the legal entity.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Aruba is five years. For the RT and HT, there is a five-year statute of limitation period for the tax authorities to review the filed RT and HT returns and impose an additional assessment. The five-year period begins as of the end of the calendar year in which the tax liability originated. In case of bad faith by the taxable person upon filing of the RT and HT return and/or upon payment of the RT and/or HT due, the statute of limitation period is extended to 10 years.

In principle, the taxable person can file a voluntary correction within this period insofar as the tax authorities is not yet aware of any errors in the RT and HT returns or payments. Should the tax authorities inform the taxpayer of any audits or possible errors known by the tax authorities, the taxpayer cannot voluntarily correct any errors.

B. Scope of the tax

GST applies to the following transactions:

- Taxable supplies of goods and services, which are supplies connected with the "indirect tax zone" (i.e., Australia) and made for consideration in the course of a business enterprise by an entity that is registered or that is required to be registered for GST.
- Reverse charge applies to offshore acquisitions made by a registered entity in Australia if the supply is not connected with Australia and if the recipient of the supply does not make the acquisition solely for a creditable purpose. Effective 1 July 2017, offshore intangibles supplied to Australian non-registered consumers (e.g., digital supplies and services) may be subject to GST with the offshore supplier liable to remit this GST.
- Taxable importations of goods into Australia, regardless of the status of the importer; importations of low value goods (e.g., AUD1,000 or less) are subject to GST with the nonresident suppliers, operators of online marketplaces (i.e., electronic distribution platforms) and/or re-deliverers to consumers in Australia liable to remit that GST to the Commissioner of Taxation.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for GST in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Australia, the place of effective use or enjoyment of a supply is only taken into account in relation to the consumption outside Australia of supplies of things other than goods or real property. A supply can be GST-free when made to a recipient who is outside Australia when the thing supplied is done, and the effective use or enjoyment takes place outside Australia, other than a supply of work physically performed on goods in Australia when the thing supplied is done, or a supply directly connected with real property in Australia. A supply is also taken to be made to a recipient who is not in Australia if it is a supply made under an agreement entered into, whether directly or indirectly, with an Australian resident, and the supply is provided, or the agreement requires it to be provided, to another entity outside Australia.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a GST-registered or GST-registrable business will be subject to GST at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of GST. In Australia, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of GST where the following conditions are met:

- The supply must occur under an arrangement.
- The supplier supplies to the recipient all the things necessary for the continued operation of an enterprise.
- The supplier carries on, or will carry on, the enterprise until the day of supply (whether or not part of a larger enterprise carried on by the supplier).
- The supply is for consideration.
- The recipient is registered or required to be registered.
- The supplier and the recipient have agreed in writing that the supply is of a going concern.

Transactions between related parties. In Australia, a transaction between related parties will ordinarily be subject to the normal GST rules where a taxable supply is made. However, where a supply occurs between related parties that are defined as associates under Australian income tax rules, special associate rules will apply.

Where a taxable supply to an associate is made without consideration, and the associate is not registered or required to be registered, or if registered, the associate does not acquire the thing supplied solely for a creditable purpose, GST should be applied at a rate of 10% of the GST-exclusive market value of the supply.

Where a taxable supply is made to an associate for consideration that is less than the GST-inclusive market value of the supply, and the associate is not registered or required to be registered, or if registered, does not acquire the thing supplied solely for a creditable purpose, GST should be applied at 10% of the GST-exclusive market value of the supply.

There is no distinction between the supply of goods or services under the associate rules.

C. Who is liable

The GST registration threshold is AUD75,000 (AUD150,000 for nonprofit bodies). The threshold applies, retrospectively and prospectively, based on either of the following:

- Current GST turnover, which is the value of all supplies made or likely to be made in the current month plus the preceding 11 months
- Projected GST turnover, which is the value of all supplies made or likely to be made in the current month plus the next 11 months

To calculate turnover for the above purposes, turnover from input-taxed (exempt) supplies, supplies that are not connected with Australia and certain other types of supplies are excluded.

Sales of residential property. Purchasers of new residential premises (or subdivisions) must pay the GST on the purchase price directly to the Australian Tax Office (ATO) as part of the settlement. Suppliers are required to provide the purchaser with a notification in writing before making the supply, providing the supplier's Australian Business Number (ABN) and the amount required to be withheld. Purchasers are required to provide the ATO with a notification through the submission of a form, which is completed and lodged online to the ATO prior to settlement. Once this form has been lodged, the ATO will provide the purchaser with a payment reference number and lodgement reference number. The final GST liability is to be resolved as part of the Business Activity Statement (BAS) cycle, whereby the supplier will be entitled to a credit for the amount of payment made to the ATO in the BAS for the tax period to which the supply is attributed.

Withholding by purchasers applies to supplies of new residential premises or subdivisions for which consideration (other than a deposit) is first provided on or after 1 July 2018.

Exemption from registration. The GST law in Australia does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. An entity with a turnover below the registration threshold may apply to register for GST voluntarily if the entity is carrying on an enterprise.

Group registration. Subject to certain requirements, two or more entities that are closely related may form a GST group. The effect of GST grouping is to treat the group members as a single entity for certain purposes. In general, all GST liabilities and input tax credit entitlements for group members are attributed to a representative member of the group, and the group submits a single GST return (incorporated as part of the BAS; see Section I. Returns and payment). The representative member of the group must be an Australian resident. However, nonresidents may be included in a GST group as members. Transactions between group members are not considered taxable for GST purposes and consequently are effectively ignored.

Grouping is permitted for companies, partnerships and trusts. For companies to be included in a GST group, they must be connected by a 90% (or greater) share ownership relationship in terms of voting power, right to receive dividends and right to receive capital distributions. However, all eligible companies are not required to be included in a GST group. The rules for the grouping of trusts and partnerships with companies are complex.

An independent branch of a company may be registered separately as a GST branch, with its own GST number. Certain requirements must be met relating to the nature of the activities and accounting systems of proposed GST branches. In addition, a branch of a registered entity may not be registered as a GST branch if the entity is a member of a GST group.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a GST group.

Members of a GST group will be jointly and severally liable for GST debts and penalties of the GST group. The individual liability of a GST group member, including the representative member, can be reasonably allocated if the group members enter an Indirect Tax Sharing Agreement. This amount can be a fixed contribution amount or based on a method of allocation.

Fixed establishment. In Australia there is no legal definition of fixed establishment for GST purposes. However, an entity may be required to register for GST if it is carrying on an enterprise in Australia, whereby the enterprise is carried on by one or more individuals in Australia, and any of the following applies:

- The enterprise is carried on through a fixed place.
- The enterprise has been carried on through one or more places in Australia for more than 183 days in a 12-month period.
- The entity intends to carry on the enterprise through one or more places in Australia for more than 183 days in a 12-month period.

It does matter whether the entity has exclusive use of a place, or the entity owns, leases or has any other claim or interest in relation to the place.

Non-established businesses. GST applies to taxable supplies and to taxable importations made by nonresidents. In general, a nonresident entity is not required to appoint a tax or fiscal representative in Australia for GST purposes. However, GST payable on any taxable supply or taxable importation made by a nonresident through a resident agent is payable by the agent. The nonresident is still required to be registered for GST but need not submit GST returns if all supplies or acquisitions are made through the agent.

As an alternative to registration, some nonresidents may agree with the recipient of the supply for the recipient to account for the GST liability under the voluntary reverse-charge procedure.

Certain business-to-business (B2B) transactions (other than supplies of goods or real property) between nonresident suppliers and Australian-based business recipients will no longer be "connected" with Australia. Subject to certain conditions and transitional rules being satisfied, GST will not apply to these supplies and consequently a nonresident supplier that may have previously been required to be registered for GST in Australia could deregister.

These rules do not apply where the nonresident supplier is carrying on an enterprise in Australia. The concept of an entity carrying on an enterprise is broadly consistent with Australia's current tax treaty approach for determining a permanent establishment and incorporates the "183-day" and "fixed-place" rules.

Nonresident entities may register for GST in a "limited" capacity to reduce their compliance burden if they have made one or more inbound intangible consumer supplies (effectively business-to-consumer [B2C] supplies). This limited GST registration allows nonresidents to collect and remit GST on a quarterly basis without the ability to claim any input tax credits for GST included within associated expenses. Nonresident suppliers of low value goods to Australian consumers can also elect to obtain a limited registration.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Australia.

Reverse charge. GST on a taxable supply is payable by the recipient and not by the supplier if all the following conditions are met:
- The supplier is a nonresident.
- The supplier does not make the supply through an enterprise that it carries on in Australia.
- The recipient is registered (or is required to be registered) for GST.
- The supplier and recipient agree that the GST is payable by the recipient.

The voluntary reverse charge does not apply if either of the following circumstances exists:
- The compulsory reverse charge applies.
- The supply is made by the nonresident through a resident agent.

A compulsory reverse charge applies in the following circumstances:

There is a supply of anything other than goods or real property (e.g., digital products, services, rights) that is either (a) not connected with Australia or (b) connected with Australia because it is a supply made through an enterprise carried on outside of Australia and it is a supply of a right or option to acquire something that would be connected with Australia.
- The recipient of the supply is registered (or required to be registered).
- The supply is for consideration.
- The recipient acquires the supply solely or partly for the purpose of a business enterprise carried on by it in Australia.
- The acquisition is not solely for a creditable purpose (that is, it is not eligible for full input tax credits), and the supply is not input taxed or GST-free.

Where a supply of low-value goods, or a supply of anything other than goods or real property was not subject to GST because the supplier incorrectly believed the recipient was not an Australian consumer, a compulsory reverse charge applies where the acquisition is not solely acquired for a creditable purpose and the supply is not input taxed or GST-free.

The compulsory reverse charge applies primarily to businesses that make input-taxed (exempt) supplies (e.g., financial institutions) and to acquisitions made for a partly private or domestic purpose. The reverse charge does not apply to private consumers who are not registered or required to be registered for GST.

Domestic reverse charge. There is a mandatory reverse charge to taxable supplies of valuable metals (i.e., goods consisting wholly or partly of gold, silver, platinum or any other substance specified in the regulations for the purposes of the definition of a "precious metal").

Subject to certain exceptions, the mandatory reverse charge occurs where:
- The market value of the goods does not exceed the valuable metal threshold.
- The recipient is registered or required to be registered.

If the mandatory reverse charge does not apply, suppliers and recipients may also agree in writing to voluntarily reverse charge taxable supplies containing valuable metal.

Digital economy. The supply by nonresident suppliers of intangibles, including anything other than goods or real property (e.g., digital products, services, rights), to an Australian non-registered consumer will be taken to have the necessary connection with Australia and may be subject to GST unless otherwise exempted (including the supplier meeting the GST registration threshold). The onus is on the supplier to determine that its customer is not an Australian consumer. A supplier must have sufficient evidence that would enable a person who is independent of the transaction to reasonably conclude that its customer is not an Australian consumer (e.g., customer residency and their GST registration status and purpose of acquisition).

The supply of low value imported goods of AUD1,000 or less to an Australian non-registered consumer will be taken to have necessary connection with Australia and may be subject to GST unless otherwise exempted (including the supplier meeting the GST registration threshold). Nonresident suppliers and/or re-deliverers to consumers in Australia are liable to remit that GST to the Commissioner of Taxation.

Online marketplaces and platforms. In some circumstances, the responsibility for the GST liability that arises under the amendments may be shifted to the operator of an electronic distribution platform rather than the supplier of the intangible supply.

The legislation treats supplies of digital currency alike to supplies of money. GST is generally not payable on supplies and purchases of digital currency.

Registration procedures. To register for GST in Australia, an entity needs to first apply for an ABN. To apply for an ABN or apply to have an ABN previously held reissued, the taxable person can apply online through the Australian Business Register (ABR) or through its registered tax agent or BAS agent. Nonresidents have additional requirements for providing identity evidence for ABN registrations, including certified copies of original proof of identity documents for the business and associated individuals of the business, usually directors. Documents need to be translated into English before being submitted with the application, and this can be done by an authorized translator, and it must be certified that the translation is a true and correct copy of the original.

Once an entity has an ABN, it can register for GST. An entity can register for GST via the ATO online services for business, by phone to the ATO or through its registered tax agent or BAS agent.

Nonresidents may also register for GST. The types of GST registration available to nonresidents are:
- Simplified GST registration, which is a two-step process where an entity first gets an ABN and then registers for Simplified GST.
- Standard GST registration with an ABN where an entity applies for an ABN and GST.
- Standard claim only (GST-only), which can be applied for online. Documents showing that the business is registered with an equivalent corporate, market and/or financial regulator in the entity's country of origin and a letter issued by a revenue authority of a comparable taxing regime stating that the entity exists in their records and carry on an enterprise are also required.

Deregistration. An entity that ceases to carry on an enterprise must cancel its GST registration. The entity must notify the Commissioner of Taxation that it is no longer entitled to be registered within 21 days after ceasing operations. An entity that is no longer required to be registered may apply to cancel its registration. However, the Commissioner of Taxation is not required to cancel the registration if a business has been registered for less than 12 months.

Changes to GST registration details. It is a legal requirement to notify the Registrar of the ABR within 28 days of any changes in a taxable person's registered business details. These include, but are not limited to, changes to postal, email or business address, associates, main business activity, key personnel (such as directors or public officer) or authorized contacts. A taxable person can update its details online through the ABR or Business Portal, by phone, by lodging a form, or through its registered tax agent or BAS agent.

D. Rates

The terms "taxable supplies" and "taxable importations" refer to supplies of goods, real property, and services and importations that are liable to GST and give rise to a right to claim input tax credits for GST included in acquisitions related to the supply.

The GST rates are:
- Standard rate: 10%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of GST applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

"GST-free supplies" are supplies not liable for GST but that nevertheless do give rise to a right to claim input tax credits for GST included in acquisitions related to the supply.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0% (i.e., GST-free)

- Basic foodstuffs
- Water, sewerage and drainage services
- Exports of goods and services performed for nonresidents of Australia who are not in Australia when the supply is made
- Health, education, religious and related supplies
- Childcare
- Supplies of going concerns
- International transport and mail

The term "input-taxed supplies" refers to supplies not liable for GST (i.e., exempt) that do not give rise to a right to claim input tax credits for GST included in acquisitions related to the supply.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services (i.e., input-taxed)

- Financial supplies
- Rental of residential premises
- Sales (or long-term leases) of residential premises (except for new residential premises)
- Supplies of some precious metals
- Supplies in the course of fundraising events conducted by charitable institutions
- Supplies made through school "tuck shops" and cafeterias

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Australia.

E. Time of supply

Australia does not have time of supply rules. Instead, it has attribution rules with respect to the timing of when GST is payable, or an input tax credit is claimable. The time when GST is payable on a supply depends on whether the taxable person accounts for GST on a cash basis or on an accrual basis.

Deposits and prepayments. If a prepayment or a deposit is treated as part payment of the consideration for a supply, GST is payable in the period when the deposit is paid. For entities that use the accrual basis of accounting, the deposit triggers a liability to account for GST on the full value of the supply. For entities that use cash accounting, GST is payable on the amount of the deposit.

Security deposits are not considered to constitute payment of the consideration for a supply until the deposit is applied as partial payment toward the consideration for the supply. GST is payable on a security deposit that is forfeited.

Continuous supplies of services. If a supply is made continuously over a period of time for consideration that is either paid progressively or periodically, the supply is treated as if each component of the progressive or periodic supply is a separate supply.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Australia does not have time of supply rules. In these circumstances, the general attribution rules should apply such that the supplier has a GST liability on the earlier of the invoice being issued or the receipt of any consideration.

Reverse-charge services. Australia does not have time of supply rules. For reverse-charge supplies, the general attribution rules should apply such that the supplier has a GST liability on the earlier of the invoice being issued or the receipt of any consideration. Where reverse charge is applied on supplies between associates for no consideration, GST is payable on the supply and the input tax credit on the acquisition is attributable in the tax period in which the thing supplied starts to be done.

Leased assets. Australia does not have time of supply rules. Refer to the subsection above, Continuous supplies of services, for how to treat the supply of leased assets.

Imported goods. GST is payable for imported goods at the time of importation. For an importer registered under the GST-deferral scheme, GST is payable on the due date for the importer's next BAS (see Section I. Returns and payment).

F. Recovery of GST by registered entities

A registered entity may claim input tax credits for the GST included in the consideration for goods and services acquired within Australia, GST paid on importations of goods and GST paid under reverse-charge arrangements to the extent that the acquisition is a creditable acquisition. Input tax credits are generally recovered by being offset against GST payable on taxable supplies.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally be retained to support claims for input tax credits.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Australia is four years. The input tax credit claim must be made within four years after the day on which the GST return would have been due for the earliest tax period in which the entity would have been able to claim the input tax credit (setting aside any requirement to hold a tax invoice).

Nonresident entities registered for GST in a limited capacity do not have the ability to claim any input tax credits for GST incurred on Australian acquisitions.

Nondeductible input tax. Nondeductible purchases are also known as "Non-creditable acquisitions" in Australia. In addition, input tax credits are blocked or reduced for some items of business expenditure.

However, acquisitions related to making financial supplies remain creditable if the entity does not exceed the financial acquisitions threshold. An entity exceeds the financial acquisitions threshold if, in the current month and the preceding 11 months, or in the current month and the next 11 months, the GST on acquisitions related to financial supplies (i.e., "financial acquisitions") exceeds, or will exceed, either the lesser of AUD150,000 or 10% of the total input tax credits an entity incurs. In calculating the amount of GST on financial acquisitions, financial acquisitions related to borrowings and importations are excluded. Acquisitions related to borrowings (that are not used to make input-taxed supplies) and importations remain creditable. An entity that exceeds the financial acquisitions threshold may be entitled to reduced input tax credits (at a rate of 75% or 55%) in specific circumstances.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax deductions are not available (non-creditable acquisitions) and examples of items for which input tax deductions are available if the expenditure is related to the entity's taxable business use (creditable acquisitions).

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Acquisitions used for nonbusiness purposes.
- Entertainment acquisitions that are ineligible for income tax deductions.
- Acquisitions related to input-taxed supplies (however, acquisitions related to making financial supplies that either do not exceed the financial acquisitions threshold or relate to borrowings not used to make input-taxed supplies, remain creditable).

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Advertising
- Purchase, lease and hire of a car, van or truck
- Maintenance and fuel for a car, van or truck
- Parking
- Mobile phones (GST may be payable on a recharge of costs to employees)

Partial exemption. A creditable acquisition is an acquisition of goods or services used by a registered entity in its business enterprise. However, input tax credits are generally not available for GST included in acquisitions that are used for making input-taxed (exempt) supplies, subject to whether an entity exceeds the financial acquisitions threshold.

In general, the amount of the input tax credit available for a creditable acquisition is the amount of GST payable on the supply. However, the amount of the input tax credit is reduced if the acquisition is only partly creditable. An acquisition is partly creditable if either of the following conditions applies:

- The acquisition is made only partly for a creditable purpose (e.g., it partly relates to input-taxed supplies).
- The taxable person provides, or is liable to provide, part of the consideration for the acquisition.

The amount of the input tax credit for a partly creditable acquisition is based both on the extent to which the acquisition is made for a creditable purpose and on the amount of the total consideration that is provided, or liable to be provided, by the taxable person.

The ATO requires that the extent to which an acquisition is made for a creditable purpose is determined based on the planned use of the acquisition "on a reasonable basis."

Approval from the ATO is not required to use the partial exemption standard method or special methods in Australia.

Direct allocation methods are preferred if possible. However, indirect allocation methods (i.e., special methods) are acceptable if it is not feasible to use a direct method. Examples of common indirect methods include the following:
- A pro rata calculation based on the cost of acquisitions used to make taxable supplies compared with the total cost of all acquisitions.
- A pro rata calculation based on the total value of taxable supplies made compared with the total value of all supplies made.

Subsequent input tax credit adjustments may be required in later tax periods, depending on the actual use of the acquisition compared with its expected use.

Capital goods. The GST Act does not define the term "capital goods." Generally, capital goods refer to those goods that make up the profit yielding subject of an enterprise. Where acquisitions of capital goods are made partly for a "creditable purpose," an input tax credit can be claimed to the extent to which the acquisition is made for a creditable purpose.

Generally, the time limit for claiming input tax credits is four years.

The calculation for claiming input tax credits on acquisitions is:
- (Full input tax credit) x (Extent of creditable purpose) x (Extent of consideration)

Refunds. If the amount of input tax credits in a period exceeds the GST payable in the same period, the excess amount is applied against any other outstanding tax debts and any surplus is refunded. Any refunds of GST must be paid into an Australian bank account.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Australia is not recoverable.

Bad debts. An entity can recover the GST it has remitted in respect of unpaid invoices if either:
- The debt is written off as bad.
- The debt has been overdue for 12 months or more.

If an entity makes a bona fide commercial decision that the debt is unlikely to be recovered, the Commissioner of Taxation will accept that the debt is bad for the purposes of GST. There must be some written record that evidences the decision to write off the debt.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Australia.

G. Recovery of GST by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for GST in Australia is not recoverable.

Only entities that are registered for GST may claim refunds of GST incurred on Australian acquisitions. In general, entities (including nonresidents) that make acquisitions in Australia for the purposes of their enterprises may register for GST if necessary, although they are not required to be making supplies in Australia to have the entitlement to a refund. However, the nonresident entities electing "limited registration" are unable to recover any GST incurred on Australian acquisitions.

H. Invoicing

GST invoices. A registered person must generally provide a tax invoice for all taxable supplies made if requested to do so by the recipient of a supply. A tax invoice is not required for supplies with a GST-inclusive amount of AUD82.50 or less.

A tax invoice is generally necessary to support claims for input tax credits. Those nonresidents making supplies to Australian consumers and have "limited registration" for GST are not required to issue tax invoices.

Credit notes. An adjustment note (or credit or debit note) may be issued to reduce or increase the amount of GST payable on a supply if the amount of GST originally charged is incorrect (for example, as a result of an error or because of an agreed adjustment to the price). The adjustment note should be clearly marked either as an adjustment note or as a tax invoice (provided the amount of any credit is shown as a negative amount), and it must provide detailed particulars of the adjustment made.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Australia, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Australia. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Australia. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

For electronic invoices, recipients need to be able to reproduce the tax invoice when requested by the Commissioner of Taxation in support of any input tax credit claims.

At the time of preparing this chapter, there is currently no mandate for businesses to use electronic invoicing. Commonwealth Government agencies are mandated to be able to receive electronic invoices. The government is pursuing an organic adoption of electronic invoicing.

Simplified GST invoices. There are no simplified GST invoices in Australia. However, for supplies of AUD1,000 or more, the tax invoice also needs to show the buyer's identity or ABN.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Australia. There are three classes of invoices that may be issued by a recipient of a taxable supply, rather than the supplier. These invoices are known as Recipient Created Tax Invoices (RCTI). The three broad classes are:

1. Tax invoices for taxable supplies of agricultural products made to registered recipients
2. Tax invoices for taxable supplies made to registered government-related entities
3. Tax invoices for taxable supplies made to registered recipients that have a GST turnover (including input taxed supplies) of at least AUD20 million annually or are members of a group of companies, partnerships or trusts, or a joint venture operator, in which one or more members of that group or participants in that joint venture have such a GST turnover

Proof of exports. Exports of goods are GST-free. To qualify as GST-free, goods must generally be exported within 60 days. Exports must also be supported by evidence that indicates the goods have left Australia within the allowable time limit. A supplier must have documents that would enable a person who is independent of the transaction to reasonably conclude that a supply of goods was made, and that the supplier exported them within the specified time limits.

Foreign currency invoices. If a tax invoice or adjustment note is issued in a foreign currency, the GST must be shown in Australian dollars (AUD) or the applicable exchange rate used must be shown. Registered persons may use the exchange rate issued by the Reserve Bank of Australia applicable at 4 p.m. on the day of the invoice or on the previous day, or any other rate that is acceptable to the Australian tax authorities.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Australia. As such, full GST invoices are required.

Records. In Australia, examples of what records must be held for GST purposes include records that explain all GST transactions, including any supply, acquisition or entitlement. In Australia, GST books and records can be kept outside the country. There are no requirements for the records to be kept locally in Australia; however, the records must be in English or readily accessible and convertible into English and must enable a business's liabilities and entitlements to GST and input tax credits to be readily ascertained.

Record retention period. Records of indirect tax transactions need to be retained for five years after the completion of the GST transaction to which they relate.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Australia. Records relating to GST transactions can be stored electronically. Electronic records are subject to the same record-keeping requirements as paper records.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. GST liabilities are reported using a BAS. Registered persons whose annual turnover equals or exceeds AUD20 million must complete a BAS each month, which must be filed electronically. Monthly returns are due by the 21st day of the month following the end of the return period.

Registered persons whose annual turnover for GST purposes does not exceed AUD20 million must submit a BAS each quarter or they may opt to submit monthly. These registered persons may also choose to report some information annually. Quarterly returns and payments are generally due by the 28th day of the month following the end of the relevant return period but may be made by 28 February for the December quarter.

Registered persons whose turnover for GST purposes does not exceed AUD2 million may opt to file an annual BAS in quarterly installments.

Persons whose turnover for GST purposes does not exceed AUD75,000 and who have elected to report GST and pay (or claim a refund) annually or who elect to pay GST by installments may apply to file BASs annually. The annual GST return and payment will be due at the same time as the entity's income tax return. Where an entity is not required to lodge an income tax return, it must lodge its annual GST return with payment by 28 February. An entity must assess its eligibility to report and pay GST annually on 31 July each financial year. Where an entity is no longer eligible to report and pay GST annually, it must advise the ATO who will change the entity's GST reporting cycle to monthly or quarterly with effect from 1 July of that same financial year.

Entities that register for a "limited" registration must submit a BAS each quarter but will not have the ability to claim any input tax credits on the BAS. Therefore, these returns only include GST liabilities.

Periodic payments. Registered persons whose annual turnover equals or exceeds AUD20 million must pay any net GST liability. Payments are due by the 21st day of the month following the end of the period.

Registered persons whose turnover for GST purposes does not exceed AUD2 million may opt to pay GST in quarterly installments.

Persons whose turnover for GST purposes does not exceed AUD75,000 and who voluntarily opt to register for GST, may apply to pay GST annually.

GST liabilities must be paid in Australian dollars.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Australia for certain taxable persons. Taxable persons whose annual turnover equals or exceeds AUD20 million must file their BAS electronically. For other taxable persons, electronic filing is optional.

Payments on account. Payments on account are generally not required in Australia, except for certain taxable persons. Generally, an entity will be required to report and pay GST on a monthly or quarterly basis. However, if an entity meets certain eligibility requirements that allow it to elect to pay GST by installments, it will pay a quarterly amount calculated by the ATO and report its actual GST information on an annual GST return. The ATO will calculate the installment amount based on the net GST amounts the entity most recently reported, generally for the prior year, depending on how long it has been registered for GST.

Special schemes. Cash accounting. Entities may choose to account on a cash basis only under limited circumstances, which involve, among other conditions, consideration as to whether an entity satisfies certain income tax definitions.

For entities that use cash accounting, GST is payable with respect to a taxable supply in the tax period in which the consideration is received. If only part of the consideration is received in a particular tax period, GST is payable only on that part.

Accrual basis. For businesses that account for GST on an accrual basis, GST is payable with respect to a taxable supply for the tax period in which the invoice is issued or when any of the consideration is received for the supply, whichever is earlier.

Small business concessions. A small business may be eligible for GST and excise concessions. The turnover threshold for these concessions is AUD10 million. These include:
- Accounting for GST on a cash basis (explained above)
- Paying GST by installments, which are calculated by the ATO and may be varied by the small business each quarter if it chooses. A small business must contact the ATO to access this concession
- Annual apportionment of GST input tax credits, whereby if an item is purchased that is used partly for private purposes, the small business can choose to claim the full GST credits for these items on its BAS and make a single adjustment to account for the private use percentage after the end of its income year
- Excise concessions, where an eligible small business can apply to defer settlement of its excise duty and excise equivalent customs duty from a weekly to a monthly reporting cycle. To access this concession, an application must be made to the ATO in writing

Not-for-profit organization concessions. GST concessions are available to not-for-profit organizations. Additional GST concessions are available to:
- Australian Charity and not-for-profits Commission (ACNC) registered charities that are endorsed to access GST charity concessions
- Gift deductible entities
- Government schools

Food retailers. Simplified accounting methods (SAMs) are available for food retailers that buy and sell a mixture of products, where some are taxable and some are GST-free, and whose relevant turnover is not more than AUD2 million.

Secondhand goods. An entity can claim GST credits for its purchase of secondhand goods even if the price it paid did not include GST. That is, this can be done for secondhand goods that an entity purchases for resale from sellers who do not charge GST in the price of the goods. An entity can calculate its GST credits using either a direct approach or a global accounting method, depending on whether it sells the secondhand goods as a single item or divides them into separate parts.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Australia.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Australia. However, entities can revise previously lodged BASs to correct errors or omissions.

Correcting errors in previous returns. The two types of GST errors a taxable person can make are a credit error or a debit error. A credit error is when a taxable person makes an error calculating its net GST amount, resulting in reporting/paying too much GST. A taxable person can correct a credit error on a later BAS if it is within the credit error time limit (four years and one day later than the day it lodged the original BAS). Credit errors are not subject to value limits.

A debit error occurs when a taxable person makes an error calculating the net amount, resulting in reporting/paying too little GST. A taxable person can correct a debit error on a later BAS given the debit error is within the debit error time limit (based on current GST turnover), the net sum of the debit errors is within the debit error value limit (based on current GST turnover) and the debit error is not a result of recklessness or intentional disregard of a GST law.

A taxable person can make a voluntary disclosure to the tax authorities in relation to any false or misleading information, mistakes or omissions it has made in the BASs. When making a voluntary disclosure, the taxable person is not required to admit liability; however, the taxable person is still required to pay the tax owed and interest and penalties the tax authorities apply.

In the instance the taxable person can correct the error on a later BAS, it must keep a record of the reporting period the error occurred in, the BAS it was corrected on and other relevant information to explain the correction/error.

If a taxable person is not eligible to correct the GST error on a later BAS, it may need to complete a revised BAS. This can be done online or by paper.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Australia.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Penalties may be imposed if an entity fails to apply to register for GST when required by the GST Act, or if it is registered, to apply to cancel a GST registration as required.

Failure to comply with its registration obligations results in an entity being liable to an administrative penalty of 20 penalty units, with the current value of a penalty unit being AUD313. The ATO will give written notice to the entity of the entity's liability to pay the penalty and of the reasons why the entity is liable to pay the penalty.

These penalties may be remitted in specific circumstances. The particular facts of each case will determine whether or not the ATO exercises the discretion to remit.

Penalties for late payment and filings. A late lodgment penalty may be imposed for the late filing of a BAS. The penalty applies for each 28-day period, or part thereof, that the BAS remains overdue, up to a maximum of five periods.

The amount of the penalty is one penalty unit for each period (a penalty unit is currently AUD313) for every 28 days (or part thereof) that the BAS is late, up to a maximum of five penalty units. However, this may be increased depending on the size of the entity's business:

- For a medium entity the penalty is multiplied by two. A "medium entity" is a medium withholder for PAYG withholding purposes or has assessable income or current GST turnover of more than AUD1 million and less than AUD20 million.
- For a large entity the penalty is multiplied by five. A "large entity" is a large withholder for PAYG withholding purposes or has assessable income or current GST turnover of AUD20 million or more.
- For "significant global entities" (SGE) (e.g., an entity or consolidated group with annual global turnover equal to or greater than AUD1 billion), failure to lodge penalties are increased by a factor of up to 500 (i.e., for BASs lodged more than 112 days after the due date, the penalty is AUD782,500).

Where an entity receives a penalty notice for failing to lodge a return or statement on time, it can apply to the ATO to have the penalty remitted in full or in part if there are extenuating circumstances. Registered tax agents can also request remission on behalf of their clients.

General interest charges (GIC) may also be imposed on late payments of GST. The rate changes quarterly. It is around the range of 8% to 11% per year, compounded daily.

It is a legal requirement to notify the Registrar of the ABR within 28 days of any changes in a taxable person's registered business details. Taxable persons can be liable to penalties if they fail to meet this obligation.

Penalties for errors. A GST error is a mistake made in working out the GST net amount on the BAS that would result in reporting or paying too much GST (credit error) or reporting or paying too little GST (debit error).

If an entity makes a GST error when reporting GST on a BAS, it can correct that error on a later BAS if it meets certain conditions, including:

- For credit errors, a "credit error time limit"
- For debit errors, a "debit error time limit" and a "debit error value limit"

If an entity corrects a GST error on a later BAS, it should keep a note to record the reporting period when the error was made and the BAS it was corrected on. It must also keep records and other relevant information to explain the correction.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's GST registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to GST registration details above.

Penalties for false or misleading statements. An entity will be liable for a penalty if it makes a false or misleading statement that results in it having a shortfall amount. The shortfall amount is the difference between the correct tax liability or credit entitlement and the liability or entitlement worked out using the information it provided.

The base penalty is a percentage of the shortfall amount. The percentage used is determined by the behavior that led to the shortfall amount:

- Failure to take reasonable care: The base penalty is 25% of the shortfall amount. Generally, an entity will fail to take reasonable care if it has not done what a reasonable person in the same circumstances would have done.
- Recklessness: The base penalty is 50% of the shortfall amount. An entity is reckless if a reasonable person in its circumstances would have been aware that there was a real risk of a shortfall amount arising and it disregarded, or showed indifference to, that risk.

- Intentional disregard: The base penalty is 75% of the shortfall amount. An entity intentionally disregards the law if it is fully aware of a clear tax obligation, and it disregards the obligation with the intention of bringing about certain results (underpaying tax or overclaiming an entitlement).

The penalty percentages are doubled for this penalty if an entity is a SGE.

The base penalty amount can be increased or reduced if there are aggravating or mitigating circumstances or remitted where it is fair and reasonable to do so.

The penalty will not be imposed if either of the following apply:
- The entity took reasonable care in making the statement (it may still be subject to another penalty provision, such as taking a position that is not reasonably arguable).
- The entity's statement accords with ATO advice, published statements or general administrative practices in relation to a tax law.

Under the safe harbor provisions, an entity may not be penalized if the incorrect statement was made by an entity's agent when it provided them with the relevant, correct information.

An entity is liable for a penalty if it makes a false or misleading statement (e.g., in an objection, private ruling request or during an audit) that does not result in it having a shortfall amount.

The base penalty is calculated as a multiple of a penalty unit. The multiple used is determined by the behavior that led to the false or misleading statement:
- Failure to take reasonable care – the base penalty is 20 penalty units.
- Recklessness – the base penalty is 40 penalty units.
- Intentional disregard – the base penalty is 60 penalty units. A penalty multiplier will apply to double this penalty if an entity is an SGE.

The base penalty amount can be increased or reduced if there are aggravating or mitigating circumstances or remitted where it is fair and reasonable to do so.

The penalty will not be applied if:
- The entity took reasonable care in making the statement.
- The entity's statement accords with ATO advice, published statements or general administrative practices in relation to a tax law.

Penalties for fraud. Those who disregard the law, make fraudulent claims and deliberately avoid their GST obligations will face serious consequences, including interest, penalties and, where appropriate, prosecution or referral to the Commonwealth Director of Public Prosecutions. This includes taxable persons who:
- Deliberately do not register for GST when they are required to
- Intentionally fail to report, or consistently underreport, their tax obligations
- Collude with others to evade or avoid tax obligations
- Intentionally fail to meet their tax obligations
- Try to obtain a refund that they are not entitled to persistently and repeatedly exploit bankruptcy

Personal liability for company officers. As of 1 April 2020, directors can be held personally liable for unpaid GST in certain instances. The personal liability can be avoided if the company pays the debt to the tax authorities. If not, the tax authority collects the debts by issuing a director penalty notice to recover proceeds owed, which is payable by directors of the company. The director penalty can be remitted if the director complies with the obligation before the notice is issued or within 21 days of the day the notice is issued.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Australia is four years. This applies to federal taxes and is generally four years. A four-year period of review applies where the ATO may amend an assessment for GST amounts on the BAS. The period of review starts on the day on which the ATO first gives notice of the assessment. In most cases, this will be the same day the registered entity lodges its BAS. The period of review ends four years from the day after the notice of assessment is given.

After the period of review ends, an amendment will only be made by the ATO in limited circumstances:

- To give effect to an application already received
- Where an assessment has been disputed

  Or
- Where there is fraud or evasion

A taxable person can make a voluntary disclosure to the ATO in relation to any false or misleading information, mistakes or omissions it has made in the BAS within the period of four years since a BAS was lodged. When making a voluntary disclosure, the taxable person is not required to admit liability; however, the taxable person is still required to pay the tax owed and interest and penalties the ATO applies.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
• The supply of goods or services made in Austria by a taxable person

- The intra-Community acquisition of goods from another European Union (EU) Member State by a taxable person (see the EU chapter)
- Reverse-charge services received by a taxable person in Austria (that is, services for which the VAT liability shifts to the recipient of the service)
- Self supplies of goods and services used for nonbusiness purposes and supplies of goods without consideration
- The importation of goods from outside the EU, regardless of the status of the importer

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the EU chapter. For documentary requirements see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

The Quick Fixes were implemented in Austria, based on EU Directives 2018/1910 and 2018/1912, and came into effect on 1 January 2020. This led to changes in the regulations for intra-EU chain transactions, consignment stock and prerequisites for intra-Community supplies.

Intra-EU Chain transactions:

- The intra-Community goods transport can only be attributed to one supply in the chain and only this supply can be treated as exempt intra-Community supply. The party "intermediary" is a supplier within the chain (except the first supplier) who transports or dispatches the goods. Basically, the intra-Community supply is assigned to the supply to the party who arranges for the transport of the goods. This is different if the transport is arranged by an intermediary supplier and that intermediary provides to their supplier a VAT identification number issued by the Member State in which the transport starts. In this case, the intermediary instead of their supplier is deemed to perform the intra-Community supply. Supplies in the chain taking place before the intra-Community supply, as well as the intra-Community supply itself, are taxable in the country of dispatch, supplies taking place after the intra-Community supply are taxable in the country of destination. In deviation to the EU provisions, chain transactions with connection to third countries are comprised as well.

EU triangular transactions:

- In case of a cross-border EU chain transaction ending in Austria, the simplification for triangular transactions applies if the following prerequisites are fulfilled:
  - The party effecting the intra-Community acquisition (party B) does neither operate its business in Austria, nor has a fixed establishment in Austria and does not use its Austrian VAT ID number or its VAT ID number of the country from where the transport starts
  - The intra-Community acquisition is affected for the purpose of performing a subsequent supply in Austria by party B to party B's customer
  - Party B's customer is a taxable person, or a public body registered for VAT in Austria
  - The VAT liability for the supply of party B shifts to party B's customer

Austrian VAT law has set very strict formal requirements for the invoice issued by party B (e.g., shift of VAT liability must be explicitly mentioned on the invoice, as well as the fact that a triangular transaction has taken place). As from 1 January 2023, the simplification for triangular transactions is also applicable within a chain transaction with more than three parties, provided that the abovementioned prerequisites are fulfilled.

Simplified treatment for call-off stock:

- The transfer of goods from an EU country to a warehouse in Austria does not lead to a deemed intra-Community supply and a deemed acquisition if the following prerequisites are met:
  - Goods are transported/dispatched by a supplier to Austria to be delivered to another taxable person at a later point in time and who is entitled to purchase the goods according to a contract in place (intended recipient of the goods)

- The supplier is not established in Austria
- The supplier knows the identity and the VAT-ID number of the intended recipient of the goods at the beginning of the transport/dispatch process and they declare this planned supply in their EC Sales list
- The supplier registers the transaction (i.e., transport of the goods to the stock) in the call-off stock-register

The recipient must withdraw the goods from the warehouse within 12 months and this leads to an intra-Community supply and the respective acquisition.

If a supplier does not comply with all the conditions for call-off stock, they must in principle still register for VAT purposes. As examples given, a registration is required in case of expiration of the 12-months deadline, sales to other customers, movement to another Member State, damage or loss of the goods (if exceeding a 5% tolerance).

Prerequisites for intra-Community supplies:

- The use of a valid VAT ID that the customer communicated to the supplier is a material requirement for applying the zero VAT rate to intra-Community supplies. Otherwise, it will not be possible to apply the zero VAT rate. In case the acquirer provides the supplier with the VAT number at a later stage, it is still possible to correct the invoice under certain circumstances. Furthermore, as a condition for applying the zero VAT rate, the taxable person must file a correct EC Sales List. The VAT exemption is not lost in case the supplier acts in good faith, which means that defaults concerning the EC Sales list are justified and corrected sufficiently toward the respective tax authorities.
- Harmonized proof of intra-Community supplies: Art 45a EU Council Implementing Regulation (EU) 282/2011, which is directly applicable in Austria, foresees a consistent proof of dispatch of goods to another EU Member State for the application of the VAT exemption for intra-Community supplies. According to this provision, there is a rebuttable presumption of transport to another EU Member State if the supplier can provide at least two noncontradictory evidential documents prepared by parties independent from one another and independent from supplier and customer. This may include signed consignment (CMR) documents, together with a copy of payment for transport issued by the bank. In case of customer pick-up, further requirements are applicable. In addition, it is possible to follow the Austrian national provisions for proving dispatch of goods to another EU Member State.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective EU countries. In Austria, the following services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions:

- Place of supply shifts from Austria to non-EU country
  - Renting out means of transportation in certain cases, when they are used in the non-EU country
  - Provision of personnel working in a non-EU country
- Place of supply shifts from non-EU country to Austria
  - Telecommunication services, radio and television broadcasting services
  - Renting out of goods, except of means of transport
  - Sport betting and certain gambling transactions
  - Certain services (e.g., processing of data, certain advisory services) to a public legal entity that is not seen as entrepreneur

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in Austria. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Austria has not implemented the transfer of a going concern (TOGC) rules. Only transactions covered by the Austrian Umgründungssteuergesetz (law regarding restructuring of legal entities), e.g., certain mergers, demergers or contributions in kind, the transfer/restructuring are outside the scope of Austrian VAT. Other transactions in course of the transfer of a going concern are taxable under the general VAT rules in Austria.

Transactions between related parties. For transactions (services and supplies of goods) where the remuneration is not the open market value due to nonbusiness reasons (i.e., related parties, group structure, family relations, shareholders) or for the use of the personnel of the business, the open market value represents the tax base in the following cases:

- If the payment was lower than the open market value and the recipient of the supply/service is not (fully) entitled to input tax deduction
- If the payment was lower than the open market value and the supplier is not (fully) entitled to input tax deduction and specific VAT-exempt services are at hand
- If the payment was higher than the open market value and the supplier is not (fully) entitled to input tax deduction

Open market value shall mean the full amount that, to obtain the goods or services in question at that time, a customer at the same marketing stage at which the supply of goods or services take place would have to pay under conditions of fair competition to a supplier at arm's length within the territory of the Member State in which the supply is subject to tax.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services, intra-Community acquisitions or distance sales, in the course of a business, in Austria.

Special rules apply to VAT registration for foreign (or non-established) taxable persons.

Exemption from registration. If a business that is established in Austria has annual turnover of EUR35,000 or less and does not have to pay VAT for the calendar year, it does not need to register for a tax number or file a VAT return.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. If an Austrian taxable person's annual turnover does not exceed EUR35,000, it qualifies as a "small business," and its Austrian supplies are exempt from VAT (with no input tax credit; see Section F). However, the small business may opt to voluntarily register for VAT, charge VAT on its supplies and recover input tax on its purchases. The option is binding for five years.

The turnover of EUR35,000 represents the actual turnover of the respective current year without VAT (net amount). Most exempt supplies, as well as the sale of investment goods do not have to be considered for calculating the threshold. In case the small business does not opt for VAT, no VAT needs to be paid in the current year. For details on the registration process, see the subsection Registration procedure below.

Group registration. In Austria, group registration applies to entities that are closely bound by financial, economic and organizational ties. A group consists of a controlling entity and one or more entities that it controls. The controlling entity may be any taxable person, but the controlled entities must all be corporate bodies. A mere holding company may be used to establish financial ties but can itself neither be a controlling nor a controlled entity. A controlled entity may also be a partnership where either all partners, besides the controlling entity, are financially integrated into the controlling entity or it can be proven that the controlling entity is able to enforce its will if the remaining conditions for VAT grouping are fulfilled. The effects of VAT grouping are restricted to the parts of the business that are located in Austria.

To form or join a VAT group, the group members must satisfy the following conditions:

- Financial integration: Although financial integration equals capital domination of the controlling group member over the controlled companies, the decisive condition is not only the size of shareholding but also the voting rights resulting from it. Assuming that the articles of association do not establish higher voting rights than the ones stipulated by law, the controlling group member must own at least 75% of the shares of the controlled companies. If the share ownership is between 50% and 75%, the companies may be considered to satisfy the financial integration test if the other conditions are strongly met.
- Economic integration: The controlled company's activities support or complement the activities of the controlling entity, and they have a continuous business relationship.
- Organizational integration: The management of the controlled company is fully dependent on the will of the controlling company.

All controlled entities that fulfill the above criteria must be included in the VAT group.

The effect of group registration is to treat the members as a single taxable person. Only the controlling entity is registered at the VAT office. The group submits a single VAT return including all the members' taxable transactions. Transactions between the controlling entity and a controlled company are treated as transactions within a single legal entity and, consequently, they are not taxable.

The VAT group comes into effect automatically as soon as all prerequisites are met. The same goes for the omission of prerequisites, i.e., the end of the group. There is no option to form or dissolve a VAT group. As such, there is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group.

All members of a VAT group in Austria are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties. A single VAT return is filed for the VAT group under the registration of the controlling entity, and as such, in principle, the controlling entity is responsible for declaration and payment of VAT for the entire VAT group. However, each member of the VAT group is liable for VAT debts and penalties resulting from the activities of the member itself.

Holding companies. A holding company can be included in a VAT group if the prerequisites outlined above are met.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f)) has been implemented in Austria for certain businesses in the medical and financial sector. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, provided certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Austrian VAT law).

This exemption is implemented in Austrian VAT law for entities that mainly perform banking, insurance and pension funds transactions under certain conditions. As this is not in line with recent European Court of Justice (ECJ) judicature, this exemption might be abolished in the future.

Fixed establishment. There is no legal definition in Austrian VAT law for a fixed establishment. As such, the definition according to the ECJ and the Council Implementing Regulation (EU) 282/2011 is used instead. Therefore, a fixed establishment is an establishment characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources to enable it to provide or receive services.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a fixed establishment in Austria. No VAT registration threshold applies to taxable supplies made in Austria by a foreign or non-established business.

If a non-established business makes no supplies or exclusively makes supplies in Austria subject to the reverse charge and does not receive services subject to the reverse charge, it does not need to register for VAT.

A non-established business must register for VAT in Austria if it makes any of the following supplies:
- Supplies of goods located in Austria at the time of supply
- Intra-Community acquisitions (see the EU chapter)
- Distance sales (exception for distance sellers using the One-Stop Shop (OSS) or micro-entrepreneurs with less than EUR10,000 accumulated turnover per year of intra-Community distance sales and electronically supplied services)
- Supplies of services that are not covered by the reverse charge (for example, services supplied to private persons unless these are reported using the OSS – see the subsection Digital economy below)

If the customer is a taxable person (regardless of where it is established) or a public body, it is required to withhold the Austrian VAT due on the supply. The customer must pay the withheld VAT on behalf of the supplier to the supplier's tax account at the Austrian general tax office. If the customer does not comply with this requirement, the customer may be held liable for the VAT due on the supply. Renting out of premises; fees for usage of federal roads; and entrance fees for cultural, artistic, scientific, tutoring, sporting, entertaining and similar events are not covered by this withholding requirement.

A non-established business is not required to register for VAT if all its supplies in Austria fall under the reverse-charge system (under which the customer accounts for the VAT due). If the reverse charge applies to supplies made by a non-established business, the business may recover VAT incurred in Austria under the EU 13th Directive or Directive 2008/9 refund provisions (see Section G), provided the business does not receive services in Austria that are subject to the reverse-charge system.

Under Prescript 2003/584 for chain transactions, the supply of goods to the last customer in Austria made by a non-established business is exempt from VAT.

If goods come from a non-EU Member State to Austria in the course of a chain transaction and if the last party in the chain owes the VAT payable on their importation, it is the last party who is entitled to deduct the import VAT and not the person that disposed of the goods at the time of import. This mechanism applies if the following conditions are met:
- The supply to the last party in the chain is made by a non-established business that is not registered for VAT purposes in Austria.
- The final customer has the right to deduct the full amount of input tax.
- No VAT is shown on the invoice.

Any input tax in connection with this type of supply is not deductible. In addition, no more than three parties may be involved in the chain transaction.

Tax representatives. A business established in a country outside the EU must appoint a tax representative to register for VAT in Austria unless the customer is required to withhold Austrian VAT on the supplier's behalf. The tax representative must be resident in Austria.

A business established in another EU Member State is not required to appoint a tax representative in order to register for VAT.

For non-EU businesses, the Austrian tax authorities require a postal address in Austria to which correspondence may be sent. For EU businesses, it is not mandatory, but it is recommended that an Austrian postal address be provided.

As of 1 January 2023, a fiscal representative no longer has to be appointed if the special regulation pursuant to Art. 369a to 369k of Directive 2006/112/EC is used in another Member State and a fiscal representative obligation exists there.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge system applies to all supplies of services, except for road tolls and entrance fees for trade fairs, conventions and seminars in Austria that are organized by non-Austrian companies (i.e., neither operating their business in Austria nor having a fixed establishment in Austria involved in the supply). It also applies to "work performance contracts" undertaken by a supplier neither operating its business in Austria nor having a fixed establishment in Austria that intervenes in the supply. Under the reverse-charge mechanism, the recipient (i.e., a taxable person or public body) of a supply is liable for the VAT due. Renting out of premises is not covered by the reverse charge according to the Austrian VAT Act, so non-Austrian lessors are required to register for VAT in Austria. Supplies of services are all taxable transactions that are not supplies of goods. For purposes of the reverse-charge system, "work performance contracts" are supplies involving the installation of goods that are fixed to the customer's premises. The reverse-charge system also applies in the circumstances mentioned above if the customer is a non-established business (that is, the Austrian VAT liability may also shift from a non-established supplier to a non-established customer).

If a foreign business exclusively makes supplies in Austria subject to the reverse charge and does not receive services subject to the reverse charge, it may not register for VAT. If the reverse-charge mechanism applies, invoices must be issued without VAT. The invoice must include a reference to the applicable reverse charge and the VAT identification numbers of the supplier and the customer.

Domestic reverse charge. A domestic reverse-charge mechanism applies in the following cases:

- If construction or building work is performed by a subcontractor to a general contractor, the liability to pay the VAT shifts from the supplier (subcontractor) to the customer (general contractor). To determine whether to apply the reverse-charge mechanism, the customer must provide the supplier with a written notification that the VAT liability in such case will shift to the recipient of the construction service. If the construction work is performed for a building contractor or another business that typically performs construction or building works the VAT liability shifts automatically to the customer, without any notification.
- The domestic reverse charge for construction or building works also applies to charges for building cleaning services if the services are performed for a building contractor or other business that typically performs construction or building works or if the building cleaning services are performed by a subcontractor for a general contractor.
- The reverse charge applies to the supply of goods provided as security by one taxable person to another in execution of that security, the supply of goods following the cession of the reservation of ownership to an assignee and the exercise of this right by the assignee and the supply of immovable property in the course of the judicial sale.
- The reverse charge applies to supplies of used material, used material that cannot be reused in the same state, scrap, industrial and nonindustrial waste, recyclable waste, part processed waste and certain goods and services, as listed in Annex VI of Directive 2006/112/EC.
- The reverse charge applies to supplies of greenhouse gas emission certificates.
- The reverse charge applies to the supply of mobile radio units (for example, mobile phones) and integrated circuits, provided that the net consideration is at least EUR5,000. For purposes of this rule, the amount per invoice is decisive. The liability to pay VAT also shifts to the recipient if the supplier is an Austrian business. To avoid problems in defining relevant products, the definition of "mobile radio units" and "integrated circuits" is in accordance with the combined nomenclature of the customs tariff.

The reverse charge furthermore applies to:
- Supplies of video game consoles, laptops and tablet computers, where the amount of consideration shown on the invoice is at least EUR5,000
- Supplies of gas and electrical power to entrepreneurs whose primary business regarding the procurement of these items relates to the resale thereof and whose own use of these items is of secondary importance
- Transfer of gas and electricity certificates
- Certain supplies of metal
- Taxable supplies of investment gold

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States. These rules apply to all direct sales to non-taxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B, Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:
- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the EU chapter.

An e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In Austria, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

One-Stop Shop. A supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:
- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies that fall under the OSS.

In Austria, the application for the use of the EU-OSS must be made online via the online portal of the Austrian tax authorities (FinanzOnline). Regarding the non-EU-OSS, the application request must be made online (https://noneumossevat.bmf.gv.at/).

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the EU chapter.

Import One-Stop Shop. The Import One-Stop Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance sales of goods from outside the EU.

VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT.

In Austria, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

For more details about the IOSS, see the EU chapter.

Use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination, and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

Postal Services and couriers scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

In Austria, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the EU chapter.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the EU VAT e-commerce rules, taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:

- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). Any intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State, as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

In Austria, the application process for VAT registration for online marketplaces and platforms is the same as those for the OSS (see the One-Stop Shop subsection above).

In Austria, the facilitator (platform) is required to keep records of the supplies made via the platform in a grade of detail that enables the tax authorities to verify if the VAT due was calculated correctly. Records must generally be retained for 10 years. Records must be delivered electronically to the responsible authorities upon request.

In cases where the facilitators (platforms) are not seen as a taxable person, they are obliged to keep records of such transactions for 10 years as well. Further, in case the revenues to be recorded exceed EUR1 million per year, the records must be submitted electronically to the tax authorities by 31 January of the following year.

The facilitator (platform) is liable for VAT for certain supplies it facilitates, provided that a violation of the obligation to exercise diligence is at hand, the facilitator is not the taxable person itself and the annual sales (including those supplies for which the VAT is due for the facilitator itself) exceed EUR1 million. Under certain circumstances also other entrepreneurs involved in those supplies may be held liable for VAT.

Independent of this Austrian platform reporting obligation for VAT purposes, as of 1 January 2023, operators of digital platforms are additionally subject to reporting obligations under the "DAC7" regime (based on EU Directive 2021/514) if the relevant preconditions are fulfilled (e.g., the platform is accessible by users and allowing sellers to connect with users for the purpose of directly or indirectly carrying out so-called relevant activities (rental of immovable property, personal services, sale of goods, rental of means of transport) to those users).

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the EU chapter.

Vouchers. Vouchers are categorized as follows:
- Single-purpose vouchers (SPV): place of supply and tax liability concerning respective voucher can be determined with certainty upon issue of voucher. In this case, it is known upon issuance of the voucher what VAT amount is due in which Member State. The sale of a SPV is generally treated as VAT-liable turnover, whereas redeeming the voucher later on is not subject to VAT. The tax is owed by the taxable person obliged by the voucher. Not only the issuance itself, but also any transfer of a SPV by a third party who acts in their own name (e.g., in the course of marketing operations) represents a taxable event.
- Multi-purpose vouchers (MPV): any voucher that is not a SPV. Sale of a MPV is not subject to VAT. VAT is owed for redeeming the voucher later on.

Registration procedures. Resident companies must complete the following documents and have them signed by the managing directors of the respective entity:
- Questionnaire
- Specimen signature document
- Power of attorney

The forms must in general be filled out in German (the questionnaire is also available in English) and filed with the Finanzamt Oesterreich (or in specific cases the Finanzamt fuer Grossbetriebe) via regular mail together with the following:
- Excerpt from the register of companies
- Copy of the articles of association
- Opening balance sheet
- Proof the business will make supplies or is doing so already, such as copies outgoing invoices
- Copy of each managing director's passport

All documents must be filed via regular mail. It generally takes from four to six weeks until the registration is completed by the Austrian tax authorities.

To register a foreign company without seat or permanent establishment in Austria, the following documents have to be completed and signed by the managing directors of the respective entity:
- Questionnaire
- Specimen signature document
- Power of attorney

The forms must in general be filled out in German (the questionnaire is also available in English) and filed with the Finanzamt Oesterreich via regular mail together with the following:
- Excerpt from the register of companies
- Copy of the articles of association
- Confirmation by the local tax authorities that the company is registered for tax purposes in their country, in original and not older than one year

This process also takes approximately four to six weeks for the tax authorities to complete.

Deregistration. With regard to deregistration, no specific form has to be submitted to the Austrian tax authorities. A general application for deregistration can be sent to the Austrian tax authorities anytime during the year. However, all transactions have to be settled and all VAT returns have to be filed in order to proceed with the deregistration process. Basically, the annual VAT return should comprise the entire year, but as soon as all transactions are settled, the annual VAT return can be submitted earlier. Usually a tax clearance certification (issued by the tax authorities) is required. It is possible that a tax audit will be performed before issuing this certificate.

Changes to VAT registration details. Taxable persons must notify the Austrian tax authorities about changes in their VAT registration details. Changes can be communicated via the online platform (FinanzOnline) of the tax authorities or via ordinary mail. Changes that may impact the granting of the Austrian VAT ID number (i.e., being VAT registered in Austria) must be communicated to the tax authorities within one calendar month.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 19% (for the regions of Jungholz and Mittelberg), 20% (rest of Austria)
- Reduced rates: 10%, 13%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard VAT rate applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific provision allows a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Some supplies are classified as "exempt-with-credit" (i.e., zero-rated). This means that VAT is chargeable at 0%, and the supplier may recover related input tax.

Due to COVID-19, a reduced VAT rate of 5% was implemented for gastronomy, cultural sectors, books and for accommodation (for the hotel sector) from 1 July 2020 to 31 December 2021 and 5% for the publishing sector (newspapers and other periodical prints and their electronic publications) until 31 December 2020. From 1 January 2021 till 30 June 2023, there was a temporary zero rate (0%) for COVID-19 vaccines and in-vitro diagnostics and the supply of services directly connected with those goods. Also, the VAT rate was reduced to 0% for supplies and intra-Community acquisitions of protective masks beginning 22 January 2021 and is effective until 30 June 2023.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0% (i.e., exempt-with-credit)

- Exports of goods and related services to non-EU countries
- Intra-Community supplies of goods and related services to taxable persons established in the EU
- Turnovers supporting ocean shipping and aviation
- Cross-border transportation of goods under certain conditions
- International passenger transport by plane or rail (with effect from 1 January 2023)

- Supply, intra-Community acquisition, import and installation of photovoltaic devices (in effect from 2024 to 2026), subject to meeting the following conditions:
  - Transaction is effected toward the operator of the device
  - Peak performance of the photovoltaic system must not exceed 35 kilowatts
  - Operated on or in the vicinity of specified buildings (for example, buildings used for residential purposes)
  - A public subsidy has not been granted for the device

Examples of goods and services taxable at 10%

- Most foodstuffs
- Books (including e-books)
- Hotel accommodation
- Restaurant meals
- Domestic passenger transport (except flights)
- Residential apartment rental
- Supplies made by private hospitals and charitable organizations
- Pharmaceuticals
- Repairs of bikes, shoes, clothes and leather goods
- Feminine monthly hygiene products

Examples of goods and services taxable at 13%

- Entrance fees for sporting events
- Entrance fees for cultural events
- Domestic flights
- Animal feed
- Seeds
- Supplies made by artists
- Certain wine sales made by the producer

The term "exempt supplies" is used for supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Supplies by businesses with annual turnover not exceeding EUR35,000
- Certain postal services provided by universal postal services suppliers
- Most finance services
- Insurance
- Sales and rental of immovable property for commercial uses with some exceptions (The landlord may opt for taxation of the rent, with the restriction that the tenant must provide services that are eligible for the input tax deduction. This restriction is only applicable on tenancies beginning on or after 1 September 2012. If the landlord constructed the building prior to 1 September 2012 or if construction by a providing entrepreneur started prior to 1 September 2012, the restriction is not applicable.)
- Medical services

Option to tax for exempt supplies. It is permitted to opt for regular taxation for some exempt supplies, such as the sale of immovable property, certain rentals of immovable property for commercial use, certain services in relation to the credit card business and interest relating to installment purchases as well as supplies performed by small businesses.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." In general, the "time of supply" is the end of the calendar month in which goods are supplied or a service is performed. The time of supply may be postponed by one month by issuing the invoice for the supply after the end of the month in which the supply took place.

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply for a deposit or prepayment is the end of the calendar month in which the prepayment is received.

Continuous supplies of services. In specific cases it is possible to determine the tax point according to the payments or invoices issued.

Goods sent on approval or for sale or return. The time of supply for goods sent on approval or for sale or return is the date on which the customer adopts the goods. If the goods are sent on sale or return terms, the time of supply is the date on which the goods are sent. If the goods are returned, the supply is canceled.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Austria for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above), which is the end of the calendar month in which the service is performed. However, for reverse-charge services, the time of supply cannot be postponed by one month by issuing the invoice for the supply after the end of the month in which the supply took place. Under Article 44 of EU Directive 2006/112 (general business-to-business rule), this postponement does not apply to services subject to reverse charge. Reverse-charge invoices under Article 196 of the EU Directive must be issued within 15 days of the month following the supply.

Leased assets. There are no special time of supply rules in Austria for supply of leased assets. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is either the date of importation or when the goods leave a duty suspension regime.

Intra-Community acquisitions. For intra-Community acquisitions of goods, the time of supply is the date on which the invoice is issued, or at the latest, the 15th day of the month following the arrival of the goods. Invoices for the intra-Community supply of goods must be issued within 15 days of the month following the supply.

Intra-Community supplies of goods. The time of supply for intra-Community supplies is the end of the calendar month in which goods are supplied or services performed. The time of supply may be postponed by one month by issuing the invoice for the supply after the end of the month in which the supply took place. However, invoices must be issued by the 15th day of the month following the supply.

Distance sales. The time of supply for distance sales is the end of the calendar month in which payment is received.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. Input tax can also be deducted if the business purpose is finally not performed, provided that the expenses were caused merely by the intended business purpose. Input tax is generally recovered by being deducted from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied within Austria, VAT paid on imports of goods and VAT self-assessed on intra-Community acquisitions of goods and reverse-charge services.

A valid VAT invoice or customs document is required for an input tax deduction.

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Austria. Taxable persons must recover input tax in the course of the monthly/quarterly VAT returns and the annual VAT returns in the correct period. In case input tax from previous periods has not been claimed in the initial annual VAT return of the respective period, it would have to be checked on a case-by-case basis whether a correction of the annual VAT return is still possible from a procedural perspective.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by entrepreneurs). In Austria, input tax may be claimed in full for business assets that are used primarily for private purposes (minimum 10% business use), but the taxable person must account for output tax with respect to the private use of the assets. In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Expenditure on the purchase, lease, hire or maintenance of cars or motorcycles (except certain vehicles used for business purposes, such as vehicles without CO2 emission)
- Fuel expenses for a car or motorcycle (except certain vehicles used for business purposes, such as vehicles without CO2 emission)
- Private expenditure
- Business gifts disallowed for direct tax purposes
- Parking expenses for a car or motorcycles (except certain vehicles used for business purposes, such as vehicles without CO2 emission)

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Accommodation
- Mobile phone costs
- Books
- Small business gifts, if allowed for direct tax purposes (but gifts are subject to output tax if they exceed a value of EUR40)
- Purchase, lease, hire, maintenance and fuel for vans and trucks and certain other vehicles used for business purposes, such as cars or motorcycles without CO2 emission
- Entertainment of business partners (restaurant expenses), if predominantly for marketing purposes
- Taxis
- Business travel

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to the making of exempt supplies without credit is not recoverable. If an Austrian taxable person makes both exempt supplies without credit and taxable supplies, it may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption."

The general partial exemption calculation is performed in the following two stages:

- The first stage identifies the input tax that may be directly allocated to exempt and to taxable supplies. Supplies that are exempt with credit are treated as taxable supplies for these purposes. Input tax directly allocated to exempt supplies without credit is not deductible, while input tax directly allocated to taxable supplies is deductible.
- The second stage prorates the remaining input tax that relates to both taxable and exempt supplies without credit and cannot be directly allocated, in order to allocate a portion to taxable supplies. For example, this treatment applies to the input tax related to general business overhead. In Austria, the pro rata calculation is based on the value of taxable supplies compared to the total value of supplies made. The pro rata recovery percentage is normally taken to two decimal places.

An alternative method is a simple pro rata calculation. A partially exempt taxable person may choose to use the pro rata method alone, provided it does not result in the recovery of an amount of input tax more than 5% higher than would be recoverable under the direct allocation method.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Austria.

The use of special methods is allowed in Austria, provided that an accurate allocation of input tax from an economical perspective is documented. Note that any special method calculations may be challenged by the Austrian tax authorities during an audit.

Capital goods. Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is deducted in the VAT year in which the goods are acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition. However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted over time if the taxable person's partial exemption recovery percentage changes during the adjustment period.

In Austria, the capital goods adjustment applies to the following assets for the number of years indicated, if the amount by which input tax would be corrected exceeds EUR60 per annum and per asset:

- Land, buildings, additions to buildings; basic alterations and major repairs to buildings (adjustment period of 10 years)
- Immovable property used in capital assets for first time after 31 March 2012 (adjustment period of 20 years)
- Other fixed assets (adjustment period of five years)

The adjustment is applied each year following the acquisition, to a fraction of the total input tax (1/10 or 1/20, respectively, for land and buildings and 1/5 for other movable capital assets). The adjustment may result in either an increase or a decrease of deductible input tax, depending on whether the ratio of taxable supplies made by the business has increased or decreased compared with the year in which the capital goods were acquired.

In Austria, the capital goods scheme also applies to current assets and all kind of services if the criteria for deducting input tax changes. For example, the type of business carried on changes from fully taxable to exempt. In this respect there is no adjustment period; it is decisive whether the purchased current assets or services are used for a different purpose than initially intended and thus, the criteria for input tax changes or not.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a monthly period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that period, the taxable person has an input tax credit. The credit may be claimed as a refund by submitting the periodic VAT return and by sending a repayment claim letter (or filing a repayment claim via the electronic filing system) to the relevant tax office.

Pre-registration costs. VAT incurred on pre-registration costs can be deducted when the costs directly relate to subsequent taxable business activities. Input tax deduction is made based on the general rules for pre-registration costs that represent advance services relating to planned/intended business operations. Regarding time restraints, the general statutes of limitation apply (5 years and a maximum 10 years under certain circumstances).

Bad debts. If a customer is unable to pay a supplier for supplies on which the supplier has paid VAT, the supplier can claim bad debt relief, but the supplier must have exhausted all customary procedures for collecting the debt.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Austria.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Austria is recoverable. Austria refunds VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established in Austria nor registered for VAT there. Non-established businesses may claim Austrian VAT refunds to the same extent as VAT-registered businesses. However, Austria does not allow voluntary VAT registration for the sole purpose of recovering input tax.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refunds are made under the terms of EU Directive 2008/9. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Austria during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge). For full details, see the EU chapter.

Find below specific rules for Austria:
- The tax authority may demand additional information, such as original ingoing invoices, in the course of the refund procedure.
- Claims must be submitted in German and must be accompanied by the appropriate documentation.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive. For full details, see the EU chapter.

Austria does not generally exclude any non-EU country from the refund scheme. However, as from 15 January 2021, non-EU businesses are not eligible for a refund of VAT on fuel. The VAT refund procedure under the EU 13th VAT Directive may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Austria during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge).

The deadline for non-EU claimants is 30 June of the year following the year in which the input tax was incurred.

A non-EU company claimant must submit the following documents:
- The official form issued by the Austrian authorities (U5). The relevant invoices must be listed on the reverse of the form. Photocopied forms are accepted, provided the signature is original.
- The original invoices, which must be attached to the claim form.
- If the claimant appoints a fiscal representative, an original Power of Attorney appointing the representative.
- A certificate of the taxable status of the business, which must be obtained from the competent tax authority in the country in which the business is established.

The appointment of a fiscal representative in Austria for a VAT refund claim is not required. However, claimants from non-EU countries must provide an address in Austria to which the Austrian tax authorities may send correspondence.

The minimum claim period is three months. The maximum period is one year. The minimum claim for a period of less than a year is EUR400. For an annual claim, the minimum amount is EUR50.

Applications for refunds of Austrian VAT may be sent to the following address:

Finanzamt Oesterreich
Dienststelle Graz-Stadt
Conrad-von-Hoetzendorfstr. 14-18
A-8010 Graz
Austria

Late payment interest. For EU non-established businesses claiming a VAT refund, late payment interest must be paid by the tax authorities in case of late refund payments. The interest is generally 2% and applies if the refund has not been made within 4 months and 10 working days after the receipt of the VAT refund claim unless the tax authorities ask for more information. In the latter case, the time for the refund is prolonged.

For non-EU non-established businesses, no interest is paid by the tax authorities in case of late refund payments. However, due to a recent case law, interest may be applied for, and a case-by-case analysis is recommended.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. An Austrian taxable person must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies, including exports and intra-Community supplies. VAT invoices are not automatically required for retail transactions with private customers, unless requested by the customer (see the subsection Supplies to nontaxable persons below for more details).

Taxable businesses (specific exemptions can apply) are generally required to issue receipts to all customers for cash transactions at the time of the payment. The term "cash transactions" includes payments in cash, by bank cards, credit cards, debit cards, comparable electronic payments (e.g., payments via mobile phone), vouchers, tokens, etc. This obligation exists regardless of the turnover and is equally applicable to VAT exempt supplies.

Furthermore, an electronic cash register is mandatory for "business operations" (according to Austrian Income Tax Law) with a net annual turnover of EUR15,000 if their "cash transactions" exceed EUR7,500. The cash register has to be protected against manipulation by a tamper proof technical security device with electronic signature creation.

A VAT invoice is necessary for input tax deduction or a refund under the EU 13th Directive or Directive 2008/9 refund schemes (see the EU chapter). Hence, in addition to the VAT indication, VAT invoices must contain all details necessary to determine whether the requirements of input tax deduction are met.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to cancel or amend a previous VAT invoice. A credit note must be cross-referenced to the original VAT invoice and must indicate why the original invoice needs correction.

Credit notes issued by self-billing recipients of a supply must explicitly refer to the status of a self-billing invoice (e.g., "Gutschrift") on the invoicing document.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Austria, for certain taxable persons.

For B2G supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Austria. This is in line with EU Directive 2014/55/EU (see the EU chapter). Specifically electronic invoicing in a structured format is mandatory for B2G supplies when the recipient of the supplies is the federal republic of Austria itself (e.g., governmental departments). Electronic invoicing is not mandatory for B2G supplies when supplying other public administration bodies (e.g., federal states, cities and municipalities).

For B2B and B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory, in Austria. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU (see the EU chapter). There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons can voluntarily adopt electronic invoicing in Austria.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing. Electronic invoices are only deemed as valid VAT invoices, within the meaning of the Austrian VAT

Act, if the authenticity of the invoices' origin, the integrity of their content, as well as their legibility are guaranteed.

Pending implementation of VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, for electronic invoicing it is still necessary that the recipient agrees with this type of invoicing, and the consent is not bound to any specific form. For EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the EU chapter.

Simplified VAT invoices. A less detailed tax invoice can be issued for supplies with values not exceeding EUR400.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Austria. This is subject to the following conditions:
- The taxable person supplying goods or services must be entitled to issue invoices.
- There must be an agreement on self-billing the supplied goods or services between the taxable person and its customer (no special formal requirements).
- Self-billing invoices must meet the general requirements for invoices and must explicitly refer to their own status. They can either use the Austrian term (Gutschrift) or the respective term used in any other language version of the EU Directive 2010/45/EU (e.g., self-billing).
- The self-billing invoice must be delivered to the taxable person supplying the goods or services.

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. Austrian VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods or on the intra-Community supply of goods (see the EU chapter). However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports and intra-Community supplies must be supported by evidence proving that the goods have left Austria. With regard to intra-Community supplies, refer to the above subsection Quick Fixes.
Acceptable proof includes the following documentation:
- For an export, the export document, officially validated by customs, showing the supplier as the exporter, freight documents or the export advice according to Article 796e of the Commission Regulation 1875/2006 is required.
- For an intra-Community supply, a range of commercial documentation is needed, including an invoice indicating the supplier's and customer's EU VAT identification numbers and a statement that the transaction is an intra-Community supply that is exempt from VAT and freight documents (for example, proof of receipt of the goods by the customer). If the customer picks up the goods at the place of the supplier with the customer's own means of transport, additional documentation is required (for example, proof of identity of the person collecting the goods, power of attorney signed by the customer that this person is entitled to collect the goods and the original signed confirmation of the customer that the goods will be transported to another EU Member State).

In Austria, the supplier must maintain records of all transactions, including full details as to why a VAT exemption applies (for example, because the supply is an export or an intra-Community supply). The evidence can also be provided in electronic form (e.g., by transmitting a pdf file). No special documentation applies in Austria for evidencing the application of the Quick Fixes. Normal intra-Community documentation rules apply.

Foreign currency invoices. If a VAT invoice is issued in a foreign currency, the foreign currency used must be clearly indicated. All VAT and customs duty amounts must be converted to the domestic currency, which is the euro (EUR), either by using the current exchange rate (proof from bank required) or the exchange rates issued monthly by the Austrian Ministry of Finance. If an invoice is issued in a foreign currency, the tax amount must be additionally stated in euros. In addition to the average rate published on the Austrian Ministry of Finance homepage, the most recent exchange rate published by the European Central Bank (ECB) can alternatively be used or the exchange rate proven using bank notifications or a stock exchange list. The same exchange rates apply to the deduction of input tax by the recipient.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. VAT invoices are not mandatory for retail transactions with private customers, unless requested by the customer.

In case of work performance supplies/services related to immovable property, distance selling and electronic platforms involved in the supply, invoices must be issued.

Further, taxable businesses are generally required to issue receipts to all customers for cash transactions at the time of the payment (specific exemptions can apply).

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a full VAT invoice must be issued. However, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, no full VAT invoice is required unless requested.

Records. Generally, any taxable person is obliged to keep all relevant records to determine the tax and the basis of its calculation on an ongoing basis. In Austria, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include:
- Supplies of goods and services
- Remuneration separated by rate of taxation
- Day of supply separated by taxable and exempt from taxation
- Self-supplies
- Input tax
- Import of goods
- Prepayments
- Payments for turnovers that are subject to reverse charge (these must be recorded separately)

In Austria, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. Taxable persons are, however, required to be able to produce any records the Austrian tax authorities require in a readable form and within a reasonable period of time at a mutually agreed place.

Record retention period. Generally, records must be kept for a duration of seven years. The retention period is longer if the business is subject to an administrative procedure. Special rules apply to real estate, application of a one-stop shop and electronic platforms.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Austria. Records can be stored on electronic devices if the complete, chronological, identical and true reproduction is guaranteed at any time. The Austrian tax authorities may request that supporting devices to make such electronically stored records readable are provided and that a permanent reproduction that is readable without a supporting device is provided. Such permanent reproductions shall be provided on electronic devices. The records must be stored seven years or longer if they are relevant for pending proceedings regarding tax. Longer periods apply for real estate.

Based on EU Directive 2020/284, the CESOP Implementation Act 2023 implemented a new provision into the Austrian VAT law, which contains recording, notification, as well as archiving obligations for payment service providers regarding certain cross-border payments.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns are submitted monthly if taxable turnover exceeded EUR100,000 in the preceding year. If a business begins operations, it must submit monthly returns if its turnover will exceed EUR100,000 in the first year. If turnover is less than EUR100,000, VAT returns may be submitted quarterly. In addition, all taxable persons must submit an annual VAT return.

If the taxable turnover in the preceding calendar year did not exceed EUR35,000 and if the payment is made on time, the VAT return form itself does not need to be submitted, unless the VAT authorities demand it. However, the monthly VAT return form must be submitted if a company that is in a repayment position wants to claim the repayment.

Both monthly and quarterly VAT returns must be submitted by the 15th day of the second month following the return period. If the day of submission due is a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the due date shifts automatically to the next working day.

Periodic payments. For both monthly and quarterly VAT returns, full payment must be made by the 15th day of the second month following the return period. If the day of payment due is a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the due date shifts automatically to the next working day.

Payment must be made to the bank account of the respective tax office responsible for VAT. In case a credit balance exists on the tax account and is not used otherwise, it can be offset against the debit of the respective VAT return and no (or less) payment would be required in this case. In general, payment must be made via electronic bank transfer to the bank account of the tax office – using the feature "Finanzamtszahlung" if it is offered in the electronic banking system of the bank of the respective taxable person. Alternatively, or via the feature "eps" ("e-paymentstandard") in the online portal of the Austrian tax authorities (FinanzOnline). Only where a transfer via electronic banking is not possible for the taxable person, other methods are acceptable, e.g., payment slip.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Austria for all taxable persons. VAT returns must be filed electronically via FinanzOnline (the online portal of the Austrian tax authorities). Companies can either apply for access codes to FinanzOnline to submit the VAT returns themselves or assign a tax representative in Austria to submit returns on their behalf.

VAT returns and EU Sales Lists must be filed electronically if the taxable person has the necessary technical means available to do so.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Austria.

Special schemes. Cash accounting. Austria operates a cash accounting scheme for certain businesses.

Activities of free professions and activities of professionally recognized corporations and legally recognized associations that supply services typical of the free professions, and other businesses without bookkeeping obligations or transactions below a certain threshold, must account for VAT on the basis of the consideration received. Upon application, businesses can opt out from the cash accounting. If the free professions account for VAT on the basis of the consideration received, they must do so in respect of all supplies affected by them, even if the particular supply is not related to the activity typical of the free profession.

If a threshold of EUR2 million turnover is not exceeded, input tax can only be deducted if the payment was made (in addition to a correct invoice). In cases in which the VAT is paid with a transfer of funds from one tax account to another tax account, the payment of the invoice amount is not required for input tax deduction, provided the business's revenues do not exceed EUR2 million.

Farmers and forestry. Businesses with supplies that are performed in the course of a farming or forestry business below the threshold of EUR600,000 and who are not legally obliged to keep records, have the option to calculate the VAT as a lump sum. However, the scheme is optional, and the normal VAT rules can be used instead.

Art dealers and secondhand goods, including cars. Businesses that deal in art and secondhand goods (including cars) can opt into this scheme, where in specific cases, VAT is calculated from the difference of the sales price to the purchase price (i.e., margin taxation). However, the scheme is optional and the normal VAT rules can be used instead.

Tour operators (travel services). There is a margin taxation in place to calculate VAT with regard to certain travel services. From 1 January 2022, the procurement of such services for both B2C and B2B recipients is covered by the tour operator margin scheme.

Consolidation with a lump sum. According to Austrian income tax law, there is a scheme for consolidation with a lump sum available. Input tax consolidation with a lump sum is also available.

Annual returns. In Austria, it is required to submit an annual VAT return in addition to the monthly VAT returns. The due date for submission of the annual VAT return is generally 30 June of the following year if the annual return is filed electronically. This due date may be postponed when the business is represented by a tax representative until 31 March of the second following consecutive year. At their discretion, the tax authorities may also grant a subsequent extension of one month tolerance period. Nevertheless, the tax authorities can request submission at any time after 30 June of the following year. For annual reporting periods starting after 31 December 2022, the abovementioned tolerance period no longer applies. However, the tax authorities may extend the filing due date individually till 30 June of the second following consecutive year.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. An Austrian taxable person that trades with other EU countries must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of its intra-Community sales or purchases exceeds certain thresholds. Separate reports are required for intra-Community acquisitions (Intrastat Arrivals) and intra-Community supplies (Intrastat Dispatches).

Distance sellers registered for VAT purposes in Austria selling goods to customers in Austria must file Intrastat Arrival returns if the respective threshold is exceeded.

The threshold for submitting Intrastat statistical reports is EUR1.1 million in annual value of intra-Community dispatches or acquisitions.

The Intrastat declaration must be submitted electronically using the Reporting Tool Intra Collect (RTIC). The returns must be completed in EUR. The Intrastat return period is monthly after the threshold has been exceeded (that is, it is also necessary to file nil returns). The submission deadline is the 10th business day of the month following the return period.

EU Sales Lists. Under Article 44 of EU Directive 2006/112 (general business-to-business rule), if an Austrian taxable person makes intra-Community supplies of goods or performs intra-Community services for which the place of supply is located in another EU Member State, it must submit an EU Sales List (ESL) to the Austrian VAT authorities. An ESL is not required for any period in which intra-Community supplies are not made.

For businesses submitting VAT returns quarterly, ESLs are submitted monthly or quarterly. The due date is the last day of the month following the end of the ESL period.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A correction of the monthly/quarterly VAT return can be made electronically once; further corrections must be filed via ordinary mail (paper). Corrections of the annual VAT return must be filed via ordinary mail (in case the administrative decision was not issued yet) or in the course of an appeal against the administrative decision of the respective annual return. EC Sales Lists can be corrected electronically. Depending on the circumstances of the error, it must be considered for each single case whether a voluntarily self-disclosure should be filed to avoid consequences based on Fiscal Criminal Law.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Austria.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. There is no specific penalty in Austria for the late registration of VAT. However, the tax authorities may impose the penalties outlined in the subsections below. The VAT law allows the VAT authorities to impose a penalty of EUR5,000 if the deadline for VAT registration is intentionally not observed. Further fiscal criminal law consequences might arise, depending on the facts and circumstances.

Penalties for late payment and filings. A penalty equal to 2% of the VAT due applies to the late payment of VAT. If the VAT payment has not been made three months after the due date, an additional second penalty is assessed, equal to 1% of the VAT due. If the amount remains unpaid three months after the date that the second penalty was imposed, a third penalty is assessed, equal to 1% of the VAT due.

At the discretion of the VAT authorities, they may impose a penalty of up to 10% of the VAT due for the late submission of a VAT return.

If a taxable person continually fails to pay VAT, the VAT authorities may consider the late payment to be tax fraud, which is subject to much greater penalties.

The VAT law allows the VAT authorities to impose a penalty of EUR5,000 if the deadline is intentionally not observed. Further fiscal criminal law consequences need to be checked on a case-to-case basis.

In case of noncompliance with the obligations to issue receipts and/or to have a cash register, a business could expose itself to fiscal criminal investigations, which could lead to pecuniary penalties or financial criminal proceedings.

For Intrastat penalties may be incurred if Intrastat declarations are persistently late, missing or inaccurate.

For ESLs, late submissions may lead to a penalty of up to 1% of the amount of intra-Community supplies, determined at the discretion of the tax authorities. However, the penalty may not exceed EUR2,200 per ESL.

The failure to submit ESLs may be considered an offense against the law and may lead to a penalty of up to EUR5,000.

Interest. In 2022, interest on VAT credits and debits was implemented in the Austrian Fiscal Federal Code. The interest rate amounts to 2% per annum above the base interest rate. VAT interest not reaching an amount of EUR50 will not be assessed. Whether interest can be claimed or imposed needs to be checked on a case-to-case basis. Generally, the following applies:

- Interest may be claimed
  - For credits reported in a periodic VAT return from the 91st day after submission of the return till the credit is booked on the taxable person's tax account with the Austrian tax authorities or until the credit is assessed via administrative assessment
  - For credits resulting from an annual VAT return from the 91st day after submission of the return until the credit is assessed via administrative assessment
- Interest may be imposed
  - For debits in a belatedly submitted periodic VAT return from the 91st day after the due date until submission of the return
  - For debits assessed via administrative decision from the 91st day after the VAT payment was due until the administrative decision is issued
  - Debits assessed based on an annual VAT return from 1 October of the following year until the administrative decision is issued. The new interest rule in such a case is applicable starting with annual VAT returns 2022

Penalties for errors. There are no specific penalties in Austria for errors. The general regulations according to Austrian Fiscal Criminal Law might be applicable. However, these regulations are quite complex and must be analyzed on a case-by-case basis. Tax advisors might also be subject to Austrian Fiscal Criminal Law.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may be seen as a financial offense that could be punished with a fine up to EUR5,000. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. There are no specific penalties in Austria for fraud. The general regulations according to Austrian Fiscal Criminal Law might be applicable. However, these regulations are quite complex and have to be analyzed on a case-by-case basis. Tax advisors might also be subject to Austrian Fiscal Criminal Law.

Personal liability for company officers. In case Austrian Fiscal Criminal Law applies, also individual persons (e.g., directors, employees) can be held liable. However, these regulations are quite complex and must be analyzed on a case-by-case basis.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Austria is five years. Any official act of the Austrian tax authorities referring to the VAT of a respective year and performed within the five-year limitation period, if it is clearly recognizable from outside (e.g., VAT audit, assessment of VAT (Umsatzsteuerbescheid) or input tax refund claim), extends the statute of limitation by one year ("prolongation year"). If such actions are taken during the "prolongation year," an extension for one more year is added each time. The absolute statute of limitation is 10 years.

The rules for the statute of limitation also apply to years that already have been audited by the tax authorities. The statute of limitation might be longer in case of fiscal criminal offense.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of goods, works and services performed in Azerbaijan
- The importation of goods

The transfer of goods is deemed to occur at the place where they are made available. If the conditions for the supply involve lifting and transporting the goods, the transfer is deemed to occur where the lifting or transportation of the goods begins. However, if the supplier is to install the goods, the transfer is considered to occur at the place where the goods are installed.

The following are the rules for determining the place where works are performed or services are rendered:

- The place where immovable property is located if the works (services) are directly connected with that property, such as construction, assembly, repair, reconstruction works, agency and expert services with respect to real property and similar works (services)
- The place where works (services) are rendered if they are connected with movable property
- The place where services are rendered if they are rendered in the areas of culture, arts, physical fitness or sports, or in similar areas
- The place where the transportation occurs if the works (services) are connected with such transportation
- The place where the purchaser of works or services is located or registered, established, or, if the services are directly associated with the permanent establishment of the purchaser, where the permanent establishment is located

The place of location, registration or establishment of the recipient of the following services:

- Transfer or assignment, as well as granting rights of use on patents, licenses, trademarks, copyrights and other similar rights
- Rendering of consulting, legal, accounting, engineering, advertisement, data processing and other similar services
- Services involving the providing of personnel (when employees work at the place where the recipient of these services operates)
- Rental of movable property (except for vehicles belonging to transportation enterprises)
- Services rendered by an agent engaging a person to provide taxable services on behalf of a principal
- Provision of telecommunication services (receipt, distribution, transmission of signals, documents, pictures, sounds or any type of information through telegraph, radio, optical or other electromagnetic systems, including granting or acquisition of such transmission, receipt or distribution rights)
- Radio and television broadcasting, and provision of postal services
- Provision of services through computers, the internet and other electronic networks, email and other similar applications, or granting rights for the use of such networks or services
- Provision of works and services by vendors (suppliers) of e-commerce, as well as conducting lotteries and other competitions organized electronically

The place of works or services that cannot be determined based on the above tests is deemed to be the place where the person performing a work or rendering a service conducts the activity.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Azerbaijan, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Azerbaijan, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where both parties providing and purchasing the enterprise inform the tax authority in writing on application of respective Article of Tax Code of Azerbaijan not later than within 10 days from the provision of enterprise.

Transactions between related parties. In Azerbaijan, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, the general tax code of Azerbaijan envisages market price application for barter transactions, including between related parties.

C. Who is liable

Persons who are registering in Azerbaijan for tax purposes are either registered as a simplified taxpayer or VAT payer (i.e., a taxable person). A simplified taxpayer is liable to pay a certain percentage of income tax from its total turnover and should not charge VAT on top of their invoices, whereas registered VAT payers should do so. VAT-registered taxpayers are liable for ordinary corporate income tax and VAT. The basic rule for determination of whether the person should be registered for VAT purposes is the total turnover during the year.

Persons that are engaged in an entrepreneurial activity and that have taxable turnover during a period of 12 consecutive months exceeding AZN200,000 must register with the tax authorities as a taxpayer within 10 days following the end of the 12-month period.

A taxpayer is any individual entrepreneur or legal entity that makes taxable supplies of goods (works or services) or that conveys goods across the customs border of Azerbaijan in an amount exceeding AZN200,000. Moreover, if a taxpayer performs one single transaction in an amount exceeding AZN200,000, then the taxpayer is liable for VAT registration with the tax authorities before the transaction is performed.

Exemption from registration. In general, exemption from registration is not envisaged under the tax code. As outlined above, any persons that are engaged in an entrepreneurial activity with its taxable turnover exceeding AZN200,000 within a period of 12 consecutive months is obliged to register for VAT. Alternatively, in the case where a taxpayer ceases to conduct economic activity that is subject to VAT, it is obligated to cancel its VAT registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A person engaged in entrepreneurial activity who is not subject to mandatory registration and who is not obligated to be a payer of simplified tax as envisaged under the tax code may voluntarily register with the state tax authorities as a taxpayer. See the section above for more information on simplified tax.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Azerbaijan.

Fixed establishment. In Azerbaijan, there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, permanent establishment rules may apply for VAT as well. The permanent establishment of a non-established business or individual in Azerbaijan is the place in which such an individual or business themselves or via their authorized representatives fully or partially conduct their entrepreneurial activities in Azerbaijan for the cumulative period of not less than 90 days within any 12 months.

Non-established businesses. The provision of services in Azerbaijan by a foreign legal entity that does not have a permanent establishment in Azerbaijan (a non-established business) and that is not registered for VAT in Azerbaijan to a person registered or to be registered for VAT purposes in Azerbaijan (tax agent) is subject to VAT based on the reverse-charge mechanism (business-to-business (B2B) supply). In such a case, the tax agent must calculate and pay VAT from the amount to be paid to the non-established business. The tax agent should be able to recover the reverse-charge VAT paid on services/works purchased from nonresident suppliers if it is registered as a taxpayer and if the nature of the transaction is recoverable for VAT purposes.

If a non-established business supplies services to a person not registered or not required to be registered for VAT purposes in Azerbaijan (business-to-consumer (B2C)), it would be required to calculate and pay reverse-charge VAT on the amount to be paid to the non-established business within seven days and before the 20th of the following month. The respective transactions do not create any obligation for the taxpayer, i.e., recipient of the services, to be registered for VAT purposes. The amount payable to a nonresident for the provision of works and services rendered in an e-commerce manner by persons who are not registered with the tax authorities shall be also subject to reverse-charge VAT. However, the respective reverse-charge VAT will be calculated and paid to the state budget by branches of the local or foreign bank in Azerbaijan processing payments to a nonresident, at the expense of the customer funds. Note that the respective withholding of reverse-charge VAT by banks occurs if the buyer who is not registered with the tax authorities received works and services by way of e-commerce, organized electronically outside the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Azerbaijan.

Reverse charge. Whenever a domestic taxpayer purchases services from a non-established business, which, in accordance with the rules on the determination of location of taxable transactions is provided in Azerbaijan, the reverse-charge mechanism applies. In this case, the purchaser should self-assess VAT at 18% and report/remit the amount to the budget during the month when payment for the received services is made. See the subsection Non-established businesses above for more detail.

A special reverse charge applies to the provision of e-commerce services supplied by nonresident businesses that are purchased online and via bank cards by non-VAT-registered customers based in Azerbaijan. It is the responsibility of the bank coordinating the transaction (via the bank card purchase) to charge the customer the VAT and account for the VAT to the tax authorities in Azerbaijan, on behalf of the nonresident supplier.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Azerbaijan.

Digital economy. Special rules have recently been developed and introduced in the law in respect of e-commerce. "E-commerce" is defined as the provision of works/services and goods by means of a global information network (including e-books, music, audio-video, images and graphics, games, software solutions, online advertisements and similar).

As noted above, the place of supply of the e-commerce services should be considered the place where the customer is located. Therefore, VAT should be charged whenever services are purchased via e-commerce by customers in the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2C supplies are not required to register and account for VAT on supplies in Azerbaijan. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT by way of a special reverse charge. This is where the bank coordinating the transaction will charge the customer VAT and account for VAT to the tax authorities (see the subsection Reverse charge above). Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B supplies are not required to register and account for VAT on supplies in Azerbaijan. Instead the tax agent is subject to VAT based on the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Non-established businesses subsection above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Azerbaijan.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Azerbaijan.

Registration procedures. To register for VAT purposes in Azerbaijan, a taxpayer should file a specific application form for VAT registration either online or in paper format. No other documentation is required for this purpose. The registration process should be completed within five days upon the submission of the application.

Deregistration. If a taxpayer ceases its activity in connection with VAT, then the taxpayer shall be obliged to place an application to terminate its VAT registration. The termination shall enter into force from the date VAT-related activities ceased.

Changes to VAT registration details. The taxpayer is obliged to inform the tax authorities about any changes in registration details (including change of a company name, legal address, type of business, shareholders, etc.). Such changes should be registered within 40 days via submission of application.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 18%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Goods and services intended for the official use of the diplomatic and consular representative offices of international agencies and foreign states accredited in the Republic of Azerbaijan, as well as for the personal use of the diplomatic, administrative and technical personnel of these representative offices (including family members living with them), who are not citizens of the Republic of Azerbaijan
- Exportation of consulting, legal, accounting, engineering, advertisement and other services
- Importation of goods, supply of goods, performance of works and provision of services to recipients under grants, with the proceeds of grants received from abroad
- International or transit transportation of cargo or passengers; provision of works or services that are directly connected with international or transit flights, except for international postal services

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Provision of financial services
- Contribution of property to an enterprise's charter fund (capital) in the form of participation share, except for imported property (if the contribution of property in the form of a participation share is not directly connected to the acquisition of other property in exchange)
- Sale or purchase of all types of mass media products and the publishing of mass media products (except for advertising activities)
- Transportation of passengers by subway
- Production of textbooks for schools, literature for children and state publications funded by the state budget
- Provision of paid educational services (except for the provision of services in connection with other activities)

If it is stipulated that specific production needs cannot be met by local resources for a specific period, the relevant executive authority shall be entitled to grant a VAT exemption for imported goods and equipment to meet those needs.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Azerbaijan.

E. Time of supply

The tax point of a taxable transaction is the date of payment of a principal amount (net of VAT). If more than one payment is made under the same transaction, each payment is considered a separate transaction for VAT purposes.

The date of payment for VAT purposes is defined as the following:
- Date when cash or cashless payment is received
- Date of offset
- In case of accounts receivable – claim expiration date
- In case of in-kind payment or barter transactions – date when the asset is made available
- In case of gratuitous transfer – date when transfer takes place
- In case the taxpayer is engaged in taxable operations and also provides a loan to the same customer:
  - VAT should be recognized on the date loan is made available – if loan is granted after the date of transaction
  - On the date of transaction – if loan is granted before the date of transaction

Deposits and prepayments. Azerbaijani tax law does not differ in the treatment of deposits and prepayments for VAT purposes.

For advance payments, the taxable transaction is considered to occur at the time of payment. If two or more payments are made with respect to a taxable activity, each payment is deemed to be a separate transaction, up to the limits of the payment amounts.

As per refundable deposit/prepayment, it will not have any VAT effect for the recipient of goods/services who initially paid such amount to the supplier. Yet, the supplier would be obliged to adjust its taxable turnover accordingly. This is because when it is refunded to the customer, the amount should be refunded with VAT if it accounted for VAT on the original payment. Moreover, where the prepayment or deposit was paid with VAT, the customer has no right to offset/recover the VAT until the performance of the services or the delivery of goods.

Continuous supplies of services. If services are rendered on a regular or continuous basis, the time of rendering services is when an electronic invoice is issued for any part of the operation. If payment has been made first, the time of rendering services is when payment is made for any part of the operation. There are currently no longstop dates in relation to the continuous supply of services.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no specific rules under the local legislation for goods sent on approval for sale or return. The VAT liability arises only when the actual sale of goods/services occurs.

Reverse-charge services. For reverse-charge services, the recipient of the services shall submit to the tax authority a VAT declaration in the format established by the relevant executive authority and make the respective payment no later than the 20th of the month following the month of payment made to the nonresident business.

There are no reverse-charge VAT implications for the separate sale of goods (i.e., when goods are not part of the service).

Leased assets. Financial lease of assets, which implies transfer of ownership, is not subject to VAT both for local and foreign operations. Regarding operational leases, there are no special time of supply rules. Therefore, the general rules described above should apply.

Imported goods. For taxable importations, the time of a taxable operation is when the use or consumption of the imported goods begins.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

If VAT is paid through an electronic transfer (no payments in cash) to a VAT deposit account directly from a deposit account or bank account of a taxpayer, in accordance with the electronic invoices, the electronic invoices serve as the basis for a VAT credit. The VAT credit should be allowed only in case the principal amount for the supplies of goods or the provision of services is paid. This means that input tax can only be claimed by using an electronic invoice when the invoice amount has been paid, and then once these requirements are met the input tax can be claimed in the next VAT return or carried forward.

There is no set time limit for a taxpayer to reclaim input tax in Azerbaijan. This means that effectively the input tax (VAT credit) may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery.

In addition, import documents issued by customs authorities that substantiate the amount of import VAT paid, regardless of the form of payment, serve as grounds for a VAT credit.

Nondeductible input tax. In general, no credit of input tax paid is allowed with respect to entertainment and food expenses (except for expenses for healthful and dietary meals, milk and other similar products and for food expenses for ship personnel in sea transport within norms set by the relevant executive authority) or for expenses connected with the accommodation of employees and other expenses of a social nature.

VAT paid that is not recoverable may be deductible for profit tax purposes in cases where the nature of the transaction is deductible. Moreover, if the taxpayer qualifies for only a partial exemption (see the subsection below), the unrecoverable input tax can be deductible for-profit tax purposes in case the nature of the transaction is also deductible.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Entertainment expenses
- Meal expenses
- Accommodation expenses
- Other expenses of a social nature
- Expenses not related to commercial activities

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Advertising expenses
- Rental expenses
- Telecommunication expenses
- Purchase of goods/materials
- Other expenses related to commercial activity

Partial exemption. If a taxable person conducts both taxable operations and exempt operations (i.e., mixed supplies) in the same reporting period, the VAT credit is determined on the basis of the proportion between the taxable and total turnover. However, in case the taxable person keeps separate accounting records (and supporting documents) for the respective taxable and exempt supplies made, the input tax incurred on the taxable and exempt supplies may be able to be clearly identified and separated. Then the amount of input tax incurred that directly relates to the taxable operations can be claimed in full.

In addition, any supplies made by the taxable person to which VAT is charged at the zero-rate are also considered as a taxable supply. This means that zero-rated supplies must be included in total taxable supplies for the partial exemption calculation. And any input tax incurred that directly relates to the zero-rated taxable supplies can also be recovered in full.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Azerbaijan. Special methods are not allowed in Azerbaijan.

Capital goods. There are no specific rules in relation to the capital goods input tax recovery under Azerbaijani tax legislation. Input tax incurred on capital goods can be recovered in accordance with general rules.

Refunds. An excess of a VAT credit amount over the output tax amount charged during the accounting period is refunded no later than four months after the taxpayer's application for a refund.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Azerbaijan is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Azerbaijan.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Azerbaijan.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Azerbaijan is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. In general, persons registered for VAT and conducting taxable transactions must issue electronic invoices to the persons to whom they provide goods or services. A taxpayer must prepare and issue to a purchaser of goods or services an electronic invoice within five days after the delivery of goods or provision of services.

Credit notes. The VAT turnover should be adjusted by a taxpayer in the period in which the credit note is issued. There is no special form for VAT credit notes. In case the amount of the transaction is credited, there should be an adjustment to the previously submitted electronic invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Azerbaijan, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Azerbaijan. For B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Azerbaijan.

The issuance of an electronic invoice, based on the provision of goods and services, is obligatory for every type of business transaction except B2C transactions where electronic invoices are issued but not necessarily required by the legislation.

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Azerbaijan. A taxable person must prepare and issue to a purchaser of goods or services an electronic invoice within five days after the delivery of goods or provision of services.

The electronic invoice as described by the tax authority is the only electronic invoice format allowed.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Azerbaijan. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Azerbaijan.

Proof of exports. The invoice, delivery note and agreement serve as proof of export.

Foreign currency invoices. For tax purposes, the payment to the supplier must be recalculated in the domestic currency, which is the Azerbaijani manat (AZN), at the exchange rate established by the Central Bank of the Azerbaijan Republic for the date when the taxable event took place.

Supplies to nontaxable person. In the case of a supply of goods or provision of services from a VAT registered business to private consumers (that are not taxpayers), for retail supplies only, a cash receipt or electronic delivery note may be issued instead of a full electronic invoice.

Records. There are no specific rules in relation to the record-keeping requirements for VAT purposes, except for the record retention period requirement set forth below. In Azerbaijan, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include any documentation supporting taxable transactions, including agreements, invoices, acceptance acts, electronic invoices, etc. In Azerbaijan, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. This is as long as the records can be made readily available for the tax authorities upon their request.

Record retention period. In accordance with the requirements set under the Azerbaijani Tax Code, accounting documentation, including information in electronic and (or) paper form, must be kept in full readability for at least five years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Azerbaijan. Paper archiving is also allowed.

I. Returns and payments

Periodic returns. Each taxpayer must file a VAT return on a monthly basis. The return must be filed by the 20th day of the month following the accounting month.

VAT on imports must be calculated and collected by customs authorities at the time of importation.

Periodic payments. The payment of VAT must be made by the same day as the return submission deadline. This is by the 20th day of the month following the accounting month.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Azerbaijan, but not mandatory. Generally, both electronic and hard copy filing are possible. In case of e-submission, taxpayers must use an e-signature or ASAN-signature for the submission of tax returns via a specific online tax system. All tax returns submitted through this system are electronically archived and are easily retrievable from the system.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Azerbaijan.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Azerbaijan.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Azerbaijan.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Azerbaijan.

Correcting errors in previous returns. In case errors or omissions are identified under VAT returns of previous periods, taxpayers may prepare adjusted reports with corrected figures and submit them to the tax office. However, submission of adjusted reports is not possible if the concerned period is under on-site tax audit or has been finalized.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Azerbaijan.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. If a taxpayer that is required to be VAT registered does not register for VAT purposes and carries out taxable activities, the taxpayer is subject to a financial sanction equaling 50% of the VAT amount payable to the state budget for the entire period during which the taxpayer carried out activities without VAT registration.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Late submission of a VAT return is subject to a financial sanction in an amount of AZN40.

If the VAT amount indicated on a VAT return is understated or VAT payable to the state budget is evaded by failure to submit the VAT return, the taxpayer is subject to a fine equal to 50% of that understated or evaded tax. An additional amount may be calculated by the tax authorities as part of an audit.

Failure to notify the tax authorities about any changes in a taxpayer's VAT registration details may result in administrative sanctions of AZN2,500-3,000 for the company and/or AZN1,000-2,000 for the company officers.

If a taxable person fails to pay the VAT due within one working day after the principal payment for goods, works or services, the taxable person will be subject to a financial sanction of 50% of the unpaid VAT amount.

Penalties for errors. The penalty for the understatement of a VAT liability is 50% as outlined above. In addition, penalties are applied for the absence of electronic invoices confirming sales and purchase of goods. The penalty for the first violation during the calendar year is 10%; for the second – 20%; for the third and further – 40%.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. There are no specific penalties in Azerbaijan for fraud. Other penalties outlined above should apply.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Azerbaijan.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Azerbaijan is three years. The tax authorities can calculate and recalculate taxes, penalties and financial sanctions of the taxpayer for the period of latest three years effective from the last closed out period under the respective VAT return.

A taxpayer has a five-year period to amend any refunds or calculations for sums of taxes, penalties and financial sanctions due. This should be performed within five years after termination of last taxable reporting period.

Corrected filings or filings not submitted in a timely manner can be furnished by the taxpayer before the date of decision on implementation of on-site tax inspection. Where the taxpayer has overpaid taxes, interest shall be paid to the taxpayer at the rate of 0.1% of relevant amounts beginning from the date that an application on the refund of the excess amount is placed up to the date that such amount is refunded. The taxpayer is eligible to receive interest only in the cases if the tax authorities fail to return funds during timelines set under local legislation. The reason for overpayment or overcharge is not a basis for application of interest.

At the same time, the legal entity registered as taxpayer has the opportunity to perform voluntary correction of VAT returns.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the taxable supply of goods and services, including imported goods and services. VAT is applicable on the supply of goods and services at the standard rate of 10%, except in cases where the supply of goods and services is deemed to be either zero-rated or tax-exempt or applies to real estate transaction where reduced rates may apply.

In the Bahamas, a taxable person is defined as a person that carries on a taxable activity who is registered or required to register for VAT as per the VAT Act. The term taxable activity refers to activity in the form of a business being carried on in the Bahamas continuously and for consideration which involves or is intended to involve the supply of taxable supplies.

Insurance proceeds. For taxable persons that receive payment in the form of reimbursement, recovery or indemnification under a contract for taxable insurance services, in respect of loss of or damage to goods or services acquired for the use in the course of furtherance of a taxable activity carried on by the registrant, the following applies: (a) the registrant is deemed to have made a taxable supply; (b) the payment is deemed to be the consideration for that supply; and (c) the payments received by the VAT registrant are deemed to be VAT inclusive.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In the Bahamas, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. The sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business was previously subject to VAT at the standard rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) is now only subject to stamp duty. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. As of 1 July 2022, transactions relating to the disposition of a business were removed from the VAT Act and returned to the Stamp Act. When a business is sold or ownership otherwise is transferred to another unrelated party, such a transfer is subject to stamp duty at a rate of 6%. The tax is applied to the assets of the business with the exception of cash, deposit accounts and real property. Where such transfers of a business occur that include the transfer of real property, there is VAT levied on the real property at the following rates:

- Transfers of real property to a foreign person are subject to 10% VAT
- Transfers of real property to a Bahamian company or other Bahamian entity are subject to VAT at the following rates:
  - 2.5% where the value does not exceed BSD100,000
  - 10% where the value exceeds BSD100,000
- Transfers of real property to a Bahamian individual or a Bahamian company that is used solely by the owner for holding real property and does not conduct business are subject to VAT at the following rates:
  - 2.5% where the value does not exceed BSD100,000
  - 4% where the value exceeds BSD100,000 but does not exceed BSD300,000
  - 6% where the value exceeds BSD300,000 but does not exceed BSD500,000
  - 8% where the value exceeds BSD500,000, but does not exceed BSD700,000
  - 9% where the value exceeds BSD700,000 but does not exceed BSD1 million
  - 10% where the value exceeds BSD1 million

VAT payments due and owing relative to the stand-alone transfer of real property or the disposition of a business that includes the transfer of real property are payable to the VAT Comptroller of the VAT Department within 90 days of the completion of the transaction. Relative to the VAT amounts due and owing for real estate transfers as part of the disposition of a business, the liability for payment of said amounts is shared between the parties, jointly and severally.

Transactions between related parties. In the Bahamas, for a transaction between related parties the value for VAT purposes is calculated at an arm's-length value. This is unless the collective group of related parties have been approved as a VAT group by the VAT Comptroller. Related-party transactions between members of an approved VAT group are not deemed as arm's length and are not deemed as the provision of taxable supplies.

C. Who is liable

VAT applies to goods or services supplied by a taxable person undertaking, by way of business, a "taxable activity." In most cases, the taxable supplies must also exceed the annual threshold of BSD100,000 in value. However, there are certain instances where the mandatory registration for VAT is required irrespective of the threshold; these include:

- Where a person or business is domiciled within or outside the Bahamas to the extent that they provide, direct or through an agent, telecommunication service or electronic commerce to persons for the use, enjoyment, benefit or advantage within the Bahamas
- A hotel, condos, residential accommodations that forms a pool or other collective rental agreements
- A marketplace for vacation home rental
- A non-Bahamian homeowner, who supplies a vacation rental and does not utilize a marketplace for the supply of the rental

Exemption from registration. Exemption from registration applies to charitable organizations or a port licensee under certain circumstance in which. prior to making the claim for a refund, must apply for registration. It is possible for certain zero-rated suppliers, mainly in the financial services industry to be exempted from VAT registration. Businesses are required to apply to "opt out" of registering for VAT and this is assessed on a case-by-case basis. Where an exemption is granted, a business cannot recover VAT on costs, as it will not be registered for VAT.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. For businesses that make taxable supplies or taxable importations in the course of conducting taxable activity that do not meet the VAT registration threshold but wish to legally charge and collect VAT, there is a voluntary registration mechanism. Taxable persons that register voluntarily have the same obligations as taxable persons that were required by law to register including but not limited to periodic reporting and remittance of VAT liabilities to the tax authorities.

Group registration. Businesses that operate as a group or are managed as a group can apply for VAT group registration. Where the group registration is approved, the group will use the taxable person identification number (TIN) of the taxable person selected as the controller of the group.

Members of the group are all jointly and severally liable for the liabilities of the group, which include VAT debts and penalties as well as other related taxes levied by the government of the Bahamas.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group.

Fixed establishment. In the Bahamas there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes.

Non-established businesses. If a company undertakes a taxable or other business activity such as employing persons that work in the Bahamas or deriving income from activities undertaken in the Bahamas, the company is deemed to be a resident/non-established business in the Bahamas.

Non-established businesses are subject to mandatory registration if they make domestic sales of goods and if they specifically sell digital services to consumers in the jurisdiction (i.e., telecommunication services/electronic commerce business). Such non-established businesses are required to apply for VAT registration regardless of the taxable turnover threshold.

Tax representatives. Businesses can appoint a third-party representative, such as an accountant or business advisor, to submit a VAT registration form on behalf of the taxable person. It is also possible to delegate responsibility to manage certain aspects of the taxable person's account.

Reverse charge. Under the reverse-charge mechanism (known as "self-account" under the Bahamas VAT law), persons that import services, which would ordinarily be subject to VAT if supplied by a local business, generally must account for and pay VAT due. However, the place of supply rules would need to be examined. The VAT Act provides that in the case of imported services, both parties, the importer and the recipient, are jointly and severally liable for VAT arising on the transaction.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in the Bahamas.

Digital economy. No special provisions apply to the digital economy. In practice, a non-established business providing digital (i.e., e-commerce) services would generally be required to register for VAT and charge VAT on their supplies where the services are physically performed or where the benefit is experienced in the Bahamas. While the business license registration requirements for nonresident entities providing digital services are less than the registration requirements for a resident entity, the VAT registration requirements for these entities are the same as resident entities providing similar taxable supplies.

No special additional e-commerce rules exist for supplies of imported goods.

Online marketplaces and platforms. The VAT law outlines guidelines for professional services, which includes similar services of electronic commerce and the supply of internet access. A person must apply for registration where such person, in the course or furtherance of a taxable activity carried on by them, makes taxable supplies or taxable importations and is domiciled within or outside the Bahamas to the extent such person provides, through an agent, telecommunication services or electronic commerce to persons for use, enjoyment, benefit or advantage within the Bahamas, regardless of the registration threshold.

Registration procedures. There are three types of VAT registration that apply in the Bahamas:
- Mandatory, where businesses or operations meet or exceed the VAT registration threshold
- Voluntary, where businesses do not meet the VAT registration threshold but wish to charge and collect VAT
- Forced registration, where businesses meet the registration threshold but fail to register

A person or business liable for VAT must apply to the VAT authorities for registration within 14 days of meeting the requirements. Registration is completed strictly online using the Department of Inland Revenue's Online Tax Administration System (OTAS) portal. Failure to apply for registration can result in forcible registration by the comptroller and penalties. If applying separately for a business license application, the non-exhaustive list of items required to apply to be deemed a VAT registrant include, but are not limited to, a valid business license issued by the Department of Inland Revenue, NIB number, taxable person contacts (name, address, phone number, email address), listing of directors/partners/shareholders, and the business representative authorization and contact details (name, address, phone number, email address). However, note that additional information and/or approvals may be required based on the review of the application by the Department of Inland Revenue (DIR).

Deregistration. One can apply to cancel the VAT registration where a number of conditions are met. Typically, a company will need to wait two years from the date of registering for VAT before applying to cancel the VAT registration. The conditions do not apply in circumstances where the business effectively ceases to exist.

Changes to VAT registration details. To make corrections to any registration details, the taxable person is required to submit a contact update request, known as a "change of circumstances" through the OTAS portal providing the updated information in the appropriate boxes of the form and including any documentation in support of the request. A representative of the DIR would then review the request and advise of next steps to approve the request or indicate the reason of the tax authority's denial of the request. All corrections are to be submitted through DIR's OTAS portal.

There are no specific time limits to notify such changes.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 10%
- Special rates: 0.1%, 1%, 2.5%, 4%, 6%, 6.5%, 8%, 9%, 10%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption. The standard rate was reduced from 12% to 10% as of 1 January 2022.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Services that relate to land and property situated outside of the Bahamas
- Goods physically removed from the Bahamas or outside the Bahamas at the time of supply
- Certain professional, financial and insurance services where the benefit is obtained outside the Bahamas
- Transfer of a business as a going concern by a registrant supplier to a registrant recipient where certain conditions are met
- Services of a foreign-going vessel providing international commercial services, where the supply is made directly and not through an agent or other person.

Examples of goods and services taxable at special rates

- Flat-rate scheme provides that VAT is charged and collected on supplies at the standard rate. However, rather than calculating the input tax each VAT period, the taxable person applies the flat rate of 6.5% to VAT inclusive sales and pays this amount to the comptroller.
- A reconveyance of real property from a mortgagee to a borrower or mortgagor only, is subject to VAT at 0.10% of mortgage amount
- A mortgage or transfer of mortgage of real property is subject to VAT at a rate of 1% of mortgage or transfer of mortgage amount
- Transfers of real property to a foreign person are subject to 10% VAT
- Transfers of real property to a Bahamian company or other Bahamian entity are subject to VAT at the following rates:
  - 2.5% where the value does not exceed BSD100,000
  - 10% where the value exceeds BSD100,000
- Transfers of real property to a Bahamian individual or a Bahamian company that is used solely by the owner for holding real property and does not conduct business are subject to VAT at the following rates:
  - 2.5% where the value does not exceed BSD100,000
  - 4% where the value exceeds BSD100,000 but does not exceed BSD300,000
  - 6% where the value exceeds BSD300,000 but does not exceed BSD500,000
  - 8% where the value exceeds BSD500,000, but does not exceed BSD700,000
  - 9% where the value exceeds BSD700,000 but does not exceed BSD1 million
  - 10% where the value exceeds BSD1 million

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable for VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Services directly and not through an agent or other person to a person resident outside the Bahamas who is not a taxable person (only applicable to certain circumstances)

- Certain insurance services, specifically life insurance, annuities and savings products, and insurance contracts on dwellings that are owner-occupied
- Medical services provided by a public health care facility to a public patient
- Rental of a dwelling meant to be a primary place of residence

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in the Bahamas.

E. Time of supply

The time of supply is the date when a sale is considered to take place for VAT purposes. The time of supply is the earliest of:

- The date an invoice is issued
- Receipt of payment
- The date goods are delivered or made available to the recipient
- The date the performance of service is completed

Deposits and prepayments. Where a deposit or prepayment is received, regulations provide that a tax point is created, and VAT (in the form of output tax) will become due on the amount of the deposit or prepayment. The amount of VAT due is typically calculated using the VAT fraction. The VAT fraction is calculated in accordance with the formula (R/(1+R)) where R is the rate of VAT expressed as a percentage applicable to the price of the taxable supply.

If the deposit is held in an escrow account, i.e., one the taxable person does not have access to, this is not considered a payment. The output tax does not need to be declared until the amount is released.

Where the deposit is nonrefundable, and the customer does not buy the goods or services on which the deposit was paid, this is considered a payment subject to VAT at the applicable rate.

Finally, if the deposit is intended to be refunded, the legislation does not require the taxable person to treat the payment as consideration and therefore, there is no need to declare VAT on the payment. However, if at some later time, it is determined that the taxable person is entitled to keep the deposit, then this is a supply and VAT must be declared.

Continuous supplies of services. Where there is a continuous contract for services and payment is required at certain stages, a VAT invoice should be issued when each payment is due. The invoice should detail the charge for that particular stage and the amount of VAT charged.

Goods sent on approval or for sale or return. The tax point occurs when the title to the goods is transferred. Therefore, if a supplier transfers inventory to a customer with the agreement that the title is retained by the supplier until the customer sells or uses the inventory, a tax point is not created, and any unused inventory can be returned to the supplier and will not be subject to VAT.

Reverse-charge services. There is no special time of supply rule in the Bahamas for reverse-charge services. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Leased assets. The time of supply for the supply leased assets (providing for periodic payments) is when a payment becomes due or when payment is received, whichever comes earlier.

Imported goods. Import VAT may apply to goods entering the Bahamas. The importer of a taxable importation must, on entry of the goods, submit an import declaration to the comptroller of customs and pay the VAT due.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

Generally, input tax can be reclaimed when the VAT was paid on purchases that relate to supplies liable to VAT at the standard rate or the zero rate, i.e., taxable supplies.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in the Bahamas is three years. A claim for a refund must be made within three years after VAT reporting. Currently, the OTAS portal automatically applies available input tax credits (VAT credits) to the next tax period where there is a VAT liability and allows the remaining credits to be carried forward.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax credit is not recoverable if the VAT was paid on goods or services that are not used, or intended to be used, in the course or furtherance of a taxable activity. Where goods have a business and personal use, the taxable person must apportion the VAT to the business and nonbusiness uses, claiming input credit only for the business portion.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Fees or subscriptions for membership of any club, association or society of sporting, social or recreational nature.
- Petroleum and similar products that are used for nonbusiness purposes.
- A passenger vehicle where the claimant does not carry on the taxable activity of providing transportation services. Even where the claimant does carry on this taxable activity, no input tax credit is allowed if the vehicle was not acquired for the purposes of this taxable activity.
- Entertainment, unless the claimant is in the business of providing entertainment or the entertainment is wholly for all employees as part of a reward for services rendered or it is an expense directly related to the creation of a taxable activity ("entertainment" means food, beverages, tobacco, accommodation, amusement, recreation or other hospitality of any kind)

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Entertainment expenses incurred wholly for the employees as part of a reward for services provided
- VAT paid on utility bills related to the business

Partial exemption. A partial recovery calculation is required where costs incurred relate to both taxable and exempt supplies. Regulations provide a standard method of apportionment to calculate the amount of input tax the taxable person is entitled to claim.

The standard method of appointment is calculated as follows:

$$A \times B/C$$

- A is the total amount of the input tax payable in respect of supplies and imports received during the period, less the sum of the input tax attributable to supplies or imports acquired or made, which are directly allocable to the making of taxable supplies and in respect of deductions that are disallowed under the VAT Act.
- B is the total amount of taxable supplies made by the taxable person during the period
- C is the total amount of all supplies made by the taxable person during the period.

A taxable person may, where the fraction B/C is more than 0.90, deduct the total amount of the input tax on the supplies/imports acquired or made during the period.

A taxable person may not, where the fraction B/C is less than 0.10, claim input tax deduction on taxable supplies made during the period.

The above does not apply to a financial institution making both taxable and exempt supplies during a period.

The Comptroller may use an alternative basis to determine the amount of input tax permitted. This is determined on a case-by-case basis.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in the Bahamas. Special methods are not allowed in the Bahamas.

Capital goods. In the Bahamas there are no special input tax recovery rules for capital goods. The normal rules outlined above apply.

Refunds. A refund may be due when the VAT paid on a taxable person's purchases (input tax) is greater than the VAT charged on a taxable person's sales (output tax). You may also carry forward the excess and use it to offset any VAT due in the following tax period. Refund applications vary depending on the filing intervals of the taxable person's VAT returns. All claims for a refund must exceed BSD500.

Pre-registration costs. If goods or services were purchased during the 24 months before registration, and those are used to make supplies subject to VAT after registration, it is possible to reclaim input tax paid on those pre-registration purchases.

Bad debts. A VAT registrant is entitled to claim an input tax deduction for sales made with respect to a taxable supply written off as a bad debt, i.e., when the amount owed is written off in accounting records, the taxable person can make an adjustment by claiming as input tax the amount previously declared as output tax.

Noneconomic activities. VAT paid on purchases of goods or services that are used or intended to be used for nonbusiness purposes are not recoverable.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in the Bahamas is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. For all taxable supplies, the supplier must provide the buyer, if they are VAT registered, a VAT invoice within 60 calendar days of the supply. In order for a VAT invoice to be valid, it must show certain information as outlined in VAT law.

Credit notes. A tax credit note is required to be issued by a registered supplier to a purchaser when a VAT invoice previously issued charged VAT in excess of the tax properly chargeable. The credit note must be in the form and contain the information as specified in VAT law.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in the Bahamas, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in the Bahamas. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in the Bahamas. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT billing is allowed for retail sales in the Bahamas. For retail sales, a taxable person can issue a VAT sales receipt, whereby items subject to VAT (or not subject to VAT) can be identified on the receipt with a symbol such as an asterisk, provided the total amount of VAT is clearly shown on the receipt. The method of identification must be clearly displayed so that customers can determine what is subject to VAT and at what rate before they pay for the goods. The unit price of each item on a sales receipt may be VAT inclusive or exclusive.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in the Bahamas.

Proof of exports. When goods or services are transported or transferred from within the Bahamas to a country or place outside the Bahamas where the use, benefit or advantage of the goods or services is obtained or enjoyed outside of the Bahamas, the zero-rate applies. Zero rating maybe applicable to exports out of the Bahamas, if the VAT registrant meets the following conditions:

- The registered supplier, i.e., the entity registered for VAT, has entered the goods for export in accordance with the Customs Management Act, and the goods are, in fact, exported by the registered supplier.
- The comptroller is satisfied that the goods have been exported from the Bahamas and were not used after they were entered for export except such use as was necessary for, or incidental to, the export of the goods.
- The taxable person must have the relevant documentation to prove it is the exporter of record.

Foreign currency invoices. The VAT Act and Regulations do not specify which currency is to be stated on invoices. The official currency is the Bahamian dollar (BSD) and its exchange rate is USD 1:1. As per the VAT Act, invoices are to be denominated in money, which is defined as the currency used or circulating in the Bahamas. In practice, within the Bahamas, it is permissible to issue invoices in any currency. However, the ability to retain foreign currencies in the Bahamas requires explicit permission from the Central Bank of The Bahamas.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. If a VAT-registered supplier makes retail sales, it can issue a simplified VAT invoice or a VAT sales receipt, whereby items subject to VAT (or not subject to VAT) can be identified on the receipt with a symbol such as an asterisk, provided the total amount of VAT is clearly shown on the receipt. The method of identification must be clearly displayed so that customers can determine what is subject to VAT and at what rate, before they pay for the goods. The unit price of each item may be VAT inclusive or exclusive.

Records. Reliable accounting records in the English language must be maintained; however, there is not a legal requirement that stipulates the records to be physically maintained within the Bahamas. In the Bahamas, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include records of all supplies and purchases, i.e., a copy of all sales invoices, debit and credit notes, receipts and all purchase invoices either in paper or electronic form. If a taxable person does not possess a copy of an invoice on which VAT was paid or import documents showing the VAT amount, the VAT is not recoverable. In the Bahamas, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. However, while records are not required to be physically maintained within the Bahamas, a taxable person's records should be readily accessible should the tax authorities request to view them.

Record retention period. Records are required to be kept for five years after the end of the tax period of which the taxable person ceases to be a registrant and where the occurrence of the taxable transaction to which the records relate. Notwithstanding, the statute of limitations is seven years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in the Bahamas. Records must be kept for all supplies and purchases. This means keeping a copy of all sales invoices, debit and credit notes, receipts and all purchase invoices either in paper or electronic form. All sales invoices must be sequentially numbered so if a taxable person spoils an invoice and has to issue a new one, the taxable person must keep a copy of the spoiled invoice. If a taxable person does not hold a copy of an invoice on which it has paid VAT or import documents showing the VAT amount, it is not entitled to recover the VAT on these costs, so it is very important to keep such documents. The records a taxable person keeps must be such that the comptroller can determine, with reasonable accuracy at any time, the liability of the taxable person to pay tax.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The timelines for filing VAT returns are as follows:

- Taxable persons with an annual turnover greater than BSD5 million are required to file a monthly VAT return.
- Taxable persons with an annual turnover of less than BSD5 million are required to file a quarterly VAT return.

The VAT return should show:
- The VAT charged on sales in the period (output tax)
- The VAT paid on purchases (input tax)

VAT returns are due 21 days following the previous month. Further, should the filing due date fall on a weekend or public holiday, the VAT return is due on the following business day (which would typically be the Monday following the weekend, provided that the Monday is not observed as a public holiday).

Periodic payments. Where the amount of output tax is greater than the input tax, the difference must be paid to the comptroller. It is required to pay any VAT due to the comptroller within 21 days after the end of the VAT period so effectively the taxable person needs to file the VAT return and pay any amount due by the 21st day of the month following the last day of a VAT period.

VAT can be paid in the following ways:
- Using a debit or credit card via the online portal
- Via a taxable person's online banking service
- Paying over-the-counter at the taxable person's bank
- Presenting cash/manager's check at any bank

All payments must include the related tax identification number (TIN) and reach the VAT Department by the due date.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in the Bahamas for all taxable persons. The OTAS portal was developed to assist taxable persons to manage their VAT accounts. This system allows registered taxable persons to file VAT returns and payments electronically. Other services available online may include taxable person inquiries, payments and refunds. The OTAS portal is the only method in which VAT reporting can be completed and submitted to the tax authority. Paper submissions are not permitted.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in the Bahamas.

Special schemes. Flat rate scheme. The flat rate scheme is for small businesses with annual taxable turnover of BSD400,000 or less. The flat rate scheme provides that VAT is charged and collected on supplies at the standard rate. However, rather than calculating the input tax each VAT period, the taxable person applies the flat rate of 6.5% to gross sales and pays this amount to the comptroller.

Cash accounting. Businesses are permitted to account for VAT on a cash basis in certain circumstances. Suppliers declare output tax on the VAT return in the same period during which customers pay. Similarly, a taxable person using the cash basis, would only declare and reclaim input tax on the VAT return in the period when it has paid its suppliers.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in the Bahamas.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in the Bahamas.

Correcting errors in previous returns. To make corrections to any errors or omissions on VAT returns, taxable persons are expected to prepare an amended VAT return for the impacted period, if it is within the preceding year. For any corrections for a period outside of the preceding year, the taxable person is required to submit an enquiry through the OTAS portal outlining the correction being requested, the value of the correct, the impacted period and any documentation in support of the request. A representative of the DIR would then review the request and advise of next steps to approve the request or indicate the reason of the tax authority's denial of the request. All corrections are to be submitted through DIR's OTAS portal.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in the Bahamas.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. There is no specific penalty in the Bahamas for late registration of VAT. However, if a taxable person fails to apply for registration, that person commits an offense and is liable to a fixed penalty up to BSD150,000 or imprisoned for a term not exceeding 12 months or both. The law also prescribes, the taxable person who failed to become a VAT registrant will be liable for any VAT owed on taxable supplies, at the standard rate appliable for each period plus interest accrued on the late payment at a rate of prime plus 1%.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Regulations impose heavy penalties for noncompliance. An offense is committed when VAT is not paid when due for two or more consecutive or nonconsecutive tax periods. One can potentially be liable on conviction in court to a fine not exceeding BSD10,000 and imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or both. In case of nonpayment or late payment of tax pursuant to a VAT return or notice of assessment, the taxable person shall be subject to 10% of the amount of tax owed. Interest in respect of the outstanding amount at a rate of prime plus 1%.

A registrant shall be subject to a fine in case of late filing of their VAT return. In case of the filing of a late VAT return, non-filing of a VAT return or failure to file a VAT return in the prescribed form, the fine imposed on the registrant shall be the greater of the sum of BSD100 or 2% of the tax payable.

Penalties for errors. Errors in the declared VAT amounts, whether input or output tax, can be adjusted on the next VAT return provided the error does not exceed BSD500. Where the error exceeds this amount, the taxable person should notify the comptroller. If the error is not discovered promptly and is not considered deliberate, the taxable person may only be charged interest on amounts owed and the associated fine may be waived.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. An unregistered or nontaxable person collecting, advertising or quoting VAT in respect of a taxable supply made to another person is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding BSD70,000.

A taxable person submitting statements to the comptroller or VAT officer that are falsified, omit information or are misleading are liable on conviction to the sum of BSD150,000.

A taxable person who includes a false taxable person identification number on a document is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding BSD150,000.

Personal liability for company officers. For taxable persons, directors or similar officers, pursuant to Section 76, the fixed penalties that can be assessed on these representatives for failure to comply with Sections 73 (duties of receivers/liquidators) and 74 (tax representatives) of the VAT legislation, amount to a maximum of BSD100,000 and BSD30,000, respectively. Tax representatives can also be held liable for contraventions of Section 92 (false or misleading statements), the fixed penalty for which is BSD150,000.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in the Bahamas is seven years. However, there are other factors that may shorten or lengthen this period, which is determined at the discretion of the VAT Comptroller. If not due to fraud or willful misstatement, the tax authorities must bring forth any assessments and/or audits within five years after the date the VAT return was filed. The VAT Act does not provide a statute of limitations for the tax authorities to bring forth any assessments and/or audits for instances of fraud or willful misstatement.

No time limit exists for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns. The OTAS portal will allow for the completion of an amended VAT return for up to 12 months prior to the date of the submission. For any amendments to periods prior to 12 months, an enquiry will need to be submitted through the OTAS portal requesting permission to have such an amendment to be processed. The enquiry will need to detail the reason for the request and clearly identify the changes to be made to the previously submitted VAT return. In the case of amended returns, the comptroller or other representative of the Department of Inland Revenue can subsequently elect to perform an audit of the taxable person.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of goods and services made in Bahrain by a taxable person
- The receipt of goods and services by a taxable person in Bahrain from a non-established person
- The importation of goods from outside the GCC implementing states into Bahrain

There are no designated zones in Bahrain.

GCC countries that implemented VAT shall be treated as non-implementing states if they do not treat Bahrain as an implementing state in their local tax legislation and they are not fully compliant with the provisions of the GCC VAT Agreement. The supply of goods and services from non-implementing states shall be considered as made from outside the GCC territory and the person's residence in such countries shall be treated as non-GCC residents.

Intra-GCC supplies involving the shipment of goods from Bahrain to another GCC Member State shall be considered as an export of goods until the establishment of the electronic services system in all GCC Member States.

Contracts silent on VAT, that have been entered into prior to the VAT implementation date in Bahrain but straddle such date, should in general be treated as VAT-inclusive.

An exception to the above is for contracts entered into with the government (i.e., Bahrain Ministries, government agencies, institutions and public bodies), where VAT at the zero-rate can be applied until the earlier of the contract expiry date, contract renewal date or 31 December 2023. This is in accordance with Article 76(B) of the Bahrain VAT law.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Bahrain only telecommunications and electronic services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions (i.e., B2B, B2C).

The National Bureau for Revenue (NBR) has issued a public clarification on the place of supply rules for telecommunication services. As set out in the guidance from the NBR, with effect from 1 February 2021, the place of use and enjoyment of telecommunications services will be determined as follows:

- For telecommunications services that require the customer to be physically present in a specific location to use them (such as a Wi-Fi hotspot or an internet café), the place of use and enjoyment is that specific location. There is no change to the place of supply for such services and suppliers of such services should continue to charge Bahrain VAT where such services are provided from a location in Bahrain.
- For all other telecommunications services, the place of use and enjoyment is the place of residence of the customer. The supplier of the service should determine the place of residence of the customer.

Where the place of residence of the customer is Bahrain, the place of supply of the services will be Bahrain. Where the services are provided by a taxable person under Bahrain VAT law, 10% VAT will apply.

Where a customer's place of residence is in another country, that other country will be treated as the place of residence for the purposes of determining the place of supply of the telecommunications services.

For further details on telecommunications and electronic services, see the subsection Digital economy below.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally, the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Bahrain, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- Transfer includes all or part of a business capable of being operated on an independent basis
- Transferor must be VAT registered
- Transferee must be VAT registered or become liable to be registered as a result of the TOGC
- Transferee must immediately use the assets acquired to conduct the same or a similar economic activity
- Notification to the NBR

Where assets and liabilities are transferred over a period of time, both parties will need to consider whether each transfer is a separate supply or forms part of the TOGC. Assets transferred that will not be used to continue the economic activity previously carried out by the transferor will not fall within the TOGC provisions. Where the sale of business assets from a transferor to a transferee are immediately sold by the transferee to a taxable third party, the TOGC rules will not apply. Any adjustment to a supply made before a qualifying TOGC should be a matter between the transferor and the third party. If a transferee repairs or replaces the goods, it may not claim input tax in respect of the cost of repair or replacement as the cost does not relate to taxable supplies made by the transferee. The transferee will be liable for VAT on a deemed supply of assets where the assets were transferred as part of a qualifying TOGC and the transferor originally reclaimed input tax on the purchase of those assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Bahrain, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated at the fair market value where the following conditions are met:
- The value of the supply is less than its fair market value
- The recipient of the supply is not entitled to recover in full the VAT charged

The fair market value is the fair price tradeable in the market between two independent parties under similar circumstances at the same date as the date of the supply and in accordance with the following free competition conditions:
- Neither the supplier nor the customer is subject to any kind of commercial pressure
- Both the supplier and the customer independently work to achieve what is in their best interest
- The transaction is made within a reasonable period of time (i.e., no time pressure)

Where the fair market value cannot be assessed using the value of an identical supply in competitive conditions, the supplier may refer to the fair market value of a similar supply. In such conditions, a similar supply would be any other supply of goods or services where the characteristics such as quantity, quality, usage, components or delivery are the same, or closely resemble the supply.

The Bahrain VAT law defines "related persons" as "two or more persons where one has authority to direct and supervise the other person(s), where it holds an administrative authority enabling them to influence the work of the other person(s) from a financial, economical, or organizational point of view."

The NBR can request evidence that the VAT has been calculated based on the fair market value of the goods or services. If this is not provided with evidence within 30 days from the date of the request, or if the NBR finds that the value used is lower than the fair market value, the NBR can substitute the value used with the fair market value and calculate the VAT due on this basis.

C. Who is liable

A "taxable person" in Bahrain is a person who conducts an economic activity independently for the purpose of generating income and who is registered or obliged to register for VAT in Bahrain.

Every person who has a place of residence in Bahrain and conducts an economic activity, where the value of its taxable supplies made in the past 12 months or expected to be made in the next 12 months exceeds Bahraini dinar (BHD)37,500 must register for, collect and remit VAT. The VAT registration process is outlined under the subsection Registration procedures below.

Every non-established business that makes supplies, goods or services (and where no one else is liable to account for the VAT due) must register for VAT in Bahrain. There is no minimum registration threshold for nonresident persons.

For imports, the importer shall pay import VAT to Bahrain Customs Affairs where Bahrain is the first point of entry for goods coming from outside the GCC implementing states (unless the goods are zero-rated or exempt from import VAT in Bahrain). Until Bahrain recognizes one or more GCC Member States as implementing states, all goods entering Bahrain that are cleared through customs will be regarded as imports of goods for VAT purposes. The NBR may allow the taxable person to defer the payment of import VAT until the filing of the VAT return.

Transport of own goods by a taxable person to another GCC implementing state may be treated as a taxable supply, except where goods are transferred either on a temporary basis or as part of a supply taxable in the other GCC implementing state (e.g., a supply of goods with installation). However, at the time of preparing this chapter, Bahrain has not recognized one or more of the other GCC Member States as an implement state for VAT purposes.

Exemption from registration. Taxable persons whose value of taxable supplies exceeds BHD37,500 but are exclusively zero-rated, and does not receive services or goods for which they are liable to account for standard-rated VAT under the reverse-charge mechanism, may apply to the NBR for an exception from VAT registration. However, the NBR has the right to collect any VAT due, as well as administrative penalties, for the period of registration when the taxable person was not entitled to an exception from VAT registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A person who has a place of residence in Bahrain, conducts an economic activity and is not obliged to register for VAT under the phased transitional deadlines, may apply for VAT registration if the value of its total taxable supplies or expenses in the past 12 months exceeds BHD18,750, or is expected to exceed BHD18,750 in the next 12 months.

When a person applies for a VAT registration on a voluntary basis, the effective date of registration is the date of approval of the registration by the NBR. The taxable person must remain registered for at least 24 months before being able to request a voluntary deregistration.

Group registration. Two or more persons can apply to form a VAT group if the following conditions are met:

- Each applicant must be a legal person.
- Each applicant must have a place of residence in Bahrain.
- Each applicant must be conducting an economic activity in Bahrain.
- Each applicant must be registered for VAT purposes at the date of making the application to form/join the VAT group.
- The applicant must not be a member of another VAT group in Bahrain.
- The applicants must be related, which means that:
  - One of them has the authority to direct and supervise (i.e., control) the others.
    Or
  - They are all directed and supervised (i.e., controlled) by the same person (the same person could be a legal person, a natural person or a group of persons acting under a formal arrangement).

For the purposes of the above, control is considered to be established where either the same person or the same group of persons (acting under a formal agreement):
- Hold, directly or indirectly, more than 50% of the voting rights attaching to the shares in each applying entity.
- Hold, directly or indirectly, more than 50% of the capital or ownership in each applying entity.
- Control each applying entity by any other means than voting rights or capital.

The VAT group shall, by a power of attorney, appoint one of its members as a representative of the VAT group. The VAT group representative shall comply with all VAT obligations of the group without prejudice to the joint liability of the members of the VAT group, including the following:
- Submit an application to form a VAT group in accordance with the form prepared for this purpose by the NBR.
- Notify the NBR of a request to withdraw any member of the VAT group or add new members to it.
- Notify the NBR of a request to disband the VAT group for any reason, or where the conditions to register as a VAT group no longer exist.

Supplies between members of the VAT group shall be considered as outside the scope of VAT. All the entities registered as in a VAT group will be required to file a single VAT return which thus reduces the VAT compliance workload.

All members of a VAT group in Bahrain are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties of the VAT group for the time that they are members of the VAT group.

The NBR may amend or deregister the VAT group in some instances, and a member must leave the VAT group as soon as it ceases to meet the relevant conditions.

The minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group in Bahrain is 12 months. This means that members of the VAT group cannot voluntarily withdraw from the group before a period of at least 12 months has passed since joining the VAT group.

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in Bahrain, where it meets the fixed establishment definition (as per the Bahrain VAT law) as any fixed location for the business other than the place of business, where business is conducted, and is characterized by the permanent presence of human and technical resources in a capacity that enables the person to supply or receive goods or services.

In addition, the Bahrain VAT law defines place of residence of a person as the location of the place of business of a person or the fixed establishment. For a natural person who does not have a place of business or a fixed establishment, it shall be its usual place of residence. If a person has a place of residence in more than one country, the place of residence shall be considered as the place most closely connected with the supply. In addition, the place of business is defined as the place where the business is legally established, or the place of its actual management where the key decisions relating to the business operations are taken, when different from the place of establishment.

Non-established businesses. Every person that does not have a place of residence in Bahrain, but is obliged to pay VAT in Bahrain, must apply to the NBR for VAT registration regardless of the value of its supplies, as there is no minimum registration threshold for nonresident persons. A nonresident person can register directly with the NBR or through an appointed tax representative (which requires an approval from the NBR).

Tax representatives. The NBR may approve persons who wish to act as tax representatives or tax agents for the taxable persons in respect of their tax obligations in Bahrain. The NBR will grant such approval upon meeting certain rules and conditions, as well as the payment of certain license fees and the submission of a power of attorney. The NBR will publish a list of the approved tax representatives and tax agents.

A tax representative or tax agent must meet the following conditions:
- They must be resident in Bahrain.
- They must be of good conduct and reputation (no sentence to a restriction of freedom in a crime against honor).
- If they are individuals, they must possess of a university degree or accounting or legal qualification that has been certified and approved by the Ministry of Education.
- If they are legal persons, they must have a valid and current commercial registration.
- They must pay the fee prescribed by the NBR.

The tax representative shall have joint and several liability for paying any VAT due from the taxable person it is representing until the date when the NBR announces that the tax representative ceases to act on behalf of that taxable person. A tax agent does not assume any of the taxable person's liabilities or obligations.

A taxable person who wishes to appoint a tax agent or a tax representative should do so via the NBR portal, completing the necessary details on screen and submitting the appointment request for approval.

Reverse charge. For certain transactions, the liability to account for VAT in Bahrain shifts from the supplier to the customer, under the reverse-charge mechanism. The reverse-charge mechanism must be applied when a taxable person in Bahrain receives a supply of goods or services from a nonresident person and those goods or services are subject to VAT in Bahrain.

Domestic reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism applies on certain domestic supplies. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, the domestic reverse charge has not been introduced.

A taxable person needs to apply and obtain approval from the NBR to use the domestic reverse charge, and certain conditions need to be met, including:
- The applicant must be a taxable person.
- The applicant must evidence that the total amount of its intra-GCC supplies and exports exceed 50% of the total value of its supplies.
- The applicant must provide reasonable grounds that it will be in a recurring net tax recoverable position and that this will have a material impact on its financial position.

Once the NBR approves the application, the purchaser can apply the reverse-charge mechanism on the goods and services purchased from local suppliers that are specified in the approval, provided it can recover the related input tax in full. The NBR will issue a certificate to the taxable person to evidence that the domestic reverse charge can be used, and a copy of this certificate needs to be provided to suppliers for them not to charge VAT on supplies made.

The taxable person must notify the NBR within 30 days when it ceases to meet the conditions to benefit from the domestic reverse-charge mechanism. The NBR will then revoke its approval.

This domestic reverse-charge mechanism allows taxable persons with significant supplies either subject to VAT at the rate of 0% or occurring outside the territorial scope of Bahrain VAT to mitigate the negative cash flow impact of the VAT incurred on their business expenses.

Digital economy. Supplies of telecommunications (wired and wireless) and electronic services are subject to Bahrain VAT to the extent that the use and enjoyment of such services take place in Bahrain.

Telecommunication services are defined in VAT legislation as "services relating to the transport, transmission, conversion or reception of signals used for the dissemination of words, images, audio or information by any kind of wire, radio and telephone services, visual telephone services, Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP), voice mail, call waiting and other call management services, internet access and roaming data, including related transmission services or granting the right to use the ability to convert, transmit, receive or other similar means."

Electronic services are defined in VAT legislation as "services provided over the internet or any electronic platform, and that operate in an automated manner with limited human intervention and that are impossible to complete without the use of information technology."

Some examples (not exhaustive) of electronic services include:
- The supply of a website, web page on the internet and web hosting services
- The supply of computer and software programs, as well as their maintenance and update
- The supply of digital products and visual content, including app, screensavers, e-book and digital files
- Online supply of music, films, television series, games, magazines, newspapers or other programs
- Supply of advertising space on websites and of any rights associated with such advertising
- Supply of online educational services

To determine the place of use and enjoyment of a given service, the supplier must follow the rules detailed below:
- If the customer is not a taxable person, the place of use and enjoyment is the place where the customer actually uses and enjoys the service. The place where the contract with the customer is executed and the place where the customer pays for the service are not relevant. The following rules should be used to identify the place of actual use and enjoyment of a service:
  - If services are received through a fixed location (e.g., fixed or public telephone services, Wi-Fi services), the place of that fixed location will be the place of actual use and enjoyment.
  - If services are received through a mobile network, the country corresponding to the country code of the SIM card used to receive the services will be the place of actual use and enjoyment.
  - For international roaming services, the country in which the mobile network is located that the customer uses to receive the services will be the place of actual use and enjoyment.
- If the customer is a taxable person, the place of use and enjoyment is the place of residence of the customer. The following rules should be used to identify the place of residence of the customer taxable person:
  - The customer's address as stated on a VAT invoice or other documents used for billing
  - Details of the customer's bank account
  - The internet protocol address used to receive the services
  - The country code of the SIM card used to receive the services
  - Any other information of a commercial nature

From 1 February 2021, the place of use and enjoyment rules shall be determined based on amended provisions, as follows:
- For telecommunications services that require the customer to be physically present in a specific location to use them (such as a Wi-Fi hotspot or an internet cafe), the place of use and enjoyment is that specific location. There is therefore no change in the place of supply rules for these services.
- For all other telecommunications services, the place of use and enjoyment is the place of residence of the customer. The supplier of the service should determine the place of residence of the customer by reference to the following:
  - Internet protocol address used by the customer to receive the service

– Country code of the SIM card used by the customer to receive the service
– Customer's address as stated on the VAT invoice or other documents used for billing
– Customer's bank account details
– Other information of a commercial nature

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are required to register and account for VAT in Bahrain.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT in Bahrain. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

Where goods are located outside of Bahrain, the VAT treatment for the sale of goods by a nonresident supplier to a customer in Bahrain will depend on who is importing the goods into Bahrain. If the supplier is importing the goods (i.e., importer of record), the supplier would need to pay any import VAT that is due on importation, and then make a domestic supply in Bahrain. If the customer is the importer of record, then the supply by the nonresident supplier would be outside the scope of Bahrain VAT, as the customer would be liable to pay any import VAT that is due.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Online portals and interfaces, e.g., websites, apps and electronic software, are now commonly used to facilitate the supply of goods and services.

An online platform may act as a disclosed or undisclosed agent. In some cases, the platform will be a pass-through for the supply of goods and it will obtain a commission – this arrangement is akin to the platform acting in a disclosed agent capacity. Alternatively, there may be platforms that purchase the goods from their suppliers and later sell these goods to customers – under this arrangement, the platform is acting as an undisclosed agent.

Typically, such platforms directly act as the seller of the goods or services to the final customer and a separate agreement is in place between the platform and the original supplier. Additional conditions arise when the original supplier is a nonresident. In such cases, the platform is likely to be perceived as an undisclosed agent, unless:
- The nonresident is expressly mentioned as the supplier of the goods or services sold on the platform, on the contractual agreement and on the invoice or receipt issued for the sale of the goods or services sold.
- The platform cannot charge the customer for the goods or services sold themselves and has no rights on the terms and conditions of the supply provided.

When the platform is considered as an undisclosed agent for a nonresident supplier, the following supplies will take place:
- The goods or services will be purchased from the nonresident supplier (VAT registration obligations may arise for the nonresident if the platform is not registered for VAT).
- A separate local supply by the platform to the final customer will take place for the supply of goods or services purchased online.

Registration procedures. VAT registration must be applied for electronically via the NBR website. The various stages of the process are as follows:
i. Creation of a profile on the registration portal of the NBR's website
ii. Review and approval by the NBR of the profile created, after which login details will be provided to access the created taxable person account
iii. Completion of the registration application form and upload of the required supporting documents such as the financial details, identification documents, proof of business relationship with the authorized person, proof of residence and proof of bank account ownership

iv. Confirmation from the NBR of approval of the registration application or communication from the NBR requesting further information
v. Download of VAT certificate once approved; the certificate is an official confirmation of the VAT registration and VAT account number, and it must be visibly displayed at the taxable person's premise(s)

The NBR shall process the registration application within 30 days from the date of its submission and shall notify the applicant of its decision to approve or reject the application. The length of time it takes to obtain a VAT registration number varies, although on average it tends to be between two to three weeks.

Deregistration. A taxable person must apply to the NBR for deregistration from VAT in any of the following cases:
- If the taxable person ceases to carry on an economic activity.
- If the taxable person does not make taxable supplies during a consecutive 12-month period.
- If the value of taxable supplies made during the preceding 12 months falls below BHD18,750 and the taxable person does not expect the value of its supplies or expenses to exceed BHD18,750 in the upcoming 12 months.

A resident taxable person has the option to apply for deregistration if the value of its taxable supplies during the previous 12 months falls below BHD37,500, but exceeds BHD18,750. A non-resident person may not choose to deregister on a voluntary basis. In all cases, the deregistered person must maintain books, records and invoices related to its supplies for a period of five years from the date of its deregistration for possible inspection.

Changes to VAT registration details. If there are any changes in the information that was originally provided when registering for VAT, the taxable person should notify the NBR within 30 days from the date of the change. To make the change, the taxable person should do the following:
- Log into their NBR account and access the section "Update VAT payer details."
- Update the relevant sections with the amended VAT registration information.

The NBR will review the amendments and may ask for the taxable person to provide additional information. If the information is updated, the NBR will update the VAT registration certificate and the online portal.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 10%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Export of goods to outside the GCC implementing states territory (Note: the supply of goods to other GCC implementing states shall be treated as an export, until the full integration of the Electronic Services System across all the GCC implementing states.)
- Supply of services from a resident taxable person in Bahrain to a customer residing outside the GCC implementing states and benefiting from such service outside the GCC implementing states
- Re-export of goods that were temporarily imported for repairs, renovation, modification or processing, and the service added to it

- The supply of goods to, within or under a customs duty suspension scheme
- Transportation services of passengers and goods to or from Bahrain, other services included with such transportation services, and the related means of transport
- Local transportation sector
- Oil, oil derivatives and gas sector
- The supply or import investment grade gold, silver and platinum with purity level of not less than 99% and can be traded on global bullion market, based on a certificate issued by the competent authority responsible for testing precious metals and gemstones in Bahrain
- The first supply after extraction of gold, silver and platinum for trading purposes
- Supply or import of pearls and precious gemstones after obtaining the certificate issued by the competent authority responsible for testing the pearls and gemstones to determine their nature
- Supply of preventive and basic health care services and related goods and services (The health care services must be qualifying medical services provided by qualified medical professionals or qualified medical institutions to a patient during the course of its treatment.)
- Supply or import of specific medicines and medical equipment
- Supply of educational services and related goods and services to nurseries, pre-elementary, elementary, secondary and higher education
- Supply and importation of food items listed in the GCC list of basic food items
- Construction of new buildings

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Supply of specific financial services, except in cases where the consideration payable is by the way of an explicit fees, commission or commercial discounts
- Supply of bare land and buildings (including residential and commercial) by way of sale, lease or license
- Imports of goods are exempt from VAT in Bahrain in the following circumstances:
  - Goods for diplomatic and military use that are exempt from customs duties
  - Imports of personal effects and household appliances by Bahraini citizens residing abroad and foreigners who are coming to reside in Bahrain for the first time who are exempt from customs duties
  - Imports of returned goods that are exempt from customs duties
  - Imports of personal items and gifts carried in a traveler's personal luggage
  - Goods designed for people with special needs, where the importer possesses the relevant documentation issued and certified by the competent authorities

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Bahrain.

E. Time of supply

The time at which VAT becomes due is known as the "tax due date" or "time of supply."

For the supply of goods, the general time of supply is the earliest of any of the following dates:

- The date when the transportation of goods commences (where the transportation of the goods is under the supervision of the supplier).
- The date when the goods are placed at the customer's disposal (where the goods are not transported under the supervision of the supplier).
- The date when the installation or assembly of goods is completed, for transactions involving assembly or installation.
- The date the VAT invoice is issued.
- The date that payment is received (to the extent of the amount received).

For the supply of services, the general time of supply is the earliest of any of the following dates:
- The date when the service is considered as completed.
- The date the VAT invoice is issued.
- The date that payment is received (to the extent of the amount received).

Deposits and prepayments. A deposit for a supply designed to be paid by the customer as an advance payment will be considered as an initial payment for the consideration of the supply and will create a tax due date to the extent of the amount received. It should be noted that a VAT invoice must be issued at the latest by the 15th day of the month following the month during which a VAT due date was triggered. However, deposits that are refundable and are not considered as an advance payment for the supply are outside the scope.

Continuous supplies of services. The time of supply for supplies that are continuous in nature (for both supplies of services and goods) is the earliest of any of the following dates, provided that it does not exceed a period of 12 months from the date of commencement of the supply:
- The date a VAT invoice is issued.
- The due date of payment specified in the VAT invoice.
- The date when the payment is received.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Where goods are supplied on a trial basis, the tax due date is the earlier of:
- The date the buyer accepts the goods on a definitive basis.
- The date the VAT invoice is issued.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Bahrain for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. For an operating lease, the tax due date is the earlier of:
- The due date of each installment under the contract
- The date an installment is paid

For a finance lease, the tax due date is the date of the supply of goods. Where the contract contains a purchase option exercisable at the end of the contract, VAT becomes due on the purchase value of the goods on that tax due date, i.e., the date of the supply of goods.

Imported goods. Import VAT is due at the same time that the customs duties become due, as follows:
- When the goods enter the territory of Bahrain and are imported.
- When the goods are released from a customs duty suspension arrangement, and the release and importation of those goods is in Bahrain.

Other supplies. Deemed supplies. The tax due date of a deemed supply of goods or services shall be the date when a deemed supply event is triggered, as follows:
- For goods or services provided for no consideration, the tax due date is when the goods are made available to the third party or where the services have been completed.
- For goods the taxable person retains upon deregistration, the tax due date is the effective date of deregistration.
- For the transfer of the taxable person's own goods from Bahrain to another implementing state or vice versa, the tax due date is the transfer date.
- For the change in the use of a good, the tax due date is the date that the change occurred.

Vouchers. For single-purpose vouchers, the tax due date is the date of issue of the voucher; however, if it is subsequently sold, the tax due date for that sale is the date of that subsequent sale. For multi-purpose vouchers, the tax due date is the date on which the voucher is exchanged for the goods/services.

Vending machines. The tax due date in cases where payment is made through vending machines is the date on which funds are collected from the machine.

Compulsory supply of goods and supply of goods with a right of refund. The tax due date is the date of supply of the goods.

Supply of goods deposited, and supply of goods pledged as collateral. Tax due date is the earlier of:
- The bailee or creditor selling the goods
- The bailee or creditor deducting a cash amount deposited as a bond in order to definitively acquire the goods

Temporary measures for relevant loans. In August 2020, the NBR issued a public clarification regarding the tax point rules for loans (including amounts advanced on credit cards) subject to a six-month payment holiday from March to August 2020 under circulars issued by the Central Bank of Bahrain (CBB). Under the CBB circulars, Bahraini nationals and businesses are entitled to receive a payment holiday on interest/profit and capital arising on certain loans, including credit advanced on credit card accounts (together, the "relevant loans"). Payments on these loans will restart at the end of the six-month period. Essentially, the relevant loans will be extended for up to six months without any additional charge being made to borrowers.

Ordinarily, the tax due date for supplies of credit is the earlier of:
- When the consideration (e.g., interest or profit) becomes due and payable by the borrower
- The date a VAT invoice is issued in respect of the supply
- The date of payment of the consideration (e.g., interest or profit) by the borrower

Where none of the above occurs within a 12-month period, a tax due date will be triggered at the end of that 12-month period.

The NBR took the position that, by virtue of the CBB guidelines, the terms and conditions of relevant loans have been changed so that no interest or profit is due and payable during the six-month payment holiday. Therefore, where no VAT invoice has been issued in respect of interest or profit on a relevant loan during the payment holiday and a debtor has not actually paid interest or profit on such a loan, there will be no tax due date on the relevant loan during the holiday period.

Generally, a tax due date in respect of a relevant loan will arise when interest or profit deferred under the CBB circulars ultimately becomes due and payable by the debtor. Where, however, no tax due date had otherwise arisen in respect of a relevant loan for a 12-month period ending during the holiday period, the tax due date will be the day after the end of the holiday period (i.e., 1 September 2020).

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

For a taxable person to deduct input tax incurred, the taxable person must meet all of the following conditions:
- The expenses on which VAT is charged have been incurred for the purpose of the taxable person's economic activity.
- The recovery of input tax on the expenses is not specifically disallowed by the VAT law.
- The expenses are used for making taxable supplies.
- The taxable person holds the supporting original tax invoices that comply with the requirements of the VAT law or the relevant import documentation.
- Input tax must be claimed within the time limit set by the VAT law. The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Bahrain is five years. The time limit is within five years from the end of the calendar year where that input tax became recoverable, provided all the conditions to recover that input tax are met.

In Bahrain, the rules on initial entitlement to recover do not include making a payment, but there is a requirement to adjust if payment is not made within 12 months. The entitlement to recover input tax assumes that the recipient of the supply intends to pay the consideration for the supply. Where the consideration is not paid (in part or in full) within 12 months of the date of the supply and the supplier follows the procedures to obtain bad debts relief, the recipient of the supply is required to adjust the input tax initially recovered by an amount corresponding to the unpaid amount of VAT. For further details, see the subsection Bad debts below.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered in the below cases:
- If it is paid on goods and services used for purposes other than the taxable person's economic activity.
- If it is paid on goods prohibited from trade in Bahrain.
- If the VAT is paid on supplies or imports for the purposes of making exempt supplies in Bahrain.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible
- Entertainment expenses incurred for staff and non-staff members (e.g., accommodation, hospitality, food and drinks when not provided within the course of a meeting or as normal refreshments)
- Accessing events or functions, and trips for recreational purposes (e.g., concerts, shows, social dinners, team-building events and activities when not provided as part of a business meeting)
- Goods and services used by employees free of charge and for their personal use, unless there is an obligation to provide it under any other laws in Bahrain
- Vehicles and related services (i.e., maintenance, repair, insurance) provided to employees to the extent of nonbusiness use

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to taxable business use)
- Motor vehicles
- Mobile phones

Where a motor vehicle or mobile phone has been provided to an employee that may be subject to personal use (e.g., to commute to or from work, making or receiving personal phone calls), the input tax claimable in respect of costs must be allocated between business and personal use. This apportionment should be carried out on a fair and reasonable basis, by reference to actual business/private usage and any company policies and procedures. Alternatively, a simplified method of recovery may be used, as follows:
- Motor vehicles – fixed input tax recovery rate of 40% on all costs
- Mobile phones – fixed input tax recovery rate of 60% on all costs; no input tax can be claimed in respect of mobile phone costs where the actual business usage of the phone does not exceed 50%

If a taxable person uses one of the fixed input tax recovery rates, it must be used for all assets in the relevant category. There is no requirement to notify or inform the NBR of the use of the fixed recovery method, however, the taxable person must use the fixed recovery rate for a period of two years before moving to a method based on actual use.

Partial exemption. In cases where the input tax relates to goods and services that are used for making both taxable supplies and exempt supplies, the input tax may be deducted partially and to the extent such input tax relates to making taxable supplies.

The default (standard) method of proportional deduction of input tax is calculated based on a turnover method, based on a fraction where:
- The numerator is the value of taxable supplies in Bahrain made by the taxable person in the tax period.

- The denominator is the total value of taxable supplies and exempt supplies in Bahrain made by the taxable person in the tax period.

The value of taxable supplies or exempt supplies made by the taxable person in the fraction include those supplies that do not take place in Bahrain, but that would have been either taxable or exempt supplies if they had taken place in Bahrain.

The fraction outlined above, shall not include:
- Supplies of capital assets by the taxable person
- Supplies that are incidental and do not constitute the core activity of taxable person
- Supplies taking place outside of Bahrain that are supplied from an establishment of the taxable person outside of Bahrain
- Supplies that are outside the scope of VAT

At the end of the calendar year, the taxable person should undertake an annual adjustment of the input tax that has been recovered throughout the year. Any adjustment (increase or decrease in allowable recovery) should be reported in either the last tax period of the year, or the first tax period of the subsequent year.

A taxable person should by default use the standard method to determine the amount of VAT that is deductible. Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Bahrain.

A taxable person may submit an application to use an alternative (i.e., special) proportional deduction method to the default method, in cases where that alternative method more accurately reflects the use of goods and services supplied to that taxable person. Special methods must be approved by the tax authority before use by the taxable person.

If the NBR approves a special apportionment method, it will also confirm the effective date for using it and, if relevant, the time limit and conditions associated with its use. If the alternative special method is rejected by the NBR, the taxable person must continue to apply the standard apportionment method.

The NBR may also direct a taxable person to use a special apportionment method where the standard method does not provide a fair and reasonable reflection of the taxable person's economic activity.

Capital goods. Capital assets are tangible and intangible assets that are allocated by the business for long-term use as a business instrument or as a means of investment. A change in use of capital assets is subject to an input tax adjustment, to reflect the increase/decrease in taxable use of the asset over its lifetime.

The adjustment period is five years in respect of movable tangible or intangible capital assets and 10 years in respect of immovable tangible capital assets (i.e., real estate). The first year of the adjustment period corresponds to the tax year during which the capital asset was first used.

At the time a taxable person acquires a capital asset, input tax shall initially be deducted in accordance with the intended use of the goods (i.e., taxable, exempt or residual). During the adjustment period, an adjustment to the deduction must be made following any year in which the actual use of the capital asset differs from that initial intended use. Any change in the use of a capital asset once its adjustment period has expired does not trigger the requirement to adjust the amount of input tax recovered.

At the end of each 12-month period, a taxable person shall calculate the amount of input tax potentially subject to adjustment and shall report the adjustment in either the last tax period of the year, or the first tax period of the subsequent year.

In cases where there is a permanent change in the use of a capital asset due to the sale or disposal of the capital asset by a taxable person, the taxable person must adjust the input tax deduction for the remainder of the adjustment period. The adjustment should be reported in the last tax period of the year during which the capital asset was sold, or the first tax period of the subsequent year. Taxable persons are required to keep and maintain a record of their capital assets and of the related input tax recovery position throughout the adjustment period.

Refunds. When a taxable person submits its VAT return and it is in a VAT-receivable position, it has the option to either request a refund of the receivable VAT or request the NBR to carry forward the receivable VAT to subsequent tax periods. The NBR can also offset such VAT credits against any other payable taxes or administrative penalties such as a late payment penalty.

The VAT legislation allows certain persons to obtain a refund of Bahrain VAT they incur on their expenses and imports of goods irrespective of whether they qualify as taxable persons or meet the general conditions for input tax recovery. These are called "special refund schemes." See Section G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses below for further details.

Pre-registration costs. A taxable person is entitled to deduct input tax on goods and services received or imported by it prior to its date of VAT registration in the VAT return of the first tax period provided that all the following conditions are met:
- The goods and services are received in the course of making taxable supplies.
- The taxable person is able to show an inventory of goods and capital assets that it had at the effective date of registration, and provide details as to the nature, quantity, purchase date and VAT incurred for such items.
- The goods were acquired or imported within a period of five years prior to the effective date of registration, and they are still in the taxable person's possession on the effective date of registration.
- In case of a service, it should have been received within a period of six months prior to the effective registration date.
- The goods and services are not of a type that are restricted from input tax deduction.

The taxable person should provide the NBR with the following documents:
- A list of the purchases for which input tax recovery is sought
- An inventory of the stock of goods and raw materials still at its disposal on the effective date of VAT registration (nature, quantity and value, date of purchase and amount of the input tax paid)
- Copies of the tax invoices issued by the suppliers for the goods and services acquired
- Customs declarations for imports.

Bad debts. A taxable person may claim a VAT bad debt relief where consideration relating to a taxable supply has not been received from the customer. The adjustment allows a recovery of output tax that has previously been declared by the taxable person.

To claim this relief, the following conditions must be met:
- The payment of the consideration due by the customer (in part or in full) must be outstanding for at least 12 months from the date of supply. This 12-month period does not apply where the customer has not paid due to bankruptcy.
- The supplier must be able to prove that it has taken all necessary measures to collect the debt (this may include initiating legal proceedings against the customer).
- The supplier has written off (partially or fully) the debt in its books.

The supplier should make an adjustment for the related amount of VAT in the tax return for the period during which the bad debt relief is granted. It is expected that the supplier will issue a VAT credit note. If the taxable supplier subsequently receives a payment (in part or in full) relating to this debt, it must make another adjustment of output tax. This should be reported in the tax return for the period during which the late payment was received.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Bahrain.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Refund of VAT paid by non-established businesses. Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Bahrain is recoverable. Non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Bahrain may claim a refund on the VAT paid on purchases made within Bahrain, subject to meeting certain conditions and submitting a refund application form, along with all required supporting documents, to the following email address: registration@nbr.gov.bh.

To claim this relief, the following conditions must be met:
- The refund applicant is not registered or obliged to register for VAT in Bahrain.
- The refund applicant is registered for VAT (or similar tax) in their country of residence.
- The country of residence of the refund applicant has a process to refund VAT to persons registered for VAT in Bahrain.
- The refund applicant is entitled to claim a VAT refund if the total VAT claimed is equal to BHD 200 or more.
- The VAT refund is being claimed for supplies used to conduct their business activity.
- The refund applicant has not already submitted a refund application for the same calendar year, as only one application shall be submitted per calendar year.

The following timings apply for the refund application:
- If the applicant is eligible, the application form and supporting documents should be submitted to the NBR between 1 January and 31 March in the calendar year after which VAT was paid.
- NBR may request additional information from the applicant to process the application, which must be provided within 30 days of the request.

The information to be provided on the application form, includes the following:
- Name, address, contact details, commercial identification details and business activity details/classification code of the nonresident business
- Name of the authorized person submitting the application form
- Name of relevant tax authority in the applicants' county of residence
- Period covered by the refund request
- Total amount of refund
- International bank account details

Refund of VAT to tourists. Tourists to Bahrain may claim a refund of the VAT paid on purchases made within the country. "Tourist" means any natural person (above 18 years old of age) who is not a resident in any of the Implementing States and who is not a crew member of a flight or aircraft leaving Bahrain. Therefore, under the current rules, all GCC nationals are eligible for the scheme (exception being Bahraini citizens not residing outside of Bahrain).

VAT can be reclaimed at a dedicated desk located in Bahrain International Airport.

Payments may be refunded by cash or card through an integrated electronic system facilitated by the global payment operator, Planet Payment, Inc. (Planet).

Merchants opting to register for the scheme may do so by visiting Planet's registration portal and providing the required details.

VAT refund eligibility criteria is as follows:
- The goods are purchased during the tourist's stay in Bahrain.

- The purchased goods fall under the list of goods eligible for VAT refunds and are acquired for personal use.
- The goods are purchased from one of the authorized merchants registered for the scheme.
- The tourist leaves Bahrain within two months from the date of supply of the goods.
- The minimum purchase amount is BHD100, including VAT.

Export validation requirements at the airport are as follows:
- Sales receipt with the VAT refund tag affixed to the back
- Purchased goods
- Passport
- Travel ticket

List of goods eligible for VAT refunds includes all goods subject to VAT except for:
- Fully or partly consumed goods
- Motor vehicles, boats and aircraft
- Goods that are not accompanied by the tourist at the time of leaving Bahrain

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must issue a VAT invoice when it makes a supply of goods or services, including zero-rated, exempt and deemed supplies, or when it receives full or part of the consideration prior to the date of supply. A VAT invoice should be issued for supplies made to both resident and nonresident persons. The taxable person must issue a VAT invoice no later than the 15th day of the month following the month in which the time of supply takes place.

Taxable persons supplying VAT exempt financial services, remunerated by way of interest or a margin, may choose not to issue VAT invoices for these services, provided they are able, upon request of the NBR, to electronically extract and provide the details of their VAT exempt financial services income.

Credit notes. Where, after the issuance of the VAT invoice, the VAT amount is to be adjusted (i.e., upward or downward) then a VAT debit or credit note should be issued. The VAT debit or credit note shall be treated as a VAT invoice and should be issued no later than the 15th day of the month following the month during which the adjustment was done.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Bahrain, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Bahrain. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Bahrain. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

The VAT legislation states that only taxable persons who have obtained prior approval from the NBR will be permitted to issue tax invoices electronically. However, the NBR has confirmed that taxable persons who meet the requirements set out in Articles 52 and 54 of the VAT Executive Regulations and whose computer systems are capable of accounting for VAT on their supplies will be eligible to issue tax invoices electronically without obtaining prior approval from the NBR. It is expected that all taxable persons (excluding nonresident taxable persons) will be required to issue and store electronic invoices in a compliant electronic invoicing solution, after which will be integrated with the tax authority's systems. This also applies to credit and debit notes.

At the time of preparing this chapter there are no official electronic invoicing regulations published in Bahrain. However, Bahrain plans to implement electronic invoicing, but no formal implementation timeline has been announced by the NBR. The NBR has launched a public consultation to seek proposals for the design and development of an electronic invoicing system. It is most likely that electronic invoicing will be implemented in Bahrain in 2024. It is also expected that businesses registered for VAT and any third parties issuing tax invoices on behalf of other taxable persons will need to comply with the electronic invoicing requirements, once implemented. The requirements may vary depending on factors such as nature of business, annual value of supplies, number of transactions. The NBR may adopt a phased approach with the largest businesses or businesses in certain industries being required to comply first. However, the scope or implementation timeline of the anticipated electronic invoicing system in Bahrain has not been disclosed.

Simplified VAT invoices. A simplified VAT invoice may be issued where:
- The customer is not registered for VAT purposes in Bahrain.
  Or
- If the customer is registered and the total consideration does not exceed BHD500 (inclusive of VAT).

Where a taxable person makes several supplies to the same customer over a period of time not exceeding one month, it may issue a summarized VAT invoice. The summarized VAT invoice will be treated as a valid VAT invoice provided that all the requirements of a VAT invoice are met.

A bank statement issued by a bank can be treated as a valid VAT invoice when it contains the following information:
- Bank name and address
- Bank VAT number
- Customer's name and address
- Date of issuance of the bank statement
- VAT rate applicable on each supply
- Amount of VAT in respect of each supply

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Bahrain. A VAT-registered customer may issue a VAT invoice on behalf of the taxable supplier, subject to fulfilling the below conditions:
- There is a written agreement between the parties for the issuance of VAT invoices by the customer.
- The supplier undertakes not to issue any VAT invoices in respect of the supplies made.
- A mechanism is put in place to enable the supplier to approve each VAT invoice issued by the customer on its behalf.
- The VAT invoice clearly shows that it is issued by the customer on behalf of the supplier.
- The customer retains a copy of each VAT invoice it issues on behalf of the supplier.
- The VAT invoice meets all the conditions and requirements stated in the law and the regulations relating to VAT invoices.

Proof of exports. Until the implementation of the Electronic Services System across all the GCC countries, supplies of goods shipped from Bahrain to other GCC implementing states will be treated as an export of goods, which should be subject to the zero-rate of VAT.

For an export to be subject to VAT at the rate of 0%, all the following conditions must be met:
- The goods must be shipped from Bahrain to a destination outside of Bahrain within 90 days of their date of supply (the person responsible for shipping the goods can be the supplier, the purchaser or a third party acting for the supplier or purchaser).
- The goods must not have been changed, used or sold to a third party before leaving Bahrain.
- The supplier must retain the commercial and official documents evidencing the shipment. These include documentation issued by the Customs Authority to confirm the export, commercial documentation (i.e., to identify the supplier, customer and place of delivery of the goods) and the transportation documents to evidence delivery of the goods outside of Bahrain.

Foreign currency invoices. Amounts shown on VAT invoices should be converted to Bahraini dinar (BHD) in accordance with the exchange rates approved by the Central Bank of Bahrain on the date of supply.

As part of the transitional measures, if the exchange rate approved by the Central Bank of Bahrain is not available, a reliable source of foreign exchange rates should be used. This alternative exchange rate source should be used consistently until the exchange rates approved by the Central Bank of Bahrain are available.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no specific rules currently in place for invoicing for supplies to nontaxable persons. As such, normal VAT invoicing rules apply. However, if the conditions to issue simplified invoices are met, simplified invoices can be issued for supplies to nontaxable persons (see the Simplified invoicing subsection above).

Records. In Bahrain, the records that must be held for VAT purposes include VAT invoices and accounting books relating to the imports and supply of goods and services in an organized manner.

In Bahrain, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. The only condition is that the taxable person must provide the NBR in a timely manner with such records, invoices and accounting books upon its request.

Record retention period. A taxable person must keep the relevant records for a period of five years after the end of the tax period to which they relate.

Records that relate to real estate must be kept for a period of 15 years after the end of the tax period to which they relate.

Where a taxable person is declared bankrupt or in the event of insolvency, the taxable person's legal representative must retain records of such a person for a period of not less than 12 months from the date on which those proceedings have been finalized.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Bahrain. Taxable persons must keep their documents and records in good condition and free from any damage. The documents may be kept electronically, subject to the following conditions:
- The records and documents can be easily accessed from the computer system when requested by the NBR.
- The hard copies of the documentation that support these books and records can be obtained.
- The computer system has sufficient security to ensure the documents cannot be tampered with or manipulated.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The taxable person shall submit a VAT return via the NBR's online portal no later than the last day of the month following the end of the tax period. Where there are no transactions to be reported in a given tax period, a taxable person should still submit a nil return.

The filing period frequency is as follows:
- Monthly filing – required if the taxable person's annual supplies exceed BHD3 million
- Quarterly filing – required if the taxable person's annual supplies do not exceed BHD3 million
- Annually filing – required if the taxable person's annual supplies do not exceed BHD100,000

Simplified VAT return form. The simplified VAT return can be filed by taxable persons either monthly, quarterly or annually provided that the below criteria are met:
- A taxable person that has less than BHD100,000 in total annual supplies
- A taxable person that is not part of a VAT group

Periodic payments. The taxable person shall pay the net VAT amount due to the NBR, along with the submitted VAT return, by the due date. Once the VAT return is submitted, the taxable person should receive a bill from the NBR identifying the net liability.

For resident taxable persons with local bank accounts, the payment should be made via the Fawateer system (i.e., an electronic bill presentment and payment system) or via the eGovernment National Portal. For payment using Fawateer, the following payment channels are available:
- Internet banking (e-banking)
- BenefitPay app
- Visiting the bank branch and requesting Fawateer payment.

If the taxable person wishes to make payment by using a debit or credit card, it should visit the eGovernment National Portal (www.bahrain.bh) and choose "VAT Bill Payment Service."

At the time of making a VAT payment, the taxable person needs to provide a VAT bill number, VAT account number and VAT payment amount as it appears on the NBR VAT invoice that is generated. It is the taxable person's responsibility to ensure that payments made through any available payment channels are processed and that the payment receipt is received from the NBR via email and SMS within the filing period.

For nonresident taxable persons who have no local bank account, the payment can be made from a foreign bank account. The taxable person would need to directly contact the NBR to obtain the relevant bank details (they are not published).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Bahrain for all taxable persons. All tax returns should be submitted via the NBR's online portal by the taxable person or by a person authorized to do so on behalf of the taxable person (i.e., its agent or its tax representative).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Bahrain.

Special schemes. Profit margin scheme. The taxable person, upon obtaining an approval from the NBR, may account for VAT on the profit margin in respect of the supply of specific goods and under specific conditions. This regime is not mandatory, and suppliers can elect to use their margin as the value of their supplies to compute the output tax due.

The following conditions must be met:
- The good to be sold must:
  - Be a used good suitable for further use in its current state or after repair
    Or
  - Be a work of art, artifact or other items of scientific, historical or archaeological interest
- The supplier must:
  - Have purchased the good in Bahrain from a nontaxable person (e.g., private individual), from a taxable person who himself sold the good under the profit margin scheme or from a taxable person who could not recover the VAT charged on the good
  - Not recover any input tax on the incidental expenses related to the acquisition of the good
  - Issue and retain the correct documentation

A VAT invoice must be issued for supplies under the profit margin scheme that clearly indicates that the VAT has been imposed using the profit margin scheme but must not show any VAT amount.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Bahrain.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Bahrain.

Correcting errors in previous returns. If an adjustment is required or an error is found in the details submitted in a VAT return, it is the responsibility of the taxable person to notify the NBR and correct the position. Such corrections must occur within the five-year statute of limitations as prescribed in the VAT law.

Corrections in the VAT return. Errors leading to a misreported net VAT due or refundable of less than BHD5,000 can be completed as a correction in the VAT return immediately following the original VAT period.

Self-amendments. For errors exceeding BHD5,000 net VAT due or refundable, or where an error of less than BHD 5,000 is not corrected in the VAT return immediately following the original VAT period, the taxable person is required to make a self-amendment of the VAT return in which the error was originally reported. The self-amendment is performed via the NBR portal and will substitute the original VAT return. Details as to the reason for the error need to be provided to the NBR at the time that the self-amendment is made, after which the NBR has the right to request additional information. Self-amendments may be subject to a penalty.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Bahrain.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. The NBR shall issue an administrative penalty assessment to the taxable person for failure to apply for VAT registration within 60 days from the date of expiry of the registration period, or from the date of reaching the mandatory registration threshold. The fine imposed would not exceed BHD10,000. Criminal sanctions can be imposed for a failure to apply for VAT registration beyond 60 days (see below).

Penalties for late payment and filings. The NBR may issue an assessment to the taxable person in cases where it does not submit the VAT return within the filing deadline. The NBR shall base the assessment on specific facts, documentations and records.

The statute of limitations is five years. Generally, no claim for additional tax due can be made by the NBR after five years from the end of the tax period to which the additional tax due relates or the tax was wrongfully recovered.

The NBR shall issue an administrative penalty assessment to the taxable person in case of late filings and errors made on VAT returns. Failure to submit VAT return or to pay the tax due within a period no more than 60 days from the filing or payment deadline results in administrative penalty calculated at a rate between 5% to 25% of the value of payable tax or the tax that should have been declared.

Administrative fines are issued via the NBR's online portal.

Penalties for errors. A fine not exceeding BHD5,000 shall be imposed on any taxable person who:

- Prevents or obstructs the employees, or anyone working for the NBR, from performing their duties and exercising their jurisdiction in supervising, inspecting, controlling, reviewing and requesting documents.
- Fails to notify the NBR of any changes to the data and information relating to the registration application or the VAT return within the specified deadlines.
- Refrains from displaying the tax inclusive prices of the goods and services.
- Refrains from providing information or data requested by the NBR.
- Fails to comply with the terms and procedures relating to the issuance of a VAT invoice.
- Violates any other provision of the VAT law or the regulations.

The late notification or failure to notify changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details to the tax authorities, may result in a fine of up to BHD5,000. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. The below violations shall be regarded as tax evasion:
- Failure to apply for VAT registration, exceeding 60 days from the VAT registration deadline
- Failure to submit the VAT return or paying the due tax, exceeding 60 days from the relating deadline
- Unlawful deduction of input tax as well as the deliberate unlawful claim of VAT refund
- Submission of forged or unreal documents, records or invoices to avoid the payment of tax in full or in part
- Non-issuance of VAT invoices in respect of taxable supplies or imports of goods or services that are subject to VAT
- Issuing VAT invoices in respect of nontaxable supplies, that includes a VAT amount
- Failure to maintain records, VAT invoices and accounting books and records relating to imports or supplies of goods or services in an organized manner

Committing a tax evasion offense could result in imprisonment for a period of between three to five years, in addition to a fine not less than the tax due and not more than three times of such tax due. This penalty shall be doubled if the violation is repeated within three years from the date of issuing the final decision of conviction. The fine is also doubled in case the violation is committed in the name of or for the benefit of a legal person. The offender or multiple offenders are jointly liable for the payment of the tax due.

Appeal process. Once an assessment decision or a penalty decision has been issued by the NBR, the taxable person may file an appeal against the decision to the VAT Appeals Review Committee (the Committee). An appeal should be submitted to the Committee within 30 days from the date of notification of the NBR decision. The appeal is submitted by email (appealscommittee@nbr.gov.bh).

An appeal must contain the following information:
- Taxable person information, commercial registration or trading license details and the reference number of the NBR decision
- A letter, in Arabic, containing reason(s) and the legal basis for appealing against the NBR decision. An additional copy in English may also be submitted
- The VAT period to which the appeal request relates
- Any supporting documents or information that the Committee should consider
- The email address of the appellant and/or their agent or representative, if applicable

To make an appeal, the taxable person is required to pay the following to the NBR:
- The VAT due (where the appeal relates to the decision to impose an amount of VAT)
- The administrative fine (where the appeal relates to the decision to impose an administrative fine)
- The prescribed fee of BHD50 per decision being appealed

The Committee will notify the appellant of any hearing date of the appeal, at least 10 days beforehand. The Committee will issue its recommendation on the appeal to the Minister (or its delegate), within 30 days from the date of the submission of the appeal. The Minister (or its delegate) will then have to approve, amend or cancel the recommendation within 15 days from the receipt of the recommendation. Where the appellant does not receive any communication from the NBR within the prescribed period, the appeal shall be considered rejected.

The decision of the Committee can also be appealed by submitting an appeal to the competent court in Bahrain within 60 days from the date of notification of a rejection of the original appeal.

Conciliation in VAT evasion crimes. Conciliation is a potential method to settle a VAT evasion crime between the NBR and the accused person, outside of the criminal courts. The accused person should submit a Conciliation Request Form to the NBR, by email (inspections@nbr.gov.bh).

The Conciliation Request Form contains the following information:
- Taxable person information, commercial registration or trading license details and the reference number of the NBR decision
- A statement of the reasons for the conciliation request and any supporting relevant facts and documents that support the request

A request for conciliation must be submitted before any criminal lawsuit is filed or during the hearing at the competent court. A request for conciliation cannot be submitted after the final and conclusive judgment in the criminal lawsuit has been issued.

The NBR will consider the conciliation request and would notify the accused person of either of the following decisions:
- Acceptance to consider the conciliation request, whereafter the accused person must pay the required amounts to complete the conciliation procedures within the period set by the NBR
- Rejection to consider the conciliation request, whereafter prosecution of the criminal proceedings of the VAT evasion crime will resume

The payments required to be made by the accused person as part of the conciliation process are:
- Payment of the amount of VAT evaded
- Payment of an amount equivalent to the minimum fine for the crime

Personal liability for company officers. For a natural person, imprisonment for a period of not less than three years and not exceeding five years; and a fine of not less than the amount of the VAT due but not exceeding three times this amount may apply. The fine is doubled if the offense is repeated within three years from the date of the final conviction. The offender or multiple offenders are jointly liable for the payment of the VAT due.

For a legal person, without prejudice to the criminal responsibility of a natural person, a legal person is subject to double the maximum fine applicable to a natural person if a VAT evasion crime is committed in their name, on their behalf or for their benefit.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Bahrain is five years. No claim for additional VAT can be made by the NBR after five years from the end of the VAT period to which the additional VAT relates. No claim for VAT wrongfully recovered can be made by the NBR after five years from the date the VAT was paid.

The limitation period is interrupted in the following cases:
- The taxable person receives an assessment notice from the NBR
- The taxable person receives a request for payment from the NBR
- The taxable person submits a refund request to the NBR
- VAT Appeals Review Committee dispute
- Any causes of interruption as provided for in the Civil Code.

B. Scope of the tax

The VAT and Supplementary Duty Act, 2012 (in short, the VAT and SD Act) is made effective from 1 July 2019 and the same has replaced the erstwhile VAT Act, 1991.

In Bangladesh, there is a unified system of VAT on taxable supply and taxable import of goods and services. Supply of immovable properties is also covered within the ambit of Bangladesh VAT laws. Further, the ambit of the supply of services is wide and the same covers any service other than goods, immovable property and money. It also includes any grant, assignment, termination or conferment of right, agreement to perform, refrain from performing an act or accepting a situation or tolerate an act, etc.

Supplementary Duty (SD) applicability has been defined through second schedule of VAT and SD act in various stages.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Bangladesh, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

However, under specific circumstances there is a requirement for nonresident suppliers with no fixed establishment in Bangladesh to register for VAT. See the subsection below Non-established businesses.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Bangladesh, where a person transfers an establishment as its running business in the process of an economic activity, such transfer shall be treated as a single supply and such single supply shall not be regarded as a supply made in Bangladesh.

Further, the running business establishment must be acquired with an intent to keep the economic activity going after its sale is effected and the purchaser must fully acquire all that is necessary for an uninterrupted management of the economic activity thus transferred.

No taxable person shall transfer a running business establishment without making full payment of all payable taxes and arrear dues. In addition, the respective commissioner may permit a transfer, if the purchaser submits an unconditional bank guarantee from a scheduled bank for full payment of all payable tax and arear dues.

Transactions between related parties. The value of a taxable supply made by a taxable person to an associate (related parties) shall be the fair market value of such supply, reduced by the tax fraction of that price, if:
- Such supply is made for no consideration, or for a consideration that is lower than the fair market value
- Such associate would not be entitled to a credit for all of the input tax arising out of such supply

Fair market value is determined as per VAT and Supplementary Duty (determination of fair market value) rules, 2019.

For the transfer of goods between two locations of an entity having centralized VAT registration, the interunit movement must be under the cover of Form Mushak 6.5.

C. Who is liable

VAT is imposed and payable on the taxable import and taxable supply of goods and services. The following persons are liable to pay VAT:
- For taxable import – the importer
- For any taxable supply in Bangladesh – the supplier
- For taxable supply of imported services – the recipient of such supply
- For any other cases – supplier or the recipient of supply

VAT registration is required for:
- A person whose turnover exceeds the registration threshold of BDT30 million within a 12-month period, closing at the end of the month preceding that month
- A person whose estimated turnover exceeds the registration threshold of BDT30 million within the succeeding 12-month period, beginning at the start of the preceding month

Further, VAT registration is mandatory for the following persons irrespective of turnover who:
- Supplies, manufactures or imports goods or services subject to SD in Bangladesh
- Supplies goods or services or both by participating in any tender or against any agreement or work order
- Is engaged in export-import business
- Establishes Branch Office, Liaison Office or Project Office of any foreign entity
- Is appointed as VAT agent
- Is engaged in the economic activity relating to the supply, manufacture or import of any specific goods or services or in any specified geographical areas as may be prescribed by NBR

Further, in terms of General Order 17/VAT/2019 dated 17 July 2019 ("GO 17"), mandatory VAT registration (i.e., irrespective of turnover) is required for supply of specified categories of goods and services.

"Person" means any natural person and also includes the following entities, namely:
- A company
- An association of persons
- A government entity
- A foreign government or a department designated, or any official appointed by it
- An inter-state or international organization
- A joint venture for property development or any other similar initiative
- Other business organization

Further, "association of persons" means any partnership, trust or any similar association of persons, but does not include any company or unincorporated joint venture.

Exemption from registration. The VAT and SD Act in Bangladesh does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Any person making a taxable supply and not required to be registered may apply to register for VAT voluntarily. A person registered voluntarily pays tax from the first day of the next tax period following the date of registration and must preserve the required records and accounts.

In terms of section 10 of the VAT and SD Act, a person is required to be enlisted as a turnover taxpayer in case its turnover exceeds, at the end of any quarter of a 12-month period, the enlistment threshold of BDT5 million, but does not exceed the VAT registration threshold of BDT30 million. Application for such enlistment is to be made within 30 days from end of such quarter.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Bangladesh. However, a single VAT registration (central registration) can be obtained for multiple business locations of the same legal entity. Single registration for multiple business locations are permissible when all accounts, tax deposit and VAT records are preserved centrally in automated system through software and in case of manufacturer and service provider such multiple units/business locations are engaged in economic activity relating to the supply of identical or similar goods and services respectively.

Fixed establishment. The term "fixed place" is used in Bangladesh instead of "fixed establishment." A "fixed place" means any of the following places at or through which economic activities inside or outside Bangladesh are carried on, namely:

- A place of management
- A branch, an office, a factory or a workshop
- A mine, a gas well, a quarry for extraction of stones or any other similar mineral resource
- A location of any construction or installation project

Accordingly, any supply made by a nonresident carrying on an economic activity from or through a fixed place in Bangladesh shall be treated to be made in Bangladesh. Further, any supply made by a resident shall be treated to be made in Bangladesh.

Non-established businesses. The following supplies, inter alia, made by a nonresident without having any fixed place are treated as being made within Bangladesh:

(a) Any supply made by the nonresident:
  - In relation to an immovable property and the land attached to it situates in Bangladesh
  - In relation to goods that is transferred, conferred, installed or assembled in Bangladesh

(b) Certain specific supplies made by nonresidents to a VAT unregistered person in Bangladesh, such as:
  (i) The services are physically provided in Bangladesh by the service provider staying in Bangladesh at the time of supply
  (ii) The services are directly related to land located in Bangladesh
  (iii) The services are radio or television broadcasting, or telecasting services received at an address in Bangladesh
  (iv) The services are electronic services delivered to a person located in Bangladesh at the time of supply
  (v) The supply is of a telecommunications service initiated by a person located in Bangladesh at the time of supply, other than a telecommunications supplier or a person who is a global-roaming person temporarily staying in Bangladesh

Tax representatives. For specific scenarios, nonresident businesses not having any fixed place of business in Bangladesh are required to register for VAT in Bangladesh through a local VAT agent. In such case, VAT compliance will be ensured by such local VAT agents. Whereas the nonresident is responsible for payment of all dues including taxes, fines, penalties and interest.

Further, any person (having license) may be appointed for providing advice to a taxable person or for representing it in any proceeding.

Reverse charge. In case of import of services, the recipient of the service is liable to pay VAT if (i) the recipient is a registered or registrable person and acquires such service in the process of economic activities and (ii) if such service is provided in Bangladesh in the process of an economic activity by a person registered/required to be registered and such service is taxable at a rate other than zero-rated. "Imported service" has been defined to mean service supplied from outside of Bangladesh.

In case of import of services by a VAT-registered service recipient, VAT is payable by the service recipient. There is a requirement under the VAT and SD Act by which the bank/financial institution remitting payment to the foreign service provider is required to collect VAT if the VAT-registered service recipient (i.e., the remitter) does not submit proof of payment of VAT to the government treasury on such payment.

In case of import of services by a VAT-unregistered service recipient – the bank/financial institution remitting payment to foreign service provider is required to collect VAT before such remittance.

Domestic reverse charge. In case of certain services (like payment of rent for properties), the recipient of the service is required to deposit VAT.

Digital economy. Nonresidents providing electronic services to VAT-unregistered customers in Bangladesh (i.e., business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies) are required to register and account for VAT on their supplies in Bangladesh.

Nonresidents providing electronic services to VAT-registered recipients (i.e., business-to-business (B2B) supplies) are not required to register and account for VAT in Bangladesh. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

There is no specified VAT rate for supplies of electronic services. The VAT rate depends on the particular service being supplied, and no specific clarifications have been issued by the National Board of Revenue to date.

An electronic service is defined to mean the following services, when provided or delivered on or through a telecommunications network, a local or global information network, or similar means, namely:
(a) Websites, web-hosting or remote maintenance of programs and equipment
(b) Software and the updating thereof delivered remotely
(c) Images, texts and information delivered
(d) Access to databases
(e) Self-education packages
(f) Music, films and games
(g) Political, cultural, artistic, sporting, scientific and entertainment broadcasts and telecasts and events, including telecasts

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Bangladesh.

Online marketplaces and platforms. "Selling of goods through online" means "retail sale through online" or "marketplace," where (1) "Retail sale through online" means using an electronic network for the purchase-sale of goods or services that have already been purchased from any manufacturer or services provider or trader on payment of VAT, and the said purchased goods shall be supplied by the retailer through online on payment of VAT and where the said online retailer does not have own sales center and (2) "marketplace" means digital commerce platform where one or more than one seller displays information related to its goods or service and supplied through platform, i.e., in such case marketplace operators do not purchase or sell any goods and those who do do not have their own sales center. Such services are subject to the reduced rate of VAT at the rate of 5%.

Registration procedures. Every person required to be registered under VAT is required to make an online application with requisite documents. The only method to apply for VAT registration in Bangladesh is online. If the tax officials find the application proper after primary verification, a VAT Registration Certificate is issued, which contains a Business Identification Number (BIN/VAT registration number). However, registrations for nonresidents are required to be made through a local VAT agent.

The list of documents required, inter alia, in the VAT registration application is as follows:
- Copy of ETIN certificate
- Copy of NID/passport of all authorized signatories
- Copy of NID/passport of all share holders
- Copy of latest bank statements (for all bank accounts to be reported at the time of EBIN registration)
- Copy of trade license and certificate of incorporation
- Copy of import registration certificate (IRC) (in case of import)
- Copy of export registration certificate (ERC) (in case of export)
- Copy of old BIN (11 digits) (in applicable cases)
- Copy of BIDA/BEPZA/BEZA/BSCIC registration (for industrial undertaking)

Deregistration. A registered person may apply for cancellation of VAT registration (deregistration) for the following reasons:
- Failure to commence economic activity after registration
- Closure of economic activity
- Economic activity has been declared as exempted
- Annual turnover falls below the limit of registration for two consecutive years

For the purpose of deregistration, an application is required to be made before the VAT Department. No specific time limit is prescribed for the filing of an application for cancellation of VAT registration.

Changes to VAT registration details. Every registered or enlisted person must, in respect of any change in the following areas relating to its economic activity, inform the Commissioner within such time and in such manner as may be prescribed, namely:
- A change in the name of such person or the type of business, including the name of the business or any other commercial name
- A change in the address or any other contact details of such person
- A change in the places of its economic activity
- A change in information relating to any bank account of such person
- A change in the nature of one or more of the economic activities carried on by such person
- A change in ownership or partnership
- Any other prescribed change

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 15%
- Reduced rates: 1.5%, 2%, 2.4%, 4.5%, 5%, 7.5%, 10%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption or for any other rates mentioned above.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Immovable property situated outside Bangladesh
- Goods for export
- Services directly related to land situated outside Bangladesh
- Services physically carried out on goods situated outside Bangladesh
- Services included in the customs value of an imported goods
- Supply of service outside Bangladesh

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5% rate

- Specified fruits juice (mango, pineapple, guava and tamarind)
- Pickles
- Information technology-enabled services (ITES)
- Internet service

Examples of goods and services taxable at 7.5% rate

- Packing paper
- Self-copy paper
- Non-AC hotel
- Construction firm

Examples of goods and services taxable at 10% rate

- Electric poles
- Repair and servicing
- Transport contractor (except petroleum goods)
- Printing press

The term "fixed VAT amount or specific amount of tax is fixed on unit basis and not on sale value.

Examples of goods and services taxable at fixed VAT amount or specific amount of tax

- Newsprint
- Brick chips
- SIM card or e-SIM supplier

The term "exempt" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to tax and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Prescribed basic food items for human consumption
- Supply of unprocessed agricultural, horticultural or piscicultural products, if the supplier is the producer of the goods
- Public health and medical services provided by a government entity or by private bodies
- Sale of land or transfer and its registration

Option to tax for exempt supplies. Exemption is granted in two ways via the first schedule of the VAT and SD Act or a statutory regulatory order (SRO), i.e., a government notification issued by NBR. Further, where exemption is given through SRO and the conditions of the respective SRO are not met, exemption may be withdrawn, and penalties may be imposed.

E. Time of supply

The time of supply for goods is the time when the possession of goods is conferred, or they are removed.

For services, the time of supply is the time when the services are rendered, generated, transferred or assigned.

For immovable property, the time of supply is the time when the property is delivered, created, transferred or assigned.

The VAT imposed on a taxable supply becomes payable at the time when any of the following activities first occurs:
(a) When such supply is made
(b) When a tax invoice for such supply is issued
(c) When a part or the whole of the consideration is received
(d) When any supply is used personally or given to others for use

Deposits and prepayments. A deposit given in respect of a supply of goods or services, or both, is not considered as payment made for that supply unless the supplier treats the deposit as consideration for the supply since a prepayment for a supply of goods or service triggers a tax payment.

Continuous supplies of services. VAT imposed on periodic or progressive supplies becomes payable when any of the following activities occurs first:
(a) When separate invoices are issued for each such supply
(b) When the receivable consideration against each such supply is received in part or in full
(c) When the price against the series of supplies becomes payable

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no specific time of supply rules in Bangladesh for goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Reverse-charge services. There are no specific time of supply rules in Bangladesh for reverse-charge services. However, it is prescribed that in case of import of services, the bank or any other financial institution used as a medium for making the payment must collect the VAT payable while making payment of the value of service. Thus, effectively, VAT is paid at the stage of payment to foreign suppliers of services.

Leased assets. For the supply of leased assets (i.e., lay by agreements, where consideration for any supply is paid in more than one installment), the time of supply is when each installment/rental is paid. As such separate tax invoices must be issued for each instalment/rental and the output tax is payable on such invoices. There is no separate or specific provision depending on the nature of lease.

Imported goods. VAT is levied at the time of importation for imported goods (unless otherwise exempted through first schedule or a SRO) and they are collected at the same time and in the same manner as customs duty, even if import duty is not impossible on such import.

Advance tax. Advance tax is payable at the time of import of goods, along with customs duties and taxes. The rate of advance tax is 3% for manufacturer (subject to fulfillment of certain conditions) and other than manufacturer is 5%. Advance tax payable at the stage of import is available for setoff as decreasing adjustment.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A registered person is entitled to take input tax credit of VAT charged on goods or services procured by it, provided the goods or services are procured in the course of such person's economic activity and qualify as "input." In addition, a taxable person shall be entitled to an input tax credit if related to a taxable supply where output tax is 15% or export.

"Input" has been defined to mean all sorts of raw materials, laboratory reagent, laboratory equipment, laboratory accessories, any substance used as fuel, packing materials, services, machinery and spares; but the following goods and services shall not be considered as input:

- Labor, land, structure, office equipment and fixture, construction, balancing, modernization, replacement, expansion, repair and renovation of any building or structure or establishment
- Purchase and repair of all kinds of furniture, office supply, stationary items, refrigerator and freezer, air conditioner, fan, lighting equipment and generator
- Interior design, architectural plan and drawing
- Purchase, rent or lease of vehicles
- Travel, entertainment, staff welfare, development works, and goods and services related to these
- Rent of premises, office, showroom or similar place of business establishments in whatever name it be called

Provided that in respect of the operation of a business by a "trader," services or goods imported, purchased, acquired or collected in any other means for the purpose of sale, exchange or handover in any other way shall be considered as "input."

The time limit for a taxable person to claim input tax in Bangladesh is in the month of purchase or in the subsequent four months.

For the importation of goods, bill of entry is the mandatory documents for claiming input tax credit. For the import of services, a treasury challan (government form) is the mandatory document for claiming input tax credit. For purchasing of goods locally, tax invoice (VAT-6.3) is the mandatory document for claiming input tax credit.

Availability of input tax credit is subject to conditions prescribed under the VAT and SD Act. Some of such important conditions are mentioned below:

- Claim of credit is required to be made in that respective tax period when the inputs have been collected or purchased or within four succeeding tax periods
- Input tax credit is not available for turnover tax paid under the purview of turnover tax
- Input tax credit is not available on goods or services if not recorded in a purchase register or in purchase-sales register and not declared in the input-output coefficient
- Value of supplies exceeding BDT0.1 million must be made through banking channel or mobile banking channel only, except transaction between a VAT-registered supplier and supply receiver under same ownership
- Excess input tax credit is not allowed if a new input-output coefficient is not submitted where change in total value of inputs is beyond 7.5%
- Input tax credit is not available when goods or services are supplied at a lower rate than that of the input

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax credit is not available in the following cases:

- VAT paid on input shall be taken as credit by any registered person in case of supply of zero-rated goods under export and standard-rated goods and services only. For supply of reduced rated or specific amount of tax or exempted goods or services, VAT shall not be taken as input tax credit.
- When the tax invoice does not contain all requisite information such as name, address and registration number of both the buyer and the seller
- Any of the specified condition (maintenance of registers, payment through banks, etc.) are not complied with
- Purchase of goods or services that don't qualify as input as per definition of input/some goods or services are excluded from definition of input and hence not eligible for input tax credit

Further, input tax credit is also not permissible for certain procurements specified under the law. Examples of such procurement specifically not eligible for input tax credit is given below.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Passenger vehicle or its spare parts or repairs and maintenance of such vehicle. Input tax credit may be allowed when the economic activities of such person include dealing in vehicles, renting them out or supplying transportation services
- Entertainment or costs used for the provision of entertainment. Input tax credit may be allowed when provision of entertainment relates to such person's economic activities and the entertainment is provided in the normal course of its economic activities
- Membership or right of entry in a club, association or society of a sporting, social or recreational nature
- Input tax credit up to 80% is allowed on transportation of goods

Examples of items for which input tax credit is allowed (if related to a taxable business use where output VAT is 15% or 0% under export)

- Imported goods for the purpose of resale or manufacture
- Locally purchased goods for the purpose of resale or manufacture

Partial exemption. Where a registered person pays or is liable to pay a part of the consideration for a taxable supply, any input tax credit to which the person is entitled must be calculated on the basis of the amount of the consideration such person pays or is liable to pay.

VAT paid on input shall be taken as credit by any registered person in case of supply of zero rated goods under export and standard rated goods and services only. For supply of reduced rated or specific amount of tax or exempted goods or services, VAT shall not be taken as input tax credit.

If a registered person is not entitled to input tax credit in full, its entitlement to it against its total imports and acquisitions must be calculated proportionately based on a formula (IxT/A) where I is the input tax originating from imports and acquisitions; T is the value of all supply eligible for input tax credit under section 46 in any tax period, given by any registered person registered on any tax period; and A is the value of all supply given by any registered person registered on any tax period.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Bangladesh (i.e., the above formula for input tax credit). Special methods are not allowed in Bangladesh at present, except in cases where the NBR has the power to determine special procedure for taking input tax credit against a taxable supply made by a supplier of financial services.

Capital goods. Capital goods have not been defined under the VAT regulations. Thus, input tax credit for capital goods can be claimed under the normal input tax recovery rules (as outlined above).

Refunds. If in a tax period, the sum of input tax and the receivable decreasing adjustments exceeds the sum of output tax, SD and increasing adjustments, the excess amount of money shall be carried forward and shall be deducted over the following six tax periods, after which any remaining excess money shall be refunded. Further, such refund is permissible on a monthly basis (i.e., without carry forward for six months) subject to the following:

(a) 50% or more of such person's turnover is or will be derived from zero-rated supplies
(b) 50% or more of such person's expenditure on inputs is on imports or acquisitions used in the manufacture of zero-rated supplies
(c) The nature of such person's economic activity regularly results in excess input tax credits
(d) SD paid for input at import stage is adjustable as decreasing adjustment against export of goods and no SD impossible goods are not supplied at local stage

Withholding VAT. The following entities, defined as "withholding entity," are required to deduct VAT at source (VDS), while making payment to vendors:
- A government entity
- A nongovernment organization approved by the NGO Affairs Bureau or the Directorate-General of Social Welfare
- A bank, insurance company or a similar financial institution
- Any secondary or post-secondary educational institution
- Any limited company

For procurement of goods: VDS is applicable except where (1) manufacturer issues tax invoice with 15% VAT or reduced rate of VAT or specific amount of tax and (2) any supplier issues tax invoice with 15% VAT subject to submission to the recipient of supply the certificate for regular submission of VAT return or VAT Honor Card for the last financial year, received from Integrated VAT Administration System (IVAS) or from respective Divisional Officer, as the case may be.

For procurement of services: a list of 43 services has been prescribed for mandatory VAT deduction at source as per prescribed rates.

In case of a VAT-registered entity, VDS is required to be deposited within seven days of end of relevant tax period. And in case of VAT unregistered entity, VDS is required to be deposited within 15 days of payment of consideration.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Bangladesh is not recoverable.

Bad debts. In case partial or full amount of a supply remains unpaid for a period more than 12 months, the supplier can claim adjustment of corresponding VAT with prior approval of the tax authorities, subject to reduction in corresponding input tax credit claim by the recipient of supply.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Bangladesh.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Bangladesh is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Every registered or enlisted person must issue, on or before the date when VAT becomes payable on the taxable supply, a fiscal-year-wise serially numbered tax invoice as prescribed (Mushak 6.3 or Mushak 6.9, respectively). Tax invoices must accompany goods during transportation. No input tax credit shall be admissible against a tax invoice if the information specified is not included in such invoice. An enlisted person must issue a serially numbered turnover tax invoice. The NBR, through an order in the official gazette, can declare an invoice or bill issued by a registered person in its own format to be treated as a tax invoice.

Credit notes. Credit notes mean a supplementary invoice based on which the registered person can make a decreasing adjustment of one or more than one invoice issued earlier that is related to the amendment. A debit note means a supplementary invoice based on which the registered person can make increasing adjustment of one or more than one invoice issued earlier that is related to the amendment.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Bangladesh, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in Bangladesh. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Bangladesh. Electronic invoicing applies to certain taxable persons, which are known as "categorized entities" in Bangladesh. Such categorized entities (defined as specified suppliers situated in city corporation areas or in district cities or selected suppliers by the respective Customs, Excise and VAT Commissionerate) are required to use an electronic fiscal device (EFD) or sales data controller (SDC) or point-of-sale (POS) software. Some of the specified or selected suppliers required to use EFD/SDC/POS are as follows:

- Residential hotel
- Restaurant and fast-food shop
- Advertisement agency
- Jewelry shop
- Health club and fitness center
- Coaching center
- Department store
- General store/supershop
- Cinema hall
- Courier and express mail service

Invoices are generally required to be issued in printed form. There are two types of invoices, one is commercial invoice issued by an entity against supply of any goods or services and the other is a tax invoice. VAT records can be maintained manually or through software in applicable cases. Where it is maintained through software, a tax invoice is generated electronically and might be sent through mail for internal purpose only. But to take input tax credit, a printed, signed copy is required. Further, during transportation of goods, supplied by any VAT-registered entity, an original, signed copy of the tax invoice must accompany the vehicle. In such case where VAT records are maintained through software, a tax invoice must be printed and signed to accompany the vehicle. A tax invoice is an integral part of VAT records. Electronic invoicing is only allowed in EFD, SDC or POS formats.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Bangladesh. As such, full VAT invoices are required. However, the NBR, through an order in the official gazette, can declare an invoice or bill issued by a registered person in its own format to be treated as a tax invoice.

Self-billing. Self-billing is only allowed for self-supplies, i.e., for own consumption of taxable goods.

Proof of exports. Supply of goods from inside to outside the geographical limits of Bangladesh is considered export of goods. In case of export of goods, the following would serve as proof of export:

- Copy of bill of lading or airway bill or truck receipt
- Copy of export general manifest
- Copy of proceeds realization certificate

Export of service outside Bangladesh is zero-rated. To substantiate the same, a taxable person must analyze whether its supply can be classified as export of service. There is no standard prescribed document as proof of export for services. However, agreement with the foreign service recipient, availability of the invoice and proof of receipt of foreign currency would be critical documents, which may be required depending on the scenario.

Foreign currency invoices. As per the prescribed format of tax invoice, price, value and taxes must be reported in the domestic currency, which is the Bangladeshi taka (BDT). Hence, the invoices should report the BDT values. Values in a foreign currency may also be reported in the invoice, as incorporation of any additional information on a tax invoice is permissible.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. A VAT-registered person is required to issue a full tax invoice in all cases and there is no specific provision for tax invoices for supplies to non-registered persons.

Records. Businesses must keep all accounts and records so as to facilitate assessment of their tax liability and other obligations. The format of some of the records are prescribed under the law.

In Bangladesh, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include:
- Books of accounts for purchase
- Books of accounts for sale
- Books of accounts for purchase – sale (for trading kind of activity)
- Tax invoice
- Invoice for contractual manufacturing
- Invoice for transfer of goods
- Certificate for VAT deduction at source
- Credit note and debit note

In Bangladesh, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. Where records are kept in hard copy, such records should be held at the taxable person's registered address. VAT records and accounts have to be preserved in the registered premise or premises on fiscal year basis in such a way that those are not destroyed, and they can be examined any time with ease. Further, any taxable person with a turnover of BDT50 million or more, must maintain VAT records and accounts through software, specified or approved by NBR. This is provided that the electronic information must be preserved with proper security in such a way so that those can be easily used.

Where records are kept electronically (using VAT software as prescribed by the General Order), the system must be managed with all information at the commercial premises of the taxable person. If a cloud server is used, then a database replica must be preserved in the commercial premises of the taxable person.

Record retention period. Every taxable person must maintain and keep VAT records for a period of five years. Provided that for any unfinished proceedings, VAT records are to be preserved till disposal of the proceedings.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Bangladesh. However, it is only allowed by using approved VAT software. Also the electronic information must be preserved with proper security in such a way so that those can be easily used. If the turnover of a registered person is more than BDT50 million or for taking central VAT registration, accounts and records should be maintained in the software from enlisted vendors. A person can also get their own software approved from the VAT Department for such purposes. Separate guideline is issued by NBR for such software.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Every registered or enlisted person must file the return for each tax period within a period not exceeding 15 days after the end of the tax period. If a VAT return filing due date is a public holiday, the next working day is to be considered as the due date. The NBR has powers to extend the due date of a VAT return filing to avoid fine and interest in the case of natural calamities, epidemic or pandemic. The tax period in case of a VAT-registered person is one calendar month and for a turnover taxable person is three calendar months ending on 31 March, 30 June, 30 September or 31 December. A taxable person may file an application with the Commissioner to grant permission to file an amended return after removing the clerical mistakes and omissions from such return. Further, there are provisions for submission of late return subject to submission of prayer within the specified time and following the terms and conditions mentioned in the VAT and SD Act. Otherwise, there is a provision of penalty for late filing of return.

Periodic payments. Payment of VAT must be made on a monthly basis for every taxable person. Net payable VAT is required to be made on or before submission of monthly VAT return of the respective month, i.e., 15th day of the subsequent month. However, payment of VDS is required to be made within seven days of next tax period of the respective tax period. Turnover tax must be paid by the enlisted person before filing the quarterly return for the tax period. Payment of VAT of an amount of BDT5 million or above must be made through online (Automated challan) or through electronic means (e-payment). Further, for Dhaka Division, payment of VAT liability including VDS shall be made through automated challan from 1 October 2023 onward.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Bangladesh. Presently, the VAT-registered entity has the option to file a VAT return manually, as well as electronically. Electronic VAT returns must be submitted on the online portal of the government using the credentials of company (log-in ID and password). However, a VAT-certified consultant may also submit a VAT return of any VAT-registered entity through the VAT online portal, subject to the inclusion of credentials of the VAT consultant in the VAT registration application form (Form "Mushak-2.1").

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Bangladesh.

Special schemes. Turnover tax. Small businesses with annual turnover from BDT5 million to 30 million have the option to pay a flat tax at the rate of 4% on the turnover, known as turnover tax. The turnover tax payable in a tax period by any enlisted person must be paid before filing the return for that period. VAT or turnover tax incurred on purchases by small businesses using the turnover tax scheme cannot be recovered as input tax.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Bangladesh.

Supplementary filings. Invoice-level information. Invoice-level information relating to sales and local purchase invoices, which are of the value more than BDT2 million, must be filed online in prescribed form on a monthly basis (Mushak 6.10). Further, in case, online submission of such information is not feasible, the same must be submitted to the VAT Department in paper form. Presently, the VAT-registered entity has the option to submit such information manually, as well as electronically. Electronic submission must be submitted on the online portal of the government using the credentials of company (log-in ID and password).

Audited financial statements. Any registered limited company must submit annual audited financial statements for the preceding year to the Commissioner within six tax periods of the current financial year. Provided that, the Commissioner can, based on an application made by the limited company, extend the timeline for a further six months, taking into account the logical grounds for an extension.

Declaration of input-output coefficient. A taxable person must submit an input-output coefficient using form "Mushak-4.3" prior to the manufacture or supply of goods (except exportable or exported goods by a 100% export-oriented industrial establishment). Further in case of changes of total input value of more than 7.5%, a new input-output coefficient shall be submitted to ensure input tax credit on excess increased input tax. Furthermore, a new declaration shall be submitted in case of changes in a product's price or total input/raw materials value of more than 7.5%.

Correcting errors in previous returns. The Commissioner may, on an application made by a taxable person within such time, on such terms and in such manner as may be prescribed, grant a taxable person permission to file an amended return after removing the clerical mistakes and omissions from such return. The Commissioner may determine the surrounding circumstances of which a decreasing adjustment may arise as a result of any amendment made under this section, and returns may be filed without paying monetary penalty.

Digital tax administration. There are two transactional reporting requirements in Bangladesh. See the subsection above Supplementary filing.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. The penalty for not applying for registration or enlistment within the prescribed time limit is BDT10,000. Additional penalties and interest will also apply if there is any evasion of VAT on sales before registration.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The penalty for not filing the VAT or turnover tax return within the prescribed time period is BDT5,000. For the late payment of tax, interest may be charged at a rate of 1% simple interest per month.

Penalties for errors. An error of not including the output tax in the VAT return may result in a penalty minimum half and maximum equal to the amount of output tax not included.

An error of claiming more input tax credit than entitled to in the VAT return may result in a penalty minimum half and maximum equal to the amount of input tax irregularly taken.

An error of making incorrect adjustments in the VAT return may result in a penalty minimum half and maximum equal to the amount of the incorrect adjustment.

If a person fails to pay tax due to mistake or misrepresentation or if there is any tax payable or takes tax refund or takes excess input tax credit or fails to make proper decreasing/increasing adjustment and subsequently pays the final tax with interest assessed under the relevant section of the Act, no penalty shall be imposed on him in such case.

No penalty shall be imposed, if any registered entity fails to submit monthly VAT return during its operation temporarily closed due to lack of supply and resumes its operation after a certain period of time.

For any tax payable, interest can be charged for a period of maximum 24 months.

An error of an irregularity related to a tax invoice or credit/debit notes may result in a penalty of BDT10,000.

Failure to maintain prescribed records may result in a penalty of BDT10,000.

Failure or irregularities of non-submission of the input-output coefficient within the time frame may result in a penalty of BDT10,000.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty of BDT10,000. For further details, see the subsection above Changes to VAT registration details.

Penalties for fraud. The penalty for willingly evading or attempting to evade assessment and payment of taxes is at minimum half and maximum equal to the amount of taxes evaded.

Personal liability for company officers. If an offense is committed by any company, every director, partner, chief executive, manager, secretary, official, employee, representative or VAT agent who is involved with such offense shall be deemed to have committed such offense unless they prove that such offense was committed without their knowledge or that they tried their best to prevent the commission of such offense.

For specified offenses mentioned under the VAT and SD Act, punishment with imprisonment for a term extending to one year or fine equal to amount of tax payable, or both is prescribed. In this relation, section 112 of the VAT and SD Act covers offenses and punishment relating to false or misleading statement or description. Further, it has been mentioned in the said section that whoever dishonestly makes a false or misleading statements or descriptions in any tax document submitted to any VAT officer shall be punished with imprisonment for a term that may extend to six months, or with a fine equal to the amount of tax payable, or with both.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Bangladesh is five years. The Commissioner or the appropriate officer shall not make a tax determination, including an amended tax determination, for a tax period at the expiry of five years after such tax period, unless the registered person performs any act that contravenes specified conditions of the law, such as willful negligence or commits fraud in filing returns, evading payment of tax, concealing information, etc.

For 100% export-oriented industries, the statute of limitations is three years. Accordingly, for such industries, the Commissioner cannot demand any tax arrears for any tax period more than three years before of the concerned tax period.

Further, an application for amendments in a VAT return for any clerical error or more or less tax paid due to an error in calculation or any other error except forgery, can be submitted within four years of submission of the relevant return and cannot be amended if the tax authority starts any audit or inquiry or if the error is discovered in any other manner.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of any taxable goods or taxable services by a taxable person (registrant) in Barbados
- The importation of taxable goods from outside Barbados

VAT will generally be imposed on any goods or services supplied locally (or imported) unless they are specifically exempted by the legislation. Examples of goods and services to which VAT will apply include clothing, office supplies, furniture, most foodstuffs, commercial rent, professional services, telecommunications services, etc.

However, the VAT legislation provides that certain categories of goods or services may be exempt from VAT or zero-rated (i.e., subject to VAT at 0%).

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Barbados, the "use and enjoyment" provisions (i.e., B2B/B2C) apply to services that are supplied by a nonresident who meets the VAT threshold and are utilized in Barbados by a recipient who does not make taxable supplies and as such are generally deemed to have taken place in Barbados and VAT is applicable.

The supply of a service rendered to an unregistered nonresident person that does not relate to a service pertaining to real property situated in Barbados and is not consumed, used or enjoyed in Barbados is zero-rated if the service is provided for consideration in a foreign currency. Where services pertaining to real estate situated in Barbados are supplied to a nonresident and the services are not consumed, used or enjoyed in Barbados, the Barbados registrant is required to charge VAT.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in Barbados. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Barbados, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated at the open market value of the supply. There is no difference between the supply of goods and services.

C. Who is liable

Barbados VAT law imposes a registration requirement on any person who makes taxable supplies in Barbados, other than a person whose annual turnover is less than BBD200,000 a year.

In general, any person that begins making taxable supplies in Barbados and expects to exceed the registration threshold above must apply to the VAT authorities for registration within 21 days after the date on which taxable supplies are first made.

Where a registrant enters into a contract for the provision of goods or services to the Government of Barbados, the VAT payable to the registrant in respect of those supplies is paid directly to the Barbados Revenue Authority (BRA) by the government accounting officer or authorized person that is making a payment. In such instances, the registrant will receive payment exclusive of the VAT portion and will not be required to account for the VAT on that supply when filing their VAT returns for that period.

Exemption from registration. There are no formal rules that allow an entity that should be registered for VAT to request that it not be treated as a taxable person. However, in practice, certain types of entities that are established in Barbados and hold a valid foreign currency permit are not required to register for VAT.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Entities that carry on taxable activities valued below the VAT registration threshold (i.e., BBD200,000 annually), may apply to be voluntarily registered. However, such voluntary registration is at the discretion of the Revenue Commissioner.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Barbados.

Fixed establishment. In Barbados, there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. A nonresident business that carries on a taxable activity would be required to register for VAT purposes if it meets the registration threshold as outlined below.

Non-established businesses. Non-established businesses, which in Barbados are referred to as nonresident, unregistered businesses; are generally not liable to VAT, unless they are making taxable supplies in Barbados in excess of the registration threshold. However, see the Digital economy subsection below on special rules for non-established businesses making supplies online to consumers in Barbados.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives (known as "tax agents" in Barbados) are required in Barbados where any taxable person is not resident in Barbados or is absent from Barbados at a time that would prevent the fulfillment of the person's VAT obligations. Registrants may also appoint tax agents to fulfill their VAT filing obligations. Refer to Section J. Personal liability for company officers.

Reverse charge. The reverse charge does not apply in Barbados. Where a non-established business makes supplies in Barbados, it may be required to become VAT registered in Barbados and charge VAT on its supplies (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). However, if the non-established business is not registered or liable to be registered and makes a supply (of goods that are located in Barbados or services that are physically performed or utilized in Barbados) to a VAT registrant in Barbados (a business-to-business [B2B] supply) that is acquiring the goods or services exclusively for the purposes of making taxable supplies, the supply is deemed to have taken place outside Barbados (unless the supplier and the recipient agree that the supply is to be regarded as having taken place in Barbados) and VAT is not charged or accounted for on the supply.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Barbados.

Digital economy. Barbados enacted legislation to facilitate the collection of VAT on goods and services purchased online from a vendor outside Barbados, where the goods and services are for consumption in Barbados. The legislation provides that VAT should be applicable on taxable supplies sold online by a registrant. For supplies received by Barbados individuals (i.e., nontaxable persons), such supplies are subject to VAT in Barbados when rendered by foreign vendors where the goods or services are consumed in Barbados (i.e., for business-to-consumer [B2C] supplies).

The definition of "online" includes the purchase of goods or services by electronic means on the internet using payment facilities provided by a financial institution or a payment processor or using any similar means of payment. The party responsible for collecting and paying the VAT is the supplier of the goods or services.

Nonresidents that provide electronically supplied services (for both B2B and B2C supplies) are required to register and account for VAT on such supplies made in Barbados. This is a modified VAT registration meant only to facilitate the payment of the VAT collected on these supplies. The normal input/output offset rules do not apply. Note that the VAT registration threshold does not apply. The Barbados tax authorities have indicated that further guidance in respect to the operation of this online regime is being prepared.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Barbados.

Online marketplaces and platforms. There are no specific rules in Barbados relating to online marketplaces and platforms other than the online services provision (see the Digital economy subsection above).

Registration procedures. Taxable persons must register through the Revenue Authority's new Tax Administration Management Information System (TAMIS). The registration must be made online (https://tamis.bra.gov.bb).

Individual taxable persons are required to provide their Barbados identification card upon reregistering under the new system. Individual taxable persons and partnerships registering for the first time need to provide the application for the business name and certificate of registration. Companies registering for the first time need to appoint an authorized person to conduct the registration and provide copies of the authorized person's photo identification such as the photo page of the individual's passport and the company's incorporation documents, which would include the following: articles of incorporation, notice of address, notice of directors, request for name search and certificate of incorporation. Where a company was previously registered under the legacy system and is re-registering under the new TAMIS system, it will also need to provide the TIN from the previous system. Registrations can typically be approved within five business days.

Deregistration. An application to cancel registration can be made in writing when the VAT registrant is no longer required to be registered, such as when a company ceases to carry on a taxable activity or ceases to make taxable supplies.

Changes to VAT registration details. Tax registrants must notify the Comptroller in writing when there is a change in the registrant's status within 21 days after the change.

Changes to VAT registration details include transfer of the ownership of any of the registrant's taxable activities; change in the name, address or nature of any of the registrant's taxable activities; change in the address from which, or the business name in which, any of the registrant's taxable activities are carried on; the date on which it ceased to carry on any of its taxable activities; and in the case of an unincorporated body, any change in the officers of the unincorporated body.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supply" refers to a supply of goods and services that is liable to VAT, including a supply taxed at the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 17.5%
- Reduced rate: 10%
- Increased rate: 22%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate, increased rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported goods and services
- A small basket of staple food items
- Prescribed drugs
- Veterinary services
- International cruises
- Imported inputs for manufacturing

The new reduced rate of 10% took effect from 1 January 2020. It was previously 7.5%. This rate was increased by a policy note issued by the Revenue Authority. At the time of preparing this chapter, the increase has not been legislated but is being applied in practice.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 10%

- Accommodation in guest houses, hotels and inns or similar places, including a dwelling house normally let or rented for use as a vacation or holiday home, and to direct tourism services.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 22%

- Mobile services of voice, data and text messaging

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Financial services
- Medical services
- Residential property sales
- Water and sewerage services
- Public postal services
- Transportation services

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Barbados.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply." In general, the time of supply for goods and services supplied by a taxable person is the earliest of the following events:

- The date of issuance of the invoice by the supplier
- The date on which payment is received for the supply
- The date on which the goods are made available to the recipient or the services are performed

A taxable person must account for VAT in the VAT period in which the time of supply occurs, regardless of whether payment is received.

Deposits and prepayments. Deposits are generally not regarded as consideration for a supply because they are given merely as security for the performance of an act. However, deposits under a construction contract are taxable at the time of payment.

Continuous supplies of services. Where goods are supplied under an agreement resulting in a change of ownership (e.g., a hire purchase agreement), the time of supply is deemed to be when the goods are made available to the recipient.

However, services that are provided against a periodic payment are deemed to be supplied at the earliest of the following events:

- When the particular periodic payment is made.
- When the particular periodic payment becomes due.

  Or
- When an invoice for the particular periodic payment is issued.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Where goods are provided on a sale or return basis, the time of supply is considered to be when the goods are sold. Goods returned to a supplier under such an arrangement are not considered to have been supplied and no VAT implications should arise.

Reverse-charge services. There are no provisions in the Barbados VAT Act relating to reverse charge. As such, there are no specific time-of-supply rules.

Leased assets. The lease of assets is considered to be a supply of services and, as such, would be subject to the time of supply rules mentioned above in respect of continuous supplies.

Imported goods. VAT is payable on the importation of taxable supplies. It is levied on the sum of the value of the goods imported and the amount of duties, fees or other charges that are payable upon the entry of the goods into Barbados.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

VAT paid by a registrant is recoverable as input tax if it relates to goods and services acquired solely for the purposes of making taxable supplies. Input tax is recovered by offsetting it against output tax (i.e., tax charged on supplies made) in the VAT return for each VAT period. If input tax exceeds output tax in a period, the excess is due to the registrant as a refund.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Barbados is five years.

Goods or services are deemed to be for the purpose of making taxable supplies if the supplier acquired, imported or produced the goods or services for either of the following purposes:
- Their supply or resupply as a taxable supply
- Their consumption or use (whether directly or indirectly or wholly or partly) in producing goods or services for supply as a taxable supply

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- A personal vehicle
- A portion of the input tax for company vehicles

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Business entertainment
- Travel expenses
- Utilities
- Inventory purchases
- Occupancy costs

Partial exemption. The Barbados VAT law states that if all supplies made by a taxable person during a tax period are taxable supplies, the input tax incurred in the period is deductible in full. However, if some, but not all, of the supplies made by the person during the tax period are taxable supplies, a partial recovery calculation is required. This measure applies to persons making both taxable and exempt supplies. Input tax is recoverable on the following basis:
- If all the input tax for the period is directly related to the making of taxable supplies, the VAT is recoverable in full.
- If none of the input tax for the period is directly related to the making of taxable supplies, no VAT is recoverable.
- If part or all the input tax for the period is related to the making of both taxable and exempt supplies, an apportionment calculation must be performed. The amount of recoverable input tax is calculated based on the ratio of the value of taxable supplies made during the period compared to the total value of supplies (taxable plus exempt) made during the period.
- If a taxable person makes no taxable supplies during the tax period, the VAT authorities may limit the amount recoverable to the amount that they consider to be "fair and reasonable." However, this provision is generally not invoked.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Barbados. Special methods are not allowed in Barbados.

Capital goods. Input tax incurred on capital goods (e.g., equipment) acquired for the making of taxable supplies is deductible. However, there are specific restrictions for certain capital assets (e.g., motor vehicles).

Input tax incurred on capital goods or assets that are acquired for the making of both taxable and exempt supplies must be allocated to the respective taxable and exempt supplies on a reasonable basis. Input tax allocated to exempt supplies is not deductible.

Refunds. A refund arises when the amount of input tax recoverable in a taxable period exceeds the amount of output tax payable. The VAT Act provides that registrants may offset unpaid VAT refunds owed for a previous period against output tax due for the current period. Under prior law, refunds were generally paid by check after the submission of the VAT return. If the refund claim was submitted within the specified time (21 days after the end of the tax period) and the refund amount remained unpaid after six months, the tax authorities are required to pay interest to the taxable person on the outstanding balance at a prescribed rate of 1% per month.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Barbados is not recoverable.

Bad debts. A taxable person may claim an output tax deduction for the tax they have paid on credit sales where they have written off the account receivable as a bad debt. This relief is, however, subject to the following conditions:
- The supply was made to an unrelated party.
- The debt was unpaid for at least 12 months.
- A return was filed for the period in which the supply was made and the output tax paid.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Barbados.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Barbados is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must provide a tax invoice for all taxable supplies made to registrants. A tax invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax recovery.

Credit notes. A credit note or debit note must be issued if the quantity or consideration shown on a tax invoice is altered. Credit and debit notes must contain broadly the same information as a tax invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Barbados, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in Barbados. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Barbados. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Electronic invoicing is mandatory for e-commerce transactions between purchasers and registrants (covering all supplies, i.e., B2B, B2C, B2G).

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is allowed in Barbados, for transactions under BBD20.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Barbados.

Proof of exports. VAT is charged at a rate of 0% on supplies of exported goods. However, to qualify as zero-rated, exports must be supported by evidence that confirms the goods have left Barbados.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices may be issued in a foreign currency from the domestic one, the Barbadian dollar (BBD). The currency in which the invoice is issued should be clearly indicated on the invoice.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Where a registrant makes a supply to a consumer (i.e., a non-registrant), no VAT invoice is required unless requested by the purchaser.

Records. In Barbados, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include:
- The originals of all tax invoices received, copies of tax invoices issued, pro forma invoices and certificates of waiver
- Purchase invoices, including bill and receipts to support expenditures made and a record listing and summarizing purchase transactions, which may be in the form of a purchase ledger or an analyzed purchases book for each taxable period
- Sales invoices, receipts issued under Section 9(1) and a record listing and summarizing sales transactions or BBD20 or more for each taxable period
- Stock records in respect of opening and closing stock for each taxable period and the movement of stock for the taxable period
- Records of salaries and wages and a summary of supplies made by the person to its employees and officers
- Records of supplies taken by the registered person for personal use or given free of charge or for nominal consideration to other persons
- Documents setting out all transactions with connected persons other than employees and officers
- Documents relating to the goods imported or exported by a registrant
- Records listing and summarizing cash receipts and cash payments in respect of daily transactions
- Records prepared in summary form and known as a "summary statement" containing the information as set out in the First Schedule to the Regulations
- Any other documents or records related to the business, such as booking records, diaries, correspondence, computer printouts audit reports, etc., as the Comptroller may require

In Barbados, VAT books and records can be held outside the country. However, if held outside the country, records must also be held in Barbados. All records must also be expressed in the English language and the currency of Barbados, in such a form and containing such information as will enable taxes to be determined.

Record retention period. Records should be retained until the expiration of seven years after the end of the year to which the records and books of account relate or for such other period as may be prescribed.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Barbados. Records and books of account can be kept in an electronic format, as long as they are kept in a retrievable format that is easily accessible by the Comptroller.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT reporting periods are generally bimonthly, i.e., every two months. However, the tax authorities may require longer or shorter tax periods if they consider it appropriate. Returns must be filed by the 21st day of the month following the end of the tax period. Returns must be filed online using the BRA's TAMIS system. Additionally, requests may be made to offset refunds from prior years against current VAT liability. However, it is difficult to determine the timeframe in which this will be actioned.

Periodic payments. Any tax due for the period must be remitted with the return to the Barbados Revenue Authority (BRA), by the 21st day of the month following the end of the tax period. VAT due may be paid electronically through a wire transfer or using the Government's platform (i.e., eZPay) or by cash, check or credit card at BRA locations.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Barbados for all taxable persons. VAT returns must be filed electronically, online with the tax authority (https://tamis.bra.gov.bb).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Barbados.

Special schemes. Foreign Currency Permit (FCP). Entities that earn 100% of their income in foreign currency are eligible for a FCP, which allows for certain benefits. Services supplied by an FCP to a nonresident person are exempt from VAT, whereas goods imported by an entity with a FCP would be zero-rated.

Secondhand goods. A supplier of secondhand goods may apply to be registered under the secondhand goods scheme, whereby output tax in respect of a sale of a secondhand good under the scheme is determined by applying the tax fraction (i.e., 17.5/117.5) to the difference between the cost price of the item and the selling price of the item (i.e., markup). No output tax will be due if the item is sold for the same price or a lesser price than what it costs.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Barbados.

Supplementary filings. There are no supplementary filings required in Barbados.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A person who has made an error or omission from prior periodic filings can make amendments to returns online via the TAMIS system. Registrants should ensure to upload supporting information with respect to the changes in the amended return.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Barbados.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A person who fails to register is compulsorily registered and may be subject to a penalty not exceeding BBD1,000.

Penalties for late payment and filing. Penalties include a late payment penalty of 10% of any output tax due; a penalty of BBD100 for the late submission of a VAT return; and interest at the rate of 1% of any outstanding tax and penalty.

Penalties for errors. There are no specific penalties in Barbados for errors. However, in addition, several other penalties may apply, including the following:
- Failure to display a certificate of registration: BBD1,000
- Failure to notify the tax authorities of changes relating to the registration: BBD1,000

The late notification or failure to notify changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details to the tax authorities within the 21-day period would be liable to a penalty not exceeding BBD1,000 as the Comptroller determines. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Criminal penalties may also apply in certain circumstances, such as in cases of fraudulent conduct, including the following:
- False statements or omissions in a record, book of account, a return or tax invoice: BBD250
- Issuing false invoices: BBD5,000 or six months imprisonment
- Failure to display VAT prices on goods or services: BBD5,000 and a further penalty of BBD2,500 for each day or part thereof that the breach continues or three times the value of goods or services, whichever is the greater Personal liability for company officers. Penalties may apply to directors, where a corporation fails to pay an amount of tax required. The directors of the corporation at the time the corporation was required to pay the amount are jointly and severally liable, together with the corporation, to pay that amount and any interest and penalties relating to that outstanding amount.

Penalties and interest would include a late payment penalty of 10% of any output tax due; a penalty of BBD100 for the late submission of a VAT return; and interest at the rate of 1% of any outstanding tax and penalty.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Barbados is five years. The tax authority may not issue an assessment of output tax and/or penalties more than five years after the later of:

- The day on which a person filed a return for a period.
  Or
- The day on or before which the person was required to file a return for the period.

However, this limitation period does not apply in specified circumstances, including where there has been neglect, carelessness, willful default or fraud.

There is no time limit for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of goods or services made in Belgium by a taxable person
- The intra-Community acquisition of goods in Belgium for goods coming from another Member State by a taxable person (see the chapter on the EU)
- The importation of goods from outside the EU, regardless of the status of the importer

Special rules apply to intra-Community transactions involving new means of transport (see the chapter on the EU) and to the supply of new buildings and the surrounding building land.

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the chapter on the EU. For documentary requirements see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

Quick Fixes were implemented in Belgium through the law dd. 3 November 2019, implementing EU Directive 2019/475 and EU Directive 2018/1910, which was published on 13 November 2019 and entered into force on 1 January 2020. The Belgian Government published their comments in Circular letter 2020/C/50 of 2 April 2020.

The Belgian Government has taken a pragmatic approach on various points and has provided for a number of lighter/more flexible rules in its guidelines, such as for example:
- Proof of intra-Community transport: the Belgian VAT legislation foresees that it will be presumed that the goods have been dispatched or transported from Belgium to another EU Member State, if the supplier is in the possession of a so-called "destination document" relating to the dispatched goods, as well as a transport invoice when the transport is performed on behalf of the supplier. The "destination document" is always to be considered as one of the elements of the supporting proof of the cross-border transport and never as a "stand-alone" to be sufficient.
- Call-off stock simplification: the Belgian VAT authorities accept that the consignor is not deemed to have performed an intra-Community acquisition of goods in Belgium, in the event of loss, destruction or theft of goods (even in their totality), if the following cumulative conditions are fulfilled:
  - There is an entry in the register of the consignor
  - The loss, destruction or theft of the goods can be proven to the satisfaction of the Belgian VAT authorities.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where the service is effectively used/enjoyed. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In Belgium, the following services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions:
(1) Transport and connected services carried out outside the EU and invoiced to a Belgian taxable person are considered as falling outside the scope of Belgian VAT, based on the "use and enjoyment" rule.
(2) Transport and connected services carried out in Belgium but invoiced to a taxable person established outside the EU are subject to Belgian VAT, based on the "use and enjoyment" rule.

Transfer of a going concern. Based on the transfer of a going concern (TOGC) provision foreseen in article 19 of the EU VAT Directive 2006/112/EC (transposed in the Belgian VAT code via articles 11 and 18 § 3), the TOGC of a universality or independent branch of activity, is considered as a transaction outside the scope of Belgian VAT, provided that the following five conditions are simultaneously fulfilled:
- The transfer must relate to a universality of goods or a separate (independent) operating division, which includes tangible assets and, as the case may be, intangibles assets.
- The assets transferred must allow the transferee to operate the business independently. The Belgian VAT authorities have confirmed that the intention to operate the business independently should be examined at the level of the transferee.
- The transferee should have the intention to use the assets transferred for onward business activities, instead of selling them upon the transfer or ceasing the activity.
- The transferor must be a taxable person.
- The transferee must be a taxable person or become one due to the transfer, who would be entitled to deduct (at least a part of) the input tax.

Transactions between related parties. The taxable base amount of a supply of goods or services between related parties consists of the normal value as defined in article 32 of the Belgian VAT Code to the extent that:
- The normal value is higher than the consideration agreed upon between parties
- The acquirer of the goods/services does not have a full right to deduct input tax

Special attention is required for supplies of immovable rent where the option to tax was levied.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any business entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services or intra-Community acquisitions or distance sales in Belgium.

No VAT registration threshold applies in Belgium. A taxable person that begins activities in Belgium must notify the Belgian VAT authorities by means of form 604A.

Special rules apply to foreign or "non-established businesses."

Exemption from registration. Taxable persons established in Belgium are not liable to register for VAT if they only perform exempted activities not giving rise to a right to deduct input tax. Taxable persons not established in Belgium and liable to register for VAT on the basis of the Belgian VAT code can be exempted from registration, in some specific cases:

- In some cases, the exemption from VAT registration is mandatory. For example, exemption is based:
  - Either on the nature of the transactions (performance of mere export supplies out of Belgium, some imports of goods; purchase of goods subject to the VAT-only warehouse regime; etc.)
  - Or on the existence of a more favorable regime
  - Or on the occasional nature of the operations carried out
- In some other situations, the exemption from VAT registration is not mandatory (e.g., when a taxable person not established in Belgium (but in another EU Member State) performs output supplies subject to the general domestic reverse charge and supports deductible input tax for at least EUR10,000 per year). In these situations, a taxable person not established in Belgium (but in another EU Member State) can still apply for a VAT registration in Belgium, if so desired. This tolerance is currently not foreseen for taxable persons duly established outside the EU.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. In the following cases, a taxable person that is not established in Belgium can request a voluntary registration:

- A taxable person (established in the EU or outside EU) performs works in Belgium related to immovable property for which the Belgian VAT is due by the recipient of the service, in accordance with the general reverse-charge rule provided by Article 51, §2,5° of the Belgian VAT code.
- A taxable person (established in the EU) makes supplies of goods or services (other than immovable works) on a regular basis in Belgium for which the VAT is due by the recipient of the supply in accordance with the general reverse charge provided by Article 51, §2,5° of the Belgian VAT code. This voluntary registration can only be applied when the amount of deductible Belgian input tax reaches or exceeds EUR10,000 a year.

Group registration. VAT grouping is permitted under the Belgian VAT law. VAT grouping is an option for Belgian businesses and Belgian branch offices of foreign businesses. The option to create a VAT group is subject to various conditions. Businesses must be financially, economically and organizationally linked with each other in order to form a VAT group. Subsidiaries in which the parent company owns more than 50% of their share capital must normally be included in the VAT group if the parent is a member. The VAT group is treated as one single VAT registration.

Specific rules exist regarding VAT adjustments when creating a VAT group. Transactions within a VAT group are disregarded for VAT purposes. However, in certain cases, these intragroup transactions may still be subject to VAT.

The minimum time period required for the duration of VAT group is three years.

All members of a VAT group in Belgium are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties.

Holding companies. In Belgium, a pure holding company cannot be a member of a VAT group. Only taxable persons with a full, limited or no right of deduction can opt to create a VAT group. Passive holding companies that are not VAT registered are therefore excluded.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f)) has been implemented in Belgium but limited since 1 January 2022 to the social sector (health care, cultural sector, etc.). This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, providing certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Belgian VAT law).

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in Belgium, in the following circumstances:

- The taxable person has a factory, branch, agency, storage facility, office, etc., in Belgium – excluding construction/work sites.

- The establishment is characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources.
- The human and technical resources enable the establishment to supply goods or services on a regular basis as described in the Belgian VAT code.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a seat of business or a fixed establishment in Belgium. A non-established business that makes supplies of goods or services in Belgium must register for VAT purposes in one or more of the following situations:

- Taxable transactions in Belgium for which it is liable to pay the Belgian VAT due
- Intra-Community acquisitions of goods in Belgium
- Intra-Community supplies of goods from Belgium
- Imports of goods, followed by the supply of the same goods
- Certain transactions in connection with a VAT warehouse
- Distance sales in excess of the threshold

Tax representatives. Businesses that are established in the EU may register for VAT without appointing a specific VAT representative. However, EU businesses may opt to appoint a tax representative.

Businesses that are established outside the EU must appoint a resident tax representative to register for Belgian VAT. However, this is not required with those countries where a mutual assistance agreement has been concluded, such as the case for Norway and temporarily also for the UK. At the time of preparing this chapter, the agreement with the UK is currently awaiting a final decision. For further details, see the Registration procedures below.

The tax representative is jointly and severally liable for VAT debts with the business that it represents.

All non-established businesses must register with:

FOD Financiën|Fiscaliteit|KMO|Centrum Specifieke Materies|Team beheer 1 (BTW) (in Dutch)
Kruidtuinlaan 50 Bus 3410
1000 Brussel
foreigners.team1@minfin.fed.be

SPF Finances|Fiscalité|PME|Centre des Matières Spécifiques|Team gestion 1 (TVA) (in French)
Bd du Jardin Botanique 50 bte 3410
1000 Bruxelles

Note that the tax authorities also accept e-filing of applications for a Belgian VAT ID number, and for established companies this is mandatory.

If a complete file has been submitted and no additional questions are raised, it takes approximately four to six weeks for a Belgian VAT ID number to be granted to a foreign business.

In Belgium there is also the concept of "Global VAT Representation" by which the global representative takes all VAT compliance obligations of the non-established business. This representation is limited in scope (depending on type of activities carried out by the non-established business).

Reverse charge. Under the reverse-charge mechanism, the Belgian recipient of goods or services receiving the supplies must account for the Belgian VAT due instead of the non-established supplier. If this reverse charge applies to all the transactions of a non-established business in Belgium, it is in principle not possible for the latter to be VAT registered in Belgium, except in specific cases (for example, an import followed by a local sale subject to the reverse-charge mechanism). In certain other situations and provided that the conditions are fulfilled, a non-established business can still opt to register for Belgian VAT purposes.

Domestic reverse charge. In Belgium, there are two types of reverse charge: (i) a general domestic reverse charge and (ii) a specific domestic reverse charge.

The general domestic reverse charge generally applies to supplies (goods and services) taking place in Belgium made by non-established businesses to the following:
- Taxable persons established in Belgium that file periodic VAT returns in Belgium (merely holding a Belgian VAT ID number as resident company is hence not sufficient)
- Non-established businesses that are registered for VAT and have appointed an individual fiscal representative in Belgium

The specific domestic reverse charge applies to supplies of immovable works by a taxable person established in Belgium in the benefit of taxable persons that are VAT registered and file periodic VAT returns in Belgium.

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021 These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B, Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:
- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000 with effect from 1 July 2021). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, an e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In Belgium there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:
- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

In Belgium, a taxable person can register for the OSS scheme via the electronic platform Intervat.

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance sales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT. For more details about the IOSS, see the chapter on the EU.

In Belgium, a taxable person can register to the IOSS scheme via the electronic platform Intervat.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

In Belgian, the rules provide for two scenarios:
- Standard regime. The supplier is liable to pay the Belgian VAT due on the import in Belgium. The subsequent local supply to the Belgian customer is also subject to VAT
  Or
- Specific regime for payment of VAT due on import. In this optional regime, the customer is legally liable to pay the Belgian VAT due on the import. The sale performed by the supplier is regarded as a distance sale located outside the EU (place of supply = place of departure of the transport) and not subject to Belgian VAT.

Postal services and couriers scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

In Belgium there are no additional specific local rules that apply. For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the chapter on the EU.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules, effective 1 July 2021, taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:
- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). Any intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State, as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

With effect from 1 January 2024, a joint and several liability has been introduced in the hands of facilitating platforms for the payment of VAT due on specific supplies of goods taking place in Belgium. This specifically applies where the underlying supplier is not acting in good faith or where it has committed a fault or negligence in relation to those supplies of goods.

In Belgium there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. In Belgium, a voucher (i.e., an instrument where there is an obligation for a supplier to accept it as full or partial consideration for a supply of goods or services) may be either a single-purpose voucher (SPV) or a multi-purpose voucher (MPV). A voucher will be considered as a SPV if, at the time of issue, the place of supply of the goods or services to which the voucher relates and the VAT due on those goods or service are known. If not known, the voucher is an MPV.

From a VAT perspective, a SPV is treated as follows:
- Transfer of the voucher is considered as a supply of the underlying goods/services.
- VAT becomes due at the moment of the sale (VAT applies at each transfer of the voucher).
- The consideration paid at each transfer is VAT inclusive.
- The distributor can deduct any VAT charged to it in line with the normal rules.

From a VAT perspective, a MPV is characterized by the following elements:
- Transfer of the voucher is not considered as a supply of the underlying goods/services.
- VAT becomes due at the moment of redemption (no VAT applicable for transfers of the voucher prior to redemption).
- VAT is calculated based on price paid by the consumer or, if it is not known, the face value.
- Distributors are considered to supply distribution/promotion services.

Registration procedures. A foreign EU business without any establishment in Belgium can choose to register directly with the Belgian VAT authorities, i.e., without having to appoint a fiscal representative. To do so, they must file the following documents:
- Form 604A, Declaration of Commencement of Activity (in Dutch, Aangifte van aanvang van een werkzaamheid; in French, Déclaration de commencement d'activité). This form, which gives more details about the taxable activities that require a Belgian VAT ID number, must be filed within one month after the start of taxable activities in Belgium.
- Form RBI, Direct VAT registration (in Dutch, Rechtstreekse BTW-identificatie; in French, Identification à la TVA Directe), which requires general information about the foreign EU business.

These documents must be dated and signed by someone who is entitled to legally bind the EU business (and include proof that this person is holding these legal rights), and the originals should be filed either in Dutch, in French or in German. Furthermore, the VAT application file needs to be completed with the following documents:
- A copy of the company's articles of association and any modifications (if available)
- A copy of the registration in the trade register of the company in the Member State of establishment

- A copy of an order form, contracts (or correspondence) or invoices proving the taxable activities in Belgium and the liability to register for Belgian VAT purposes
- An official bank statement proving that the communicated bank account belongs to the company

Note that the tax authorities also accept e-filing of applications for a Belgian VAT ID number, and for established companies this is mandatory.

However, a non-EU business liable to register for Belgian VAT purposes, without any establishment in Belgium, is still required to appoint a fiscal representative in Belgium (except in two situations: for companies established in a country with which a mutual assistance agreement has been concluded for the recovery of claims relating to taxes, duties and other measures (e.g., Norway); and for companies established in the UK for which a direct VAT registration remains possible until the final position of the EU Commission).

To do so, they must file the following documents:
- Form 604A, Declaration of Commencement of Activity (in Dutch, Aangifte van aanvang van een werkzaamheid; in French, Déclaration de commencement d'activité), described above
- Form 800N, Request for recognition as fiscal representative (in Dutch, Voorstel tot erkenning van een aansprakelijke vertegenwoordiger; in French, Proposition d'agrément d'un représentant responsable pour un assujetti non établi en Belgique); completed by the foreign company to request a Belgian company to act as its fiscal representative toward the Belgian VAT authorities
- Form AVI, Fiscal representation VAT identification (in Dutch, Aansprakelijke vertegenwoordiging BTW-identificatie; in French, Représentation Fiscal Identification à la TVA), which provides more information about the business and the appointed fiscal representative

These documents must be dated and signed by someone who is entitled to legally bind the non-EU business (and include proof that this person is holding these legal rights), and the originals should be filed either in Dutch, in French or in German depending on where the fiscal representative is duly established (Dutch-, French- or German-speaking Community). Furthermore, the VAT application file needs to be completed with the following documents:
- Form 801, Acceptance of the Belgian VAT representative (in Dutch, Verbintenis van een aansprakelijke vertegenwoordiger van een niet in België gevestigde belastingplichtige; in French, Engagement d'un représentant responsable d'un assujetti non établi en Belgique) in which the fiscal representative agrees to act for the foreign company regarding VAT issues. The form must be completed and signed in the original by a person who is empowered to legally bind the Belgian company.
- A copy of the company's articles of association and any modifications (if available).
- A copy of the registration in the trade register of the company in the country of establishment.
- An original certificate issued by the local tax authorities evidencing that the company is registered for VAT purposes in the country of establishment (certificate cannot be older than three months at the time of filing of the application)
- A copy of an order form, contracts (or correspondence) or invoices proving the taxable activities in Belgium and the liability to register for Belgian VAT purposes.
- An official bank statement proving the communicated bank account belongs to the company
- A bank guarantee in an amount of 10% of the net amount of VAT due in Belgium for a period of 12 consecutive calendar months, in favor of the Belgian VAT authorities, drawn up in duplicate by a Belgian bank or the Belgian branch of a foreign bank. The amount of the guarantee, depending on the above calculation, should be at least EUR7,500 and no greater than EUR1 million. The text of the guarantee must be in accordance with the model agreement as provided by the VAT authorities, and differences in the text of this guarantee are in principle not allowed. Note that the amount of the bank guarantee can be revised according to the renewed Royal Decree.

This is one of the means to provide "security" to the Belgian tax authorities. The foreign company may also consider an alternative of a cash deposit made to a blocked account of the Belgian Treasury (the calculation to determine the cash deposit due is the same as those that apply for the bank guarantee, see above comments).

All documents must be sent to the FOD Financiën (Dutch) or to the SPF Finances (French) at the address above.

If a complete file has been submitted and no additional questions are raised, it takes approximately one to four months for a Belgian VAT ID number to be granted to a foreign business.

Deregistration. When a taxable person stops its economic activities in Belgium and consequently wants to deregister its VAT number, this should be communicated to the VAT authorities within one month by submitting Form 604C. In addition, if a taxable person has a change of VAT status, they must submit Form 604B. A change of VAT status includes the following situations:
- Change of address
- Type of activities resulting in change of right of input tax deduction rights

Changes to VAT registration details. If a taxable person has a change in its registration details (e.g., name, address, fiscal representative, type of activities resulting in change of right of input tax deduction rights, etc.) it must submit a Form 604B to the tax authorities. This Form 604B must be submitted to the VAT authorities within one month as from the change occurs. From a legal point of view this form should be submitted electronically on the Belgian VAT authorities' website. For non-established taxable persons, the VAT authorities, however, still accept that this form is submitted either via regular mail or via email.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 21%
- Reduced rates: 6%, 12%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or exemption. Certain supplies are classified as "exempt with credit," which means that no VAT is chargeable, but the supplier may recover related input tax.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%
(i.e., exempt with credit)

- Waste products (hard-copy newspapers, metal waste, etc.)
- Exports of goods outside the EU and related services
- Intra-Community supplies of goods and intangible services supplied to another taxable person established in the EU or to any recipient outside the EU (see the chapter on the EU)
- Electronic publication of daily and weekly newspapers that appear at least 48 times a year

Examples of goods and services taxable at 6%

- Under certain conditions, goods of basic necessity and social services
- Books and magazines (including audiobooks) as well as e-books and other electronic publications
- Certain foodstuffs (milk, fish, meat, fats and oils)
- Drugs and medicines
- Water
- Electricity and natural gas for nonprofessional consumption

- Accommodation
- Improvements and renovations to buildings older than 10 years
- Original works of art
- Bikes and e-bikes
- Demolition and reconstruction of buildings (subject to conditions)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 12%

- Public housing
- Restaurant services (excluding drinks)

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Real estate transactions (except "new buildings" and accompanying land)
- Services of doctors and dentists (except for the supply of aesthetical surgery by doctors and those treatments without a therapeutical aim)
- Finance
- Insurance
- Human organs

Option to tax for exempt supplies. In Belgium, there is an option to tax for the supply of payment and collection transactions, including negotiation, with the exception of debts collection. Furthermore, persons other than professional contractors (i.e., any person or company for whom the regular business consists of sale and redevelopment of real estate) may opt for taxation in case of a transfer of a new building (either used for professional purposes or not).

An option to tax for the rent of a building (or a part of a building) used for professional purposes (B2B) is available in Belgium, where the following conditions are met:

- It must concern a building or a part thereof.
- The tenant must be a taxable person who uses the building (or part thereof) exclusively for his economic activity.
- It must concern a building for which no VAT on the construction/renovation works became due before 1 October 2018.
- Both parties (lessor and tenant) must jointly opt to tax the rent.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." In Belgium, different time-of-supply rules apply to goods and services.

The time of supply is one of the following:

- The moment of issuance of the invoice
- If no invoice is issued, the 15th day of the month following the month of the supply

The time of supply is set at an earlier date if a payment is received before the goods are put at the buyer's disposal or before the service is completed and the goods/services are clearly described.

Deposits and prepayments. Regarding local supplies of goods or services, VAT is due on prepayments at the time each payment is received. There is also an obligation to issue an invoice no later than the 15th day of the month following the month of the (pre)payment.

With respect to intra-Community supplies of services, VAT is due on prepayments at the time each payment is received.

No VAT is due on prepayments that relate to intra-Community supplies of goods.

Continuous supplies of services. For a continuous supply of services for which either periodic invoices are issued, or periodic payments are made, the time of supply is at the end of each period for which each statement of account or payment relates.

If the recipient is liable to account for the VAT due for a continuous supply of services under the B2B main rule and if no invoices are issued or payments are made, the time of supply is at the end of each year.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. For goods sent for approval ("trial sale") or goods sent for sale or return (consignment shipment), special tax point rules apply. When goods are sent to a customer for trial, the supply of goods is regarded as performed when the customer confirms the effective purchase of the goods. When goods are sent to a customer for resale, the first supply of goods is regarded as performed when the goods are resold. Consequently:
- Belgian VAT is not due at the time when the goods are sent to the client or the reseller.
- Belgian VAT is not due if the goods are returned to the first supplier.

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for reverse-charge services is when the invoice is issued. If no invoice is issued, the time of supply is the 15th day of the month following the month of the supply. The time of supply is set at an earlier date if a payment is received before the service is finished.

Leased assets. For leased assets, the VAT is due on each installment based on the general time of supply rules. This rule is based on the fact that from a Belgian VAT point of view, there is no distinction between a financial lease agreement or an operational lease agreement. Therefore, where the transaction is considered as a use of goods, this would then mean it qualifies as a supply of services for consideration whereby each periodical remuneration is subject to Belgian VAT. In this context a lease agreement should include an option to acquire the goods at the end of the lease period.

The Belgian VAT administration sticks to a classic legal analysis by distinguishing between whether the contract provides for the automatic transfer of ownership or, on the contrary, whether the contract provides an option to acquire the goods at the end of the contract. That classic analysis implies that a financial lease may remain an ordinary rental under the VAT in Belgium.

If the option in the lease agreement is not set at fair market practices, the VAT treatment of the lease agreement may be challenged.

Similarly, to qualify as a real estate lease, the contract cannot include the firm obligation to acquire the property but must contain an option to acquire significant residual rights in the property.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is either the date of importation or when the goods leave a duty-suspension regime. However, the payment of import VAT may be deferred after the receipt of an individual deferment license.

Note that the payment of import VAT can be deferred to the Belgian VAT return if the importer of record is in possession of an individual deferment license (a so-called E.T. 14.000 license). In order to obtain such a license, the taxable person must file a (specific) application, but no advance payment is required. Additionally, the taxable person will need to evidence proof of importations performed in Belgium on which Belgian VAT became due.

Intra-Community acquisitions. The time-of-supply rule for intra-Community acquisitions is when the invoice is issued or, at the latest, the 15th day of the month following the month in which the taxable event occurred if no invoice has been issued before that date.

Intra-Community supplies of goods. The time of supply rule for intra-Community supplies is when the invoice is issued or, at the latest, the 15th day of the month following the month in which the taxable event occurred (if no invoice has been issued before that date).

Distance sales. There are no special time of supply rules in Belgium for supplies of distance sales. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

In principle, every taxable person has the right to deduct the Belgian input tax incurred. The right to recover input tax depends mainly on the purpose for which the goods or services are purchased.

The goods or services bought must be used for taxable business purposes. VAT incurred on goods or services bought for private purposes cannot be recovered. In addition, input tax cannot be recovered on purchases that are used to make exempt supplies (without credit for input tax). Where goods or services are bought for both business and private or exempt purposes, the input tax can only be recovered to the extent that the goods or services are used for business purposes or taxable activities (calculated on a pro rata basis).

In this respect it is key to hold a valid tax invoice or customs document. Exceptions apply to supplies for which the recipient is liable for the VAT due (reverse charge).

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Belgium is three years. Belgian input tax can be deducted until the end of the third calendar year following the year in which the VAT became due.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by a business). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Purchase, lease, hire, maintenance or fuel for cars (except in certain specific cases, such as car dealers): VAT only deductible on expenses relating to the professional use (business use) of passenger cars with a maximum of 50%; the scope of this limitation is broadened to include the purchase or lease of a light truck, including all the costs, provided that there is a mixed use. Depending on whether the employee pays a renumeration for the private use, the percentage of input tax deduction will vary. Further in the case of a renumeration, VAT is due on the normal value. Similar rules apply for use of mobile phones with mixed use.
- Recharge of electric vehicles: VAT only deductible on expenses relating to the professional use of the company car with a maximum of 50%. Specific VAT deduction limitation rules also apply in case of installation of a charging station at the house of an employee by the employer
- Private expenditure
- Business gifts (unless valued at less than EUR50, VAT excluded, per unit)
- Alcohol
- Tobacco
- Hotel accommodation, meals and beverages (exceptions may apply)
- Restaurant and catering costs (exceptions may apply, e.g., (i) if it can be shown that those costs have an advertising purpose (ii) if those costs are fully on-charged to which local Belgian VAT has been charged)

- Costs associated with hosting receptions and other entertainment costs (except reception costs that have an advertising purpose, which must be proven by way of flyers, advertising leaflets or similar evidence)

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Attending conferences, seminars and training courses
- Expenditure for the collective social benefit of employees
- Advertising
- Transport
- Books

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to the making of exempt supplies (without input tax credit) is generally not recoverable. If a Belgian taxable person makes both exempt and taxed supplies, it may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption."

In Belgium, the amount of input tax that a partially exempt business may recover may be calculated using either of the following methods:

- The first method is a general pro rata calculation, based on the percentage of taxable and exempt turnover. The recovery percentage is rounded up to the nearest higher whole number (for example, a recovery percentage of 77.2% is rounded up to 78%).
- The second method is direct attribution, which is a two-stage calculation. The first stage identifies the input tax that may be directly allocated to taxed and to exempt supplies. Input tax directly allocated to taxed supplies is deductible, while input tax directly related to exempt supplies is not deductible. Supplies that are exempt with credit are treated as taxed supplies for these purposes. The next stage identifies the amount of the remaining input tax (for example, input tax on general business overhead) that may be partially allocated to taxable supplies and consequently partially recovered. The calculation may be performed using the general pro rata calculation based on revenues (turnover) of supplies made, or it may be a special calculation agreed to with the VAT authorities. This special pro rate needs to be objective and controllable by the VAT authorities.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method (i.e., the first method, general pro rata calculation) in Belgium. Since 1 January 2023, an approval from the tax authorities is no longer required either to use the second method (i.e., the direct attribution). Only a notification to the tax authorities is necessary, which should be done by electronic notification to the tax authorities. Timing to submit said notification depends on the situation of each taxable person.

Capital goods. The deduction of VAT paid on the acquisition of investment goods must be limited in the case of private use of those goods. In this respect, Belgium has transposed into Belgian law the amendments made by the Council Directive 2009/162/EU on 22 December 2009 for all capital goods (movable and immovable).

According to Article 45, §1quinquies of the Belgian VAT Code, in the case of an acquisition of a capital good subject to mixed use, the deduction of VAT is disallowed for the part of private use, but there is no requirement to report a deemed supply for this part.

Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is deducted in the VAT year in which the goods are acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition (non-property purchases) or first use (property purposes). However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted over time if the taxable person's partial exemption recovery percentage changes during the adjustment period. It must also be adjusted if the use of the capital goods changes.

In Belgium, the capital goods adjustment applies to the following assets for the number of years indicated:

- Buildings (adjusted for a period of 15 years or 25 years if option to tax rent is levied – this period starts running from 1 January of first use of the building)
- Other movable capital assets (adjusted for a period of five years – this period starts running from 1 January of first use of the movable capital assets)
- Certain services, such as intellectual property rights (including patents, licenses and trademarks or immovable work undertaken by the tenant of a building) considered to be capital goods if amortized for accounting purposes over a period of five years or more

The adjustment is applied each year following the year of first use (for both property and non-property purchases) to a fraction of the total input tax (1/15 for land and buildings and 1/5 for other movable capital assets or qualifying services). The adjustment may result in either an increase or a decrease of deductible input tax, depending on whether the ratio of taxable supplies made by the business has increased or decreased compared with the year in which the capital goods were acquired (non-property purchases) or first used (property purposes and from 1 January 2019 for all capital goods).

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a monthly period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that period, the taxable person has an input tax credit. A taxable person may request a refund of the credit by marking the relevant box on the VAT return form. A refund may generally be requested only at the end of a quarter. However, a taxable person that meets certain conditions may receive permission to request monthly VAT refunds. As of 1 January 2020, all newly VAT registered businesses may opt for monthly VAT refunds.

Pre-registration costs. In practice, there is a tolerance regarding the pre-registration costs incurred prior to VAT registration. If the VAT registration and exploitation of the economic activity follows in an acceptable time period, the deduction will be accepted. A company starting up or a private individual has the status of a taxable person as soon as it unequivocally manifests this intention. In such a case, VAT incurred on costs connected to preparatory activities for an economic activity that gives rise to a right of deduction is deductible even if the registration formalities have not been carried out. The taxable person will be able to deduct the input tax incurred on the preparatory activities via its first Belgian VAT return.

Bad debts. A taxable person is under certain conditions entitled to recover any VAT already paid to the VAT authorities in respect of bad debts via the VAT return. This adjustment must be supported by sufficient evidence that the customer will never pay the debt, such as the company's being declared bankrupt. No official statement from the liquidator is required. If subsequently, (part of) the debt can be recovered, the VAT should be equally repaid to the Belgian VAT authorities. Nevertheless, a corrective document (for instance a credit note) needs to be drawn up.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Belgium.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Belgium is recoverable. Belgium refunds VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established in Belgium nor required to be registered for VAT there. A non-established business can claim Belgian VAT to the same extent as a VAT-registered business.

Non-established businesses that do not make supplies in Belgium, but do incur input tax, can register for VAT in Belgium to recover the input tax in certain circumstances. For further details, see Section C. Who is liable, subsection Non-established businesses.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refund is made under the terms of the EU Council Directive 2008/9. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Belgium during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge). For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Find below specific rules for Belgium:
- VAT refund claims of EU businesses not established in Belgium can be filed through a portal website in the home country of the non-established entity. Original invoices do not need to be submitted with the refund claim. In some cases, electronic copies of invoices must be added, depending on the type of cost and the taxable amount of the invoice.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refund is made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive. For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Belgium does not exclude any non-EU country from the refund scheme. The VAT refund procedure under the EU 13th Directive may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Belgium during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge).

A VAT refund request must cover a period of at least three months in the same calendar year and no more than one calendar year.

VAT refund claim under the EU 13th Directive must be submitted at the latest by 30 September of the year following the period relating to the refund application.

The application form should be sent to the following service of the Belgian VAT authorities:

SPF Finances
Centre Etrangers-Team 6
Bld du Jardin Botanique 50, boîte 3429
B-1000 Bruxelles
Or, foreigners.team6@minfin.fed.be

Late payment interest. For EU businesses, if an EU refund is not made within four months, the Belgian VAT authorities pay interest to the claimant. The interest rate depends on the period for which the interests apply. For a period before 1 January 2023, a rate of 9.6% per year applies. After 1 January 2023, the interest rate will be determined every year and will always be equal to the interest rate for the late payment due minus 2%. For the year 2023, the interest rate for the late payment due amounts to 8% and therefore the interest rate for the late payment due amounts to 6% per year.

For non-EU businesses, interest is not paid on late refunds to non-established businesses.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A Belgian taxable person must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports and intra-Community supplies. Invoices are not automatically required for retail transactions, unless requested by the customer. Invoices may not be issued for supplies that are exempt from VAT (without input tax credit).

A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction or a refund under the EU 2008/9/EU or 13th Directive refund schemes (see the chapter on the EU).

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply of goods or services. The amount of VAT credited must be separately itemized on the credit note. It must be cross-referenced to the original VAT invoice and contain the same information. The following statement must appear on the credit note: "VAT to be repaid to the Belgian State to the extent that it was initially deducted."

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Belgium for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Belgium. This is in line with EU Directive 2014/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU). This is with effect from 9 March 2022. For B2G supplies, the Royal Decree of 9 March 2022 makes electronic invoicing mandatory for public procurement and concession contracts. The said Royal Decree expands the scope of the B2G e-invoicing in a phased manner depending on the individual value of each government contract: (i) on 1 November 2022 for public contracts with a value greater than or equal to the European threshold of EUR214,000, (ii) on 1 May 2023 for all public contracts with a value greater than or equal to EUR30,000, and (iii) on 1 November 2023 for public contracts less than EUR30,000. An exemption is foreseen for contracts with a value of less than EUR3,000.

For B2B and B2C, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Belgium. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU (see the chapter on the EU). The government announced the implementation of mandatory B2B e-invoicing with effect from 1 January 2026. Mandatory electronic invoicing will apply for domestic B2B transactions performed by taxable persons established in Belgium and Belgian branches of foreign entities.

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Belgium.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the chapter on the European Union.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoices are allowed where the amount of the invoice is EUR100 (excluding VAT) or less. Simplified VAT invoices are also allowed if it is difficult for a particular sector to be compliant with the invoice requirements due to its commercial and administrative habits (e.g., catering and restaurants (HORECA) – cash register system). Simplified VAT invoices cannot be issued for certain supplies, i.e., for distance sales, intra-Community supplies of goods, supplies of goods with assembly and installation and cross-border supplies of goods and services with application of the reverse-charge mechanism.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Belgium. This is subject to the following conditions:
- Both parties have an agreement in advance for self-billing.
- Each invoice must be subject to the acceptance (implicit or explicit) by the taxable person who makes the supply of goods or services.

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. Belgian VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods and on intra-Community supplies of goods (see the chapter on the EU). However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports and intra-Community supplies must be supported by evidence that the goods have left Belgium. Acceptable proof includes the following documentation:
- For an export, a copy of the export document, officially validated by Customs, must show the supplier as the exporter of record or should make a reference to the underlying invoice issued by the supplier. Under specific conditions, the supplier may still rely on the VAT exemption if the customer is mentioned as exporter of record on the export document, validated by Customs.
- For an intra-Community supply, a range of commercial documentation (such as purchase orders, transport documentation, proof of payment and contracts) is required. Each document is permitted as evidence, but each document in itself is not sufficient. The valid VAT number (issued by another Member State other than Belgium) of the customer should be mentioned on the invoice. In cases where the supplier does not have sufficient documents in order to substantiate the intra-Community transport of the goods from Belgium to another Member State, the transport could be certified by a "destination document" established by the supplier or by the purchaser. The use of this simplification measure is subject, inter alia, to the following conditions:

- The "destination document" confirms that the goods are in the possession of the purchaser in another Member State than Belgium.
- The "destination document" can include all the intra-Community supplies made in the profit of a client during a period of three consecutive calendar months.
- The "destination document" includes the following mentions:
  - Name, address and VAT number of the supplier.
  - Name, address and VAT number of the purchaser.
  - Confirmation that the "destination document" relates to the arrival of intra-Community supply of goods.
  - A description of the goods.
  - A reference to the related invoice(s).
  - Month(s) and year of the arrival of the goods.
  - Place where the goods arrived.
  - Price of the supplied goods.
- The "destination document" is signed by the purchaser or by a person who is entitled to sign for the purchaser (by reason of his function). The identity and the function of that person should be confirmed by the purchaser to the supplier by email, letter or another written document.
- The "signed destination document" can be sent by electronic means (email, etc.). However, the authenticity of the signature is guaranteed.
- The "signed destination document" is kept by the supplier.

A complete description of that simplification measure can be found in the Circular Letter 2020/C/50 dd. 02/04/2020 of the Belgian VAT authorities.

We also refer to the presumption introduced by the Quick Fixes regarding proof of intra-Community transport (see the chapter on the EU).

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices may be issued in any currency, provided that the amount of VAT due is expressed in the domestic currency, which is the euro (EUR), if the supply is taking place in Belgium. If an invoice is issued in foreign currency, the amount of VAT due must be converted to euros using the latest exchange rate published by the European Central Bank or, if the European Central Bank has published no exchange rate, the latest exchange rate published by the National Bank of Belgium. However, a contractual exchange rate may be used instead if the exchange rate used is indicated in the contract and on the invoice and if it is actually used to determine payment between the parties.

There are no requirements with regard to the language of the invoice. However, for inspection purposes, the VAT authorities may ask for a translation if the invoice is issued in a language other than Dutch, French or German (the official languages in Belgium).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There is no requirement to issue a VAT invoice (or any other document) for supplies by taxable persons of telecommunications, broadcasting and electronic services to nontaxable customers (i.e., private consumers), irrespective of the use of the MOSS scheme. Only when providing these services to nontaxable legal bodies or taxable persons is there such a requirement to issue full VAT invoices. For further details of the VAT rules on electronic services in the EU, refer to the EU chapter.

For other supplies made by taxable persons to nontaxable persons (i.e., private consumers), there is no obligation to issue full VAT invoices or receipts in Belgium. However, for specific sectors, such as hotels, catering, restaurants and car washing services, only receipts are required to be issued to private consumers.

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a full VAT invoice must be issued. However, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, then no full VAT invoice is required unless requested. However, for intra-Community distance sales and extra-Community distance sales (made B2C), the identification of the existence of an obligation to issue an invoice in light of the Belgian VAT law is a complex process. First, it must be determined whether Belgium is the competent State in matters of invoicing rules. If Belgium is the competent State, the obligation to issue an invoice is the standard rule. However, there is no obligation to issue an invoice in some specific cases, among others in case where intra-Community distance sales are performed under the OSS system.

Records. In Belgium, taxable persons must keep appropriate accounting records to the extent of their activities to allow the tax authorities to carry out a VAT audit. In Belgium, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include:
- A purchase ledger (including imports and intra-Community acquisitions of goods)
- A sales ledger
- A cash revenue ledger

In Belgium, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. The taxable person can determine the place where their accounting records are kept, as long they are able to provide such records to the Belgian VAT authorities at their request, without undue delay. However, invoices must be kept within the Belgian territory when they are not kept in electronic format, allowing that a total online access to the data kept is guaranteed.

Record retention period. Input and output invoices issued and received must be kept for seven years as from 1 January of the year following the date the invoice is issued. Ledgers issued and received must be kept for seven years as from 1 January of the year following the end of the financial year of the taxable person. Since 1 January 2023, the general retention period has been increased to 10 years.

In respect of deduction of VAT on real estate investment goods, the taxable persons are obliged to keep the related documentation (i.e., invoices, documents, account statement) for 15 years.

In case of the option to tax for the rent of a building (or a part of a building) used for professional purposes (B2B), the taxable persons are required to keep related documentation (i.e., invoices, documents, account statement) for 25 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Belgium. Paper and electronic invoices may be archived in electronic format using electronic data storage equipment, including digital compression.

In case the electronic archiving option is chosen, one must demonstrate that the technology used to digitalize the invoice guarantees the authenticity, integrity and legibility of electronically archived invoices as from the date on which the invoice is issued until the end of the minimum storage period.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Belgian VAT returns are usually submitted for monthly periods, and for taxable persons with more than EUR50,000 of intra-Community supplies of goods per quarter, a monthly filing is required.

Taxable persons with a turnover of less than EUR2.5 million may opt to submit returns quarterly (for some supplies of goods, the threshold is EUR2.5 million). A taxable person who has chosen to file quarterly VAT returns can, during the calendar year, be obliged to start filing monthly VAT returns from the time the threshold of EUR2.5 million of annual turnover or EUR50,000 of intra-Community supplies of goods per quarter has been exceeded.

Monthly and quarterly VAT returns are due the 20th day of the month following the return period. However, if that date falls on a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the due date will be postponed to the next working day.

Periodic payments. For monthly VAT returns, payment is due the 20th day of the month following the return period. However, if that date falls on a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the due date will be postponed to the next working day. The payment of the VAT due needs to be made by the same date on a specific bank account of the Belgian tax authorities (in Dutch, Dienst btw-ontvangsten Brussel and in French, Service T.V.A.-Recettes Bruxelles).

Quarterly VAT returns must be filed by the 20th day following the relevant calendar quarter. However, if that date falls on a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the due date will be postponed to the next working day. The payment of the VAT due needs to be made by the same date.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Belgium for all taxable persons. The Belgian VAT returns should be electronically filed through the internet (via the Intervat-application). Only when the taxable person has demonstrated the impossibility of filing the VAT return by electronic means and obtained a written approval from the Belgian VAT authorities may it file the return in hard copy.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Belgium.

Special schemes. Margin scheme. A special regime is provided for professional dealers of secondhand cars. In particular, where the professional dealer has purchased secondhand cars on which no VAT was charged, the taxable person can account for VAT on the margin (difference between purchase and sales price) on the sale of the secondhand goods. The same principles apply for, among others, art dealers.

Cash accounting. Belgian VAT law allows suppliers active in B2C transactions to postpone the payment of VAT on supplies of movable goods and services to reinstated private persons, where no obligation to issue an invoice exists, until and to the extent of receipt of the price.

The cash accounting regime has also been introduced for supplies made to public bodies acting as a government (according to Article 6 of the Belgian VAT Code).

Annual returns. Annual VAT returns are not required in Belgium. However, every year an annual sales listing (form 725) must be filed before 31 March of the next year. The annual sales listing is used to record all sales in excess of EUR250 made during the calendar year to customers that are VAT-registered in Belgium.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. A Belgian taxable person that trades with other EU countries must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of either its sales or purchases of goods exceeds certain thresholds. Separate reports are required for intra-Community acquisitions (Intrastat Arrivals) and for intra-Community supplies (Intrastat Dispatches). The Intrastat Dispatches return must refer to two specific elements, as follows:

- Country of origin of the goods. If the country is known, the country is where the goods were produced or processed so that they constitute a new product under another commodity code. In the negative, use the code "QU"
- VAT number of the other party involved in the transaction

The threshold for Intrastat Arrivals is EUR1.5 million. The threshold for Intrastat Dispatches is EUR1 million.

Belgian taxable persons must complete Intrastat declarations in EUR, rounded up to the nearest whole number.

The Intrastat return period is monthly. The submission deadline is the same as for the VAT return, which is the 20th day of the month following the return period.

EU Sales Lists. If a Belgian taxable person makes intra-Community supplies in a return period, it must submit an EU Sales List (ESL) to the Belgian VAT authorities. An ESL is not required for a period in which the taxable person has not made any intra-Community supplies.

Supplies of goods are marked by the letter "L" and supplies of services by the letter "S." Intra-community sales performed by party B in simplified triangulation schemes must continue to be marked by the letter "T."

ESLs are filed monthly by monthly VAT filers and quarterly by quarterly VAT filers.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Previously submitted VAT returns can be corrected by means of one of the following processes:
- Filing a corrective VAT return – Corrective VAT returns can in principle only be submitted via Intervat until six months after the reporting period for which the original return has been submitted. The Belgian tax authorities may impose nonproportional penalties for the late filing of such returns.
- Letter to the competent tax office – A letter to the competent tax office can be submitted in order to explain the transactions that should be performed to VAT returns that cannot be corrected anymore via Intervat. Such a voluntary disclosure should result in a waiver of proportional penalties that may apply.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Belgium.

J. Penalties

The Belgian VAT legislation contains a detailed list of administrative penalties, both proportional and nonproportional, which the VAT authorities automatically impose when violations against Belgian VAT legislation are detected. The guidelines classify all violations into different categories. For certain categories, the penalty policy will apply, while other categories are subject to additional conditions or are explicitly excluded from the application of the penalty policy. In case of a so-called voluntary VAT disclosure, the proportional penalties will be waived by the VAT authorities.

For some categories, the penalties will automatically be canceled if the below four conditions are fulfilled:
- It is the first violation of the same nature in a period of four years ("reference period").
- The taxable person committing the violation was deemed to act in good faith. It is important to note that from now on, good faith will be assumed. The Belgian administration has to prove the contrary.
- An individual and motivated request should be submitted, clearly indicating all reasons why the taxable person is applying for a waiver.
- Upon filing of the request, the taxable person has complied with the obligation for which a fine was imposed and has submitted all periodic VAT returns.

For violations identified at the occasion of an audit that have no impact on the VAT (payable or refundable) position, the new penalty policy will apply. This is for example relevant for incoming invoices for which the recipient does not apply erroneously the reverse-charge mechanism. In that situation the non-application of the reverse charge could lead in principle to (proportional) penalties. However, on basis on the new penalty policy, the penalties imposed for the first violation could be canceled.

For fines imposed relating to the second violation of the same nature in the reference period, the amount of the fine will be reduced to 2%. For fines imposed relating to the third and all subsequent violations of the same nature in the reference period, the fine will be reduced to 5%. These reductions are subject to the above conditions.

Certain categories of violations are explicitly excluded from the application of the above policy (e.g., nonpayment of VAT due, late submission of periodical VAT returns, fraud). It is important to note that even when the new fine policy does not apply, the VAT authorities may still allow the application for a waiver or reduction of the fine on the grounds of force majeure or based on specific elements of the case.

The guidelines also reconfirm the substance-over-form principle, introduced by ECJ case law in case of noncompliant purchase invoices. This implies that the mere observation that an invoice does not meet the applicable invoicing requirements no longer result in a rejection of input tax deduction. Instead, it opens the possibility to provide corrective invoices or other supporting documents so that the VAT deduction can be safeguarded.

Penalties for late registration. A penalty ranging from EUR100 to EUR500 is assessed for late VAT registration. If the late registration results in the late payment of VAT, an administrative fine of 10% to 20% calculated on the VAT due and late payment interests may be imposed. For a period before 1 January 2023, a rate of 9.6% per year applies. After 1 January 2023, the interest rate will be determined every year with a minimum of 4% per year. For the year 2023, the interest rate for a late payment due amounts to 8%.

Penalties for late payment and filings. There is a large range of penalties that can be assessed for late payment or filings of VAT returns or listings. These include, for example:

- Failure to submit VAT return: EUR1,000 per VAT return
- Late submission of VAT return: EUR100 per month it is late (with a maximum of EUR1,000)
- Late payment of VAT return: fine equal to twice the tax paid late and a late payment interest of 0.8% per month is due
- No submission of the annual sales listing or the European sales listing: EUR3,000 per listing/document
- Late submission of the annual sales listing (ASL) or the European sales listing (ESL):
  (i) For the late submission of maximum two months, a penalty between EUR75 and EUR1,500 is due
  (ii) For the late submission of maximum six months, a penalty between EUR225 and EUR2,250 is due
  (iii) For the late submission of more than six months, a penalty of EUR3,000 is due

For Intrastat a penalty, varying from EUR100 to EUR10,000, can be imposed if a person does not comply with the imposed obligations. No distinction is made according to the nature of the offense (e.g., late submission, missing or inaccurate declarations).

Penalties may be imposed for late, missing or inaccurate ESLs.

Penalties for errors. There is a large range of penalties that could be assessed for late payment or filings of VAT returns or listings. These include, for example:

- For VAT return, the penalty depends on the kind of error: (i) for accidental irregularities, a penalty of EUR80 per document is due, (ii) for the other irregularities, a penalty of EUR500 per document is due
- For listings (i.e., annual sales listing (ASL) or the European sales listing (ESL), the penalty depends on the kind of error: (i) for missing data, a penalty between EUR150 and EUR1,350 per missing data is due, (ii) error in data, a penalty of EUR25 and EUR750 per data is due if the correct data is communicated to the Belgian tax authorities within two months

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. For any intentional breach of the obligation to pay VAT, taxable persons are liable to pay a fine equal to twice the VAT amount evaded.

Personal liability for company officers. The Belgian VAT legislation provides for a joint and several liability for the directors in the situation of nonpayment of VAT due by the companies or legal entities under their management when the nonpayment is attributable to their fault in the framework of this management.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Belgium is three years. The standard statute of limitations of the right of the VAT authorities to recover Belgian VAT is three years (or seven years in case of fraud or specific circumstances). This means that transactions can be subject to a VAT audit until 31 December of the third year following the year during which the transactions have been reported in the VAT return. As from 1 January 2023, the statute of limitations are extended to four years in case of late submission or no submission of VAT returns, and to 10 years in case of fraud. A taxable person may exercise their right to deduct VAT until 31 December of the third year following the year in which the VAT became due.

The Goods and Services Tax Act of Bhutan 2020 (the GST Act) was enacted with effect from 16 January 2020 by the Bhutan Parliament. In conjunction with Section 3 of the GST Act (read with Notification No. DRC/GST/01/2020/85 dated 1 July 2020), several chapters of the GST Act were proposed to be implemented from 1 July 2021 (see list below). However, during the budget session for FY 2021-2022, the Finance Minister of Bhutan proposed the deferment of GST implementation by one year to 1 July 2022, until the systems are ready.

The chapters of the GST Act that were postponed are as follows:
- Chapter 7: Accounting for GST
- Chapter 8: Payment of GST
- Chapter 9: Refund of net amount
- Chapter 10: Registration

As per the GST Amendment Act of Bhutan 2022 (the Amendment Act), the above chapters would come into force from the day the Parliament approves for enforcement, when the goods and services tax system is ready. So in effect, GST implementation has been deferred until the time the systems are ready. The Amendment Act would also repeal certain chapters under the GST Act related to sales tax and excise.

At the time of preparing this chapter, GST has not been implemented in Bhutan and there is no definitive timeline has been prescribed for implementation.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- Sales of movable goods placed in Bolivia by taxable persons
- All services rendered in Bolivia
- Importation of goods
- Leasing inside Bolivia

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Bolivia, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in Bolivia. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Bolivia, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated the value that would have been agreed between independent parties if they had engaged in the same transaction under the same circumstances.

In addition, domestic companies related to foreign companies must prepare their accounting records separately, so that their financial statements determine taxable net profits from Bolivian-source income. When individuals or domestic companies directly or indirectly conduct commercial and/or financial transactions with individuals or companies domiciled in countries or regions with low or null taxation (tax havens), these transactions will be considered as if they were carried out between related parties. To determine whether two or more transactions are comparable, the following will be taken into consideration:
- The characteristics of the goods or services
- The functions assumed by the parties, for which risks and assets used will be identified
- The contractual terms of the transaction
- The characteristics of the market or other influencing factors
- The commercial strategies

C. Who is liable

A registered taxable person is a business entity or individual that performs the following actions:
- Sells movable goods
- Sells movable goods on behalf of others
- Renders any kind of services
- Makes definitive imports (these are products that are purchased in foreign countries and brought into Bolivia)
- Engages in the operational or financial leasing of movable or fixed goods

Exemption from registration. VAT law in Bolivia does not contain any provision for exemption from registration. In situations where services and sales are performed habitually in Bolivia, registration for accomplishment of local taxes must take place.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. VAT law in Bolivia does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration, as there is no registration threshold (i.e., all entities that make taxable supplies are obliged to register for VAT).

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Bolivia.

Fixed establishment. In Bolivia there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, while Bolivian legislation has no fixed establishment standards, the rules in practice are based on the domestic-related standards, the experience and the review of public preceding. The Bolivian tax system is ruled by principles of territoriality and source. Additionally, according to the economic reality that prevails for interpretation of tax standards, taxation must be applied based on the events that occurred and not on the merely contractual matters. In other words, the underlying facts must prevail before the form ones. Given the absence of specific legal standards to determine fixed establishment, in the present case, the tax treatment for non-established businesses depends on the following:

- The real purpose of non-established businesses to perform habitual business in Bolivia
- The direct relationship non-established businesses will have with Bolivian local customers
- The nature of service – in this case, the intentionality on generating habitual profits
- The fact that there would be habitual commercial activities in the country

It is important to understand that whenever an entity performs habitual commercial activities in the country, it is concluded that it is generating incomes from Bolivian sources and therefore must pay taxes. "Habitual" constitutes the triggering fact for consideration of a fixed establishment risk's existence. It must be qualified based on the nature, quantity or frequency involved of the service rendered.

Foreign non-incorporated companies can perform commercial acts physically in Bolivia, but only on an isolated basis. If habitually (frequency, nature of service and real purpose of obtaining profits) is detected by public authorities, commerce and tax registry will be demanded as mandatory.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a fixed establishment in Bolivia. A non-established business must register as a taxable person if it makes "habitual" supplies of goods or services in Bolivia. Under the applicable regulation, "habitual" must be determined by weighing the nature, amount or frequency of the sales of movable goods and services.

Tax representatives. The tax representative of a company is the legal representative resident in Bolivia and registered with the tax authority to act for the company in matters relating to VAT.

A non-established business is not required to appoint a tax representative to register for VAT.

Reverse charge. In Bolivia, the reverse charge for services does not apply. Bolivia does not apply VAT on the importation of services that are performed outside of the country. When a service is purchased from abroad, it is not subject to VAT. There are no procedures to withhold this tax. On the other hand, when a local company provides services to a foreign company and the service is performed locally, then it must be subject to Bolivian VAT, even if the recipient is outside of Bolivia.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Bolivia.

Digital economy. There are no special or specific rules regarding the digital economy in Bolivia.

Taxable persons that provide digital services, such as marketplaces, delivery, streaming, education, video games, online advertising and gambling from Bolivia should register and account for VAT in Bolivia. Therefore, resident persons (natural and legal) that use these digital media must incorporate (if the person is already registered) or register with the tax authority for the payment of taxes.

In the case of nonresidents, there are no rules for the payment of taxes in Bolivia.

Bolivia's Congress had previously initiated discussions on a bill to impose 13% VAT on digital services provided from abroad to Bolivian residents, but this was subsequently discarded. At the time of preparing this chapter, it is not certain whether this project will be reconsidered.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Bolivia.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online markets or platforms in Bolivia. The general rules state only that the sale of goods through electronic commerce, within the national territory, made by natural and legal persons, are subject to the VAT, but there are no detailed procedures.

Registration procedures. A registration request should be submitted to the Virtual Office of the tax authority (http://ov.impuestos.gob.bo/RegistroPadron.aspx) by filing Form MASI-001 (Request for registration). Once submitted, the Virtual Office will assign a file number to this request.

To complete the procedure, the legal representative must visit the tax authority offices in person and present the following documents (originals and copies):
- Notarized incorporation deed
- The legal representative's valid identification document (ID)
- Notarized power of attorney for the legal representative to act with authority for the applicant
- Electric utility invoice for the company domicile
- Electric utility invoice for the legal representative's domicile
- Map (drawing) of the domiciles of the company and the legal representative

Registration can be processed in one week if all documents are presented in the correct form to the tax authority.

Deregistration. In Bolivia, companies do not deregister. It is possible, however, to deactivate the tax identification number.

Changes to VAT registration details. Any change related to the registered information of a taxable person and the activity of the company should be communicated immediately to the tax administration.

The changes to VAT registration are simplified regime to special regime, inactivation of economic activity, taxable person data, activity economy, legal representative, domicile of taxable person and legal representative, etc.

For the procedure, the taxable person should visit the tax administration office in person as soon as the modification occurs with the documents that support the changes.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 13% (however, the effective rate is 14.94% because VAT must be included in the sales price)
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of good and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies goods and services

- Goods imported by members of diplomatic corps recognized in Bolivia
- "Bona fide" introduced merchandise, up to a limit of USD1,000
- Life insurance quotas (monthly payments with respect to a life insurance contract)
- For securities registered on the Bolivian Stock Exchange, capital gains generated by sales/purchase of the shares
- Transfers of goods or assets subject to the securitization process (titularización) administered by the securitization association, at the beginning and end of the process (under this process, the goods must be transferred to an independent fund (patrimonio autonomo) and, when the process is completed, the goods are returned to the original owner)
- Operations regarding sales or transfers of portfolios (financial intermediation, insurance and pension)
- Interest from loans received by financial entities
- Inbound tourism and lodging services for foreign tourists without a residence or address in Bolivia
- Artistic events focused on production, presentation and promotion of theater, dancing, national folklore, painting, sculpture and movies of Bolivian artists, if they are sponsored or developed in locations in Bolivia that are managed or owned by a municipal government or the Bolivian government
- Sale of books printed in Bolivia or those imported by or published by Bolivian institutions

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Bolivia.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax event." The tax event for goods is when the goods are delivered or when an act that implies the transfer of the ownership occurs. The tax event for services is the earlier of when the service is performed or completed and when full or partial payment of the price is received.

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in Bolivia for advance payments. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above). The only exception is for advanced payments for construction services for government entities, where the payments will not be subject to taxation until the work progress certificates are accomplished.

Continuous supplies of services. For the provision of continuous services, when the taxable event is concluded at the expiration of each monthly period, the invoice may be issued up to the fifth business day of the month following the month in which the service was provided.

For the provision of continuous services subject to measurement or settlement, the taxable event is perfected in the determination of the price, as a result of the monthly measurement or settlement of the service, as the case may be, or at the partial or total collection of the remuneration, whichever is earlier. Given these scenarios, in no case may they be invoiced in a fiscal period subsequent to that of measurement or settlement.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. For goods, the time of supply occurs when the title to the goods is transferred. For services, the time of supply occurs when partial or total payments are performed or when the service is finalized, whichever occurs first.

Reverse-charge services. In Bolivia, the reverse charge for services does not apply. As such there are no special time of supply rules.

Leased assets. For an operating lease (a normal rental without interest), the time of supply is on a monthly basis and the total amount charged must be taxable.

For a financial lease (a rental with the possibility of purchase at the end of the rental period), which includes capital and interest amounts, the time of supply is at the end of each installment/quota (i.e., could be monthly, quarterly, biannual basis). In this situation, only the capital amount is subject to VAT.

Imported goods. The tax event for imported goods is when the goods clear all customs procedures.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax (also known as credit VAT), which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes, provided that the taxable person has declared the invoices in the month in which they were issued. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax (also known as debit VAT), which is VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Bolivia and VAT paid on imports of goods.

A valid tax invoice or import statement must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

Recovery of VAT on purchases of special gasoline, premium gasoline or diesel from service stations is limited to the VAT paid on 70% of the purchase value.

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Bolivia. This mean that effectively the input tax (credit VAT) may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax cannot be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). For deducting VAT credit with respect to transactions in an amount of BOB50,000 (bolivianos) or more, payment supports (checks, vouchers or other documents) issued by a financial intermediation entity regulated by the ASFI are required. These documents must have the following information:
- Business name of the financial institution (issuer)
- Transaction or operation number
- Transaction date
- Transaction amount

Payment supports for transactions of BOB50,000 or more must be reported on an annual basis, consolidating information from January through December regardless of ending fiscal year. The report is due between 5 and 9 February of the following year, depending on the last digit of the taxable person's identification number (NIT).

If the report has errors or inconsistencies regarding the information submitted, a new report can be submitted without penalties until 30 days after the report's deadline.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible
- Goods acquired that are not directly linked to obtaining taxable income, such as amusement activities for employees
- Goods or services that do not have original documents like invoices

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Acquisition cost of inventories
- Maintenance services of machinery

Partial exemption. Input tax can be offset against output tax due. However, the input tax can only be offset if it has been incurred in relation to the taxable activities of the business. Where input tax relates to both taxable and exempt activities, it cannot be offset in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption." In this sense, when the purchases of goods or services are in relation to taxable activities and nontaxable activities, the process is as follows:

- The tax credit will be appropriate directly to the operations taxed by VAT.
- When a direct appropriation is not possible, the tax credit shall be appropriated in the proportion of the income taxed with respect to the total income taxed by the VAT of the business (proportionality).

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Bolivia. Special methods are not allowed in Bolivia.

Capital goods. There are no special input tax recovery rules on capital goods. Therefore, input tax incurred on capital goods can be offset with the output tax as per the normal rules. Only export companies that cannot offset the output tax with local sales that generate input tax can request a reimbursement.

When purchases of goods and services are intended to obtain income taxable and not taxable activities, the proportionality criterion shall be applied.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax (credit VAT) recoverable in a month exceeds the amount of output tax (debit VAT) payable, the excess credit may be carried forward to offset output tax in the following tax period. The amount of input tax is adjusted based on the variation of the Unidades de Fomento a la Vivienda (UFV), an index published by the Bolivian Central Bank that takes into account inflation.

A taxable person that overpaid VAT for a tax period because of an error may request a refund of the overpaid amount.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Bolivia is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Bolivia.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Bolivia.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Bolivia is not recoverable. For the recovery of VAT, a taxable person must have a permanent establishment in Bolivia and register with the tax authority.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must provide a VAT sales invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports (subject to VAT at the zero rate). According to the invoicing modality (due to be implemented as of 1 December 2021), in paper or electronic format, a VAT invoice is required to support a claim for input tax deduction.

Credit notes. A credit note can be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply of goods and services. A credit note must contain the same information as a sales invoice, and it can only be used with respect to the return of goods (total or partial) and the cancellation of services.

Conciliation notes are used to adjust the VAT tax debit and credit in transactions for electric power, telecommunications, potable water and hydrocarbon services, as part of a reconciliation process of the parties involved.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Bolivia for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in Bolivia.

The tax authority issued the Regulatory Directory Resolution (RND) No. 102100000011 on 11 August 2021, which defined a new invoicing system and the implementation of certain modalities of online invoicing (electronic invoicing). This new invoicing system will be in force as from 1 December 2021 for certain taxable persons that the tax authority has defined. The tax authority, according to a timetable, will establish the invoicing modality that the rest of the taxable persons (individuals and legal entities registered in the tax registration) must apply. The tax authority maintains the allocation of seven taxpayer groups for the transition to electronic invoicing, and the implementation is expected for groups one to four.

Electronic invoicing includes taxpayers assigned by the tax authority for the change of activity. This invoicing must be issued by the taxpayer for any sale to their customers (B2G, B2B and B2C).

The types of invoices are:
- Manual invoice
- Pre-valued invoice
- Computerized invoice VIS (virtual invoicing system)
- Online electronic
- Online computerized
- Online web portal

The type of invoice that can be used will depend on the assignment by the tax authority to the taxable persons, which depends on the quantity of monthly invoices, the amounts, kind of company, etc.

The tax authority also defines the requirements for the invoice design.

Simplified VAT invoices. In cases of retail supplies sales for amounts less than BOB5, full VAT invoices are not mandatory to be issued for such transaction. In these cases, the seller could issue a summary invoice at the end of the day that includes all these sales.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Bolivia.

Proof of exports. Bolivian VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports must be supported by evidence that the goods have left Bolivia. The related input tax can be reimbursed through the issuance of tax devolution certificates (CEDEIMs) that can be negotiated as securities. Invoices for export transactions must be identified with the text "Commercial invoice for exports" (Factura comercial de exportación) and must be specifically authorized by the tax authorities.

Foreign currency invoices. The invoices should be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Bolivian boliviano (BOB). In case the vendor needs to include another currency, the value should be converted using the official exchange rate on the tax event date published by the Bolivian Central Bank.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Issuing a VAT invoice is mandatory in any case, even if the purchaser (non-registrant) does not require the invoice.

For purchases for amounts less than or equal to BOB1,000 when the buyer does not provide its data, the following must be entered: In the name or company name field the words "no name" or "N/N" and in the NIT/CI field the value zero.

There are some specific sectors in Bolivia that are allowed to not issue VAT invoices. These are the "Simplify Regime" (retail merchants, craftsmen with incomes less than USD26,500, approximately) and the "Integrated Regime" (transport services with people owner of no more than two vehicles).

Records. In Bolivia, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include purchase and sales VAT books (these are required to be reported monthly to the tax authority). Also, the following must also be held:
- Counterfoil of the invoices that are being used (manual and prevailed billing)
- Book of minor sales of the day, if applicable

Also, the company must maintain in digital or physical formats, according to current provisions, all the documentation that supports the transactions, for the term of the statute of limitations. In Bolivia, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. However, such records must be available to provide to the tax administration in a timely manner for a tax audit (i.e., commonly the tax auditor requires the information within five working days from the inspection's start day).

Record retention period. The record retention period in Bolivia is eight years. This is to enable the tax administration to control, verify, supervise, investigate, determine the taxes and collection within this period.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Bolivia. The tax administration allows the sending of digital information (books of purchases and sales, tax forms). However, there are no specific rules for electronic archiving, but in practice, businesses keep records in physical (paper) format.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns are submitted for monthly periods. Returns are due between the 13th and the 22nd day of the month following the end of the return period. The due date depends on the last digit of the taxable person's identification number (NIT).

Periodic payments. Payment is due in full between the 13th and the 22nd day of the month following the end of the return period. The due date depends on the last digit of the taxable person's identification number (NIT).

VAT liabilities must be paid in local currency (BOB) or in "Tax Refund Certificates."

For the payment, the taxable person must be registered in a document called "affidavit," which can be done through the virtual platform that only the taxable person has access to, by entering its data in the official website of tax administration. Alternatively, the taxable person can go in person to the tax administration and get help with the filing of the affidavit. Once the affidavit is completed, it generates an order number, which is used for the payment for the tax declared for a bank institution or bank transfer.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Bolivia for all taxable persons. VAT returns must be submitted through the tax authority's virtual platform. The virtual platform is a web digital platform where only the taxable persons have access through the tax administration official website and can flag the tax status of the company.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Bolivia.

Special schemes. The below special regimes have the characteristic of being small businesses, therefore, invoicing is not mandatory, as well as these regimes pay a consolidated tax that includes VAT, CIT and transaction tax.

Simplified Regime. This regime includes artisans, retail traders and vendors (persons who sell beverages and food in kiosks and small premises). Persons under this regime are not required to issue VAT invoices.

Unified Agricultural Regime. This regime includes individuals who carry out agricultural or livestock activities, producers grouped in Small Producers Organizations and all those individuals who are engaged in poultry farming, beekeeping, floriculture, rabbit farming, fish farming and viticulture. Persons under this regime are not required to issue VAT invoices.

Integrated Tax System. In this regime are all those individuals who provide interprovincial public transportation services of passengers or cargo and urban public transportation of passengers or cargo, who have up to two vehicles registered in their name. Persons under this regime are not required to issue VAT invoices.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Bolivia.

Supplementary filings. VAT purchases and sales book. VAT purchases and sales book must be submitted monthly through the tax authority virtual platform.

Correcting errors in previous returns. It is possible to correct errors in tax returns in Bolivia using one of two options:

- When the corrections are in favor of the tax administration, the taxable person should amend the tax return through the virtual office and pay the omitted tax.
- When the corrections are in favor of the taxable person, it is necessary to request to the tax administration the respective approval, which commonly is completed after a tax review.

Digital tax administration. The tax returns and the additional obligations (such as the auxiliary books of purchases and sales) should be reported digitally through the virtual office. This is a real-time reporting obligation in Bolivia.

J. Penalties

The penalty amounts charged in Bolivia are based on how much the input tax credit is adjusted. This is based on the variation of the Unidades de Fomento a la Vivienda (UFV), an index published by the Bolivian Central Bank that accounts for inflation.

Penalties for late registration. The penalty for late VAT registration is UFV2,500. Subsequently the company is requested to register and obtain a tax identification number (NIT). The penalties do not prevent the revenue authority to start a tax audit on the company and determinate a tax debt, for the periods where the company was performing business activity without being registered for VAT. Where the company refuses to pay the penalties and proceeds with the VAT registration and continues performing business activity, the revenue authority's last action is to close the business until the situation is rectified.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The amount of "penalty" charged in Bolivia is how much the input tax credit is adjusted based on the variation of the Unidades de Fomento a la Vivienda (UFV), an index published by the Bolivian Central Bank that takes into account inflation.

The following penalties apply for late payment and filings in Bolivia:
- UFV50 for individuals and UFV100 for business entities for not filing a tax return
- UFV500 for individuals and UFV1,000 for business entities for not submitting the VAT purchases and sales book.
- UFV100 for individuals and UFV200 for sending VAT purchases and sales books out of time
- UFV500 for individuals and UFV1,000 for business entities for not submitting a report regarding proof of banking payments for transactions higher than BOB50,000

In addition, interest and inflation adjustments based on changes to the UFV are assessed on unpaid VAT.

Penalties for errors. Penalties are assessed for errors and omissions with respect to VAT reporting. The penalties include the following:
- UFV50 for individuals and UFV100 for business entities, for sending amendments of VAT purchases and sales books out of time
- UFV100 for individuals and UFV200 for business entities, for submitting the report regarding the proof of payments for transactions higher than BOB50,000, with errors
- A penalty of UFV50 to UFV500 for individuals and business entities, for issuance of invoices with one or more errors per invoice or noncompliance of technical aspects established in specific regulations

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details can result in a penalty of UFV300. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Tax fraud applies when anybody (individual or a company) acts in any way (by action or omission) to reduce or avoid the tax payments. These cases are considered tax fraud only when the amount of the tax is equal or higher than UFV10.000. In these cases, the sanction will the imprisonment between three to six years and a penalty of 100% of the tax debt.

Personal liability for company officers. Directors and legal representative can be personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations, as long as the judge defines their responsibility.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Bolivia is eight years. The tax authority can review the tax returns and payment of taxes of taxable persons to determine tax debts or penalties up to eight years. The statute of limitations is extended by two additional years when the taxable person or responsible third party does not comply with the obligation to register in the relevant registration, registers in a different tax regime, incurs in tax crimes or carries out commercial and/or financial operations with companies located in countries with low or null taxation (there is a list of countries and regions that is periodically updated).

B. Scope of the tax

GET applies to the following transactions:
- The delivery in the BES Islands of manufactured goods by a manufacturer in the course of its business
- Services provided in the BES Islands by an entrepreneur in the course of its business
- Importation of goods

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for GET in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In the BES Islands, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a GET-registered or GET-registrable business will be subject to GET at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of GET. In the BES Islands, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of GET where the following conditions are met:
- The transfer must include elements that encompass whole or part of a taxable business
- The buyer or recipient is required to continue taxable activities, or at least intend to do so, although it does not have to perform the same activities with these assets as the transferor

Transactions between related parties. In the BES Islands, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for GET purposes for transactions between related parties. However, in general an arm's-length compensation should be considered.

C. Who is liable

A BES entrepreneur (which is a business entity or individual), including a manufacturer, that delivers goods, provides services or manages assets to obtain revenue from the assets on a permanent basis is liable for GET, unless an exemption or a reverse-charge mechanism (that is, the customer receiving the services is liable for GET) applies. A BES entrepreneur is an entrepreneur that resides in or is established in the BES Islands or that has a permanent establishment in the BES Islands from which it provides services.

A manufacturer is considered to be an entrepreneur in the BES Islands if it provides goods by using raw materials or intermediate goods.

Exemption from registration. The BES GET legislation does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The BES GET legislation does not contain any provision for voluntary GET registration.

A small enterprise is a resident individual entrepreneur who has a business or permanent establishment in the BES Islands and who realized revenue (excluding GET) in the preceding calendar year of USD30,000 or less. If a request filed with the Inspectorate of Taxes is granted, a small enterprise is not liable to GET. However, small enterprises must still declare the revenue for monthly periods. Social or cultural organizations may also be exempted from GET.

Group registration. Group GET registration is not allowed in the BES Islands.

Fixed establishment. In the BES Islands, there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for GET purposes. However, generally a fixed establishment is understood to be a business establishment on the BES Islands of an entity established outside the BES Islands, characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources to enable it to provide the services that it supplies and/or to receive and use the services supplied to it for its own needs. A fixed establishment should be capable of acting as a taxable person independently of the head office.

Non-established business. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a fixed establishment in the BES Islands. A non-established business may become liable for GET and accordingly become subject to registration if it is deemed to have a permanent establishment in the BES Islands. The GET law does not provide a definition of a permanent establishment.

Special rules apply to the lease of real estate to individuals (residents of the BES Islands) and provision of trading and services depots.

Tax representatives. A taxable person may be represented by a third party based on a power of attorney.

Reverse charge. For certain goods delivered and services provided by non-established businesses to a resident entrepreneur on the BES Islands, the GET should be accounted for and paid by the BES Islands resident entrepreneur.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in the BES Islands.

Digital economy. Telecommunication services, radio and television services, and electronic services provided by a non-established entrepreneur to a nonbusiness customer that is established in, or resident of, the BES Islands are subject to GET. Nonresident suppliers that provide qualifying digital/telecommunication services to private individuals (i.e., business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies) must register and account for GET in the BES Islands. For business-to-business (B2B) supplies, the GET is accounted for by the customer via the reverse-charge mechanism and the nonresident supplier is not required to register and account for GET in the BES Islands.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in the BES Islands.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in the BES Islands.

Registration procedures. In general, a taxable person that begins taxable activities must register with the Inspectorate of Taxes by filing a hard copy form (online application not allowed) and providing some additional required documentation. In principle, completion of the registration process may take from one week up to a few weeks. When registering a business for GET, the registration form and copies of the following documents must be submitted.

In case of a sole proprietorship/contractor:
- ID card/passport
- Chamber of commerce registration
- Business license

In case of a NV/BV/other legal entities, the following documents should be submitted additionally:
- Deed of incorporation
- Director license

Deregistration. Deregistration with the Inspectorate of Taxes should be completed once all tax filing and payment obligations have been met by the taxable person. To deregister, a taxable person should provide proof of deregistration as issued by the Chamber of Commerce to the Inspectorate of Taxes along with some additional documentation.

Changes to GET registration details. There are no specific requirements in the BES Islands to notify the tax authorities of changes to GET registration details. It is recommended to notify the tax authorities of any change, but there is no law prescribing this.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of GET, including the zero rate.

In Bonaire, the following rates of GET apply:
- Standard GET rate for services provided: 6%
- Standard GET rate for delivery of goods: 8%
- Standard GET rate for import of goods: 8%
- Other: 0%, 7%, 25%

In Sint Eustatius and Saba, the following rates of GET apply:
- Standard GET rate for services provided: 4%
- Standard GET rate for delivery of goods: 6%
- Standard GET rate for import of goods: 6%
- Other: 5%, 10%, 18%, 22%, 30%

The abovementioned standard rates of GET are applied to the payment for the delivery of goods or services provided or to the customs value of the goods imported, unless a specific measure provides for an exemption.

In Bonaire, the other GET rates of 7% and 5% apply to the supply of insurance through a broker. In Sint Eustatius and Saba, the other GET rates of 5%, 10%, 18%, 22% and 30% apply to cars and depend on the value of the car and the CO2 exhaust.

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to GET and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Medical services
- Basic necessities such as bread, cereal, potato, rice, vegetables, dairy products
- Water and electricity services
- Public transportation services
- Betting and gaming (casino)
- Services to a trading and services depot
- Postal services
- Lease of real estate that is designed to be used as a permanent residence and is permanently used by individual residents of the BES Islands
- Specific services provided by entrepreneurs established in trading and service depots in the BES Islands
- Exported goods

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in the BES Islands.

E. Time of supply

The time when GET becomes due is called the "time of supply." The basic time of supply for taxable supplies is in principle the date on which the invoice is issued or when an invoice should have been issued.

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in the BES Islands for deposits and prepayments. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above). The tax point is the earlier of either the payment or issued invoice.

Continuous supplies of services. The tax point arises at the time the invoice is issued or should have been issued for each installment. In the case of prepayment for an installment, the tax point arises at the time of receipt of payment.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in the BES Islands for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outline above). In the case of importation this would be the tax point. In the case of local supplies, the tax point is the earlier of either the payment or issued invoice for the goods or services.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in the BES Islands for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. There are no special time of supply rules in the BES Islands for supplies of leased assets. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above). The tax point arises at the time the invoice is issued or should have been issued for each installment. In the case of prepayment for an installment, the tax point arises at the moment of payment.

Imported goods. For imported goods the time of supply is considered to be the moment of importation.

F. Recovery of GET by taxable persons

GET is nondeductible in all cases apart from the purchase of raw and auxiliary materials and semifinished products for manufacture, provided the manufactured products are supplied with GET. As such, manufacturers in the BES Islands are the only types of taxable person that may recover GET.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in the BES Islands is five years.

Nondeductible input tax. GET is nondeductible in all cases apart from the purchase of raw materials for manufacture.

Examples of items for which input is nondeductible

- No specific examples (all GET is nondeductible apart from raw and auxiliary materials and semi-finished products for manufacture)

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Raw and auxiliary materials and semi-finished products for manufacture

GET on purchases is only recoverable on raw materials and nothing else.

Partial exemption. In general, GET is nondeductible in the BES Islands. As such, there is no distinction between input tax incurred in relation to exempt and taxable supplies. Consequently, the GET legislation does not specifically mention any regulations in connection with partial exemption.

Capital goods. In general, GET is nondeductible in the BES Islands. As such, there are no special rules regarding input tax incurred in relation to capital goods. Consequently, the GET legislation does not specifically mention any regulations in connection with capital goods.

Refunds. GET is nonrecoverable in all cases apart from the purchase of raw materials for manufacture. A refund of the recoverable GET can be requested via the local GET return. If a manufacturer did incorrectly not recover the GET, a refund request can be submitted to the tax authorities via a written letter.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in the BES Islands is not recoverable.

Bad debts. If payment for the supplied goods or services will eventually not be received by the business, a refund request can be submitted to the tax authorities.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in the BES Islands.

G. Recovery of GET by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for GET in the BES Islands is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

GET invoices. In the BES Islands, an invoice must be issued by an entrepreneur within 15 days following the end of the month in which the supply or service takes place.

Credit notes. A GET credit note could be issued, upon request, if the BES entrepreneur can prove that one of the following circumstances has occurred:
- A part or the entire amount of the compensation has not been received.
- The fee has been refunded as a result of a price deduction or if the goods have been returned in their original state.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in the BES Islands, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in the BES Islands.

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in the BES Islands.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Simplified GET invoices. Simplified GET invoicing is not allowed in the BES Islands. As such, full GET invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in the BES Islands.

Proof of exports. When trade goods are exported, an electronic customs declaration or, on request, a written declaration should be submitted.

Foreign currency invoices. An invoice can also be issued in a foreign currency. However, the invoice should also state the domestic currency, which is the United States dollar (USD).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no specific rules, and as such, a GET invoice should always be issued for all supplies.

Records. Taxable persons are required to keep records in such a manner that at any time their rights, obligations and all other information relevant for tax purposes is clear and readily available upon request from the tax authorities.

In the BES Islands, examples of what records must be held for GET purposes include copies of all AR invoices and foreign AP invoices for services.

In the BES Islands, GET books and records can be kept outside the country. This is provided these can be presented upon request of the tax authorities and the integrity and authenticity of the documents is safeguarded.

Record retention period. The retention period is seven years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in the BES Islands.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. GET returns are generally submitted for quarterly periods. However, on request of an entrepreneur, the Inspectorate of Taxes allow that GET due is remitted for monthly or annual periods (instead of quarterly periods). Returns must be filed by the 15th day of the month following the end of the reporting period.

Period payments. GET due must be paid by the 15th day of the month following the end of the reporting period. The GET due for the period must be remitted together with the return.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in the BES Islands, but not mandatory. Tax returns can be filed electronically with the Inspectorate of Taxes. In this regard, online credentials can be requested from the tax authorities.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in the BES Islands.

Special schemes. Trading and service depots. Specific services provided by entrepreneurs established in trading and service depots in the BES Islands are not subject to GET.

Services provided to entrepreneurs established in the trading and service depots in the BES Islands are not subject to GET, solely to the extent that the services are provided for activities that are legally permitted in a depot. Moreover, services performed, or goods delivered to entrepreneurs in the trading and service depots in the BES Islands are not subject to GET, solely to the extent that the services are performed, or goods are delivered in connection with goods or capital assets situated in such depot.

Small businesses. Small businesses are exempt from GET if it concerns an individual who:
- Is a resident of the BES Islands or has a permanent establishment in the BES Islands
- Can demonstrate they will have an annual turnover of USD30,000 or less

Cultural activities. Such supplies can be exempt from GET upon written request to the tax authorities. This is only allowed if it concerns an entrepreneur (not an individual) who exclusively or almost exclusively performs social and/or cultural activities.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in the BES Islands.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in the BES Islands.

Correcting errors in previous returns. In case a taxable person needs to correct any errors, formally they will need to file a new return over the respective period, or a reconciliation return. One can also file an objection against an incorrectly filed return and thus reclaim an overpayment.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in the BES Islands.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. In general, a BES entrepreneur, including a manufacturer that begins taxable activities must register with the tax authorities. Since there is no specific deadline for registration, a penalty is not imposed for late registration. However, if the late registration results in the late payment of GET or the late submission of GET returns, penalties may be imposed.

Penalties for late payment and filings. GET penalties are assessed for the late submission of a GET return or for the late payment of GET, in the following amounts:
- Late submission of a GET return: fine of up to USD1,400
- Late payment of GET: fine of up to USD5,600

If the late payment is caused by negligence or dishonest conduct, a fine equal to 100% of the GET payable may be imposed.

Penalties for errors. A negligence tax penalty of up to 100% of the additional tax due can be imposed if the deficit is attributable to the intent or gross negligence of the taxable person.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify changes to a taxable person's GET registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to GET registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Criminal penalties may also apply in certain circumstances, such as in cases of fraudulent conduct. In case of serious fraud, the tax authorities may submit the case with the district attorney's office for criminal prosecution. Depending on the circumstances, the district attorney may decide to prosecute for either forgery (*valsheid in geschrif*te) with a penalty of up to USD56,000 or up to six years imprisonment, or money laundering (witwassen) with a penalty of up to USD56,000 or up to 12 years imprisonment.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in GET declarations and reporting in the BES Islands.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- Importation of goods into Bosnia and Herzegovina, regardless of the status of the importer
- Services purchased by a taxable person in Bosnia and Herzegovina from service providers whose place of business is outside Bosnia and Herzegovina, with Bosnia and Herzegovina regarded as the place of supply (subject to the reverse-charge mechanism)

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, the following services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions (B2B/B2C):

- Transferring, assigning, releasing and placing property rights at the disposal of someone, copyright, patent rights, licenses, trademarks and other intellectual property rights
- Advertising
- Consultants, engineers, lawyers, auditors, accountants, interpreters, data processors and providers data

- Banking, financial services and services in the field of insurance and reinsurance, except rental of safes
- Staff rental
- Providing of telecommunication services, which includes transmission, broadcasting or reception of signs, signals, text, images, sounds or information via cable, optical or other electromagnetic systems, including the right to use such transmission, broadcast or reception
- Rental of movable property including vehicle rental services
- Mediation during the provision of services listed above

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- The acquired assets are used for business purposes in the form acquired
- The transferee is a taxable person or becomes a taxable person through the acquisition
- The transferee continues performing the same business/taxable activity
- The transferee has, or will receive, the same input tax deduction rate that the transferor had
- The transferor is obliged to inform the Indirect Taxation Authority (ITA) of the transaction (about the identity of the transferee and the amount paid for it) within eight days from the day of the sale

Transactions between related parties. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated at the open market value. If the sale of goods or services involves the existence of family or other close personal ties, as well as relations of management, ownership, membership, financial or legal relations (the relationship between the employer and the employee or the employee's family or other closely related persons) between the supplier and the customer, i.e., when that connection or relationship (and not some comparable commercial reasons) lead to a value lower than the market price, the VAT base is the market value of the goods or services at the moment of their turnover without VAT.

C. Who is liable

Taxable persons are all individuals and legal entities registered, or required to be registered, for VAT. In addition, a taxable person is defined as per the VAT law as any person who independently performs an economic activity, which refers to the activity of a producer, trader or service provider that is carried out with the aim of generating income, including the activities of natural resource exploitation, agriculture, forestry and professional activities, as well as the use of property or property rights for the purpose of generating income. Also, a taxable person is the person in whose name and on whose account the transfer of goods, i.e., services or import of goods is carried out, as well as a person who trades goods, i.e., services or imports goods in its own name, and for the account of another person.

Any taxable person making taxable supplies of goods and services that exceeds or is likely to exceed a threshold of BAM100,000 in calendar year is required to register for VAT. A taxable person who became or may become liable for VAT for the first time is obliged to submit a registration form for VAT to the ITA no later than the 20th of the calendar month following the end of the month in which the taxable person realized or is likely to realize the turnover of goods or services in the amount that is higher than the amount of the prescribed threshold.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Bosnia and Herzegovina does not contain any provision for exemption from registration. This means that anyone who performs taxable turnover in the amount that exceeds the prescribed threshold is obliged to register for VAT. Note that the state, government departments and similar bodies established for the purpose of performing activities within the scope of administrative bodies, as well as entities operating in the public sector, are not obliged to register for VAT in the case that they perform only trade in goods and services within the activities in which they enter as administrative bodies or as entities in the public sector.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Upon its incorporation, a legal entity has the option to seek voluntary registration in the VAT system – immediately upon incorporation or later once the entity estimates that it will exceed taxable turnover (BAM100,000) by performing taxable activities within the calendar year whereby exact time deadline for voluntary registration is not prescribed. All rights (i.e., deduction of input tax) and obligations (i.e., calculation of output tax) from the VAT law would be applicable as of the day when VAT number is acquired (practically once appeared in tax authority's data base).

An option is available for small businesses (annual turnover below BAM100,000) to register for VAT by submitting a registration VAT form to the ITA, thereby acquiring the rights and obligations to compute and deduct VAT. The minimum obligation to be VAT registered from voluntarily registering of a small business, to account and pay VAT is for five years.

Group registration. When several taxable persons jointly perform activities that are taxable under VAT law, the ITA may, at the request of those taxable persons, grant group VAT registration. The condition for joint registration is that one taxable person, legal entity or parent company, directly or indirectly, through the possession of all shares, fully owns a subsidiary company or companies of another taxable person that are included in the group VAT registration.

After the registration procedure has been completed, the ITA assigns an identification number (VAT number) and issues a decision on VAT registration to the "parent" company.

All members of a VAT group in Bosnia and Herzegovina are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties. Note that the VAT legislation does not prescribe any further detail other than the above, and in practice the ITA considers all participants involved in a group registration to be jointly and severally liable.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group. However, note that group VAT registration is not common in practice.

Fixed establishment. In Bosnia and Herzegovina there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes.

Non-established businesses. Note that the VAT law does not define a non-established business (i.e., a business that does not have a registered establishment in Bosnia and Herzegovina) as a taxable person. Therefore, a non-established business cannot be registered for VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina. However, in case taxable supplies goods or services are performed locally by the non-established business and as such subject to Bosnian VAT, a foreign entity/head office would be obliged to register for VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina by way of appointing a VAT representative.

A non-established business that does not make any supplies of goods or services in Bosnia and Herzegovina may claim a VAT refund, under prescribed conditions (see Section G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses below).

Tax representatives. Note that Bosnian VAT legislation stipulates the possibility for a non-established business to register for Bosnian VAT purposes through appointment of a VAT representative (who must have a registered seat in Bosnia and Herzegovina). In this case, a non-established business and its VAT representative are jointly liable for the VAT compliance of the non-established business. The VAT representative should comply with all the non-established business's VAT obligations, including calculation for VAT liabilities of the foreign entity.

Reverse charge. According to Bosnian tax legislation, the reverse-charge mechanism is applied for prescribed services supplied by a non-established business to an entity that is established and registered for VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina (i.e., business-to-business (B2B) supplies). The reverse charge only applies to services if the non-established business has not appointed a tax representative in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Under the reverse charge, the Bosnian taxable person would be required to self-assess and account for the VAT due.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Digital economy. There are no special rules for the provision of electronically supplied services.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies would be required to register and account for VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina. This would have to be done via a tax representative (see the subsections Non-established businesses and Tax representatives above).

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B supplies are not required to register and account for VAT on supplies in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the subsection Reverse charge above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Vouchers. The issuance of a voucher (only containing available amount of money to be utilized) does not represent a taxable turnover, unless the voucher is issued for a specific product/service with an exact price, in which case it is treated as an advance payment.

Registration procedures. The procedure of VAT registration is defined by the law on VAT and rulebook on the application of the law on VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The following documents (which must be submitted in paper form) are required for VAT registration in Bosnia and Herzegovina:

- Prescribed form for registration (form ZR1, in Bosnian language)
- Decision on company registration in the court register (for legal entities) or decision on performing activities (for individuals)
- Certificate of registration from the competent tax administration of the entity
- ID card of the owner and other responsible persons of the company
- A work permit and registration of residence for a foreign responsible person, issued by the entity's competent authorities

- Power of attorney authorizing B&H citizen to represent taxable person in proceedings with ITA, in case of absence of foreign responsible person
- Owner's passport and/or foreign responsible person's passport
- Carton of deposited signatures signed by the commercial banks where the company has opened accounts
- Certificate on main bank account
- Deposit slip on paid administrative fees

Notwithstanding the above general documents, in registration process, the ITA has the discretion to request additional documents depending on the circumstances of the case.

Note that in practice, the ITA takes about two months to handle the application and issue the certificate on VAT registration. However, prior to receiving the final certificate of VAT registration, the taxable person can get information if registered in the VAT system earlier through the ITA's online database (it varies from case to case but usually it is visible for less than a month); practically once appeared in the ITA's database, the taxable person is considered as VAT registered.

Deregistration. The taxable person may submit a request for VAT deregistration if it meets the following conditions:
- In the previous calendar year, the taxable person's realized taxable turnover was below BAM100,000
- The taxable person has sold, ceded or transferred a registered business entity, or after the completion of bankruptcy or liquidation proceedings
- The taxable person has changed the area of business, switched from a taxable to a nontaxable business activity, or an activity that is exempt from VAT

The request for deregistration is a free form act (i.e., there is no prescribed form) with which the applicant enters and encloses its original certificate of VAT registration/entry in the Register; full name of the obligor; the address of the obligor; a detailed explanation of the reasons for termination of registration with the necessary attachments.

Changes to VAT registration details. The taxable person is obliged to report to the ITA any change in the data from the Register (address, name of company, activity type, data on responsible persons, etc.,) within eight days after the change occurs. There is no prescribed way in which changes must be submitted but having in mind that the application for registration is submitted in paper form, it is recommended the changes are submitted in the same way.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 17%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported goods
- Supply/use of goods in the free zones and warehouses
- Imported goods to the free zones and warehouses (except customs warehouses)
- Transport and other services to users of free zones that are directly related to the delivery of goods into the free zone and the construction of facilities intended for the performance of activities in the free zone

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Leasing and subletting of residential houses, apartments and residential premises for a period of longer than 60 days
- Supply of immovable property, except for the first transfer of the ownership rights or the rights to dispose of a newly built construction object or an economically divisible unit within the object
- Financial services
- Insurance and reinsurance services
- Educational services provided by private or public educational institutions
- Delivery of gold to the Central Bank of Bosnia and Herzegovina
- Postal services
- Lottery games

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

E. Time of supply

The time of supply for a supply of goods takes place on the earlier of the following:

- When the supply of goods is performed
- When the invoice is issued
- When the payment or partial payment is made before the invoice is issued
- When the invoice is issued, and VAT amount corrected due to subsequent change of tax base
- In the case of use of goods for nonbusiness purposes, the tax liability arises at the end of the tax period in which the use was made.

A supply of goods is also considered to be "performed" on the date when the dispatch or transport of the goods starts, or on the date when ownership of the goods is transferred to the purchaser (if transport is not included). The time of supply of imported goods is considered to be the date on which the goods arrive in the Bosnian customs territory.

The time of supply for a supply of services takes place on the earlier of the following:

- When the supply of services is performed
- When the invoice is issued
- When the payment or partial payment is made before the invoice is issued
- When the invoice is issued, and VAT amount corrected due to subsequent change of tax base
- In the case of use of services for nonbusiness purposes, the tax liability arises at the end of the tax period in which the service was made

Services are considered to be "performed" on the date when the provision of the individual service is finished. Apart from this, if periodical invoices are issued for the service, the supply of that service is considered finished on the last day of the tax period for which that invoice relates. A partial service is considered to be "performed" at the moment when the provision of that part of the service is finished.

Deposits and prepayments. In case a prepayment is made before the invoice is issued, or before the supply of goods and services are performed, the time of supply is considered on the date when the prepayment is made (as outlined above).

Continuous supplies of services. There are no special time of supply rules in Bosnia and Herzegovina for supplies of continuous supplies of services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Bosnia and Herzegovina for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply of reverse-charge services is the date when the invoice is received. As such, after receiving the invoice, the taxable person is obliged to calculate VAT, and based on such invoice to record in the book of output invoices only the amount of calculated VAT, with reference to the invoice number in the tax period when it was received. If the taxable person meets the conditions prescribed by VAT law, the taxable person has the right to deduct input tax in the tax period when the invoice was received.

Leased assets. There are separate guidelines that set out the conditions that must be fulfilled for a lease to be regarded as a sale of goods or sale of services. If a lease is regarded as a supply of goods, the time of supply is when the goods are handed over. If a lease is regarded as a supply of a service, the time of supply is when the leasing provider issues an invoice for each individual lease installment (as outlined above).

Imported goods. The time of supply of imported goods is considered to be the date on which the goods arrive in the Bosnian customs territory.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Bosnia and Herzegovina, VAT paid on imports of goods and VAT accounted for to reverse-charge services.

The main condition that needs to be fulfilled for the deduction of input tax to be allowed is that the acquisition of goods or services that are used or should be used for the purpose of performing a taxable activity, for business purposes. Additional conditions are as follows:
- The invoices for the goods received or services performed indicate the VAT amount and are in line with the form prescribed by the VAT law
- The supply of goods or services was received from another taxable person (B2B)
- The VAT law does not exclude the right to deduct input tax for received goods or services.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Bosnia and Herzegovina is five years.

Nondeductible input tax. Effectively, any expenditure that is not business related is nondeductible from an input tax perspective. Such VAT will be treated as an expense or capitalized.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Expenditures related to acquisition and import of cars, boats, yachts, motorcycles, aircraft, fuel and spare parts, as well as goods and services related to their maintenance and storage
- Expenditure related to business entertainment and accommodation
- Expenditures related to the acquisition of immovable property used by the taxable person or its staff as a facility for housing, children's stay or as a facility for recreation and leisure activities
- Expenditures of taxable persons and employees for "representation," e.g., entertainment expenses
- Expenditures to employees in goods

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to taxable business use)

- Employee expenses for business purposes
- Cargo vehicles for business use (the deduction of VAT on passenger vehicles is usually not allowed, except in the case when it is necessary for business, i.e., specialized transport of goods)
- Business maintenance costs

Partial exemption. If acquired goods or services are used partly for purposes of taxable supplies and partly for exempt supplies, the taxable person may not deduct input tax totally. The taxable person should divide the part of the input tax relating to taxable supplies and that which does not relate to taxable supplies.

The proportional input tax deduction calculation is determined by applying the calculated percentage to the amount of input tax reduced by the amount that the taxable person is not entitled to deduct.

If acquired goods or services will be used in an insignificant part (up to 5%) for taxable purposes, such delivery is considered to have been made entirely for nontaxable purposes. From the other side, a taxable person is not obliged to perform division of the input tax, if the established percentage of proportional input tax deduction is at least 95%, i.e., such delivery is considered to have been made entirely for taxable purposes.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Special methods are not allowed in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Capital goods. Capital goods are defined as facilities and equipment that are used in a business. Input tax is generally deducted in the year in which the capital goods are acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition.

However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted if the taxable person ceases to meet the conditions for deduction of input tax in the period of 5 years from the first usage of the equipment, 10 years from the first usage of the facilities and the investment in the facilities. A capital goods adjustment applies for a period represented in the difference between the aforementioned periods (5 or 10 years) and the period in which the taxable person had the right to deduct input tax.

Exceptionally, the taxable person does not have an obligation to adjust input tax on the capital goods in the case that equipment or facilities become unusable before the expiry of the input tax adjustment period.

Refunds. If the input tax incurred is higher than the output tax paid, the taxable person has a right to obtain a refund or to use this amount as a tax credit. To claim the input tax refund, the taxable person must tick the box in its VAT return for the input tax refund.

However, if credit is not used within six months it will be automatically refunded. The standard refund period is 60 days, whereby for taxable persons predominantly engaged in export related activities, the refund period is reduced to 30 days. If the ITA does not refund the input tax difference within the prescribed deadlines, the taxable person is entitled to the prescribed interest that begins on the first day after the deadline for refund until the day of transfer of funds to the taxable person's account.

Pre-registration costs. In Bosnian legislation it is prescribed that input tax can also be deducted from the beginning of the commencement of taxable activity, i.e., during the preparations for the beginning of the activity.

Note that this right cannot be used on received deliveries such as privately motivated investments, preparatory investments, etc., that do not lead to entrepreneurial status and entrepreneurial business. By way of further information, note that this is not commonly used or approved by ITA in practice.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) can be recovered in Bosnia and Herzegovina. This is only allowed if prescribed conditions are met. The taxable person may claim the bad debt relief on the price that has not been paid by the customer. This is only allowed if the amount cannot be collected after all legal remedies have been exhausted (such as possessing a final binding court decision on the completed bankruptcy proceedings, certified minutes on compulsory settlement with debtors, etc.).

Additionally, note that the taxable person is required to issue a credit note to reduce the output tax (see the subsection Credit notes below).

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina is recoverable. Foreign legal entities may obtain refunds of VAT incurred in Bosnia and Herzegovina solely if they do not have headquarters, residence, business unit or other form of established business, nor perform any supply of goods and services in Bosnia and Herzegovina (to the extent the input tax deduction would also be allowed for resident/established businesses). This is except for some specific services related to import and export of goods included in the customs base and except for services for which the obligation of calculation the VAT is on the recipient).

A non-established business must appoint a tax representative who represents the non-established business with the ITA in all proceedings related to a VAT refund.

The request for a VAT refund must be submitted for a period that includes at least three months, and at most a calendar year. If the application is submitted for a period of three months, it is submitted quarterly. The refund request is submitted no later than 30 June of the current year for the purchases made in previous year. The refund request shall be submitted only for VAT amounts exceeding BAM800, except if the request is submitted for a period of one calendar year, the amount of VAT for which a refund is requested may not be less than BAM100.

Note a VAT registration specifically for a VAT refund differs from a normal VAT registration for carrying out activities (for established business) in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The procedure is simpler, as it entails only acquiring a VAT number for the purpose of the VAT refund.

Bosnia and Herzegovina does not generally exclude any jurisdictions from the refund scheme for non-established businesses. The VAT refund rules apply to all nonresident entities in the same manner, regardless of the jurisdiction of its establishment, i.e., there is no reciprocity rule applicable.

The general conditions that must be met for a VAT refund for nonresident taxable persons are as follows:

- The nonresident is a VAT payer, in the jurisdiction where it has an established business, i.e., where it is performing taxable activities.
- The nonresident is not registered or has no obligation to register and account for VAT in Bosnia and Herzegovina.
- The nonresident does not have a headquarters, residence, business unit or other form of permanent business in Bosnia and Herzegovina.
- The nonresident does not perform a supply of goods/services in Bosnia and Herzegovina, except for some specific services related to import and export of goods included in the customs base and except for services for which the obligation of calculating VAT is on the recipient of services.
- The nonresident should be registered with the ITA (via its VAT representative) and obtain a record number for VAT refund purposes.

- A VAT refund can be requested only for supplies of goods and/or services for which the nonresident taxable person would be entitled to deduct the input tax both in Bosnia and Herzegovina and its resident jurisdiction.
- The nonresident taxable person must possess an original tax invoice of supplied goods and/or services in Bosnia and Herzegovina, which are issued in accordance with Bosnian VAT law.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports. The invoice must comply with the requirements set out in the VAT law.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged on a supply of goods or services – provided the buyer is a taxable person and has confirmed that the input tax has been corrected or if the goods are returned after the invoice is issued; a debit note may be used to increase the amount of VAT. Tax credit and debit notes must be cross-referenced to the original VAT invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed, but not mandatory in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Bosnia and Herzegovina. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

From a VAT perspective, which is set at the state level, and based on the official guidance from the ITA, taxable persons must issue invoice which contains all mandatory elements prescribed by VAT legislation.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Bosnia and Herzegovina. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Proof of exports. For proof of exports, an export declaration with confirmation that the goods have left Bosnian territory is required.

Foreign currency invoices. A Bosnian VAT invoice for domestic supplies must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Bosnian convertible mark (BAM). If an invoice is received in a foreign currency, the amounts must be converted into BAM. The exchange rate used for imports is determined by customs, while the exchange rate for domestic VAT supplies is the middle exchange rate published by the Central Bank of Bosnia and Herzegovina, applicable on the date when the tax obligation takes place.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Bosnia and Herzegovina. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include the records of received invoices/transactions and records of issued invoices/transactions. Such evidence should contain certain data on invoice or customs declaration number (in case of import), the net fee paid, the applicable VAT rate, the amount of calculated VAT, the total amount of turnover during one VAT period and other data.

In Bosnia and Herzegovina, VAT books and records can be held outside of the country. Restrictions regarding the place of storage of documentation are not explicitly prescribed in the Bosnian VAT law. Those evidence are kept in accordance with accounting regulations.

Record retention period. VAT records and all supporting documents based on which the VAT records are maintained (e.g., invoices) should be kept until the expiry of statute of limitation period for determination and collection of VAT (statute of limitation period is 5 years; absolute limitation is 10 years).

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The laws on accounting (in different tax jurisdictions in Bosnia and Herzegovina) prescribes that accounting documents may be stored in original material and electronic form, in the form of an electronic record or on microfilm, a taxable person can provide authentic electronic invoices upon the request of ITA. It is recommended that the documentation should be kept in paper form, because the tax authority usually requires insight into such a form of documentation during tax audits.

Note that Bosnia and Herzegovina consists of three jurisdictions whereby each has its own tax legislation concerning direct taxes and accounting regulations. Indirect taxes like VAT and customs and excises are regulated on the state level.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The tax period in Bosnia and Herzegovina is a calendar month. VAT obligations must be reported within 10 days after the end of the tax period (i.e., the 10th of the following month for previous month). For example, the January 2023 VAT return is due by 10 February 2023.

Periodic payments. The deadline for VAT payment is the same as the deadline for the filing of VAT returns, i.e., within 10 days after the expiration of the tax period. Upon submitting the VAT return electronically via the portal e-Taxes (e-porezi), the taxable person pays the VAT liability by transferring funds to the prescribed public revenue account. The VAT payable by a taxable person for a tax period equals the VAT on the total taxable value of supplies made during the tax period minus any input tax allowed as a deduction.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Bosnia and Herzegovina for all taxable persons. The submission of a VAT return, as well as the submission of D PDV, is completed electronically. Taxable persons must use the "e-Taxes portal" (https://e-porezi.uino.gov.ba:4443/Account/LogOn?ReturnUrl=%2f). It collects electronic services for the Bosnian ITA, enables all taxable persons to submit online tax forms, provides follow up on the status of submitted applications with insight into the taxable person's tax card, and provides faster and simpler fulfillment of obligations toward tax administration. This system meets high security standards that enable safe and uncompromised electronic data transfer.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Special schemes. Construction works. Bosnian VAT law stipulates a special regime for construction works performed at the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina whose total amount exceed EUR12,500. In this respect, it should be clarified who is deemed to be investor (an entity that finances construction works on its immovable property), main contractor (an entity that has directly concluded construction works agreement with the investor) and subcontractor (an entity that delivers goods needed for construction works and provides services related to delivered goods and therefore has impact on construction works). It is important to bear in mind that the special regime only applies to the relation between the main contractor and subcontractor. In this respect, the subcontractor invoices the main contractor with the VAT calculated on its invoice. However, the main contractor pays only net amount to the subcontractor while the amount of calculated VAT is paid directly to the ITA. On the other side, the subcontractor pays VAT regularly to the ITA while it can utilize the VAT paid by main contractor as input tax once it receives confirmation/proof that VAT was paid by the main contractor to the ITA.

Tour operator's scheme. Tourist services provided by a tourist agency are considered as a single service. The tax base of the single tourist service provided by a tourist agency is the amount representing the difference between total price paid by a passenger and actual expenses paid by the tourist agency for preliminary tourist services, after deducting the VAT that is included in that difference. The tourist agency is obliged to issue a VAT invoice to the service user, or any other document that serves as a tax invoice, for the performed tourist service.

Works of art, secondhand goods, antique goods. Taxable persons engaged in the trade of used goods, including secondhand goods, works of art, collector's goods and antiques determine the tax base as the difference between the sale price and the purchase price of the goods by deducting the VAT that is included in that difference. If the purchase price is higher than the sale price, the taxable amount is zero. To use this scheme, the special conditions specified in the regulations must be met.

Small businesses. Small businesses (defined as businesses whose total turnover in the previous calendar year does not exceed BAM100,000) do not charge VAT for performed trade of goods and services, do not have the right to indicate the VAT in invoices and are not entitled to deduct input tax. Also, they are not required to keep records prescribed by VAT law.

Farmers. Generally, farmers who are not taxable persons are entitled to a flat-rate input tax fee when purchasing agricultural and forestry goods and services resulting from activities subject to cadastral income tax on agriculture and forestry, provided they have previously received approval from the ITA.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Supplementary filings. D PDV. Taxable persons are also obliged to file a D PDV form along with the VAT return. Dodatak uz PDV prijavu (D PDV) is the official name of the form and in English would be "Addition to the VAT return." Its purpose is a more detailed explanation of the selected items of the output and input fields in the VAT return and the corresponding input and output tax. Only data related to the tax period for which the VAT return is submitted are entered in D PDV.

E-KIF and e-KUF. Taxable persons must submit e-KIF (book of outgoing invoices) and e-KUF (book of incoming invoices) by the 20th of the month after the end of the tax period to which these records refer. Submission of data on procurement and deliveries electronically is done within the e-Taxes portal.

Correcting errors in previous returns. If a taxable person finds that the VAT return submitted to the ITA contains an error that results in an incorrectly determined amount of tax liability, or an omission of another type, it is obliged to immediately, and no later than the expiration of the statute of limitations (i.e., five years), file a corrective VAT return in which the error or omission has been rectified. The amended VAT return must be submitted electronically via the e-Taxes portal. Note, there is no obligation to include an explanatory letter to accompany the corrective VAT return. However, every corrected VAT return usually triggers VAT audit.

An administrative fee of BAM10,000 must be paid for the purposes of correcting the VAT return (the amount does not change on an annual basis). Proof of payment of the administrative fee on the changed VAT return must be sent electronically (to the official e-mail address).

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. If a taxable person fails to notify the ITA about the commencement of it performing taxable activity (i.e., its obligation to register for VAT), the taxable person will be fined in the amount of 100% of the obligation that was not notified due to the taxable person's omission, and at least BAM1,000.

Penalties for late payment and filings. For the late payment of VAT due, a taxable person will be fined in the amount corresponding to the amount of 50%–200% of the unpaid calculated amount, and at least in the amount of BAM100. The percentage determined on unpaid obligations (50%–200%) depends on initially unpaid amount of VAT, i.e., the significance of the omission.

For late filing of a VAT return due, a taxable person will be fined a penalty in the range of BAM300 to BAM1,000. With respect to late payment interest, note that it is currently set at the rate of 0.04% per day.

Penalties for errors. If a taxable person establishes that a VAT return, which it submitted to the ITA, contains an error that results in a wrongly determined amount of tax liability, or omission of another kind, it is obliged to immediately file a tax return in which the error or omission is remedied (see the subsection Correcting errors in previous returns above).

Incorrect VAT reporting may lead to penalty of 50%–200% of the difference between the correct VAT amount that should have been reported and unreported/incorrectly reported VAT amount if the error does cause economic damage to the ITA or impose economic risk on public revenues. If the error does not cause economic damage to the ITA or does not impose economic risk on public revenues, a fine in the fixed amount of BAM1,000 is prescribed. The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty of BAM500. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. The criminal law of Bosnia and Herzegovina prescribes key tax criminal offenses (among others) for tax evasion and filing forged/false tax returns, etc. Regarding the tax fraud/evasion, the threshold for this criminal act is very low (the amount of tax whose payment is avoided exceeds the amount of BAM10,000) and the penalty in this regard is imprisonment from six months to five years. Moreover, if the mentioned tax liability exceeds BAM100,000 the offender shall be punished by imprisonment of one to 10 years, and if tax liability exceeds BAM200,000, the offender shall be punished by imprisonment of minimum three years.

Personal liability for company officers. The general rule is that the responsible person in the legal entity is the person who on the basis of the law, regulation or authorization conducts certain managerial, supervisory or other functions in the company, as well as the person who factually conducts certain work – substance over form. This is presumably a director, although it can be proved that some other person/company official has been liable for certain activities of the company. In Bosnian legislation, a responsible person working for a legal entity (i.e., director) is subject to the same fine as the legal entity as stated above.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Bosnia and Herzegovina is five or 10 years. The statute of limitation period in Bosnia and Herzegovina in which the tax authority may go back and assess additional tax liabilities is generally set at five years, whereby the absolute statute of limitation for indirect taxes is set at 10 years.

The prescribed five years period for VAT liability assessment and VAT payment start counting from the day after the deadline for submitting VAT return, i.e., after the payment deadline.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of goods and services in Botswana by a taxable person
- Reverse-charge services received by a person making exempt supplies in Botswana
- The importation of goods from outside Botswana, regardless of the status of the importer

Goods that are imported from countries within the Southern African Customs Union (consisting of Botswana, Lesotho, Namibia, South Africa and Eswatini) are not subject to customs duty.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Botswana, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Botswana, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- All goods and services necessary for the continued operation of that taxable activity or that part of the taxable activity are supplied to the transferee.
- The transferor carries on, or is carrying on, that taxable activity or that part of the taxable activity up to the time of its transfer to the transferee.
- A notice in writing should be signed by the transferor and transferee and furnished to the Commissioner General within 21 days after the supply takes place and such notice should include the details of the supply.

Transactions between related parties. In Botswana, for a transaction between related parties the value for VAT purposes is calculated at the fair market value of that supply.

C. Who is liable

Any registered person that makes supplies of taxable goods and services in Botswana in the course of a business is liable for VAT. For this purpose, a person includes the state, a local authority, board, natural person, trust, company and partnership.

The VAT registration threshold is BWP1 million. A taxable person must notify the Botswana VAT authorities of its liability to register for VAT within 21 days after becoming liable.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Botswana does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law of Botswana provides for voluntary VAT registration where any person applies for voluntary registration where the person's turnover is below the BWP1 million threshold and meets the following criteria:

- The person has a fixed place of abode or business in Botswana.
- The person can keep proper records.
- The person submits regular and reliable VAT returns, as required under the VAT Act.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Botswana.

Fixed establishment. In Botswana there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in Botswana. A non-established business that makes supplies of goods or services in Botswana must appoint a representative in order to register for VAT. The representative must be resident in Botswana.

Tax representatives. In the case of a nonresident person, a tax representative must be appointed to register for VAT. The representative must be resident in Botswana and is defined as a public officer, director, trustee, partner, liquidator, or other person who controls the nonresident person's affairs in Botswana. The Commissioner General may, if they consider it necessary, declare any person to be a representative of a registered person.

Reverse charge. Under the reverse-charge mechanism, VAT is payable by the importer on the importation of a service, if the service is imported for use in making exempt or nontaxable supplies. The VAT is payable within 30 days of the importation. The importer of the service in Botswana is required to complete form VAT 017 when making the VAT payment.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Botswana.

Digital economy. Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT on supplies in Botswana. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due. This only applies if the customer imports the service to make nontaxable or exempt supplies (e.g., supplies by financial institutions such as banks or life insurance businesses). In that case, the customer is not allowed to claim the VAT as input tax, so the payment would not be VAT-neutral. For B2B supplies where the customer imports the service to make taxable supplies, no VAT is accounted for on the electronically supplied service.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT. Instead, the customer (as an individual) is expected to self-assess VAT on the payment, as the individual will be importing the service to make nontaxable supplies.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Botswana.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Botswana.

Registration procedures. Application for registration is accomplished by manually completing form BURS1 and submitting it, stamped and signed by the local bankers, by post to the Revenue Authority with copies of the following documents:
- ID or passport for two directors
- ID or passport for public officer (i.e., the tax representative, who should be a resident)
- Certificate of Incorporation
- Memorandum and Articles of Association (if available)
- Forms 2, 2A, B, C and D (list of directors)
- A list of assets (if any)
- Details of local bank accounts

Deregistration. A person who intends to deregister is required to complete application form IRD/DE-REG1. The process takes three to 12 months and may involve an audit.

Changes to VAT registration details. Registered persons shall notify the Commissioner General, in writing, of the following changes:
- Any change in the name, address, place of business, constitution or nature of the principal taxable activity or activities of the person
- Any change of address from which, or name in which, a taxable activity is carried on by the registered person, within 21 days of the change occurring

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
• Standard rate: 14%
• Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

The standard rate was increased from 12% to 14% from 1 March 2023. It was previously temporarily reduced to 12% for the six-month period beginning 3 August 2022 to 28 February 2023.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

• Exports of goods and services
• Cooking oil
• International transport
• Sale of a business as a going concern to a registered person
• Fuel for vehicles
• Illuminating paraffin
• Petroleum gas
• Sorghum and maize meal for human consumption
• Bread flour, sugar, brown bread, fresh fruits, rice, milk and samp (i.e., coarsely ground corn)
• Intellectual property rights for use outside Botswana
• Household consumption of water up to 5,000 liters or 25 drums of 200 liters

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

• Medical services provided in a public medical facility
• Supply of prescription drugs
• Education
• Some agricultural farming implements
• Financial services (unless provided for a fee, charge or commission)

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Botswana.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." In Botswana, the basic tax point is the earlier of the issuance of an invoice or the receipt of any payment.

Other tax points are used for a variety of situations.

The following is the tax point for supplies between related persons:
• For a supply of goods, either when the goods are removed or when they are made available to the purchaser or recipient of the goods.
• For a supply of services, when the services are performed.

The tax point for periodic supplies is the earlier of the date on which payment is due or the date on which payment is received.

The tax point for goods or services provided to a branch or principal business outside Botswana is when the goods are delivered or when the services are performed.

Deposits and prepayments. The tax point for the supply of goods or services on payment of a deposit (other than a deposit paid on a returnable basis) is when the supplier applies the deposit as consideration for the supply, or when the deposit is forfeited.

For deposits paid on a returnable basis, the time of supply is when the deposit is paid or invoiced, whichever is earlier.

The time of supply for supplies of goods or services on payment of a prepayment is when the prepayment is received.

Continuous supplies of services. As under operating leased assets, supplies are treated as successively supplied for successive parts of the period of the agreement, and each of the successive supplies occurs when a payment becomes due or is received, whichever is the earlier.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There is no special time of supply rule in Botswana for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules applies, which as outlined above, is the earlier of the issuance of the invoice or the receipt of payment.

Reverse-charge services. The recipient of imported services is required to self-assess for VAT within 30 days of importation of the service. No reverse-charge mechanism applies in Botswana on the importation of goods.

Leased assets. For operating leases, assets are treated as successively supplied for successive parts of the period of the agreement, and each of the successive supplies occurs when a payment becomes due or is received, whichever is the earlier.

For finance leases (i.e., credit agreements), the time of supply is when the goods are delivered or the time any payment for the supply is received, whichever is earlier.

Imported goods. The tax point for imported goods depends on the customs regime that applies to the import. The following are the applicable rules:

- For imported goods that must be cleared through customs under the Customs and Excise Duty Act, it is when the goods are cleared.
- For goods that are imported from the Southern African Customs Union, it is when the goods are brought into Botswana.
- For goods imported and entered into a Customs and Excise bonded warehouse, it is when the goods are cleared from the warehouse.

The tax point for imported services is 30 days from the date of importation.

VAT-registered persons may apply for a VAT-deferment account. The importer is authorized to pay VAT on imports 25 days after the end of the month in which the goods are imported. To qualify for a deferment account, the importer must place with the VAT office a bond equal to the greater of BWP20,000 or 20% of its estimated monthly imports. Input tax paid through the VAT-deferment account may be reclaimed only if it has actually been paid.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. Input tax is claimed by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Botswana is four months. This is from the date of the invoice. Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services purchased within Botswana and VAT paid on imports of goods.

Nondeductible input tax. VAT may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (e.g., goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). In addition, input tax may not be recovered on certain specified business expenses.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible even if the expenditure is for purposes of making a taxable supply and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Purchase and hire of passenger cars
- Entertainment including food, accommodation and hospitality of any form
- Sponsorship that constitutes entertainment subscriptions to sports and recreational clubs

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Purchase, hire and maintenance of non-passenger motor vehicles
- Maintenance of passenger motor vehicles
- Advertising
- Parking
- Mobile phones
- Business use of a home telephone (but an employer is liable to VAT if it pays for the private telephone bills of the employee)

Partial exemption. VAT directly related to making exempt supplies is not recoverable. A registered person who makes both exempt and taxable supplies cannot recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as making "mixed supplies."

VAT that relates to making mixed supplies must be apportioned using a method acceptable to the tax authorities to allocate the VAT between taxable supplies and exempt supplies. Every registered person who is required to apportion the input tax credits should advise the Commissioner in writing of the proposed apportionment, which should be based on the prior financial year proportions between taxable and exempt turnovers. Input tax related to taxable supplies may be deducted in full. VAT related to exempt supplies may not be deducted. If taxable supplies exceed 90% of the total supplies made by a registered person, all VAT incurred by the registered person may be claimed as input tax.

Capital goods. A VAT-registered person can recover input tax incurred on acquisition or importation of capital goods used for making taxable supplies. Capital goods mean assets that are subject to capital allowances under the Income Tax Act. If the capital goods are used for taxable and exempt supplies, the portion of input tax relating to exempt supplies that is not recoverable is capitalized to be part of the cost of the asset, and so is the VAT paid on capital goods that is not recoverable as input tax, e.g., VAT on capital goods used for entertainment. The input tax is recovered at the same time and in the same manner as other VAT on the acquisition or importation of the goods.

Refunds. A VAT-registered person is entitled to a refund of excess input tax if input tax exceeds output tax in a tax period. The VAT authorities must pay VAT refunds by the following deadlines:

- One calendar month following the due date of the return for exporters, operators of VAT manufacturing warehouses and international financial service center companies
- Two calendar months following the due date of the return for all other registered persons

Before any refund is paid, the input tax credit is applied against any tax, levy, interest or penalty payable by the registered person (under the terms of the VAT Act, the Customs and Excise Duty Act or the Income Tax Act).

Pre-registration costs. A VAT-registered person can recover input tax incurred on costs in the first tax period in which the person is registered for VAT in respect of the following:

- Taxable supplies of goods, other than capital goods, made to the person.

- Any imports of goods, other than capital goods, made by the person prior to becoming registered, to the extent that the goods are for use or resupply in a taxable activity carried on by the person after registration, provided the goods are not supplied or imported more than four months prior to the date of registration.

Bad debts. A VAT-registered person can claim VAT on a bad debt that has been written off. The VAT is claimed on the later of the date the bad debt was written off, or 12 months after the end of the tax period in which the VAT on the bad debt was accounted for. When the bad debt is recovered, the registered person is required to recoup the VAT previously allowed as input tax.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Botswana.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Botswana is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Registered persons must provide VAT tax invoices for all taxable supplies made, including exports.

Credit notes. A VAT tax credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged on a supply of goods or services. Tax credit and debit notes must show the same information as tax invoices.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Botswana, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Botswana. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Botswana. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

There are no rules restricting the use of electronic invoicing in Botswana.

At the time of preparing this chapter, legislation detailing the guidelines on electronic invoicing is under draft and may be gazetted within 2024.

Simplified VAT invoices. A VAT-registered person can issue simplified VAT invoices (by way of a nontax invoice or receipt), provided the amount does not exceed BWP20.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Botswana. This is provided that both the buyer and seller are registered for VAT, and they have agreed that the buyer will issue the tax invoice and not the seller, and the Commissioner General has granted written approval to issue a "recipient-created tax invoice."

Proof of exports. Goods exported from Botswana are zero-rated. However, to qualify for a zero rating, exports must be supported by evidence that proves the goods left Botswana.

Foreign currency invoices. A Botswana VAT tax invoice must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Botswana pula (BWP). If an amount is expressed in a currency other than pula, the following are the rules for converting the VAT and value amounts to local currency:

- For imports, the amount must be converted at the exchange rate determined by the Customs and Excise Duty Act.
- For other supplies, the amount must be converted at the exchange rate at the time when VAT is accounted for on the supply.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Full VAT invoices do not need to be issued for supplies with consideration less than BWP20 and for supplies to any persons who are not registered for VAT.

Records. A registered person or any other person liable for tax under the VAT Act, must maintain records in Botswana, in the English or Setswana language.

In Botswana, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include:
- Original tax invoices, tax credit notes and tax debit notes received by the person
- A copy of all tax invoices, tax credit notes and tax debit notes issued by the person
- Customs documentation relating to imports and exports by the person
- Accounting records
- Any other records as may be prescribed by the Commissioner General

In Botswana, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. Records are required to be kept in Botswana for a period of seven years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is not allowed in Botswana. Hard copies of the original tax invoices received for claiming input tax should be kept, and copies of the invoices issued by the registered persons.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The VAT tax period is one month for registered persons with annual taxable supplies greater than BWP12 million and two months for registered persons with annual taxable supplies of equal to and less than BWP12 million.

Returns must be filed on or before the 25th of the month following the end of the tax period. If the due date falls on a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the due date is the last business day before the holiday.

Periodic payments. Payment is due in full by the same date as the return submission, i.e., on or before the 25th of the month following the end of the tax period.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Botswana, but not mandatory. VAT returns can be filed electronically upon application for e-services, which enable taxable persons to view the VAT returns submitted and other tax information online.

Payments on account. Payments on account are optional in Botswana. A registered person can apply to the Commissioner General to extend the time or make other arrangements for the payment of VAT, but such arrangements will not waive the charging of interest on the staggered or delayed payments.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Botswana.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Botswana.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Botswana.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Where errors have occurred from a previous manual submission, taxable persons must notify the tax authorities in writing explaining the reason and result of the error. The tax authority will give direction to the taxable person regarding the next steps. Such steps include the taxable person being asked to come to the tax authorities' offices and amend the original submission and sign for the amendment.

Where the submission was made electronically, the taxable person may be asked to amend the return online and the tax authority will, if in agreement, approve the amendment so that it reflects on the taxable person's account/tax statement.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Botswana.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. The following penalties apply if a person fails to register for VAT within 21 days after becoming liable:
- If the failure was due to recklessness or made knowingly, a fine not exceeding BWP10,000 or imprisonment for a period not exceeding two years, or both
- In all other cases, a fine not exceeding BWP5,000 or imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or both
- A penalty of twice the output tax payable from the time when the person became liable to the time when the person registered for VAT

Any offense committed by a corporate body is deemed to have been committed by a person acting as a representative officer, director, general manager, secretary or other similar officer of the company, or by any other person acting in such a capacity.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The greater of the following penalties is imposed for the late filing of the VAT return:
- BWP50 per day
  Or
- 10% of the outstanding tax for each month or part of a calendar month that the return remains outstanding.

The penalty is limited to the amount of the tax due. In the case of nil VAT returns, the maximum penalty is BWP5,000.

Interest is charged on outstanding tax at a rate of 1.5% per month (compounded).

Penalties for errors. Penalties are not charged where the Commissioner considers that any error on the VAT return is genuine, e.g., transposition of figures on the VAT return.

A person who fails to notify the Commissioner General of a change in its VAT registration details commits an offense and is liable on conviction:
- Where the failure was made knowingly or recklessly, a fine not exceeding P10,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or both
- In any other case, a fine not exceeding P5,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or both

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Penalties are imposed in respect of any offenses, including making false statements and obstructing a VAT officer.

Prosecution proceedings may be instituted against offenders and where a person is convicted, no penalties will be charged.

Any offense committed by a corporate body is deemed to have been committed by a person acting in a responsible capacity, such as a representative officer, a director, a general manager, a company secretary or any similar officer of the company or any other person acting in such a capacity.

Personal liability for company officers. A person who was a director of the company at the time of the commission of any errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting shall be liable, jointly and severally, for any tax payable by the company, unless that person proves to the satisfaction of the Commissioner General that the failure by the company to pay the tax was not due to any negligence on their part.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Botswana is five years. Where the Commissioner General is not satisfied with a return or import declaration furnished by a taxable person, they can reassess the return or import declaration within five years from the date the return was furnished or when the import was made.

However, the reassessment can be made at any time where the default was due to fraud; or due to gross or willful neglect committed by, or on behalf of, the taxable person who furnished the return or import declaration.

In 2023, Congress and Senate passed a bill regarding tax reform in Brazil that intends to revoke PIS/COFINS, ICMS, ISS and IPI and create the following new taxes:

- CBS (contribution on goods and services) that would replace PIS/COFINS.
- IBS (tax on goods and services) that would replace ICMS and ISS.
- Imposto Seletivo (selective tax) to replace IPI. It should levy on operations with goods that are considered as a threat to the environment and to human health. However, it is still not known which criteria is going to be used to trigger such a tax.
- Contribuição Estadual (state contributions) would be charged on the operations of primary goods/semi processed.

The final rate of such taxes is not known, however, the current government estimates the combined IBS and CBS will add up to 27% and would be a significant change to indirect tax in Brazil.

At the time of preparing this chapter, the bill was fully approved and is pending presidential approval. As mentioned, it will provoke a strong modification to the taxation rules in Brazil for all economical segments. It's important to point out that such changes are pending further changes and regulation, which will be done via Complementary Law possibly during 2024. In addition, tax returns are expected to be modified as well once the tax reform is approved. It's expected to produce a significant reduction of complexity in the returns.

B. Scope of the taxes

In Brazil the following types of indirect taxes (VAT) are in effect:
- State VAT (ICMS)
- Federal VAT (IPI)
- Municipal service tax (ISS)
- Federal social contributions (PIS-PASEP and COFINS)

State VAT. The State VAT (ICMS) is charged by the individual states in Brazil. The states set the level of taxation, but the Brazilian federal government may set the minimum rate.

ICMS applies to the following transactions carried out in Brazil, even if the transaction begins abroad:
- The circulation of goods (with ownership transfer)
- The importation of goods
- The supply of transportation services between states and between municipalities
- The supply of communication services
- The supply of electricity

Exports are exempt from ICMS.

Exclusion of ICMS from the PIS and COFINS calculation basis. For a long time, the national courts have discussed the exclusion of ICMS from the PIS and COFINS calculation bases levied on local transactions. On 15 March 2017, the Brazilian Federal Supreme Court (STF) ruled that the inclusion of ICMS in the social contributions (PIS and COFINS) tax bases is unconstitutional. On 13 May 2021, the Supreme Court (STF) decided that the rule should apply from the publication of the decision (ex nunc), with the exception of the taxable persons who had previously filed a lawsuit or administrative request on the matter. Currently all taxable persons subject to the PIS/COFINS and to ICMS are able to exclude the amount of the ICMS from the PIS and COFINS calculation bases.

Federal VAT. The federal VAT (IPI) is charged by Brazil's federal government on national and imported goods. IPI applies to the following taxable events:

- The shipment of goods from an industrial establishment (or deemed as industrial by the law) in Brazil
- The customs clearance of goods

The IPI law provides for several tax incentives if the shipment of goods is related to an export, a sale to a trading company or to plant expansion plans. IPI tax incentives include the exemption of operations and the granting of tax credits.

Municipal service tax. The municipal service tax (ISS) is a form of sales tax payable to municipalities in Brazil. It applies to the supply of any service that is not otherwise taxable by the state authorities (ICMS). The general list of taxable services is outlined in federal law (complementary law).

A foreign company providing services fully provided outside Brazil for the benefit of a Brazilian recipient may be subject to ISS (withheld by the Brazilian entity) even if a nonresident pays for the services.

ISS is a single-stage tax with no right of recovery for ISS previously paid. Consequently, regardless of status, the recipient of a service subject to ISS bears the tax paid as a cost.

In general, ISS is due to the municipality where the service provider is located. One of the exceptions applies to construction services. ISS is levied on construction services in the city where the construction takes place.

Federal social contributions. PIS-PASEP and COFINS are social contributions based on turnover, which are levied on companies' gross revenue, on a monthly basis. Exports are not subject to PIS-PASEP and COFINS.

Import operations (of goods and services) are also subject to PIS-PASEP and COFINS.

PIS-PASEP and COFINS rates may vary depending on the company's activity and on the revenue received.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Brazil, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Brazil, a TOGC may or may not be subject to VAT, depending on how such a transfer is implemented.

Transactions between related parties. Whenever a transaction is carried out between related parties, local laws shall be evaluated to verify if a minimum taxation basis will apply. IPI and ICMS has some rules on this matter that are very specific. The concept of a related party is also required to be verified, to ensure total compliance with Brazilian laws.

C. Who is liable

ICMS taxable person. An ICMS taxable person is any person or legal entity that, on a regular basis, undertakes the sale or importation of goods, or supplies communication and interstate and intermunicipal transport services. No turnover threshold applies. Any person or entity that intends to supply goods or services subject to ICMS must register in the roll of ICMS taxable persons before beginning activities.

Some companies and products are subject to special tax treatment for ICMS in which the payment is made on behalf of the whole supply chain. For example, the pharmaceutical industry pays the regular ICMS to the state where the seller is located based on the sales price and pays a complementary portion (named ICMS-ST) to the state where the customer is located based on the end consumer price list issued by this state, anticipating the wholesaler and the retailer liabilities. Other industries, such as cosmetics and electronics, also have this special treatment; however, the ICMS-ST is based on a value-added margin presumed by the state government.

IPI taxable person. An IPI taxable person is any person or legal entity that carries out industrial processing of goods on a regular basis or imports goods from abroad. No turnover threshold applies. Any person or entity that carries on activities subject to IPI must register in the roll of IPI taxable persons before beginning activities.

ISS taxable person. An ISS taxable person is any person or legal entity that supplies any services listed in the ISS law on a regular basis. No turnover threshold applies. Any person or entity that carries on activities subject to ISS must register in the roll of ISS taxable persons before beginning activities.

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. A PIS and COFINS taxable person is any company that has business activities. Contributions are levied on companies' gross revenue on a monthly basis.

Exemption from registration. In order to pay taxes in Brazil, the company should be registered for VAT in Brazil. However, depending on how the transaction is classified, the taxes should be collected by the local customers and/or the agent in Brazil. If this is the case, the foreign company would not be required to be registered in Brazil.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Brazil does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration. Small businesses may benefit from a simplified taxation (for all indirect taxes, not only ICMS)

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Brazil.

Fixed establishment. In Brazil there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, all establishments in Brazil must obtain a tax ID, even though it is a storage branch or an office (it must be linked to a local tax ID). Thus, it will be subject to VAT if it sells goods or services.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in Brazil. A non-established business is not permitted to register for VAT in Brazil. Only entities that are established under Brazilian law may become taxable persons for the purposes of ICMS, IPI, ISS, PIS-PASEP or COFINS. The lack of formal registration, however, would not prevent tax authorities from collecting taxes if the taxable activities are executed.

If a business is considered as non-established, it does not have local tax IDs and neither does it have the obligation to file tax returns. Thus, there is no obligation to prepare returns or calculations that would allow and control tax credits. Once a business becomes established, it will need to comply with all necessary returns and fulfill all requirements posted in the law. All businesses located in Brazil must register and no obligation is in force for external companies.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not allowed in Brazil.

Reverse charge. If a non-established business supplies services to a Brazilian taxable person but does not register for VAT (e.g., importation of goods/services), the Brazilian taxable person may be required to account for the VAT due under reverse-charge accounting. This means that the taxable person charges itself VAT. The self-assessed VAT may be deducted as input tax, but not in all cases (subject to the normal input tax recovery rules).

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Brazil.

Digital economy. Business-to-business (B2B) or business-to-consumer (B2C) transactions – payments to a foreign business may be subject to the following taxes depending on how the transaction is classified: withholding income tax (IRRF), contribution on economic domain intervention (CIDE), social contributions on gross revenues (PIS/COFINS) and municipal tax on services (ISS). Remittances of funds to the principal would be subject to tax on financial operations (IOF/FX). In 2023 the government set a 20% rate on importations up to USD50. Any acquisition above this threshold would trigger a 60% rate.

Nonresidents that provide electronically supplied services in Brazil are not required to register for VAT in Brazil. Thus, in an event that a taxable person in Brazil purchases goods/services from a nonresident business, it should account for all taxes levied on the supply. No special e-commerce rules apply for imported goods.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms. Regular VAT will levy on the sale of goods (ICMS, PIS/COFINS and IPI – if manufactured or imported by the seller). Marketplaces and platforms, however, should observe local laws in order to comply with certain rules and be exempt from tax liability in relation to sales it intermediate.

Registration procedures. Companies must register with federal and state tax authorities if they intend to sell products on a commercial basis. Municipal registration is also required if the purpose is to provide services. Registration is mostly electronic and may take between 30 and 90 days. The request must be submitted with additional information such as: articles of association, address, business license issued by official entities, taxable person ID, etc. Most registration applications are submitted online (federal, state and municipal); however, it is still possible that in small cities paper registrations are still accepted.

Deregistration. Upon termination of activities, companies can deregister before federal, state and municipal tax authorities.

Changes to VAT registration details. To change a taxable person's VAT registration details, it must file a request to the tax administrations. This is usually done online but can also be done by paper request.

D. Rates

ICMS. ICMS rates vary among Brazil's 27 states. For supplies made to a customer located in the same state as the supplier, rates typically range from 0% to 35%. The standard rate of ICMS is 17% (18% in São Paulo, Minas Gerais and Paraná and 20% in Rio de Janeiro).

Reduced rates generally apply to items of basic necessity, such as food.

The rate of ICMS that applies to imported goods is the same rate that applies to supplies of goods made within the state, except that the tax base for imported goods includes any IPI and import duty payable at import, PIS and COFINS and every other custom cost that was charged to the buyer. ICMS does not apply to exported goods.

The ICMS rate on a supply of goods or services made to an ICMS taxable person resident in a different state from the state where the supplier is resident depends on where the customer is located.

- A rate of 7% generally applies to supplies of locally produced goods (with low content of imported inputs) made to taxable persons resident in states located in the northern, northeastern and central eastern regions of Brazil and in the state of Espírito Santo.
- A rate of 12% generally applies to supplies of domestic goods (with low content of imported inputs) made to taxable persons located in the states in the southern and southeastern regions of Brazil (except in the state of Espírito Santo).
- A rate of 4% generally applies to supplies of imported goods or locally produced goods with high content of imported inputs made to taxable persons located in all other states.

If the supply is made to a customer located in another state who is not an ICMS taxable person (including digital economy), the supply is taxed at the same rate as transactions made within the customer's state (i.e., the internal rate) and VAT is to be assessed and collected in two portions, as follows:

- To the state where the seller is located in the amount equivalent to the interstate rate that would apply in a supply to a regular taxable person
- To the state where the customer is located in the amount equivalent to the difference between the customer's state internal rate and the interstate rate

Some items, such as horticultural products and certain medicines, are exempt from ICMS.

IPI. IPI rates vary from a zero-rate (0%) to 300%. The rate of IPI depends on the classification of the goods under the IPI Tariff Table. The table contains many different classification codes. The IPI Tariff Table uses the same tariff classification system as the Brazilian External Tariff Code (TEC or BTEC).

The rate of IPI varies depending on how essential the product is considered to be. For example, the zero rate of IPI applies to essential products such as rice and wheat flour, a low rate of IPI (8%) applies to certain products, such as pipes, and the highest rate of IPI (300%) applies to "superfluous" or luxury products. Some goods are exempt from IPI. In other cases, essential products may benefit from a reduced tax base (which reduces the effective rate of tax) or a deferral or suspension of the tax due.

ISS. The rate of ISS varies among Brazil's 5,564 municipalities. The ISS law sets the maximum rate at 5% and Federal Constitution brings the minimum rate, which is 2%. The rates also depend on the type of service and the municipality where it is provided.

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. The PIS-PASEP rate is 0.65% for taxable persons taxed under the deemed corporate income tax method of calculation or under the cumulative system and 1.65% for taxable persons taxed under the annual actual income tax method or under the noncumulative system (without credit entitlement and with credit entitlement, respectively). On imports the PIS-PASEP rate is 2.1% for goods and 1.65% when importing services.

The COFINS rate is 3% for taxable persons taxed under the deemed corporate income tax method of calculation or under the cumulative system and 7.6% for taxable persons taxed under the annual actual income tax method or under the noncumulative system. On imports, the rate of COFINS is 9.65% for goods and 7.6% when importing services.

For certain types of goods, and depending on specific tariff code, an additional 1% of COFINS upon importation is levied. However, this additional 1% is not recoverable (no credit entitlement).

Some companies and products are subject to special tax treatment for PIS-PASEP and COFINS, which apply different rates for some products. For example, the automotive industry pays PIS-PASEP at a rate of 2% and COFINS at a rate of 9.6% on specific products. Other industries, such as the pharmaceutical, cosmetics and the beverage industries, also have special treatment for PIS-PASEP and COFINS. In addition, for these companies and products, the rates on imports are also increased.

Financial revenues are taxable at a rate of 0.65% and 4% of PIS-PASEP and COFINS, respectively.

Some essential items, such as horticultural products and wheat flour, are PIS-PASEP and COFINS zero-rated.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Brazil.

E. Time of supply

The general time of supply rule is when the sale takes place, as it is commonly the moment when the ownership changes in the case of goods. At the time of supply, the supplier must account for its taxes (ICMS, IPI and PIS/COFINS). For an example, an ICMS/IPI trigger event is the sale of a good and for PIS/COFINS it is the revenue obtained with the operation.

Deposits and prepayments. The supplier that receives a prepayment must pay PIS-PASEP and COFINS only if it has the ordered product in stock. If the company does not have the goods ready for shipment, PIS-PASEP and COFINS will be triggered only at the time of delivery.

The IPI legislation allows the taxable person to choose the tax triggering event, that is, the time of prepayment or delivery of the products. For ICMS, the triggering event must occur only when the product is delivered. In all scenarios, as a rule, payment will be made on a monthly basis.

Continuous supplies of services. There are no special time of supply rules in Brazil for continuous supplies of services. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Brazil for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. ICMS and IPI will be triggered as of the delivery of the goods regardless of its sale and PIS and COFINS solely when the sale is actually concluded. If no sale is made, the taxes paid can be recovered.

Reverse-charge services. Brazilian tax law determines that, depending on the type of services being contracted, the client is responsible for withholding IRPJ, CSLL, PIS and/or COFINS, as the case may be, from the service fees being paid to the supplier of the service.

Leased assets. Leased assets are not considered a sale; however, certain states still demand ICMS collection on those transactions. Financial leases are considered as a service and are not taxed by ICMS, but ISS (municipal VAT) to the extent there is no transfer of titularity of the good. The time of supply for supplies of leased assets (ISS triggering event) is when the goods are leased (i.e., when the contract is signed, and the goods are delivered to the lessee).

Imported goods. Taxes on the importation of goods are triggered at the time of the customs clearance. Differently from other taxes, these shall be paid at this time and not on a monthly basis.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax (of any of the below taxes) in Brazil is five years.

ICMS. An ICMS taxable person may recover input tax (i.e., obtain a credit) for VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it that are subject to another taxable transaction. An ICMS taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made. ICMS may not be recovered before a taxable person begins making taxable supplies.

A valid VAT invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

No ICMS may be claimed before a business registers for ICMS. However, a business may register for ICMS as soon as it intends to carry out taxable activities. Input tax deduction is not granted until taxable activities begin. Before making taxable supplies, the taxable person must record purchase invoices as a "Deferred Asset" account. After taxable supplies begin, the deferred ICMS may be recovered. No time limit applies to the period between registration and the beginning of an activity.

IPI. IPI taxable persons deduct IPI paid as input tax from IPI charged as output tax. The rules are similar to those that applies for ICMS.

ISS. ISS taxable persons do not recover any ISS paid as input tax. Consequently, ISS paid is borne as a cost by all recipients of services subject to the tax.

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. PIS-PASEP and COFINS taxable persons who use the noncumulative system are entitled to calculate PIS-PASEP and COFINS credits to offset PIS-PASEP and COFINS payments. Credits are limited to certain costs.

Expansion of the raw materials concept for PIS and COFINS. PIS and COFINS legislation allow taxable persons to deduct credits on certain expenses, such as the purchase of raw materials. The concept of raw materials has been discussed over a number of years, but in 2017 a court decision ruled that all expenses that are connected to the production process and are considered relevant or essential to perform the manufacturing process shall be considered as expenses with the right to deduct the credits of PIS and COFINS.

Nondeductible input tax. For ICMS and IPI purposes, input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (e.g., goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur or general overhead costs) or on goods acquired before registration as a taxable person.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Coffee breaks
- Office supplies

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Raw materials
- Packing materials

Partial exemption. For PIS/COFINS, the company can keep the whole amount of credits that were recovered when the input was purchased. However, for IPI and ICMS when selling a product that is exempt, the company must reverse the amount of credits related to such items (except when exporting). To measure the value of credits that can be booked, the company must calculate the percentage of taxable revenues over the total revenue. The result of such calculation is the percentage of credits over inputs that can be recovered. Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Brazil. Partial exemption special methods are not allowed in Brazil. Additionally, such credits can be booked once the legislation says that the reverse wouldn't be necessary upon the creation of a new rule.

Capital goods. For PIS/COFINS, capital goods that allow the recovery of credits are machinery, equipment, tolls and building constructions. Commonly, the credits are booked at once – at the time of purchase, calculated over the value of the capital good (for building construction the company must take advantage of the credit for a 24-month period).

For ICMS purposes, the company is allowed to recover the amount related to machinery, equipment and tools only if related to the assembly of the goods. (Must take advantage of the credit for a 48-month period). There are no capital goods for IPI.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable exceeds the amount of output tax payable, the excess is generally not refunded. However, the excess may be used to offset tax payments in the following months or may be transferred in certain cases to a third party (transference is only allowed to the ICMS). IPI and PIS/COFINS credits are not eligible for transferring.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Brazil is not recoverable. A company must be properly registered as a taxable person in order to acquire assets and stock or inventory. Therefore, any such acquisitions will generate tax credits (when applicable), which will be recorded in the tax books and will be offset against the debts raised on the outbound supply of the goods/services. Before a company has the status of a taxable person, it should not be able to acquire assets or inventory.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Brazil.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Brazil.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Brazil is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. An ICMS, IPI or ISS taxable person must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports. A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction for ICMS and IPI. Companies must specify on invoices and receipts the taxes charged that are part of the total amount of the product sale price. Companies must list the amount of municipal, state and federal taxes levied for each product described on the invoice or receipt. Also, such information may be displayed in plain view at the invoices issued. Companies that fail to comply with this requirement will be subject to penalties, such as monetary fines or the suspension or revocation of the license to operate.

Credit notes. A credit note (i.e., input invoice) must contain the same information as a VAT invoice, but it is not valid in all situations. The credit note must reflect a genuine mistake, an overcharge or an agreed reduction in the value of the original supply. A credit note must be issued within one month after the mistake or overcharge is discovered. The credit note should also refer to the number and date of the original VAT invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Brazil for all taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Brazil. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Brazil. Businesses selling goods or rendering services in Brazil must issue each invoice electronically. Note that general information must be provided in the invoice, such as vendor address and telephone number, invoice number and series, nature of operation, invoice date and taxable person registry number.

Specifically, every operation regarding goods triggers the issuance of an electronic invoice. Thus, all taxable persons selling, transferring or simply sending goods to an external storage need to be followed by an electronic invoice. For the supply of services, even though this also triggers the issuance of an electronic invoice, Brazil has not implemented a standard model for electronic invoicing for supplies of services, like it has done for the supply of goods. Therefore, each municipality can implement its own required information and layout for electronic invoicing. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, it is not known when the standard model for electronic invoicing for the supply of services will be in force. Thus, electronic invoicing is mandatory to all taxable persons no matter the revenue or the tax treatment applied to it.

At the time of preparing this chapter, the rules on electronic invoicing are expected to change due to the upcoming tax reform. However, this is expected to be only the template not the mandatory use.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Brazil. As such, full VAT invoices are required. However, depending on the business, a special regime may be requested to facilitate the issuance of invoices (for instance, in the case of financial institutions).

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Brazil. It is only allowed when importing goods or when the seller/buyer does not need to issue invoices (i.e., a nontaxable person). There are no special conditions for self-billing, and it is available for all taxable persons.

Proof of exports for ICMS. ICMS is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports must be supported by evidence confirming that the goods have left Brazil. Suitable evidence includes an invoice, a customs certificate of origin and an export declaration.

Foreign currency invoices. All VAT invoices must be issued in Brazilian reals (BRL).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Companies rendering services or selling products in Brazil must send each invoice electronically to the government for validation. In the case of goods trade, the invoice must be submitted before shipping the goods. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies made to private individuals.

Records. In Brazil, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include all invoices and ancillary obligations.

In Brazil, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. These files can be requested by tax authorities with very short notice, so it is recommended to keep records in Brazil. However, records can be stored outside of Brazil, as long as the records can be accessed in a timely fashion to provide to the tax authorities upon their request. However, in some cases ICMS's books must be kept at the taxable person's facility. This is due to local legislation (each state can create their own rules).

Record retention period. Records must be retained for five years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Brazil. Paper archiving is possible.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. ICMS. ICMS returns must be submitted for monthly periods. The VAT return must consist of an ICMS declaration named Digital Tax Accounting (EFD-ICMS/IPI), which lists all invoice details, including ICMS credits and debits during the period.

The specific date for submission depends on the taxable person's business activities.

IPI. For IPI, the following two different returns are required every month:
- The Declaration for Federal Taxes and Contributions (DCTF)
- The EFD-ICMS/IPI

ISS. ISS is due monthly. A return form must be completed each month. ISS returns are generally due monthly, but the rules differ between municipalities (Brazil has more than 5,500 municipalities).

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. PIS-PASEP and COFINS taxable persons must submit the DCTF to the federal tax authorities monthly. They must also submit the EFD Contribuições, which is a tax return related to PIS/PASEP and COFINS, where all the documents and transactions representing the revenues earned, as well as the costs, expenses, charges and purchases that generate credits must be reported, to the federal tax authorities on a monthly basis.

Periodic payments. ICMS. The VAT return must include a payment receipt (GARE). Return liabilities must be paid in Brazilian reals.

IPI. IPI is generally payable every month (depending on the type of products sold), using a payment receipt (DARF). Return liabilities must be paid in Brazilian reals.

ISS. ISS is due monthly. A specific payment must be completed each month.

ISS payments and returns are generally due monthly, but the rules differ between municipalities (Brazil has more than 5,500 municipalities).

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. PIS-PASEP and COFINS are due monthly, using a DARF.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Brazil for all taxable persons. Monthly electronic filing is required from companies where the detailed throughput of goods and services are to be reported to the authorities. There are specific official applications that are provided by tax authorities through which a taxable person can upload its files and submit them to the tax authorities. Such files are created by the taxable person, usually using its ERP system, and can easily be submitted into the tax authorities' records.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Brazil.

Annual returns. For specific tax books (e.g., inventory book titled "Block H" embedded in the EFD-ICMS/IPI) there are certain annual electronic filing requirements. In addition, there is a specific fiscal ledger designated to provide information to tax authorities on raw material manufacturing operations and finished product data, entitled "Block K." As part of the EFD ICMS/IPI, it has been required for some sectors since 2017, and according to the latest updates, new sectors will be required to send this tax book from 2023 on. The implementation of this obligation has been postponed many times. At the time of preparing this chapter, the tax authorities have not announced any plans to delay it again.

Special schemes. "Simples Nacional" tax regime. Companies under the "Simples Nacional" tax regime are subject to special VAT calculation/returns. The Simples Nacional tax regime (i.e., Integrated Payment of Taxes and Contributions from Micro and Small Companies) is a simplified tax regime applicable to micro and small companies that meet specific gross revenue thresholds and other legal requirements. The Simples Nacional regime allows these companies to calculate taxes applying reduced rates and calculation bases, and it also provides them with the possibility of paying several taxes together, including federal (i.e., IRPJ, CSLL, PIS, COFINS, IPI, INSS), state (i.e., ICMS) and municipal (i.e,. ISS) taxes using one payment slip and presenting VAT simplified returns.

Other regimes. There are multiple special regimes and tax benefits for specific sectors (e.g., agribusiness, pharma, automotive). However, regarding special "tax regimes/schemes," there is only the Simples Nacional tax regime (see above), which is applicable depending on the company's revenue.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Brazil.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Since all ancillary obligations are submitted online, a taxable person may correct any errors/misunderstandings in its reports. This can be done voluntarily or by tax authorities' demand. Usually there is no need to formally notify the tax administration that a correction has been made.

Digital tax administration. Most of Brazil's ancillary obligations are filed digitally. Taxable persons are obliged to file the following before the tax authority:
- Digital invoicing (real time)
- EFD contribuições (for PIS and COFINS)
- EFD fiscal (for ICMS and IPI)

Digital invoices are issued in real time and automatically sent to tax administration. However, EFD Contribuições and EFD Fiscal are sent on a monthly basis. They are all electronic obligations that must follow a very specific and strict layout set out by tax authorities.

With these files in hands, the authorities can perform their verifications and identify any potential gaps/issues in the reports. Usually, the amount of collectable taxes is analyzed by a standard deviation method by the tax administration. However, that being said, if a significant reduction of taxes is identified on a taxable person's report, the tax authority will evaluate and ask for more information before validating.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. The penalty for late registration in Brazil varies according to each local legislation. For the federal tax ID, there is no direct penalty for obtaining the late registration, but indirectly for not sending the necessary information that would have to be send once the tax ID should have been opened.

Penalties for late payment and filings. ICMS. A fine of 1% calculated over the total amount of the operations is due when a late filling occurs and 20% (maximum) of the uncollected amount.

IPI. The penalty for the late payment is 20% maximum of the uncollected amount and 1% of total revenue when the filling is delivery after its due.

ISS. ISS penalties may vary depending on the municipality and on the type of irregularity. In the São Paulo municipality, the fine varies from limited to 20% if paid before questioned by the tax authorities and is 50% to 100% of the ISS due after a verification is open.

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. The penalty for the late payment is 20% maximum of the uncollected amount and 1% of total revenue when the filling is delivery after its due. error connected is a fine of at least 75% of the tax due. However, it may be reduced to 20% when voluntarily disclosed by the taxable person.

Penalties for errors. ICMS. The penalty for errors in Brazil varies according to each local legislation. For instance, in the São Paulo muncipality, fines are 50% and 100% of the value of the transaction, dependent on the error.

IPI. The penalty for an error is a fine of 75% of the tax due.

ISS. ISS penalties may vary depending on the municipality and on the type of irregularity. For instance, in São Paulo municipality, fines range from 10% to 100% of the ISS due.

PIS-PASEP and COFINS. The penalty for an error connected is a fine of 75% of the tax due. If the error is corrected voluntarily, no penalty applies.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. For ICMS and ISS usually the penalties in case of fraud are calculated on the amount of the transaction and not on the amount of taxes not paid. For IPI and PIS and COFINS, the penalty is 150% of the amount of the tax not paid as a result of the fraud (as opposed to the standard penalty of 75%).

Personal liability for company officers. Recently, the Supreme Court ruled that intentional underpayment of taxes (i.e., ICMS) is considered as fraud and can lead to very severe charges (criminal) for companies' directors (including prison sentences). It is expected that this rule might be used in the future as a precedent for other taxes. It's important to point out that article 135 of National Tax Code indicates that to be liable for such penalties the agents may act against the law or the company's social contract.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Brazil is five years. This time limit is applicable to the tax authorities to impose penalties and taxable persons to reclaim input tax credits or unduly paid taxes. In case of fraud, the term can extend to six years.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- Taxable supply of goods or services in Bulgaria
- Reverse-charge services received by a Bulgarian taxable person
- Intra-Community acquisition of goods against consideration from another European Union (EU) Member State by a VAT-registered person or a person for which a VAT registration obligation has occurred (see the chapter on the EU)
- Acquisition against consideration of new means of transport and of excise goods (by taxable or nontaxable legal persons)
- Importation of goods into Bulgaria, regardless of the status of the importer

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the chapter on the EU. For documentary requirements see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

As of 1 January 2020, the following Quick Fixes have been adopted in the Bulgarian VAT Act and the Regulations for the Application of the VAT Act:
- Call-off stock relief – provides a simplified procedure and eliminates the need for the VAT registration of companies delivering goods on the territory of the country that are intended to be a consecutive supply to known customers within a certain period of time.
- Allocation of transportation to EU cross-border chain supplies – the new VAT rules introduce harmonized criteria for determining which of the transactions in a chain can be considered as the intra-Community supply.
- Burden of proof for intra-Community supplies – the amendments relate to specification of concrete documentary evidence that needs to be made available for purpose of proof of the intra-Community supply.
- Mandatory VAT number verification and VIES reporting – the amendments impose an obligation on the customer to provide a valid VAT number and the VIES report to be filed correctly for purpose of applying the zero rate to an intra-Community supply. In case of noncompliance, the supply will be subject to VAT in the state of dispatch.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In Bulgaria, the following services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions:
- For events, the place of supply both to taxable and nontaxable persons will be in Bulgaria, if the event is held in the country.
- For transport handling of goods, the place of supply provided to a nontaxable person shall be in Bulgaria, if the service is rendered in the country.
- For expertise, valuation or work on movable goods (i.e., the expertise on movable goods may refer to services provided by a person having special knowledge/credential such as valuation) the place of supply provided to a nontaxable person shall be in Bulgaria, if the service is rendered in the country.
- For restaurant and catering services, the place of supply will be in Bulgaria, if the services are performed on the territory of the country.

The place of performance of delivery of restaurant and catering services on board ships, planes or trains during the transport of passengers is in the territory of the country, when:
- The carriage of passengers begins in Bulgaria and ends in the territory of another Member State without stop in the territory of a third country or territory
- The carriage of passengers begins in Bulgaria and ends in the territory of a third country or territory with a stop in the territory of another Member State
- The carriage of passengers begins in a third country or territory and ends in the territory of another Member State and the first stop in the EU territory takes place in Bulgaria
- The transport of the passengers is carried out between two points on the territory of Bulgaria
- Telecommunications, broadcasting and electronic (TBE) services – if delivered to nontaxable persons, the place where the person is established or has his permanent address
- Transport of goods when within the EU and rendered to nontaxable persons, the place is where the transport begins, while when the transport is outside the EU, the place is determined in proportion to the distance covered
- Services related to immovable property – the place is in Bulgaria for immovable property located in the country
- The short-term hiring of vehicles to taxable and nontaxable persons is with a place in Bulgaria if the vehicles are put at the disposal of the recipient in Bulgaria

Specific services and supplies (e.g., license, patent, royalty, trademarks, consulting and engineering services, banking, finance, insurance, advertising, provision of personnel) are deemed to have a place of supply outside Bulgaria where the recipient is a nontaxable person located outside the EU.

Transfer of a going concern. According to the Bulgarian VAT legislation, the transfer of a going concern (TOGC) does not qualify as a supply within the scope of the VAT. This means that for the transfer, no VAT should be charged by the transferor. Pursuant to the local VAT legislation, the transferee would be considered a legal successor of all rights and obligations that are acquired with the transferred assets. TOGC treatment requires that the tax authorities are notified on the transfer beforehand.

Generally, the Bulgarian VAT Act provides for specific forms of business reorganizations under the Bulgarian Commercial Act, which constitute TOGC (for example, mergers, acquisitions, in-kind installments, etc.). To the extent of this and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU), the Bulgarian courts sometimes tend to adopt a substance-over-form approach when assessing the existence of TOGC.

Transactions between related parties. According to the VAT Act, for transactions between related parties in Bulgaria, the tax base is the market price when the value of the transaction is as follows:
- Lower than the market price, the supply is taxable, and the recipient is not entitled to deduct a tax credit, or is entitled to a partial tax credit, or a right to a refund of the tax paid
- Lower than the market price, the supply is exempt, and the supplier is not entitled to deduct a tax credit, or is entitled to a partial tax credit, or a right to a refund of the tax paid
- Higher than the market price, the supply is taxable, and the supplier is not entitled to deduct a tax credit, or is entitled to a partial tax credit, or a right to a refund of the tax paid

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is a business entity or individual that carries out an economic activity in Bulgaria, whatever the purpose or the result of that activity. This rule applies regardless of whether the supplier is a local or foreign entity or an individual.

The VAT registration threshold for taxable persons established in Bulgaria is taxable turnover of BGN100,000 in any 12 consecutive months or within two consecutive months, which includes turnover from taxable supplies chargeable at the standard rate of VAT (20%) or the reduced rate (9%), zero-rated supplies and financial and insurance services within the principal activity of the supplier.

There is no VAT registration threshold for taxable persons who are not established in Bulgaria and perform any of these supplies. Non-established taxable persons are obliged to apply for VAT registration seven days before VAT becomes chargeable, regardless of the generated turnover (unless a specific rule applies, such as when the local VAT is due by the Bulgarian recipient under the reverse-charge mechanism).

A taxable person, established in Bulgaria, rendering services with a place of supply in another EU Member State should register in Bulgaria regardless of its taxable turnover provided that the services are taxable in the EU state of receipt by EU VAT registered recipient.

A non-established, EU-based taxable person supplying goods to be assembled and/or installed in Bulgaria on their behalf, where the recipient is not registered for VAT in Bulgaria, must register for VAT purposes regardless of its generated turnover.

A taxable person receiving cross-border services subject to reverse charge in Bulgaria must register for VAT purposes in Bulgaria regardless of its taxable turnover.

In situations of two or more related parties, or parties that consistently carry out a homogeneous activity in the same commercial premises, the taxable turnover of each subsequent participant will include the taxable turnovers of all the persons before them, generated for the last 12 months, including the current one. A homogeneous activity will be any activity for which there is a significant identity in respect of two or more of the following elements: the goods or services offered, the assets used, the staff, the commercial mark or name of the outlet, the suppliers or the customers.

Exemption from registration. Incidental supplies of financial and insurance services (i.e., supplies that are not related to the person's principal activity), supplies of fixed assets used in the course of the person's activity, as well as supplies whereby the VAT is due by the Bulgarian recipient do not account toward the VAT registration threshold. Further, no VAT registration is required for EU taxable persons if the special call-off stock simplification is applied.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A taxable person may register for VAT voluntarily irrespective of its taxable turnover.

An unincorporated partnership is treated as a taxable person, separate from the founding entities that constitute it. The unincorporated partnership is subject to all the general rules of the Bulgarian VAT law, including those relating to VAT registration, deregistration and reporting. The VAT registration of an unincorporated partnership does not result in the VAT registration of the entities that have entered into the contract for joint activity. However, VAT registration of the partners triggers VAT registration of the partnership. In such case, the partnership is obliged to apply for VAT registration in seven days after the date of its registration as a partnership, in a special partnership register in Bulgaria.

The VAT registration of a partner triggers the VAT registration of the partnership, if the partnership is not already registered for VAT on any other grounds. Where the VAT registration of the partnership is triggered, the application should be filed within seven days of the date of VAT registration of the partner.

Upon inheritance of a VAT-registered person (including a sole trader) and in case of continuation of the same independent economic activity, the successor is entitled to register for VAT by submitting an application within seven days of acceptance of the succession. The date of registration is the date of delivering of the registration act.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not available in Bulgaria.

Holding companies. Group VAT registration is not available in Bulgaria.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f)) has been implemented in Bulgaria. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, providing certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Bulgarian VAT law).

The Bulgarian VAT Act exempts the supply of goods and the provision of services by nonprofit organizations for the benefit of their members in return for a subscription fixed in accordance with the rules of the said organizations. In addition, a VAT exemption applies to the provision of services by independent groups of persons whose activities are exempt from or are not subject to tax for the purpose of rendering their members the services directly necessary for the exercise of their activity, where these groups merely claim from their members exact reimbursement of their share of the joint expenses. The supplies are exempt if not leading to distortion of competition.

Fixed establishment. The Bulgarian VAT Act defines a fixed establishment (FE) as a trade representation, branch, office, studio, factory, workshop (factory), shop, trade warehouse, service, assembly site, construction site, mine, quarry, probe, oil or gas well, spring or other similar, extraction of natural resources, a certain room (own, rented or used on another basis) or another place through which a person carries out all or part of the economic activity on the territory of the country.

The Bulgarian tax authorities follow the approach taken in the EU legislation, where a FE is defined as any establishment characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources that would enable it to provide the services that it supplies, and/or to receive and use services supplied to it for its own needs.

Taking into account the case law of CJEU, which is followed by the Bulgarian tax authorities in their rulings, the authorities confirm that a FE could be created by using both human and technical resources.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has neither a place of management/seat in Bulgaria nor a fixed establishment in Bulgaria. A non-established business must register for VAT in Bulgaria if it makes taxable supplies of goods or services (unless the reverse charge applies), intra-Community acquisitions exceeding the statutory thresholds or receives services with a place of supply in Bulgaria from a non-established foreign supplier.

Tax representatives. A foreign person established in a non-EU country that has not entered into an agreement for mutual assistance with the EU similar in scope to Directive 2010/24 and Regulation 904/2010 must appoint a resident fiscal representative to register for VAT purposes in Bulgaria. The representative assumes joint and unlimited liability for the VAT obligations of the non-established business.

Reverse charge. Bulgarian taxable persons are obliged to charge VAT on the acquisition of goods or receipt of services when the supplier is not established in Bulgaria as follows:

- Intra-Community acquisitions
- Services with a place of supply in Bulgaria where the recipient is a taxable person
- Supplies of natural gas through pipelines or electricity when the recipient is a VAT-registered person
- Supplies of goods assembled or installed by or for the account of the supplier when the recipient is a VAT-registered person in Bulgaria and the supplier is established in another Member State

Domestic reverse charge. VAT-registered taxable persons can apply the reverse charge for importation of certain base metals, organic and inorganic chemicals and mineral products if the customs value of the imported goods equals or exceeds BGN50,000.

A local reverse charge applies for domestic supplies to customers identified for VAT in Bulgaria on the acquisition of:
- Investment gold
- Waste and related services, such as scrap metal and similar supplies
- Cereals and industrial crops provided by agricultural producers (a temporary measure, applicable until 31 December 2026)
- Carbon emissions (as of 2020 and temporary until 31 December 2026)

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021. These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals) but these rules are usually referred to as "e-commerce VAT rules" because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B, Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:
- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall below the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

The Bulgarian VAT Act has introduced new rules regarding data collection and reporting of cross-border payment data related to e-commerce that will effectively come into force as of 1 January 2024. The rules essentially implement the provisions of Council Directive (EU) 2020/284 of 18 February 2020.

The adopted legislative package on payment data collection obliges payment service providers established in the EU to:
- Maintain accounts for cross-border payments processed by them to EU payers
- Keep records of the payments they process and about EU/non-EU recipients of such remittances

The reporting period shall be quarterly with cross-border payment data to be submitted in the month following the quarter to which it relates. The first reporting period is January to March 2024, for which the submission should be done from 1 April to 30 April 2024.

The submission of data to the national CESOP system by payment service providers will be performed through an electronic service in the electronic portal of the National Revenue Agency (NRA). In accordance with the rules for access to the e-portal, data can only be submitted by persons who are registered in the NRA Register. The electronic service will be accessible by the payment service provider or an authorized person (with full or partial access rights).

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In Bulgaria, EU established businesses that do not apply the One-Stop-Shop (OSS) regime should follow the general VAT registration procedure and the requirements pursuant to it (for more details on the application process see the Registration procedure subsection below).

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:
- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

In Bulgaria, the application for OSS registration is processed electronically via the website of the NRA. The preparation and submission of the registration applications require the use of a qualified electronic signature (QES) that is registered with the NRA. The person applying the scheme has an obligation to file a declaration to the tax administration on a quarterly basis. They must also keep an electronic register that provides sufficient information for the revenue authorities to check the proper application of the said scheme.

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance ales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT.

In Bulgaria, the registration application under the IOSS scheme is submitted and processed electronically via the NRA website and requires the use of QES. The non-EU supplier should appoint a representative that is established in the EU who may also be registered under the IOSS scheme. The person applying the scheme has an obligation to file a monthly declaration to the tax administration. They must also keep an electronic register that provides sufficient information for the revenue authorities to check the proper application of the said scheme.

For more details about the IOSS, see the chapter on the EU.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination, and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

Postal Services and Couriers Scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers. For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the chapter on the EU.

The Bulgarian VAT Act prescribes for special arrangements corresponding to the scheme for postal services and couriers introduced under the EU rules. According to the Bulgarian legislation, the person applying the scheme has an obligation to file a monthly declaration to the tax administration. They must also keep an electronic register that provides sufficient information for the revenue authorities to check the proper application of the said scheme.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules, effective 1 July 2021, taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:

- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). Any intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State, as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

In Bulgaria, taxable persons that facilitate sales of the covered type, including online marketplaces and platforms, could apply for registration under the OSS or IOSS scheme.

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. Effective 1 January 2019, special rules for VAT treatment of transactions with vouchers entered into force. The rules introduce two types of taxable vouchers: single-purpose vouchers (SPV) and multi-purpose vouchers (MPV). Supplies of SPV are subject to VAT upon each transfer of the vouchers. The actual handing over of the goods and services in return for the SPV is not subject to VAT. On the other hand, MPVs are taxable at the time of the actual supply of the goods or services to which they relate. The transfers of the MPV before the actual handing over of the goods and services are not subject to VAT.

The new regime does not apply for discount vouchers and cinema/museum/travel and similar tickets.

Registration procedures. The VAT registration form should be completed in the Bulgarian language following a standard template and should be submitted in hard copy together with all supporting documents. If originating in a foreign language, they should be accompanied by an official translation into Bulgarian.

Online registration is also possible via a qualified electronic signature registered with the Bulgarian tax authorities on their web interface: https://inetdec.nra.bg/eservices.html.

The application should be submitted, and the registration procedure completed within the following deadlines:

- Mandatory general VAT registration: not later than the seventh day of the month following the month when the turnover has been reached; if the turnover is reached within two consecutive calendar months, the application should be filed within seven days of the date on which the turnover has been reached
- VAT registration for rendering or receiving cross-border services subject to reverse charge: at least seven days prior to the date when the tax for the supply becomes due
- VAT registration for intra-Community acquisitions: at least seven days prior to the date of the taxable event for the acquisition by which the total value of taxable intra-Community acquisitions exceeds BGN20,000 in a calendar year
- VAT registration as regards the delivery of goods to be assembled or installed in Bulgaria, performed by persons established in other EU Member States, where the recipients are not VAT registered in Bulgaria: not later than seven days before taxable event of the supply

The general documents and/or explanations that should be provided for the purposes of the VAT registration include:

- Notary certified and apostilled power of attorney (POA), as well as the details of the signatories of the POA: name(s), nationality, date/place of birth, passport (ID card) number(s), date and place of the issuing of the passport(s) or ID card(s), expiry date of the passport(s) or ID card(s) and the issuing authority, position within the business; (in case the VAT registration is performed by a proxy)
- Copy of the passport(s) of the authorized signatories of the business
- An original document evidencing the legal/commercial registration of the person – note that this document should be issued recently (not later than three months as of submission of the VAT registration application form) and be apostilled (if necessary). This certificate will indicate the address of registration, the legal representative(s), the amount of share capital and the commercial registration ID of the business
- An original certificate issued by the competent tax authorities for the current general tax registration of the person (needs to be recently issued and apostilled). The certificate should indicate the general ID number of the person
- A short summary of the business activities – description of the activities in Bulgaria leading to the VAT registration claim

Additional confirmation/documents related to the VAT registration:

- The business should provide certain general confirmations to the tax office, including for:
  - Its taxable turnover for the period of 12 consecutive calendar months prior to the calendar month when the application is filed – basic confirmation that the business has no sales with a place of supply in Bulgaria (local sales or such including zero-rated intra-Community supplies/export) or advance payments received
  - Lack of performed intra-Community acquisitions in Bulgaria for the current and previous calendar year
  - The grounds on which the business will apply for VAT registration – presumably VAT registration on voluntary basis prior to commencing local business activities
  - Means of financing the local activities (e.g., loans, own finances)
  - Information about contracts (including preliminary contracts) concluded or invoices issued/received by the business in respect of the Bulgarian activities
  - Contact data for official communications with the tax authorities, including email and postal address – it is advisable to consider that the communication will be in Bulgarian language and the person(s) responsible for such communication should preferably be carrying out or at least aware of the business's tax compliance process.

Additional confirmations (about local employees, assets, cash registers, etc.) would also likely be requested following the initial submission of the VAT registration claim. The email address included in the application for VAT registration is assumed to be the official email address for correspondence with the tax authorities of the registered person.

Within seven days from submission of the application form and supporting documents for mandatory and voluntary VAT registration, the tax authorities verify grounds for registration. Within seven days from completing this verification, the tax authorities issue a certificate of VAT registration or a notice of rejection.

Aside from the mandatory general VAT registration (the first item above), the VAT registration procedure should be completed by the tax authorities within three days after the application is submitted.

Deregistration. A registered person may deregister when it ceases to make taxable supplies and the conditions for mandatory VAT registration are no longer met.

VAT deregistration is mandatory on the winding up of a company or on the death of a taxable individual.

Changes to VAT registration details. Any changes in a taxable person's VAT registration details (e.g., name of company, address, type of business, VAT status, etc.) should be notified to the tax authorities. This can be done in any free format (i.e., there is no mandatory template provided by the tax authorities), but submitted in hard copy, at an office of the National Revenue Agency.

There is no time limit prescribed for such notifications (unless the VAT position of the taxable person and/or its VAT obligations to the budget are affected). However, in practice such notifications are usually done within approximately two weeks.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 20%
- Reduced rate: 9%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Due to COVID-19, the reduced rates of 9% and 0% have temporarily been applied to certain supplies of goods and services. The reduced rates will apply from 1 July 2020 to specified dates in 2022 and 2023. Such supplies are included in the list of examples of supplies at the reduced rates below.

Examples of supplies of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exportation of goods
- International transport and related services
- Intra-Community supplies

- Supply of bread and flour (with effect from 1 January 2023 to 31 December 2023)

Examples of supplies of goods and services taxable at 9%

- Baby foods and hygiene items, which includes foods suitable for babies or young children, baby diapers and similar hygiene items (becomes a permanently reduced VAT rate from 1 January 2023)
- Supply of single service to tourists in the cases of the margin scheme, as well as excursions organized by tour operators and tourist agents with occasional bus transport of passengers (with effect from 1 January 2021 to 31 December 2023)
- Supply of sport facility use services (with effect from 1 January 2021 to 31 December 2023)
- Supply of central heating and natural gas (with effect from 9 July 2022 to 1 July 2023)

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Certain real estate transactions
- Leasing of residential buildings to individuals
- Financial services
- Insurance and reinsurance services
- Medical care services
- Education, cultural and sports services
- Betting and gambling
- Intermediary services related to international adoption procedures under the Family Code in Bulgaria

Option to tax for exempt supplies. For certain supplies, such as the sales of old buildings, the taxable person may opt for taxable or exempt treatment. Suppliers may opt to tax the following exempt supplies:

- Certain real estate transactions
- The interest element on finance lease (hire-purchase) installments

E. Time of supply

The date when VAT becomes due is called the "date of supply" or "tax point." The tax point for goods is the transfer of ownership of the goods, the transfer of another right in rem of the goods or the transfer of any other right to dispose of the goods. The tax point for services is the date of completion of the service. VAT also becomes due on the date of the receipt of an advance payment for supplies of goods or services to the extent of the payment received.

If the transfer of ownership in goods is deferred until the fulfillment of certain conditions, the date of supply is the date the goods are handed over.

Deposits and prepayments. VAT becomes due on advance payments, up to the amount of the payment made, before the taxable event (except for prepayments in relation to intra-Community acquisitions and intra-Community supplies). The prepayment is considered to be VAT inclusive.

The VAT should be charged, and the invoice should be issued within five days after receipt of the advance payment, full or partial.

Continuous supplies of services. The time of supply for periodic or continuous supplies each period for which there is a payment agreed is considered as a separate supply and the tax event coincides with the date on which the payment becomes due. For supplies performed in stages, the tax event coincides with the date on which each stage is completed.

If a supply is rendered continuously for more than one year and if no payment is made or due during that period, the date of supply is considered the end of the calendar year.

The time of supply for continuous intra-Community supplies of goods that continue for more than one calendar month is the end of the calendar month in which the supplies have been performed.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The taxable event for supplies of goods on approval for sale occurs at the moment at which they are actually received by the customer.

Return of received goods back to the supplier qualifies as cancellation of the supply. Such transactions should be documented through credit notes issued by the supplier.

Reverse-charge services. If a non-established business makes certain supplies of services to a business established in Bulgaria, the reverse charge applies. Under the reverse-charge mechanism, the recipient must charge the Bulgarian VAT on the supply. The recipient of the service must account for Bulgarian VAT on the supply, using a special form (protocol). The Bulgarian recipient of the service may fully or partially recover the self-assessed VAT (partial recovery may apply, for example, if the recipient makes both taxable and exempt supplies).

The date of supply for reverse-charge services is the date on which the service is completed or the date when payment is made, whichever is earlier.

Leased assets. The time of supply for leased assets may vary in view of the type of lease and the specific contractual arrangements:

- Operational leases (rentals) are taxed for Bulgarian VAT purposes as supplies of services. VAT becomes chargeable proportionately on each installment and the time of supply follows the rules for periodic and continuous supplies (see below).
- Finance leases are taxed either as a supply of services (rentals) or as a supply of goods depending on the contractual arrangements. VAT becomes chargeable proportionately on each installment if the lease is considered a supply of rental service. A finance lease qualifies as a supply of goods and the time of supply is upon handing over of the leased asset if one of the following is true under the contract:
  - Legal title over the leased asset will transfer upon expiry of the lease term.
  - An option for transferring the title on the leased asset is envisaged, but the total amount of the lease instalments, less the interest payments, equals the fair value of the leased asset.

VAT on the total price of the goods received under financial leasing with option to transfer their legal title, would be chargeable upon handing over of the goods if the total amount of the lease installments is identical to the fair value of the leased goods upon inception of the lease.

Imported goods. VAT for imported goods is chargeable when the goods are cleared for customs purposes.

A taxable person may postpone payment of import VAT on (i) goods imported for investment projects approved by the Ministry of Finance upon obtaining a special permission or (ii) importation of certain base metals, organic and inorganic chemicals, and mineral products if the customs value of the goods per unit equals or exceeds BGN50,000 upon declaring the use of the reverse-charge mechanism in front of the customs office in Bulgaria.

Under the postponed accounting regime, the imported goods may be released from customs control without payment of VAT. Instead, the taxable person authorized to use the regime reverse charges the import VAT. If the taxable person can recover the input tax in full, no actual payment is made.

Intra-Community acquisitions. The date of supply of intra-Community acquisitions follows the general rules. However, VAT on intra-Community acquisitions becomes chargeable on the 15th day of the month following the month in which the acquisition was made. If the supplier issues an invoice before this date, the date of supply is the date on which the invoice is issued, unless the invoice documents advance payments or unless the invoice is issued before the date of the tax event.

Intra-Community supplies of goods. The taxable event for intra-Community supplies of goods follows the general rules applicable to domestic supplies of goods. Intra-Community supplies of goods are subject to 0% VAT.

The VAT on intra-Community supplies and acquisitions becomes chargeable on the 15th day of the month following the month when the taxable event took place unless an invoice is issued before that. This does not apply if the invoice is for advance payment.

Effective 1 January 2020, to substantiate the zero VAT rate on an intra-Community supply, the supplier may use the documents previously required, i.e.:

- Transport documents, such as a bill of lading for road transportation under the Convention on the Contract for the International Carriage of Goods by Road (CMR), which verify the transportation of the goods outside Bulgaria to another EU Member State
- If the customer is responsible for organizing the transportation, a written confirmation from the customer for delivery of the goods, which should contain specific wording indicating the date and place of delivery, type and quantity of the goods, type, model and registration number of the vehicle that transported the goods, names and positions of the persons delivering and receiving the goods

Furthermore, the Bulgarian VAT rules alternatively provide that the supplier may also decide to collect and have at its disposal the documents under Article 45a of the Council Implementing Regulation (EU) 2018/1912 of 4 December 2018, i.e., the documents for the application of the EU rebuttable presumption regarding intra-Community supplies.

In addition, the 0% VAT rate shall be applied only if the recipient has provided the supplier with its valid VAT ID in advance, and if the intra-Community supply is correctly reported in the VIES return of the supplier.

If the supplier does not collect the above documents by the end of the month following the month when the 0% VAT became chargeable, he should apply 20% Bulgarian VAT on the supply. If the documents are collected later, the 20% VAT charged could be adjusted with specific documents.

Distance sales. There are no special time of supply rules in Bulgaria for supplies of distance sales. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Private use. Private use of services and goods by a taxable person for nonbusiness purposes is deemed supply for consideration. The taxable event is the last day of each month in which services were deemed supplied. The taxable amount is the attributable direct cost for rendering the supply. If capital goods are used to provide deemed supplies of services, the taxable amount is determined proportionately for each tax period, taking into account a five-year depreciation period (20 years for real estate) as of the date input tax was deducted for the capital good.

Upon purchases of immovable property and other capital goods/services that will be used both for the purposes of the taxable person's business and for private use, input tax should be deducted only up to the extent of their business use applying appropriate allocation methods.

If the purchases do not qualify as capital goods (taxable base of acquisition less than BGN5,000), and the taxable person will use them for business and private purposes, only proportionate deduction up to the extent of the business use is allowed.

Taxable persons should annually adjust (increase or decrease) the input tax deduction on their historical purchases of immovable property and capital goods depending on the actual annual business use. VAT credit should be adjusted within 20 years for immovable property and within 5 years for goods and services, which qualify as capital goods.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax by offsetting it against output tax. Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services received in Bulgaria, VAT paid on imports and VAT self-assessed on intra-Community acquisitions of goods and reverse-charge services received (see the chapter on the EU).

Input tax is deductible in the same VAT period or in the following 12 months.

The amount of VAT reclaimed must be detailed on one of the following:
- A valid VAT invoice or debit note
- A protocol for reverse-charge VAT
- A customs declaration

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Bulgaria is 12 months.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Nonbusiness expenditure
- Business entertainment
- Business gifts
- Purchase of passenger cars and parking and maintenance costs (unless the car is used for core business activities)
- Home telephone costs

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Purchase, lease and hire of vans and trucks and other vehicles, which do not qualify as passenger cars
- Lease and hire of cars
- Fuel for vans, trucks, leased and hired cars
- Mobile phones
- Conferences and seminars
- Advertising
- Donations of foodstuff to food banks subject to a number of specific conditions being met

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to making exempt supplies is not recoverable. If a Bulgarian taxable person makes both exempt supplies and taxable supplies, it may not deduct input tax in full. This situation is referred to as partial exemption, i.e., when the purchases are allocated to both the taxable and exempt activity of the taxable person. Zero-rated supplies are treated as taxable supplies for these purposes.

The amount of the monthly input tax that may be deducted is calculated based on the percentage of supplies that qualifies for a tax credit compared to the total amount of supplies for the preceding calendar year. The monthly calculation is adjusted annually by calculating the ratio between the supplies with right to VAT credit and the total supplies performed by a person during a year. The adjustment is made in the VAT return for the last month of the year. The recovery percentage is rounded up to two decimal places.

Capital goods. The period of adjustment for capital goods is 5 years and for real estate is 20 years. The input tax may be deducted in the year when the goods are acquired if the intention is to use them for taxable supplies. If they are subsequently used for exempt or nontaxable supplies within 5 or 20 years, a pro rata adjustment should be made.

In case of improvements of existing buildings as a result of which a new building is created, for the purposes of input tax corrections, a new 20-year period commences for the improvement.

If the goods are acquired with the intention that they be used for nontaxable or exempt supplies but subsequently are used for taxable supplies, the VAT can be proportionally deducted (reverse application of the capital goods scheme)

In Bulgaria, while the proportional input tax deduction method does not apply to services that are long-term assets, yearly VAT adjustments apply for such services (e.g., in case of personal use, performance of exempt supplies).

Refunds. If the input tax recoverable exceeds the output tax chargeable for a tax period, a taxable person has a VAT credit balance. A taxable person may claim a refund of the VAT credit through the submission of its VAT return to the tax authorities.

Input tax must be carried forward in the following two consecutive months and offset against VAT payables. If, at the end of the offsetting procedure, input tax exceeds the output, it can be refunded within 30 days from submission of the last VAT return. A shorter 30-day term (without offsetting procedure) applies to persons such as those whose zero-rated supplies exceed 30% of the total value of supplies made in a 12-month period.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred prior to the VAT registration of a taxable person in Bulgaria may be claimed with regard to:

- Goods that qualify as assets and are available to the taxable person at the time of the VAT registration
- Services incurred with connection to the incorporation of the taxable person in the form of a legal entity under the Bulgarian Trade Act

Bad debts. The Bulgarian VAT Act contains rules for recovery of VAT in situations where output tax already accounted for by the supplier remains unpaid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts). In this regard, the Bulgarian VAT Act has introduced requirements and conditions for application of the bad-debt relief into effect as of 1 January 2023. In general, the correction of the taxable base is done by issuance of either credit note or protocol, depending on the recipient (for instance, whether the latter is a taxable/nontaxable person, whether or not it has been VAT registered at the time of the supply, etc.) where the credit note/protocol is issued within a certain time limit. Rules for respective correction of the utilized VAT credit are also introduced. Following receipt of full or partial payment by the recipient, however, the supplier (who has already utilized bad-debt rules and corrected his output VAT) is obliged to issue a debit note/protocol to "reverse" the VAT accordingly.

In this regard, in cases of full or partial nonpayment for a taxable supply (bad debt) with a place on the territory of the country whereby the receivable is irrecoverable, the supplier may reduce the tax base and the VAT charged for the supply, where simultaneously the following conditions apply:

- An invoice has been issued for the supply
- The recipient and the supplier are not related parties at the time of the supply delivery and/or at the time when the relevant circumstances for bad debt occur
- There has been no transfer against consideration of the receivable
- The supplier can prove that it has taken action to recover the receivable
- The supplier has notified in writing the recipient that it deems the respective receivable to be irrecoverable and has a proof that the notification was sent to the recipient's registered office

The circumstances under which a claim is deemed irrecoverable are also provided for, including, inter alia, expiry of a specified period, insolvency and/or liquidation of the debtor, etc.

Where the supplier receives in whole or in part payment for a supply for which the taxable amount and the tax charged have already been reduced or the supply claim is extinguished in whole or in part by other means of consideration, it is obliged to issue a debit note in the tax period in which the payment is received or the claim is extinguished, up to the amount of the payment/consideration received.

For the reduction of the tax base exceeding BGN100,000, the supplier shall notify in writing the competent territorial directorate of the NRA within three months from the occurrence of the respective circumstances. The NRA, in turn, authorizes and confirms the issuance of a credit note.

Such explicit notification, however, is not required for full or partial nonpayment of a taxable supply with a tax base of up to BGN100,000. In such cases, within three months from the expiry of the tax period during which the relevant circumstance has occurred, the supplier shall issue a credit note to the invoice with tax charged and only where the recipient of the supply has exercised the right to deduct tax credit under that invoice.

A new rule, effective from 1 October 2023, provides that in cases of bad debts the supplier may obtain information on the VAT reporting of the invoice issued by it in the recipient's VAT purchase journal through a special electronic service provided by the NRA. Verification is to be carried out by entering the number and date of the invoice(s) and notice(s) issued by it and the VAT identification number of the recipient. Reduction of the tax base and the tax charged is not allowed in cases where the supplier knew or should have known that he will not receive the amount due on the supply (e.g., cases of joint liability where there is no supply at all or where its price significantly differs from the market prices).

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Bulgaria.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Bulgaria is recoverable. The Bulgarian VAT authorities refund VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established nor registered for VAT in Bulgaria. Non-established businesses may claim Bulgarian VAT based on special rules.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refunds are made under the terms of EU Directive 2008/9/EC and under Ordinance N H-9/16.12.2009. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Bulgaria during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge, supplies with "zero" VAT rate, transport services and services ancillary to them). The person may submit the request electronically through a portal in his own country. The applicant may be assisted by a local authorized person. For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive 86/560 and local Ordinance No H-10/24.08.2006. For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Bulgaria applies the principle of reciprocity; that is, the country where the non-EU claimant is established must also provide VAT (or similar) refunds to Bulgarian businesses. The VAT refund procedure under the EU 13th Directive may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Bulgaria during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge and transport services).

More specifically, the right to request a VAT refund is available to any taxable person for whom the following conditions are simultaneously fulfilled for the period to which the request for refund relates:

- The person does not have a registered office and address of management, permanent establishment, permanent address or usual residence on the territory of Bulgaria
- The person has not made supplies with a place in Bulgaria according to the VAT Act, with the exception for transport services and services related to international transport; and goods and services for which the VAT is due by the recipient of the supply
- The non-EU country in which the person is established is indicated in the list of countries approved by the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Foreign Affairs that refund VAT or other similar tax to Bulgarian persons. The countries included in the list at this moment are Israel, Iceland, Canada, Republic of Korea, Moldova, North Macedonia, Norway, Serbia, Ukraine and Switzerland.

The right to a VAT refund is exercised through an agent authorized by the foreign person, who acts in the name and on behalf of the non-EU person. The agent prepares and submit certain set of documents required by the tax authorities.

Find below specific rules for Bulgaria:

- The deadline to submit a refund claim is 30 June of the year following the year for which the claim is being submitted for.
- The claim for reimbursement may relate to a period of less than one calendar year, but not less than three months. In this case, a tax refund is allowed, provided that the amount of tax is equal to or exceeds BGN400. Also, the request for refund may relate to a period of less than three months if this period is a remainder of the calendar year and the amount of tax is not less than BGN50.
- VAT is refunded by the competent revenue authority to a bank account specified in the request for refund, within six months from the receipt of the request, and the costs of transferring the refunded tax are at the expense of the foreign person.
- Refund applications must be sent to the following address:

  21 “Aksakov” Str.
  Sofia 1000
  Bulgaria

Late payment interest. In Bulgaria, interest is not paid on late refunds to non-established businesses (for both EU and non-EU non-established businesses).

The refund procedure for EU-established entities is envisaged in Ordinance N-9/16.12.2009. The Ordinance explicitly provides that interest shall be payable on refund claims made within 10 days after the prescribed deadline. No such explicit rules are envisaged for non-EU-based entities.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A Bulgarian taxable person must issue invoices for all taxable supplies made, including exports, intra-Community supplies and advance payments. Invoices are not required for retail transactions (B2C), unless requested by the customer. Invoices may not be issued for supplies made free of charge, for financial services and for certain other supplies. A document qualifies as a valid invoice if it complies with the requirements set out in the Bulgarian VAT Act.

A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction or a refund under EU Directive 2008/9/EC or the EU 13th Directive refund schemes (see the chapter on the EU).

Credit notes. Credit or debit notes are issued for reducing or increasing the tax base of previous supplies. They should explicitly indicate the invoices to which they refer and the reasons for the corrections.

Invoices and credit or debit notes can also be issued by recipients on behalf of suppliers, provided written agreements between the parties are concluded, for which the tax authorities should be notified.

A special tax document (protocol) is issued for transactions subject to reverse charge by the recipient.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Bulgaria for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Bulgaria, in line with EU Directive 2014/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU). This is with effect from 1 November 2019. This means that pursuant to the Bulgarian Public Procurement Act, all contracting authorities are obliged to accept and process e-invoicing for payments under public procurement contracts. This is the case provided that the invoices' content meets the requirements of Art. 114, para. 1 of the Bulgarian VAT Act and the invoices comply with: (i) the European standard for electronic invoicing approved by Commission Implementing Decision (EU) 2017/1870 of 2017 on the publication of the reference number of the European standard for electronic invoicing and (ii) the list of syntaxes in accordance with Directive 2014/55/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council or an equivalent standard. In addition, under the Bulgarian Concessions Act, the grantor is obliged to accept and process e-invoicing for payments related to the concession, again provided that the above requirements (as mentioned for the public procurement contracts) are met.

For other taxable persons (B2B and B2C), electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Bulgaria, in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU (see the chapter on the EU). Electronic invoicing is allowed if it is accepted by the recipient in writing (formal or informal procedure) or through tacit acceptance (i.e., by processing or paying the invoices). Taxable persons should be able to guarantee the authenticity, origin and integrity of the content of the e-invoices through a reliable audit trail. A nonmandatory example is through a qualified e-signature/EDI system.

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Bulgaria.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the chapter on the European Union.

Simplified VAT invoices. A simplified VAT invoice has been introduced that contains less compulsory information. A simplified VAT invoice can be issued by taxable persons for supplies of goods and services if the amount of the invoice is less than EUR100 (including VAT). Simplified invoices may not be issued in the case of distance sales, intra-Community supplies of goods or supplies with a place of supply in the territory of another EU Member State.

Taxable persons can issue summary invoices covering several separate supplies of goods and services, provided that VAT on the supplies mentioned in the summary invoice becomes chargeable during the same calendar month. A summary invoice should be issued no later than the last day of the month to which it refers.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Bulgaria. For self-billing to be applied, the supplier and the recipient should conclude an explicit agreement in this regard. The Bulgarian tax authorities should also be notified by the supplier of this agreement. The signing of such agreement, however, does not release the supplier from its obligation to properly and timely document the supplies. If the recipient does not issue an invoice, it should be issued by the supplier. If the supplier or the recipient is not established in Bulgaria, the supply should be documented under the legislation of the country where the place of supply is.

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods or on intra-Community supplies of goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, export and intra-Community supplies must be supported by evidence that the goods have left Bulgaria. Acceptable proof includes the following documentation:

- For exports, a copy of the export declaration verified by the customs office and indicating the supplier as exporter or another document certifying the export, where it is possible not to submit a customs document under the customs legislation; an invoice; or, where the supplier is not obliged to issue an invoice, another document evidencing that the subject of the supply is the exported good, and transportation document (or a written confirmation by the recipient, if the goods are delivered to a third territory). When the goods are sent or transported to a third country or territory by postal and/or express shipments in accordance with Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2015/2446 of 28 July 2015 supplementing Regulation (EU) No 952/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council as regards detailed rules concerning certain provisions of the Union Customs Code, to be able to apply the zero VAT rate, the supplier should possess a document from which it is evident that the goods sent or transported have been exported; an invoice; or, where the supplier is not obliged to issue an invoice, another document evidencing that the subject of the supply are the exported goods.

An amendment related to VAT reporting and exemption for exports performed by suppliers not established within the territory of the European Union (including Bulgaria) has entered into force as of 1 January 2023.

Namely, the new rule removes the requirement that such non-EU established suppliers (usually these are entities solely with Bulgarian VAT numbers) need to possess a customs declaration listing them as exporters of record (as previously required in the Regulations for the Application to the VAT Act but contrary to EU customs rules allowing only EU-established persons to act as exporters of record for customs purposes). The new VATA provision states that the customs export declaration should show that the goods are sent or transported outside the territory of the European Union, whereby cell "Additional information/presented documents/certificates and permits" of the declaration includes data for the non-EU established supplier's VAT identification number and the sales invoice number for the goods. The rule further presupposes that another person (established in the EU) is listed as exporter in the export customs declaration.

Thus, according to the rules laid down in the Regulations for Application of the Value Added Tax Act, where the goods are dispatched or transported to a third country by a supplier who is not established on the territory of the European Union, the supplier may apply "zero" VAT rate on the export, provided that he has the following documents:

- A customs export declaration indicating, by means of the relevant codes under the applicable Union customs legislation, the VAT identification number of the supplier and the invoice number of his supply for the goods exported
- An invoice for the supply
- A document for transportation of the goods outside the EU
- For intra-Community supplies, an invoice for the supply containing the VAT number of the recipient, as well as documents proving the dispatch of the goods to another EU Member State

The Bulgarian Regulations for the Application of the VAT Act (RAVATA) provide for written confirmation by the recipient as alternative evidence to collecting transport document in situations where the transport is performed by or on behalf of the recipient (i.e., not the supplier). This alternative existed in the local VAT Act before the introduction of the Quick Fixes (i.e., is not "linked" with the Quick Fixes). The written confirmation should indicate the date and place of receipt; the type and quantity of the goods; the type, brand and registration number of the vehicle with which the transport is affected; the name of the person who handed over the goods, as well as this person's official capacity; and the name of the person who received the goods, as well as this person's official capacity.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices may be issued in any currency, provided that the tax base and the amount of VAT due are expressed in the domestic currency, which is the Bulgarian lev (BGN). Foreign currency invoices must be converted into Bulgarian lev at the exchange rate of the Bulgarian National Bank or the European Central Bank on the date on which tax becomes due.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Special rules apply to the place of supply for supplies of telecommunications, broadcasting and electronic services to nontaxable customers. For further details of the VAT rules on electronic services in the EU, refer to the EU chapter.

Bulgarian legislation envisages that the issuance of an invoice to nontaxable person is optional unless the latter explicitly requests it. When an invoice is issued to a nontaxable person, the invoice shall contain the VAT number and details of the supplier and the recipient's personal identification number/name.

Distance selling. A taxable person, including one who manages an electronic interface, shall issue invoices for intra-Community distance sales of goods and for internal distance sales of goods with place of supply on the territory of the country when the person is not registered for the European Union regime under the Bulgarian VAT Act or in another EU Member State.

Records. In Bulgaria, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include detailed accounting records that are sufficient for the revenue authorities to establish the taxable person's local VAT obligations and depending on its business activity and type of supplies. For example, for goods excluded from the regimes of intra-Community acquisitions and intra-Community supplies (e.g., goods received/sent for performing services within the EU), it is required that a specific register for the goods is maintained. Also, a taxable person transferring goods under call-off stock arrangements shall keep an electronic register of such goods to enable the revenue authorities to check the proper application of said arrangements, etc.

In Bulgaria, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. While there is no provision in the Bulgarian VAT legislation on where the records must be held, in practice, such records can be held inside or outside Bulgaria. Where the records are held outside Bulgaria, they should be accessible by the tax authorities during tax control procedures.

Record retention period. Any taxable person shall ensure the storage of the tax documents issued by or on their behalf, as well as of all tax documents received thereby, for five years after the expiry of the statute of limitation of the tax liabilities that such documents certify, in their original form. The authenticity of the origin and the integrity of content of the tax documents, as well as the readability thereof, must be guaranteed during the entire period of storage. E-invoices should be kept within 10 years of 1 January of the year following the year in which the VAT obligation under the documents has to be paid. The database storing the e-invoices should be accessible by the revenue authorities during tax control procedures.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Bulgaria. Electronic archiving should be organized by the taxable persons in such a way as to guarantee the authenticity of origin, the integrity of content and legibility of the electronic documents.

Minimum requirements for electronic archiving include:
- The taxable person has an obligation to guarantee during a tax audit an online access to the electronic archive.
- Reasonable business controls are required to create a reliable audit trail between the invoice and the supply. For electronic invoices examples of such technologies are EDI systems and qualified electronic signatures. Still, any other type of technology creating a reliable audit trail is accepted.

There are no restrictions on the location in which the electronic documents should be kept, i.e., the electronic archiving could be inland or abroad as long as an online access is guaranteed.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Bulgarian taxable persons file VAT returns monthly. VAT returns must be filed by the 14th day of the month following the tax period.

Periodic payments. Payment in full is required by the same date. VAT liabilities are due in Bulgarian lev (BGN), but they may be paid in any currency, provided the amount remitted is equivalent to the VAT due in BGN currency. The VAT must be paid by bank transfer to the bank account of the National Revenue Agency. The amount should be received by the bank account no later than the 14th day of each respective month (otherwise, a penalty interest applies daily). In case the 14th day of the month is a nonbusiness day, the VAT is due on the first business day following.

Starting from 1 October 2023, payments to the NRA via bank transfer are processed through five new BNB bank accounts. Each of these accounts is designated for the payment of specific debts. For VAT and other taxes (revenues to the central budget) the IBAN is as follows: BG88BNBG 96618000195001.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Bulgaria for all taxable persons. The filing is performed via the e-portal of the National Revenue Agency (https://portal.nra.bg/details/vat-report) and requires an authorized signature.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Bulgaria.

Special schemes. Margin scheme for travel agents. The VAT applies on the difference between the total amount paid by the traveler to the travel agent (exclusive of VAT) and the actual cost born by the travel agent for supply of goods and services provided by other taxable persons.

Margin scheme for taxable dealers of secondhand goods, works of art, collectors' items and antiques. The VAT applies on the margin being the difference between the sales price that the dealer will receive and the purchase price paid by them.

Cash accounting. Available for taxable persons with annual turnover in the previous 12 consecutive months not higher than the equivalent in Bulgarian currency of EUR 500,000. Under this regime, the VAT becomes due on the date when a full or partial payment is received.

- Supplies of investment gold, including investment gold represented by distributed or unallocated gold certificates; gold traded on accounts; gold loans and swaps, with ownership or claim in respect of investment gold; supplies affecting investment gold through futures and forward contracts leading to a transfer of ownership or a claim in respect of investment gold
- Services of agents who act in the name and on behalf of another, in connection with deliveries of investment gold

Taxable persons who produce investment gold or process gold into investment gold, as well as taxable persons who normally supply gold for industrial purposes, may choose to treat the supplies as taxable. Taxable persons who provide intermediary services for the supply of investment gold may choose to be taxable for supplies where the supply in respect of which the intermediary service is provided is taxable.

Taxable persons who produce investment gold or process gold into investment gold, as well as taxable persons who normally supply gold for industrial purposes, may choose to treat the supplies as taxable. Taxable persons who provide intermediary services for the supply of investment gold may choose to be taxable for supplies where the supply in respect of which the intermediary service is provided is taxable.

Postponed accounting for investment projects. The imposition of import VAT may be made by the importer, if the latter is a registered person and has permission to apply this regime in connection with the implementation of an investment project.

Postponed accounting for the importation of certain base metals, organic and inorganic chemicals and mineral products. This scheme can be used if the customs value of goods per unit equals or exceeds BGN50,000. These materials are exhaustively described in the VAT Act, under the chapters from EU CN Code as follows:

Other special schemes. Among the special schemes already indicated, other special schemes are available for the Union and non-Union regime for TBE services, the new regimes for distance sales, the VAT domestic reverse charge for scrap metal, agriculture products and carbon emissions, the VAT incentive for investment projects, and the special rules for new vehicles.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Bulgaria.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. A Bulgarian taxable person trading goods with other EU countries must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of the goods exceeds certain thresholds. Separate reports are required for Arrivals (intra-Community imports) and Dispatches (intra-Community exports). The thresholds for declaration are determined by the National Statistics Institute and apply for the following year.

The threshold for Intrastat Arrivals for 2024 is BGN1,650,000. The threshold for Intrastat Dispatches for 2024 is BGN1,900,000.

A taxable person is not required to report the statistical value of the goods (the value of the goods plus additional transport and insurance expenses) if its turnover from intra-Community trade in goods for 2024 does not exceed the following:
- Dispatches: BGN37.2 million
- Arrivals: BGN16 million

In addition, the threshold for simplified Intrastat reporting of single low-value transactions is BGN500 .

Bulgarian taxable persons must complete Intrastat declarations in BGN, rounded up to the nearest whole number.

Intrastat returns are submitted monthly in electronic format by the 14th day of the month following the respective month.

EU Sales Lists. Bulgarian taxable persons that make intra-Community supplies, supplies as intermediaries in triangular operations or supplies of reverse-charge services must file EU Sales Lists (ESLs; called VIES Declarations) with the Bulgarian National Revenue Agency. An ESL is not required for any period in which the taxable person has not made any supplies required to be reported in an ESL.

ESLs must be submitted monthly by the 14th day after the end of the respective month. Electronic filing of ESL returns is mandatory.

Call-off stock register. Taxable persons that apply the call-off stock regime must keep a specific register where all the movements are included from the beginning of the transport of the goods. Any subsequent changes in the circumstances, i.e., change of the final customer of the goods, must be reflected in this register in due course.

Declaration of cash balances. A new obligation for declaration of cash balances has been adopted through the Bulgarian VAT Act. The obligation is introduced for persons registered under the VAT Act that are also enterprises within the meaning of the local Accountancy Act. In this regard:

- The obligation will arise when, at the end of a calendar quarter, the total amount of cash available in the cash desks, the amount of receivables (also arising out of loans granted) from owners (natural persons), workers, employees, persons hired under management contract, as well as subreporting persons, exceeds BGN50,000
- The information should be reported in the WHT declaration under Art. 55, para. 1 of the Personal Income Tax Act and Art. 201, para. 1 of the Corporate Income Tax Act
- The deadline for reporting is the end of the month following the respective quarter
- The first reporting period is the third quarter of 2023, with extended deadline until 14 November 2023

Correcting errors in previous returns. Pursuant to the Bulgarian VAT Act, correction in filed VAT return and ledgers should be performed by the taxable person observing certain rules. On the first place, the taxable person makes the necessary adjustments in the tax period during which the error was found and includes the unrecorded document in the relevant accounting register for the same tax period – in case of unrecorded in the accounting registers documents. On the second place, the taxable person must notify in writing the competent revenue authority, which takes action to change the obligation of the person for the respective tax period – in case of incorrectly reflected in the accounting registers documents.

Digital tax administration. Payment service providers. With effect from 1 January 2024, there will be a general obligation for payment service providers. In accordance with the rules of Directive 2020/284, taxable persons that are payment service providers to recipients/payers in connection with cross-border payments will be required to keep specific electronic records and data for the recipients and payments for each calendar quarter.

Standard Audit File for Tax (SAF-T). Bulgaria is planning to introduce the standard electronic format for exchange of accounting and financial data with the local tax authorities (SAF-T). The upcoming introduction of SAF-T in Bulgaria will speed up the overall digitalization process in providing administrative services, specifically improving the interaction between the tax administration and businesses.

SAF-T implementation in Bulgaria will roll out gradually based on business size. The tax authorities are expected to release the official dates, legal guidelines, data requirements and file delivery methods in 2024. Businesses operating in Bulgaria, whether residents or having activities through local establishments or Bulgarian VAT numbers, are anticipated to be affected by the reform.

At the time of preparing the chapter, the project is in the development phase in terms of the implementation of the conditions for data collection and transmission in the unified format of SAF-T. The project foresees timely inclusion of all interested parties in the reform. Good European practices will also contribute to SAF-T's optimal implementation in Bulgaria by assisting in the identification of the most suitable working model that meets the specifics of the Bulgarian tax system, as well as the approach and timing for introduction.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. The penalty for non-registration ranges from BGN500 to BGN5,000. An additional penalty equal to the amount of VAT that should have been charged may be imposed. A penalty ranging from BGN500 to BGN5,000 may be assessed for failure to deregister on time.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The penalty for failing to submit VAT returns or maintain VAT ledgers (sales and purchase ledgers) or for submitting inaccurate VAT information ranges from BGN500 to BGN10,000.

The penalty for late submissions or for missing or inaccurate Intrastat declarations ranges from BGN500 to BGN5,000.

Penalties may be imposed for late, missing or inaccurate ESLs.

Penalties for errors. The penalty for failing to charge VAT is the amount of VAT not charged, but not less than BGN500. Penalties apply for delayed VAT charge – 5% of the VAT not charged, but not less than BGN200 (for a delay of up to six months) and 10% of the VAT not charged, but not less than BGN400 (for a delay between 7 and 18 months). The penalty for persons who fail to self-charge VAT is the higher of 5% of the corresponding VAT and BGN50. In case the VAT amount is self-charged in the next period, the penalty is the higher of 2% of the corresponding VAT and BGN25. Penalty of 100% of the corresponding VAT applies if input tax is nondeductible.

If failure to charge VAT is due to a technical mistake, the same may be settled by cancellation of the wrong invoice and issuance of a new one containing the respective VAT. It is also necessary that a countersigned cancellation protocol containing the grounds for the cancellation is issued and kept for tax control purposes. This, however, does not exclude the abovementioned administrative penalties.

The penalty for a failure to issue VAT documents that results in the payment of less VAT is the amount of the VAT not charged but not less than BGN1,000.

In 2022, the local legislation introduced the right of taxable persons to correct VAT documents issued for supplies that were subject to incorrect VAT treatment, including for cases where an entered-into-force tax audit act is in place. In general, the incorrect documents shall be canceled and new ones shall be issued instead, subject to specific legislative requirements. The related right of input tax deduction is also governed under new specific rules.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. If the changes impact the taxable person's VAT position/obligation, then the normal penalties may apply (as outlined in the subsections above and below). For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. If a taxable person avoids the assessment or payment of tax obligations in large amounts, i.e., over BGN3,000, by non-submission of return or by declaring wrong data in a return, they may be subject to criminal liability from one to six years imprisonment or a fine of up to BGN2,000. Should the tax obligations be in respect of large amounts, i.e., over BGN12,000, one shall be imposed to imprisonment from three to eight years and confiscation of a part or all their property.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Bulgaria.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Bulgaria is five years. This is from the first day of January of the year succeeding the year during which the public obligation became payable.

There are no specific rules on time limits for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns. Specific rules apply only for the applications of the OSS schemes where the time frame for voluntary corrections is three years as of the deadline for submission of the VAT return.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- Supplies of taxable goods and services in Cambodia
- Appropriation of goods for own use by a taxable person
- Supplies of gifts or goods or services for less than their market value
- Import of taxable goods into the customs territory of Cambodia
- Supplies of digital goods or digital services into Cambodia

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Cambodia, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally, the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Cambodia, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- The business must be transferred from one person to another to continue its activities under the new ownership.
- The taxable person transferring the business must notify the tax authorities of the transfer of the business within 10 days of the date of the transfer.
- The taxable person transferring the business must seek cancellation of their registration, if appropriate.
- The recipient of the business must be registered for VAT as a taxable person at the time the business is acquired and must account for tax on the stock and assets acquired at the time of their supply.
- The recipient of the business must retain the tax records related to the business transferred for a period of 10 years.

Transactions between related parties. In Cambodia, for a transaction between related parties the value for VAT purposes is calculated by redetermination by the tax authorities.

Under the VAT regulations, the term "related" in relation to a person means the following:

- A person who owns 20% of more in value or voting power in equity interests in the person under consideration
- Having common management or directors with the person
- A member of the family or spouse or a member of the family of the spouse of the person
- An entity that has purchased 30% or more of the person's total output in any three consecutive months

The term "person" means any person or group of persons engaged in business and any other person who is related to the person.

In addition to the above, Cambodia introduced transfer pricing rule under which the term "related party" refers to:

- A member of the taxable person's family
- An enterprise that controls or is controlled by, or is under common control with, the taxable person; the term "control" means the ownership of 20% or more in the value or voting power of the equity interests in the enterprise or voting power in the enterprise's board of directors; to determine the degree of control for a taxable person who is a physical person, all equity interest owned by the taxable person and those owned direct or indirect by its spouse shall be included

C. Who is liable

A VAT taxable person is any person subject to the self-assessment regime of taxation who makes taxable supplies in Cambodia. Self-assessment taxpayers who provide taxable supplies are required to register for VAT and charge VAT on taxable supplies. A taxable person that is making taxable supplies that fall under one of the following criteria is required to register with the General Department of Taxation (GDT):

- All types of corporations, importers, exporters and investment enterprises
- Any other enterprise with a turnover in respect of goods sold exceeding KHR125 million or in respect of services exceeding KHR60 million for the preceding three consecutive months or in the next three consecutive months
- Participates in any bidding or quotation for the supply of goods and services
  Or
- Any enterprise that, at the beginning of any three consecutive months, has any government contracts that will produce taxable turnover exceeding KHR30 million

Self-assessment-taxpayers are classified into three different types as follows:

- Large taxpayer:
  - Annual turnover over KHR4 billion for the agricultural sector; KHR6 billion for the service and trade sectors and KHR8 billion for the industrial sector
  - Registered as a subsidiary of a multinational company or a foreign company branch
    Or
  - Registered as a Qualified Investment Project (QIP), which is an investment project approved by the Council for the Development of Cambodia (CDC)
- Medium taxpayer:
  - Annual turnover between KHR1 billion and KHR4 billion for the agricultural sector; between KHR1 billion and KHR6 billion for the service and trade sectors, and between KHR1.6 billion and KHR8 billion for the industrial sector
  - Registered as a legal entity or representative office
  - A national or subnational government institution, association or nongovernmental organization, or project under these institutions
    Or
  - Foreign embassy or consulate, international organization or technical cooperation agency of another country
- Small taxpayer:
  - Annual turnover ranging from KHR250 million riels to KHR1 billion for the agricultural, service and trade sectors and between KHR250 million and KHR1.6 billion for industrial sector
  - Total turnover exceeding KHR60 million for any three consecutive calendar months
  - Expected to have a total turnover for the next three consecutive calendar months exceeding KHR60 million
    Or
  - Engages in bidding, price consulting or price surveying in the supply of goods or services

If the taxpayer declares turnover that does not reflect the actual turnover, the GDT has the right to redetermine the classification of a taxpayer as follows:

- Large taxpayer:
  - Holds assets valued above KHR2 billion for taxpayers in the agricultural, services and commercial sectors
    Or
  - Holds assets valued above KHR4 billion for taxpayers in the industrial sector
- Medium taxpayer:
  - Holds assets valued at KHR1 billion to KHR2 billion million for taxpayers in the agricultural, services and commercial sectors
    Or
  - Holds assets valued at KHR2 billion to KHR4 billion for taxpayers in the industrial sector

- Small taxpayer:
  - Holds assets valued at KHR200 million to KHR1 billion for taxpayers in the agricultural, service and commercial sectors
    Or
  - Holds assets valued at KHR200 million to KHR2 billion for taxpayers in the industrial sector

A resident taxpayer must complete a registration for VAT within 30 days after the date on which it becomes a taxable person.

Exemption from registration. A business does not have to register and account for VAT if its turnover does not (or is not expected to) exceed KHR125 million for the supply of goods or exceeds KHR60 million for the supply of services, for the preceding three consecutive months or in the next three consecutive months. Nor does a business have to register if it is not involved in importing or exporting, is not operating through a corporation, is not a QIP and does not participate in any bidding or quotation for the supply of goods and services under government contracts.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A business may register for VAT voluntarily if its taxable turnover is below the VAT registration threshold or in advance of making taxable supplies following the standard registration procedure.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Cambodia.

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in Cambodia where it has a permanent establishment. The term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business in Cambodia, the branch of a foreign company or an agent resident in Cambodia, through which the nonresident person carries on their business. The term "permanent establishment" also includes any other association or connection through which a nonresident person engages in economic activity in Cambodia.

Non-established businesses. Special rules apply for non-established businesses that make e-commerce supplies (see the subsections Reverse charge and Digital economy below). At the time of preparing this chapter, other than e-commerce, there are no additional requirements for non-established businesses to register for VAT in Cambodia.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Cambodia.

Reverse charge. The revere-charge mechanism applies to e-commerce supplies from nonresident businesses that do not have a permanent establishment in Cambodia and to registered taxpayers in Cambodia (business-to-business supplies [B2B]). Resident taxpayers purchasing digital goods or services must account for VAT on behalf of the supplier by way of the reverse-charge mechanism. At the time of preparing this chapter, the reverse-charge mechanism only applies to e-commerce supplies in Cambodia.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Cambodia.

Digital economy. The tax authority issued Sub-Decree No. 65 (dated 8 April 2021), which laid out the conditions and mechanisms for collecting VAT on the provision of digital goods and services for consumption in Cambodia, supplied by nonresidents who do not have a permanent establishment in Cambodia. The below rules were implemented from 1 April 2022.

The standard rate of VAT applies on business-to-consumer (B2C) and B2B transactions. A new feature is the VAT reverse-charge mechanism on B2B transactions (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

One of the key features of Sub-Decree No. 65 is that it requires nonresident entities not having a permanent establishment in Cambodia, who provide e-commerce goods or services to Cambodia consumers (B2C), to register and account for VAT with the Cambodian tax authority if their actual or estimated revenue meets the threshold to register as a self-assessed taxpayer.

Sub-Decree No. 65 defines "electronic commerce" as the activities of purchasing, selling, leasing or exchanging products or services, including electronic commercial and civil commercial activities. A non-exhaustive list of examples of electronic commerce is included in an annexure to Sub-Decree No. 65 and includes: electronic ordering of tangible products, ordering/downloading of digital products, ordering/downloading of digital products for commercial use of the copyright, software updates and add-ons, limited duration software and other digital information licenses, single-use software or other digital products, application hosting separate licenses, application hosting-bundle contracts, application service providers (ASPs), ASP license fee, website hosting, software maintenance, data warehousing, computer support via a network, data retrieval, delivery of exclusive/high-value data, online advertising, electronic access to professional advice, technical information provided electronically, information delivery, access to an interactive website, online shopping portals, online auctions, sales referral programs, content acquisition transactions, streamed (real time) web-based broadcasting, carriage fees, and subscriptions to a website allowing the downloading of digital products.

In addition, the tax authority published Prakas No. 542 MEF.PrK on 8 September 2021, outlining details on the procedures for the implementation of the e-commerce rules outlined in Sub-Decree No. 65. The VAT registration thresholds for a nonresident e-commerce provider, under the self-declaration scheme, is an annual turnover of KHR250 million or expected turnover exceeding KHR60 million within any three consecutive months in the current year.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Cambodia. However, the same rules outlined above for e-commerce are also applicable if they are considered digital goods under an electronic commercial platform.

Registration procedures. Companies must register electronically through the online registration system. The following information and documents must be submitted through the online registration system:

- Reserve the company name in the system
- Copy of the passport of all shareholders (if individual)/shareholder representatives (if shareholder is legal entity), chairman and directors of the new company
- Photo (35mm*45mm) of all shareholders/representatives with a white background
- Phone numbers, addresses and email addresses of all shareholders/representatives
- Company information (i.e., address, phone numbers, main business activities, total employees, etc.)
- Land title or rental contract of the new company office address
- Property tax receipt of the new company office address or the confirmation letter from the company if the property is not subject to property tax
- Memorandum and Articles of Association (M&A) of new company
- Power of attorney
- Copy of the certificate of incorporation (COI) and M&A of shareholders, company's tax identification number of each shareholder, scan of original latest patent tax certificate and VAT of local shareholder, shareholder's resolution and bank letter

Upon submission of the above required information and documents, the company will receive a VAT certificate, patent tax certification and tax obligation letter from the GDT within 7 to 10 working days from when the company is successfully registered.

Deregistration. To deregister from VAT, taxable persons can submit an application letter to the GDT if in the preceding three calendar months, the taxable turnover does not exceed the registration threshold and the taxable turnover for the previous 12 months does not exceed 75% of the annual registration threshold.

Changes to VAT registration details. A taxable person must notify the GDT when there is a change in the company's name, address, business activities or a change of shareholders. Such notification must be done by completing the information form as provided in the tax update form 101 to the National Tax School (NTS) within 15 working days from the date the change took place. The taxable person will then receive an approval from the NTS within 7 to 10 working days from the date the form was provided.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT (including zero rate).

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 10%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported services
- Services supplied for use outside Cambodia
- Any goods and services supplied by supporting industry QIPs or contractors to certain export industries

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Public postal services
- Certain medical and dental goods
- Wholly state-owned public transportation services
- Insurance services
- Primary financial services
- Educational services
- Nonprofit activities in the public interest, as recognized by the Ministry of Economy and Finance
- Educational services
- Electricity and clean water supplies
- Unprocessed agricultural products
- Solid and liquid waste removal service
- Job seeking, training, sending and managing workers or trainees to work abroad by private recruitment agencies

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Cambodia.

E. Time of supply

In Cambodia, the general time of supply rule for goods or services is the time the supplier must issue an invoice for the supply, or the time the invoice is issued (if the invoice is issued before the time it is required to be issued). The supplier is required to issue a tax invoice within seven days of the delivery of goods or the completion of the performance of services or at the time of payment if the payment is made before the delivery of goods or the completion of the performance of services.

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in Cambodia for deposits and prepayments. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above). This means that if payment is made before the delivery of goods or completion of the performance of service, the supplier is required to issue an invoice within seven days from the time of payment receipt. Hence, this is case-by-case based on characteristic of advance payment and deposit.

Continuous supplies of services. For the supply of continuous supplies of services, the time of supply is the earlier of the date on which the payment is due or received. This rule also covers supplies of goods under a rental agreement and supplies of goods or services under a multiple-payment agreement (i.e., this is an agreement that requires multiple payments rather than a one-off payment).

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Cambodia for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Cambodia for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. The time of supply rule for the supply of goods under a hire purchase agreement or finance lease is the date the goods are delivered, whether at the time of delivery it is characterized as a transfer of the right to use or disposal of a tangible fixed asset.

Imported goods. The time of supply for the supply of imported goods is the time at which the importer must file a declaration to the customs administration according to the regulations in force and the customs duty and other import charges are paid.

Other supplies. Own use. For the supply of goods that are applied to own use, the time of supply is the time at which the goods are first applied to own use.

Gifts. For the supply of goods or services by way of a gift, the time of supply is the time at which the goods are delivered or performance of the services is completed.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on taxable goods and services supplied to it for business purposes, to the extent that costs corresponding to the input tax are for taxable supplies (or imports of goods).

A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made. If the input tax exceeds output tax due, this excess tax can be claimed as a refund.

A valid standard tax invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Cambodia is within the month it happens.

Nondeductible input tax. In general, input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (e.g., goods acquired for private use). A taxable person must obtain a valid VAT invoice for input tax deduction. If the taxable person fails to obtain a valid VAT invoice, a VAT input credit may not be allowed, and the unrecovered input tax is also not allowed as a deductible expense for annual corporate income tax calculations.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Input tax without a valid VAT invoice
- Input tax from topping up an employee's personal mobile phone balance

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to taxable business use)

- Input tax from purchases of petroleum products (for non-petroleum business)
- Input tax from entertainment expenses (for businesses not involved with such entertainment)

Partial exemption. Where a taxable person makes taxable and nontaxable supplies, the input tax should be proportioned to reflect the percentage of taxable supplies,to calculate the amount of input tax that can be recoverable.

To calculate the appropriate input tax to be recovered, the taxable person must use the following formula:

A x B/C

- A is the total amount of input tax for the period.
- B is the total value of taxable supplies exclusive of VAT made by the taxable person during the period.
- C is the total value of taxable and nontaxable supplies exclusive of VAT made by the taxable person during the period.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Cambodia. Special methods are not allowed in Cambodia.

Capital goods. In Cambodia there are no special input tax recovery rules for capital goods. The normal rules outlined above apply.

Refunds. Medium and large taxpayers can request a VAT refund from the GDT in the following cases:

- Where the monthly input tax credit is higher than the monthly output tax for taxable persons who are exporters or who are registered as an investment enterprise (i.e., QIP).
- Other taxable persons must have excess input tax credit for three or more consecutive months.
- All taxable persons must have proof of the input tax, including customs declarations (for imports), original customs receipts showing payment of taxes or original tax receipts issued by local suppliers.
- Proof of exported goods/services that are subject to VAT at the zero-rate.
- There are reliable VAT accounting books, sales/purchase journal and other supporting records.

The refund request must be manually submitted (i.e., by paper). In addition, the taxable person must also attach a copy of the original VAT return showing the VAT refund, that was filed in the GDT's system.

For diplomatic missions/foreign councils/INGOs and technical cooperation agencies of other governments the following criteria applies:

- Registration with the GDT is required.
- Submission of the VAT refund must be on a form prescribed by the GDT.
- Each invoice must have a total pre-tax amount of KHR200,000.
- Each refund request must have a total pre-tax amount of KHR200,000 or more.
- The request must have certification from the mission head to the GDT that the goods are truly purchased for use in the mission's official process.

On 8 August 20203, the GDT issued Instruction 018 MEF.GDT on certain procedures for requesting VAT credits and refunds, outlined as follows:

- To expedite the VAT refund process, a taxable person can request a VAT refund within three or six months or one year. If a taxable person requests a refund of VAT credits carried forward for more than one year, a timeline of 40 days as provided under Prakas 576 will not apply.

- VAT credits that are carried forward for longer than three years will not be eligible for a refund. For any VAT credits brought forward from before 2020, the taxable person must submit the request for a refund before the year ended 2023, otherwise those VAT credit will not be eligible for a refund.
- Taxable persons have the responsibility to ensure that their bank account details and enterprise information are up to date.
- A VAT refund can be put on hold by the GDT if taxable persons still have outstanding tax debts or reassessments (unresolved tax audit cases) with the GDT. In this case, the VAT credit will not be refunded until the outstanding tax debt or reassessment is resolved. Furthermore, in the case of any invalid VAT credits due to nonpayment of the VAT amounts to the GDT by the sellers, the GDT will keep those amounts on hold, and only approve the remaining valid VAT input amounts.

Pre-registration costs. Taxable persons can claim an input tax credit for input tax paid in respect of all taxable supplies or all imports of goods, including capital assets acquired by the person within 60 days prior to the tax registration. There is no specific process for this refund claim. It is claimed directly during the first month tax declaration after registration.

Bad debts. Output tax on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Cambodia.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Cambodia.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Cambodia is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A standard VAT invoice must be issued for all taxable supplies made by taxable persons. A taxable person in Cambodia may issue two types of invoices: a VAT invoice or a commercial invoice.

Medium and large taxpayers that provide goods and/or services are required to issue VAT invoices to customers who are registered taxpayers and commercial invoices to those customers that are not registered for tax.

Small taxpayers must issue commercial invoices to all their customers regardless of whether they are registered for tax or not.

Credit notes. A taxable person may issue a credit note for the adjustment of the VAT amount after the time of supply or the issue of a tax invoice if the following events occur:
- The supply is canceled.
- The nature of the supply has been fundamentally varied or altered.
- The previously agreed consideration of the supply has been altered by agreement with the recipient of the supply, whether due to an offer of discount or for any other reasons.
- The goods or parts thereof of have been returned to the supplier or the services have not been completed.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is not allowed in Cambodia.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is not allowed in Cambodia.

There are no guidelines or specific rules on electronic invoicing in Cambodia. However, since Cambodia implemented e-filing for monthly tax and annual tax returns, the tax authorities accept electronic invoices in some audit cases.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Cambodia. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Cambodia.

Proof of exports. Exports of goods and services must be supported by the following evidence:
- Certified customs declaration for exports
- Copies of invoices issued to the foreign purchaser
- Transport documentations
- Orders or contracts for or with foreign purchaser
- Evidence of payment by bank transfer through a bank registered in Cambodia or by a letter of credit, it must be payable by bank registered in Cambodia with a due approval

When services are performed outside Cambodia for a nonresident entity, the services are subject to VAT at the zero-rate. The services may be considered as export services if the services are provided by a Cambodian taxable person using resident or nonresident employees to perform the services outside of Cambodia. When services are performed within Cambodia but used outside of Cambodia by a nonresident entity, the services are subject to VAT at the zero-rate if the services are used directly and entirely by a nonresident entity outside of Cambodia (i.e., the nonresident entity cannot use the services for any business purpose or economic benefit within Cambodia at any time).

A taxable person must provide the following supporting documents to claim VAT at the zero-rate:
- An agreement that clearly states the service fee, type of service and location where the services are to be performed
- Documents showing payments remitted outside of Cambodia to a bank in Cambodia
- An original invoice and related accounting records

Foreign currency invoices. The GDT requires all taxable persons in the self-assessment regime in Cambodia (see Section C. Who is liable) to apply the total amount in the domestic currency, which is the Cambodian riel (KHR), on invoices that are issued to customers where the items and VAT amounts can be in either KHR or United States dollars (USD). When using KHR on their invoices, taxable persons should refer to the daily official exchange rate issued by the NBC to convert from USD to KHR.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Taxable persons must issue a commercial invoice to customers who are not registered for VAT or overseas customers. See the subsection VAT invoices above for more detail on commercial invoices.

Records. In Cambodia, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include any records related to VAT, including invoices must be held by taxable persons. This is what is done in practice because in the VAT law there is no explicit list of the type of records that must be held. Taxable persons must use sequential numbers on their invoices for a whole year and archive them for 10 years for the purposes of taxation.

An original invoice, especially the tax invoice, should be provided to customers to enable them to claim input tax credit from the GDT while the supplier can maintain a copy.

In Cambodia, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. While there is no rule on where the VAT books and records must be held (i.e., inside or outside the country), in practice it can be either as long as records are made available if requested by the tax authorities.

Record retention period. Records must be held for 10 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Cambodia. However, there are no specific rules on electronic archiving. In practice, taxable persons can keep or archive hard files at a third-party warehouse and keep soft files in the company's drive.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The filing frequency for all taxable persons in Cambodia is monthly. VAT returns must be signed by authorized person and affixed with the company's stamp and filed with the GDT manually by the 20th of the following month. However, the company can file the VAT return electronically (via the e-filing system) by the 25th of the following month.

Periodic payments. The VAT payable, if any, must be settled by the same date as the filing deadline of VAT return, i.e., by the 20th of following month for paper filing and the 25th for e-filing. Generally, payments of VAT due are made electronically online, via the website of the tax authorities (i.e., internet banking or bank transfer). However, this is not mandatory, and a taxable person can still pay VAT due manually (i.e., in person).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Cambodia, but not mandatory. Medium and large taxpayers can file returns via e-filing either by purchasing a desktop app or online (https://www.tax.gov.kh/km/e-service). Small taxpayers can use the GDT tax prefiling app and they can make their tax payments via e-payment online.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Cambodia.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Cambodia.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Cambodia.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Cambodia.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Taxable persons should submit an application letter to the GDT to inform them of the change and the reason for making the amendment. The GDT may request supporting documents to verify the transactions being amended. The form is required to be submitted manually to the GDT (i.e., in paper form) after entering the amendments via e-filing. If the amendment is made before a tax audit and within six months after the submission of the original return, the additional tax of under paid tax is 10% and the interest penalty is reduced by 50%. If the amendment is made six months after the submission of the return, the interest penalty is reduced by 20%. If the amendment is made during a tax audit, the additional tax is at 10% plus 100% percent of interest penalty (see Section J. Penalties below).

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Cambodia.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. If a taxable person registers late for VAT, penalties may be imposed on the supplies of taxable goods and services made before the date of registration. The penalties range from 10% to 40%, with interest of 1.5% per month for late or unpaid taxes.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Interest is charged for the late payment of VAT at 1.5% per each month the payment is late.

Penalties for errors. No input tax credit or income tax deduction is available with respect to the VAT on any invoice that does not follow the required format. Any taxable person failing to issue an invoice or issuing an invalid invoice is considered as obstructing the tax implementation process and will be subject to penalties that include suspending business operations, tax reassessment or in the worst and uncommon case scenario, filing criminal charges for tax evasion that may give rise to a penalty of up to KHR10 million or imprisonment for one year or both.

The late notification or failure to the notify tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty for obstruction of the implementation of the tax laws. For further details, see the subsection above Changes to VAT registration details.

Penalties for fraud. Making and furnishing fraudulent records, documents, reports or any other information can be considered as an act of obstruction of the implementation of the tax laws. This can be penalized by up to a KHR10 million fine or imprisonment for one year or both.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers can be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Cambodia. The directors can be held personally liable and the penalties are the same as outlined above.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Cambodia is three to 10 years. Taxable persons may voluntarily correct errors within three years of the filing date. Tax authorities can go back to review returns up to 10 years.

The GDT carries out regular tax audits on Cambodian registered companies and audits are generally performed by either one of two departments of the GDT – the Department of Enterprise Audit (DEA) or the Department of Large Taxpayers (DLT). In practice, the DEA carries out comprehensive audits while the DLT conducts limited and desk audits. A "desk audit" refers to an examination of the taxable persons' tax returns by the auditors at the GDT's offices. A desk audit may be initiated if the auditors identify inconsistencies in the taxable person's tax returns or other information provided to the GDT. The Prakas indicates that if the auditors' findings are considered complex or high risk the desk audit may be terminated and replaced by an onsite tax audit.

The time period for initiating a desk audit is within 12 months after the submission of the tax returns. A "limited tax audit" is conducted at the taxable person's premises and is more detailed than a desk audit. The scope of a limited audit includes most types of tax including VAT refund but excluding income tax. A limited audit may be conducted only within the current tax year (N) and tax year before the current tax year (N-1) A comprehensive tax audit covers all taxes and includes a determination into whether the taxable person maintains proper accounting records. A comprehensive audit may be conducted on the current tax year (N) and the three tax years immediately preceding the current tax year (N-3). The comprehensive tax audit can be extended up to five years if there is evidence of tax evasion or tax losses or tax credits carried forward. if there is specific evidence of tax evasion and with pre-approval from the Ministry of Economy and Finance (MEF), the tax audit can be extended up to 10 years.

B. Scope of the tax

Canada's federal government imposes a 5% sales tax known as the goods and services tax (GST). When a supply is made in a "participating province," the tax rate includes an additional provincial component of 8% or 10%, depending on the province. The combined 13% or 15% tax is known as the harmonized sales tax (HST).

In implementing the HST, the participating provinces repealed their individual retail sales taxes and share in the revenues generated by the HST. HST applies to the same base of goods and services that are subject to GST.

Although the province of Québec is not considered a "participating province," it replaced its own retail sales tax and eventually harmonized with the GST (subject to some exceptions) after it initially implemented its own Québec sales tax (QST) on 1 July 1992.

The provinces of British Columbia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan continue to impose their own retail sales tax (provincial sales tax [PST]), while the province of Alberta and Canada's three territories do not impose a retail sales tax.

GST/HST applies to taxable supplies of property and services made in Canada in the course of a business and to imports of goods into Canada. Specific HST rules determine when a supply is made in a participating province and when property or services are brought into a participating province.

The term "property" includes all property, whether real or personal, movable or immovable, tangible or intangible, corporeal or incorporeal, any right or interest of any kind, and shares and "choses in action" (i.e., personal rights to property). However, it does not include money. The term "tangible personal property" generally means goods.

The term "services" means anything other than property or money. It does not include services provided by an employee in the course of, or in relation to, an office or employment.

For the purposes of GST/HST, the territory of Canada includes the following areas:
- The seabed and subsoil of the submarine areas adjacent to the coast of Canada for which the government of Canada or of a province may grant rights to explore for, or exploit, any minerals (including petroleum, natural gas, related hydrocarbons, sand and gravel).
- The seas and airspace above those submarine areas with respect to any activities carried on in connection with the exploration for, or exploitation of, minerals.

The legislation contains rules that determine whether a supply has been made in Canada for GST purposes. Once it is determined whether a supply is made inside Canada or outside Canada under these GST place-of-supply rules, there is a similar but separate set of rules (known as HST place-of-supply rules) that determines whether the supply is made in a particular province in Canada.

Under the legislation, a sale of goods is deemed to be made in Canada if the tangible personal property (i.e., goods) is delivered or made available to the purchaser at a place in Canada. Any other supply of goods (otherwise than by way of sale), such as a lease, is deemed to be made either inside Canada or outside Canada depending on whether possession or use of the goods is given to the recipient or is made available to the recipient inside Canada or outside Canada.

A service is deemed to be supplied in Canada if the service is performed in whole or in part in Canada. It is deemed to be supplied outside Canada only if the service is performed wholly outside Canada. A supply of intangible personal property is deemed to be made in Canada if the property may be used in whole or in part in Canada. Conversely, a supply is deemed to be made outside Canada if the property cannot be used in Canada.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for GST/HST in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Canada, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a GST/HST-registered or GST/HST-registrable business will be subject to GST/HST at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of GST/HST. In Canada, for a TOGC to be treated as outside the scope of GST/HST, the supplier and the recipient must make a joint election using Form GST44. To be eligible to make the election the following conditions must be met:

- A supplier (the vendor) makes a supply of "a business" or "part of a business."
- The business (or part) was carried on by the vendor.
- The recipient (the purchaser) is acquiring ownership, possession or use of "all or substantially all" of the property that can reasonably be regarded as being "necessary" for the purchaser to be capable of carrying on the business (or part) as a business (i.e., generally referred to 90% or more).
- The purchaser is registered for GST/HST where the vendor is registered for GST/HST.
- The vendor and the purchaser make a joint election in prescribed form.
- The purchaser files the election with the fiscal authorities no later than the due date for the return for the purchaser's first reporting period in which any of the GST/HST would have been payable.

Transactions between related parties. Closely related corporations and partnerships engaged exclusively in commercial activities may elect to deem supplies made between members of the group as being made for no consideration. See the subsection Group registration below. A similar election is available for corporations that are members of a closely related group that contains listed financial institutions. When the election is made, the electing corporations are deemed to be listed financial institutions and all supplies of property by lease or license and all supplies of services between the electing corporations are deemed to be supplies of financial services (exempt supplies for GST/HST purposes).

C. Who is liable

Every person who makes taxable supplies of goods or services in Canada in the course of a commercial activity is required to register for GST/HST purposes. "Commercial activity" means any of the following activities:

- Any business, except to the extent the business involves making exempt supplies
- An adventure in the nature of trade, except to the extent the activity involves making exempt supplies
- The supply of real property, other than an exempt supply

For individuals, personal trusts whose members are individuals and partnerships of individuals, the activity must also be carried on with a reasonable expectation of profit to constitute a commercial activity.

Crypto asset mining activity. On 22 June 2023, Canada enacted rules for the application of GST/HST to mining activities in respect of crypto assets and to remuneration received for performing such activities. The new rules are retroactive to 5 February 2022. A crypto asset mining activity includes the following:

- Validating transactions and adding them to the publicly distributed ledger on which the crypto asset exists at a digital address
- Maintaining and permitting access to the publicly distributed ledger on which the crypto asset exists at a digital address
- Allowing computing resources to be used in connection with the activities described above

In general, crypto asset mining is not considered a supply for GST/HST purposes. For example, a person that acquires a property or service for consumption, use or supply in the person's crypto asset mining activities is deemed to have done so otherwise than in the course of the person's commercial activities. As a result, GST/HST does not apply to the provision of crypto asset mining and the person performing the mining cannot claim input tax credits (ITCs). However, the general GST/HST rules may apply if certain conditions are met (e.g., a particular person performs a mining activity for another person and the identity of that other person is known to the particular person).

Exemption from registration. The following are activities that are exceptions from requiring to register for GST/HST purposes:
- The person qualifies as a "small supplier."
- The person's only commercial activity is the supply of real property by way of sale other than in the course of a business.
- The person is a nonresident who does not carry on any business in Canada.

The definition of a "person" includes individuals, partnerships, corporations, trusts, estates of deceased individuals and bodies such as societies, unions, clubs, associations, commissions or other organizations of any kind.

A "registrant" is any person that is registered or is required to be registered for GST/HST.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. In addition to mandatory registration requirements, other persons engaged in commercial activities in Canada may apply for registration even if not required to do so under the legislation.

Small supplier threshold. A "small supplier" is a person whose annual worldwide taxable and zero-rated supplies were less than CAD30,000 in the four preceding calendar quarters. The CAD30,000 threshold is determined by reference to the aggregate of taxable and zero-rated supplies made by the person and any associates of the person in the period.

A person whose activities exceed CAD30,000 must register for GST/HST within one month after making the first supply that causes its turnover to exceed the threshold. However, if a person exceeds the CAD30,000 threshold in a single calendar quarter, it ceases to qualify as a small supplier beginning with the supply that causes it to exceed the threshold.

The small supplier threshold for a public service body (such as a charity, nonprofit organization, municipality, university, public college, school authority or hospital authority) is generally CAD50,000.

The small supplier rules do not apply to the following businesses:
- Persons who solicit orders for publications to be delivered in Canada by mail or courier
- Taxi operators (including commercial ride-sharing services)
- Nonresidents who sell taxable supplies of admissions in Canada for places of amusement, seminars, activities or events held in Canada

Persons engaged in selling real property (under taxable conditions) otherwise than in the course of a business may also register, though they are not required to do so under the legislation. Registration permits these persons to claim ITCs on land purchases at the time of purchase instead of at the time of sale, resulting in significant cash flow advantages.

Other voluntary registrations. Registration is also permitted in the case of a resident parent corporation that has no commercial activity but holds a related corporation's shares or debt deemed to be property that was last acquired or imported by the parent for use exclusively in the course of commercial activities. Also permitted is the registration of resident corporations that are acquiring or propose to acquire all or substantially all of the capital stock of another corporation.

Listed financial institutions resident in Canada are also permitted to apply for registration. Voluntary registration is also available to foreign banks in certain circumstances, as part of measures introduced to assist foreign banks to restructure under the foreign bank branching regime in the Bank Act. These measures provide transitional GST/HST relief for the initial transfer of assets from a foreign bank's existing Canadian subsidiary to its newly established Canadian branch.

A corporation may also register for GST/HST purposes in certain circumstances, in contemplation of a distribution made in the course of a reorganization described in subparagraph 55(3)(b)(i) of the Income Tax Act (a butterfly transaction). At the time of preparing this chapter, it should be noted that a notice of ways and means motion on 28 November 2023 would amend the legislation to remove the requirement that the reorganization be a butterfly transaction. Instead, these amendments would add conditions limiting the type of property that could be included in the supply that the corporation receives and generally requiring that the consumption, use or supply of the property before and after the supply be exclusively in the course of commercial activities. If enacted, these measures would be deemed to have come into force on 9 August 2022. However, these changes had not been enacted.

The minister of national revenue is not required to register every person who applies for registration and is authorized to deny registration in appropriate cases.

Group registration. GST/HST group registration is not permitted. Legal entities that are closely connected must register for GST/HST individually.

However, "closely related" corporations and partnerships may elect to deem supplies made between members of the group as being made for no consideration if the members are engaged exclusively in making taxable and zero-rated supplies. This provision effectively makes sales between group members subject to the zero rate. Taxable sales of real property and any supply that is not acquired by the recipient exclusively for use in a commercial activity are not eligible for relief under the election.

In addition to closely related corporations, the election is also available to groups that include partnerships, referred to as "Canadian partnerships." A "Canadian partnership" is defined as a partnership in which each member is a corporation or partnership and is resident in Canada. At the time of preparing this chapter, draft legislative amendments would, if enacted, repeal the "Canadian partnership" definition and replace it with the term "specified partnership," effective 10 August 2022. "Specified partnership" means a partnership each member of which is a corporation and a partnership, while the definition of "qualifying member" would be amended to include a specified partnership, each member of which is resident in Canada. On 28 November 2023, the Department of Finance tabled a notice of ways and means motion that would implement these amendments. However, they have not been enacted.

Special rules apply if a closely related group includes a financial institution. See the subsection Transactions between related parties above.

Special rules apply if a closely related group includes a financial institution.

Closely related corporations and Canadian partnerships are required to file prescribed election Form RC4616 with the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA).

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a GST group. It is based on the degree of share ownership (as outlined below).

Changes to the definition of a "qualifying member" resulted in a general increase in the availability of the election for new members of a qualifying group. However, in the case of new members, the election is available if it is expected the new member of the group will be exclusively engaged in commercial activities throughout the 12-month period following the time when the election is made.

The prescribed form for the election in Québec is numbered FP-4616-V.

In addition to meeting a 90% or more ownership test based on the value and number of voting shares, in order for the parent and the subsidiary to be considered to be closely related, the parent corporation or partnership must hold and control 90% or more of the votes in respect of every corporate matter (i.e., the qualifying voting control) of the subsidiary corporation.

All parties to the election are jointly and severally, or solidarily (for civil law purposes), liable for tax (and penalties) that may apply in relation to supplies made among them. Liability applies even where the election had ceased to be in effect before the time the particular supply was made, but the parties conducted themselves as if the election were in effect at the time the supply was made. Liability also applies where no valid election had been made, but the parties claimed they had made an election and were conducting themselves as if an election were in effect at that time.

Fixed establishment. Generally, where a nonresident has a permanent establishment (PE) in Canada, the person is deemed to be resident in Canada regarding the activities carried on through that particular establishment. Every nonresident person deemed resident in Canada and engaged in commercial activity (i.e., the business of making taxable and zero-rated supplies) in Canada through that particular establishment is generally required to register for GST/HST. A PE, in respect of a particular person, is defined for GST/HST purposes as a fixed place of business of the person, including a place of management, branch, office, factory, workshop, mine, oil or gas well, quarry, timberland or other place of extraction of mineral resources through which supplies are made. In addition, the PE of a person includes the fixed place of business of another person (other than a broker, general commission agent or other independent agent) making supplies on behalf of the person in the ordinary course of business.

Based on the above, for a person to have a PE under the first part of the definition, the person must both have a fixed place of business and make supplies through that fixed place of business, or under the second part of the definition, have a person (other than a broker, general commission agent or other independent agent acting in the ordinary course of business) making supplies through a fixed place of business in Canada.

Non-established businesses. A nonresident business that does not carry on business in Canada but solicits orders for the supply of goods in Canada or enters into an agreement to supply certain goods, services or intangible property in Canada, may register on a voluntary basis to be eligible to claim ITCs (see Section F. Recovery of GST/HST by taxable persons). A nonresident business is not required to appoint a tax representative in Canada to register for GST/HST. However, a nonresident business with no PE in Canada must provide a security deposit to the GST/HST authorities to obtain registration.

In general, the amount of security is 50% of the estimated net tax (either positive or negative) for the first year of operations in Canada. The minimum acceptable amount of security is CAD5,000, and the maximum is CAD1 million. Security may be in the form of cash, certified check, money order or bond. All security deposits are payable in Canadian dollars (CADs).

A nonresident business may apply in writing to have the security requirement waived if it satisfies both of the following conditions:
- Its taxable supplies in Canada do not exceed CAD100,000 annually.
- Its net GST remittance or refund does not exceed CAD3,000 annually.

Tax representatives. A nonresident business is not required to appoint a tax representative in Canada to register for GST/HST. Form-AUT-01 is used to authorize the CRA to deal with an individual representative (such as an accountant, lawyer or employee) or a firm as a representative for business account-related GST/HST information (as well as payroll, corporation income taxes, excise taxes, excise duties and other levy accounts). A representative is required to complete the authorization request in "Represent a Client" at https://www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/e-services/represent-a-client.html to obtain online access to tax information for a business.

Reverse charge. Self-assessment of the GST or federal component of the HST is required on importations of intangible personal property and services that are acquired from unregistered, nonresident persons outside Canada and not used at least 90% in commercial activities (100% in the case of financial institutions). The tax is calculated on the amount charged for the service or intangible personal property in CADs, and the tax is payable in the reporting period in which the amount for the service or the intangible personal property was paid or became payable. Registered purchasers of real property are also required to self-assess and remit applicable tax on the consideration paid for the property.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Canada.

Digital economy. Prior to 1 July 2021, many online vendors who did not have a physical presence in Canada were not considered to be "carrying on business" in Canada. The obligation to pay the GST/HST on supplies was technically on the consumers, who were required to self-assess under the legislation although in practice this was rarely done.

Effective 1 July 2021, new measures were introduced to ensure that GST/HST applies fairly and effectively in the context of an increasingly digital economy. Specifically, nonresident vendors supplying digital products and services to consumers in Canada are required to register for, collect and remit GST/HST with respect to their taxable supplies to Canadian consumers. Similar requirements apply to supplies of short-term accommodation made through digital accommodation platforms, as well as to goods supplied through fulfillment warehouses, as outlined below.

Under these measures, a nonresident vendor is required to register for, collect and remit the GST/HST if the vendor's total taxable supplies of digital products or services made to consumers in Canada exceed or are expected to exceed CAD30,000 over a 12-month period. These measures also apply to a nonresident distribution platform operator if the operator's total taxable supplies of digital products or services made to consumers in Canada, including the supplies of digital products or services by nonresident vendors to consumers in Canada that the operator facilitates, exceed or are expected to exceed that threshold. For purposes of this measure, a consumer is an entity or person not registered for GST/HST and a business is any other entity or person registered for GST/HST.

A nonresident vendor or nonresident distribution platform operator that does not carry-on business in Canada may register under a simplified system allowing them to use a specific online portal for simplified GST/HST collection and remittance. Under the simplified system, they are required to collect and remit GST/HST for supplies made to consumers, but not for supplies to a registrant. As well, they may not claim ITCs to recover GST/HST paid on business inputs. However, a nonresident vendor or nonresident distribution platform operator may claim ITCs if that person registered in accordance with the regular GST/HST rules.

These rules apply to cross-border supplies of digital products and services to the extent the consideration for such supplies becomes due on or after 1 July 2021 or is paid without becoming due. Also effective on the same date, distribution platform operators are required to register under the normal GST/HST rules and to collect and remit the GST/HST for sales of goods that are located in fulfillment warehouses in Canada (or shipped from a place in Canada to a purchaser in Canada) when those sales are made by non-registered vendors through distribution platforms. Moreover, nonresident vendors are required to register under the normal GST/HST rules and to collect and remit the GST/HST for sales of goods that are stored in fulfillment warehouses in Canada when nonresident vendors make such sales on their own account.

Registration requirements apply to both resident and nonresident distribution platform operators if their total qualifying supplies of tangible personal property to purchasers in Canada, including supplies made through their platforms by third-party vendors, exceed or are expected to exceed CAD30,000 over a 12-month period.

GST/HST is also required to be collected and remitted in respect of supplies of short-term accommodation made through a digital accommodation platform. A property owner who is a registrant is required to account for GST/HST on such supplies. If the property owner is not a registrant, the accommodation platform provider is deemed to have made the supply and would be responsible for GST/HST collection and remittance.

GST/HST registration is required for an accommodation service provider if that person facilitates or expects to facilitate more than CAD30,000 in taxable supplies of short-term accommodation in Canada for unregistered third-party suppliers of the accommodation. An accommodation service provider that carries on business in Canada continues to be subject to the regular GST/HST registration regime. Nonresident accommodation platform operators that do not carry-on business in Canada may register under a simplified system allowing them to use a specific online portal for simplified GST/HST collection and remittance. Under the simplified system, they are required to collect and remit GST/HST for supplies of short-term accommodation made to consumers (defined to be a person not registered for GST/HST) but not for supplies to a registrant. Under the simplified system, they may not claim ITCs to recover GST/HST paid on business inputs.

These rules apply to supplies of short-term accommodation made on or after 1 July 2021, as well as to a supply made before that date if all the consideration for the supply is payable on or after 1 July 2021.

Initially, the CRA used the same number pattern for both regular and simplified GST/HST registrations. Because there was only one number pattern for both types of registration, there was a risk that Canadian businesses could claim undue ITCs. Effective 30 June 2023, the last four digits have been altered to visibly identify registrants under the simplified regime. The updated number should be used for reporting periods after 30 June 2023.

Québec specified registration system. Prior to the introduction of the federal e-commerce measures outlined above, Québec implemented a mandatory specified registration system for suppliers with no physical or significant presence in Québec (nonresident suppliers) to ensure the QST is collected and remitted in the context of the digital economy. Suppliers with no physical or significant presence in Québec are required to collect and remit the QST on taxable incorporeal movable property and services they supply in Québec to specified Québec consumers (i.e., persons who are not QST registrants and whose usual place of residence is located in Québec).

Mandatory registration applies to digital property and services distribution platforms with respect to taxable supplies of incorporeal movable property or services supplied to specified Québec consumers, where the digital platform controls the key elements of transactions with such consumers, such as billing, transaction terms and conditions, and delivery terms. The specified registration system took effect on:

- 1 January 2019: for nonresident suppliers outside Canada and for digital platforms enabling these suppliers to make taxable supplies of incorporeal movable property or services in Québec to specified Québec consumers
- 1 September 2019: for nonresident suppliers located in Canada and for digital platforms enabling these suppliers to make taxable supplies of incorporeal movable property or services in Québec to specified Québec consumers

Nonresident suppliers who are required to register under the specified system may elect to register under the general QST system instead if they meet the optional registration requirements under the QST system. A nonresident supplier who makes this election is also required to register for GST/HST.

Online marketplaces and platforms. In addition to the supplies in relation to the digital economy, nonresident (for tax purposes) suppliers located in Canada are required to collect and remit the QST on taxable corporeal movable property (goods) they supply in Québec to specified Québec consumers. This mandatory registration applies to nonresident suppliers if the value of the consideration for all taxable supplies made by the supplier in Québec to consumers exceeds CAD30,000.

Canada has adopted the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) model rules developed for reporting by digital platform operators on platform sellers. As a result, reporting platform operators providing support to reportable sellers for relevant activities will be required to file annual reports with the CRA indicating the jurisdiction of their reportable sellers. Under the model rules, reporting platform operators are entities that are engaged in the following:

- Contracting directly or indirectly with sellers to make the software that runs a platform available for the sellers to be connected to other users
- Collecting compensation for the relevant activities facilitated through the platform

Reporting platform operators include platform operators that are resident for tax purposes, or nonresident platform operators that facilitate relevant activities by sellers resident in Canada or with respect to renting real property located in Canada. Reportable sellers include active users that are registered on a platform to perform relevant activities. Certain sellers that represent a limited compliance risk, such as government entities, are excluded. Relevant activities include relevant services (e.g., services involving time or task-based work, rental of real property, rental of transportation) and sales of goods.

Reporting platform operators must report specified information on reportable sellers by 31 January of the year following the calendar year for which a seller is identified as a reportable seller. These measures apply to calendar years beginning after 2023. This means the first reporting and information exchanges will occur in early 2025 for the 2024 calendar year.

QST harmonization – Cross-border digital products and cross-border services. The federal measures that took effect 1 July 2021 essentially reflect the specified QST system that requires nonresident suppliers, as well as operators of specified digital platforms facilitating the transactions of such suppliers, to register with Revenu Québec and to collect and remit the QST applicable to their taxable supplies of incorporeal movable property and services made to Québec consumers.

Québec has amended its tax legislation to avoid any difference in harmonization between the QST and GST/HST systems that may result from the implementation of the federal measures relating to cross-border digital products and cross-border services, e.g., the rules relating to calculating the CAD30,000 threshold. These amendments are intended to ensure that the provisions concerning the specified QST registration and remittance system, applicable to nonresident suppliers and distribution platform operators, are harmonized with the federal legislation. As well, they are intended to ensure that QST is collected on the sale of goods from outside Canada from a warehouse in Québec and on the supply of short-term accommodations situated in Québec that are rented through digital accommodation platforms. The amendments to the Québec tax legislation are effective 1 July 2021.

QST harmonization – Goods supplied through fulfillment warehouses. Québec has amended its tax legislation to incorporate the federal measures for supplies of goods made through fulfillment warehouses. As a result, distribution platform operators and nonresident vendors are similarly required to register under the normal QST rules and to collect and remit QST, in respect of sales of goods located in fulfillment warehouses in Québec or shipped from a place in Québec to a consumer in Québec. Fulfillment businesses in Québec are also required to notify Revenu Québec that they are carrying on a fulfillment business and to maintain records on their nonresident clients and the goods they store on their behalf. Furthermore, the specified QST system is amended to ensure the collection and remittance of QST on sales of goods located in fulfillment warehouses in Canada but outside Québec, as well as on sales of goods shipped from a place in Canada but outside Québec, when such sales are made to Québec consumers.

QST harmonization – Platform-based, short-term accommodation. Québec has incorporated the GST/HST measures in respect of supplies of short-term accommodation facilitated by a digital platform operator.

Registration procedures. Persons required to register under the legislation must apply to the CRA within 30 days following the first taxable supply made in Canada. Registration can be done online (https://www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/tax/businesses/topics/gst-hst-businesses/account-register.html), by mail, by fax or by telephone. To register, the following information must be provided:

- Amount of annual worldwide and domestic GST/HST taxable supplies
- Fiscal year-end
- Effective date of registration
- Reporting period
- Business name
- Business number (if the business already has one – see below)
- Type of business or organization (such as sole proprietor, partnership, corporation, registered charity)
- Name and Social Insurance Number of all owners
- Physical address
- Mailing address (if different from the physical address)
- Description of major business activity

Before registering for GST/HST (or during the process of registering), a business must obtain a business number (BN) from the CRA by using its online service at http://www.businessregistration.gc.ca; by sending in a completed Form RC1, Request for a Business Number (BN); or by calling +1 (800) 959-5525.

The agency will then assign a registration number to the registrant and provide notification in writing of the registration number and the effective date of registration. Organizations can generally expect to receive confirmation of their registration and their nine-digit registration number by mail within two weeks after submitting their completed registration forms (however, the processing time may be longer for nonresident entities). GST/HST registrants who are based in the province of Québec are required to register with Revenu Québec using the online service (https://www.revenuquebec.ca/en/businesses/consumption-taxes/gsthst-and-qst/registering-for-the-gst-and-qst/how-to-register/).

Deregistration. Where a person ceases to carry on a commercial activity or becomes a small supplier and, as a result, ceases to be a registrant, the person's GST/HST registration may be canceled by the CRA on its own initiative or on request. In these circumstances, the person is deemed to have sold all its assets at fair market value upon deregistration. The non-registrant is subsequently required to account for the GST/HST on this deemed disposition in the last GST/HST return as a registrant. The person must also repay any ITCs claimed on prepaid rent and services to the extent the prepayments relate to a period after deregistration.

Conversely, tax that becomes payable by a person to suppliers after deregistration continues to qualify as a valid ITC where it relates to services rendered to the person before deregistration or to rental payments attributable to a period before deregistration.

Changes to GST/HST registration details. When certain changes occur, registrants are required to inform the CRA so that the changes can be reflected in their GST/HST account. These include changes to a business address and/or operating name, as well as changes to fiscal year-ends, legal status, business activity, ownership, directors, etc. As well, the CRA should be notified if any of the following events occur: amalgamations, purchases of another business, opening more locations or branches, selling a business, bankruptcy or receivership, among others. Depending on the type of change that occurs, the CRA should be contacted by mail, phone or fax. In certain cases, registrants can make the changes online (https://www.canada.ca/en/revenue-agency/services/tax/businesses/topics/changes-your-business.html).

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are subject to GST/HST. The HST rate of 13% applies in Ontario and a rate of 15% applies in Nova Scotia, in New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Labrador and in Prince Edward Island. QST (see Section B. Scope of the tax) at a rate of 9.975% applies in the province of Québec. The effective combined GST/QST rate is 14.975%.

The 5% GST rate applies to supplies of property and services made elsewhere in Canada: in the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba and in the Yukon, Northwest, and Nunavut Territories. A zero-rate (0%) applies to a limited range of supplies of property and services. Although tax does not apply to zero-rated supplies, a registrant may claim ITCs with respect to these supplies. As a result, zero-rated supplies bear no tax.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports of goods and services
- Basic foodstuffs
- International transportation
- Prescription drugs
- Medical devices
- Certain inputs used in agriculture and fishing

Certain supplies of goods and services, referred to as "exempt supplies," are within the scope of GST/HST, but are not liable to tax. However, these exempt supplies do not give rise to ITCs.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Supplies of used residential property
- Financial transactions
- Most supplies by charities and public-sector bodies
- Health care services
- Education services

Option to tax for exempt supplies. In some cases, the GST/HST legislation permits parties to a transaction to elect to treat particular exempt supplies as taxable. Elections are available, for example, in respect of the supply of a residential complex by a person other than a builder, particular sales of real property by an individual when made in the course of an adventure or concern in the nature of trade, certain supplies of instruction or examinations by a professional or trade association, government, vocational school, university, public college or regulatory body, certain memberships in a public service body or professional organization and some supplies of real property by public service bodies. In most cases, conditions must be satisfied before the election can be made.

E. Time of supply

In general, tax on a taxable supply becomes payable on the earlier of the date on which the consideration for the supply is paid or the date on which the consideration becomes due. The consideration is considered to be paid when the supplier receives the money (or other form of agreed consideration) for the supply. The consideration for a taxable supply is deemed to become due on the earliest of the following dates:

- The date on which the supplier issues an invoice with respect to the supply
- The date of the invoice
- The date on which the consideration falls due under a written agreement
- If an undue delay occurs in the issuance of an invoice for services, the date on which the supplier would have issued an invoice with respect to the supply, but for the delay

Tax may also become due when the supply is completed in specific circumstances. For example, tax on a sale of real property generally becomes due on closing. Similarly, if goods are sold, any tax on the supply that has not previously become due becomes due at the end of the month following the month when the goods are delivered to the purchaser.

Deposits and prepayments. A deposit may be defined as money placed with a person as security or guarantee for the due performance of a contract. Most deposits are not treated as consideration under the legislation but are regarded as pools of money that become taxable only when applied as consideration for a supply or when forfeited for failure to carry out the agreement under which the supply is made. However, a prepayment of the purchase price is taxable when it is paid or becomes due. In practice, the distinction between a deposit and a prepayment is often difficult to draw because the consequences of a default by the person paying the deposit or making the prepayment can be the same.

As a general rule, there is no difference between goods or services regarding the time of supply rules for deposits and prepayments.

Continuous supplies of services. Special rules apply to water, electricity, natural gas, steam or any other property where it is delivered or made available to the purchaser on a continuous basis by means of a wire, pipeline or other conduit, provided invoices are issued to the purchaser on a regular or continuous basis. Thus, most sales by utilities are taxable when invoiced. However, some industrial products that are delivered to commercial and industrial purchasers by pipeline are invoiced irregularly on an as-needed basis. In these circumstances, the vendor must collect tax by the end of the month following the month of delivery.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Goods are often delivered to prospective purchasers on approval, sale or return, consignment or other similar terms. Under these arrangements, title to the goods generally does not pass to the purchaser until the purchaser notifies the seller of its approval or acceptance of the goods, or the purchaser commits some act or default that indicates its adoption of the sale. In these circumstances, the legislation requires that tax be paid no later than the end of the calendar month following the month in which the goods are resold or title to the goods passes to the purchaser.

Reverse-charge services. Generally, tax is applied to imported services or intangible property (or to commercial imports made by importers who are not entitled to ITCs, as well as on specified motor vehicles) where the supply is made outside Canada to a person who is resident in Canada, unless the supply is exempt or zero-rated, or the Canadian resident is acquiring the property or service for use exclusively in the course of commercial activities.

Leased assets. The legislation provides that where a written lease has been entered into, each lease payment is regarded as becoming due on the day on which the lease requires the payment to be made, even if an invoice for the payment is issued before the payment becomes due. Thus, tax applies to each payment of rent under the lease as it becomes due or, where rent is prepaid, on the day the prepayment is made. This rule applies to leases of both real property and tangible personal property, but not to other agreements.

Imported goods. Goods imported into Canada are subject to the GST or the federal part of the HST, except for goods that would be zero-rated if supplied in Canada, which are also zero-rated upon importation. Tax on imported goods becomes due when the goods are released by the Canada Border Services Agency for entry into Canada.

F. Recovery of GST/HST by taxable persons

A registrant (taxable person) may recover the GST/HST payable on property and services that it acquires or imports for consumption or for use or supply in its commercial activities. This is accomplished by claiming ITCs as a deduction on the registrant's GST/HST return.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally be obtained before an ITC may be claimed.

A registrant generally claims its ITCs in the GST/HST return for the reporting period in which the tax becomes payable. However, a registrant may claim an ITC for a previous period at a later date.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Canada is four years. Recovery is generally possible in any return filed within four years after the end of the reporting period in which the tax became payable. The recovery period is reduced to two years for certain large businesses (more than CAD6 million in annual taxable supplies) and listed financial institutions. However, large businesses whose supplies of goods and services are all or substantially all (90% or more) taxable in either of their last two fiscal years are excluded from this two-year limitation.

Nondeductible input tax. The provinces of British Columbia, Ontario and Prince Edward Island each adopted temporary restrictions on certain ITCs for large businesses when they adopted the HST, similar to those that were formerly in place under the QST regime. These temporary restrictions no longer apply, with Prince Edward Island being the last province to phase them out, effective 1 April 2021.

For purposes of the temporary recapture rules, a person was generally deemed to be a large business if either of the following conditions were met:
- The total amount of the value of the consideration for taxable supplies (including zero-rated supplies) made annually in Canada (other than supplies of financial services and supplies arising from the sale of real properties that are capital properties of the person) by the person and its associated persons exceeded CAD10 million in the last fiscal year that ended before a recapture period.
- The person was, or was related to, a bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurer, a segregated fund of insurers or an investment plan.

For purposes of the temporary recapture rules, specified property or services generally included the following, with minor differences among the provinces:
- Specified energy
- Specified telecommunication services
- Specified road vehicles
- Specified fuel (other than diesel)
- Specified food, beverages and entertainment

In the province of Québec, the restrictions on ITCs for large businesses were eliminated gradually, beginning in 2018.

The elimination in Québec was affected by reducing the restriction rate by 25% per year over a three-year period commencing 1 January 2018. Large businesses were able to claim input tax refunds with respect to property and services to which restrictions currently apply, at the rate of 25% in 2018, 50% in 2019, 75% in 2020 and 100% as of 2021. As of 1 January 2021, these restrictions no longer apply in Québec.

ITCs may not be recovered to the extent that an input is used in making exempt supplies.

The number of ITCs that may be recovered is based on the extent to which the input is used for consumption or for use or supply in commercial activities. Special rules apply to capital goods and capital real property. ITCs may not be claimed for purchases of property and services that are not used for business purposes (e.g., goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur or an officer or shareholder of a company). If an item is used less than 10% for business purposes, no recovery is permitted. In addition, ITCs may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide examples of items of expenditure for which ITCs may not be claimed and examples of items for which ITCs are available if the expenditure is related to use to taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Purchases used less than 10% in commercial activities
- Membership fees for social clubs
- 50% of business meals and entertainment costs
- Gifts to employees (subject to exceptions)

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Hotel accommodation
- Attending conferences and seminars
- Purchase, lease (or hire) of cars, vans or trucks, subject to certain limits
- Maintenance and fuel for cars, vans or trucks
- Parking
- Mobile phones

Partial exemption. Tax paid on inputs related to making exempt supplies is generally not recoverable as an ITC. A GST/HST registrant that makes both exempt and taxable supplies may be limited to claiming a partial ITC.

The amount of ITCs that a business, engaged partially in exempt activities, may claim is calculated in the following two stages:

- The first stage identifies the tax on inputs that may be directly and exclusively allocated to taxable supplies and the tax on inputs that may be directly and exclusively (90% or more) allocated to exempt supplies. Tax on inputs exclusively attributable to taxable supplies is eligible for full ITCs. Tax on inputs exclusively related to exempt supplies is generally not recoverable.
- The second stage apportions tax on other inputs between taxable and exempt supplies, based on any method that is fair and reasonable in the circumstances and consistently used. The proportion that relates to commercial activities may be claimed as an ITC.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method or special methods in Canada. However, this is with the exception of large banks, insurers and securities dealers that are required to either use a prescribed percentage to recover ITCs or obtain pre-approval from the CRA to use a customized ITC allocation method.

Capital goods. Although registrants are generally entitled to claim ITCs in full at the time assets are acquired, special rules apply to certain capital goods. Generally, these rules apply to goods defined to be capital property, other than real property, of the registrant within the meaning of the Income Tax Act (referred to as capital personal property), as discussed below. ITCs are available at the time of acquisition to the extent an asset is primarily for use in a commercial activity. Certain subsequent changes in the proportion of commercial use over the life of the asset may trigger adjustments in GST/HST.

For GST/HST purposes, capital property includes any property that is capital property for income tax purposes, other than property included in Class 12, 14 or 44 of the capital cost allowance classes. Capital property for income tax purposes is defined as any depreciable property (i.e., property on which capital cost allowance may be claimed) and any property, such as land, shares, bonds, debentures and mortgages, that if disposed of would result in a capital gain or loss. Class 12 includes low-value assets (e.g., small tools, dishes, cutlery and motion picture films) for which a 100% write-off for income tax purposes is allowed, while Class 14 includes franchises, concessions and licenses for a limited period. Class 44 includes patents and rights to use patented information for a limited or unlimited period. The definition of capital property for GST/HST purposes applies to a registrant whether or not the registrant is a taxable person for income tax purposes.

The GST/HST status of the disposition of capital personal property generally depends on its use immediately prior to its disposition. GST/HST applies if the most recent use was primarily in a commercial activity, since, presumably, an ITC would have been taken.

Proportional ITCs are available for acquisitions of capital real property, even where the property is not used primarily in a commercial activity. However, they are not available where the property is acquired primarily for the personal use and enjoyment of the registrant. Change-of-use rules apply if significant shifts occur in the mix of noncommercial and commercial usage.

Special rules also apply in the case of capital personal property and capital real property used by public sector bodies.

Refunds. If the ITCs claimed in a period exceed the amount of GST/HST collected or collectible in the same period, the registrant may claim a refund. An invoice or other supporting document containing prescribed information is necessary to support a claim for an ITC, refund or rebate. Where a document contains a combination of taxable and zero-rated or exempt items, the tax status of each must be shown if the document is to support an ITC claim. A statement that "prices include GST/HST where applicable" is not sufficient.

Pre-registration costs. When a person who was formerly a small supplier, i.e., with annual sales of taxable and zero-rated supplies below CAD30,000, becomes a registrant for GST/HST purposes, it can claim an ITC for the GST/HST it paid on property that was previously acquired but still on hand for use in commercial activities. This property can include capital property, real property, goods for resale and inventory. The GST/HST that can be claimed as an ITC at that time is equal to the basic tax content of the property.

An ITC may also be claimed for GST/HST that became payable before a person became a GST/HST registrant, on services to be rendered after the person becomes a registrant or on any rent, royalty or other similar payment relating to property that is attributable to a period after the person becomes a registrant. The ITC is available only to the extent that the service or rental is for consumption, use or supply in the course of a commercial activity. No ITC is allowed to the extent that the payment is for services provided before registration.

Bad debts. The legislation provides relief for tax charged but not collected in the case of bad debts incurred by a supplier, to the extent these debts are subsequently written off. Specifically, the formula in the legislation provides that the deduction is equal to the tax payable in respect of the supply multiplied by the ratio of the total amount of the bad debt written off (including GST/HST and applicable provincial taxes) to the total amount payable for the supply (including GST/HST and applicable provincial taxes). This relief is not available for bad debts in respect of which an accounting reserve has been established. The debt must be written off in the books of account to access the relief.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Canada.

G. Recovery of GST/HST by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for GST/HST in Canada is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

GST/HST invoices. Strict documentary requirements must be satisfied before a claim can be made to recover tax that has been paid or become payable. Suppliers are required to provide this information on request.

Credit notes. If a registrant has collected an excess amount of tax, it may refund or credit the excess amount to the customer. A registered supplier has up to two years after the day on which it was charged or collected to refund or credit the excess tax. If the supplier chooses to take this action, the supplier must, within a reasonable time, issue a credit note to the recipient for the amount of the refund or credit.

If the supplier has already accounted for GST/HST on the supply, the supplier may use the credit note to reduce its tax liability in the period in which the credit note is issued. Conversely, if the recipient of the supply has already recovered the tax by claiming an ITC or rebate, the recipient must repay the credit or rebate to the CRA.

Similar tax adjustment measures also apply if tax has been charged or collected correctly by the supplier, but the consideration is subsequently reduced for any reason. Both volume discounts and returns are treated as price adjustments for GST/HST purposes.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Canada, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Canada. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Canada. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing. If electronic invoicing is used, the general rules pertaining to invoices under the legislation must be followed.

The CRA has launched a multiyear initiative to explore the adoption of electronic invoicing standards and technology for integration with the Canadian tax system. The aim of this initiative is to (i) assess how electronic invoicing can benefit businesses through efficiencies, (ii) improve sales tax compliance, (iii) deter participation in the underground economy and (iv) improve the taxpayer experience. Specifically, the CRA aims to advance thinking as to how tax compliance can include the use of real or near real-time data from business transactions using modern technologies, as opposed to relying on taxpayer completed tax returns and post-filing strategies. Canada also helped prepare the OECD report, Tax Administration 3.0 and Electronic Invoicing: Initial Findings.

Simplified GST/HST invoices. Simplified GST/HST invoicing is allowed in Canada. Invoice requirements are based on the value of the supply. For supplies less than CAD30, the only pieces of information required on supporting documents are the vendor's name or trading name, sufficient information to identify when GST/HST in respect of the supply was paid or became payable and the total consideration paid or payable for the supply.

For supplies greater than CAD30 but less than CAD150, three additional pieces of information are required. These are the vendor's GST/HST registration number, the total amount of GST/HST charged on the supply or, if prices are on a tax-included basis, a statement to this effect and an indication of which items are taxed at the GST rate and which are taxed at the HST rate.

For supplies greater than CAD150, additional information is required. These are the purchaser's name, trading name or the name of their duly authorized representative; sufficient information to ascertain the terms of sale (e.g., cash, credit); and a description sufficient to identify the supply.

The 2021 federal budget proposed to increase the existing thresholds to CAD100 (from CAD30) and CAD500 (from CAD150). The Department of Finance introduced draft regulatory amendments to increase these thresholds, effective 20 April 2021. At the time of preparing this chapter, a notice of ways and means motion was tabled on 28 November 2023 to implement these changes retroactive to 20 April 2021. However, these changes have not been enacted.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Canada. This is only if the recipient provides the supplier with the prescribed information that the supplier would otherwise have the obligation to indicate on its invoice.

Proof of exports. In general, GST/HST does not apply to exported goods. If the supplier delivers the goods outside Canada, the transaction is treated as a supply outside Canada and is generally not taxable.

The CRA has indicated that several documents may constitute adequate evidence of export. The required documents in a particular case may vary, depending on the mode of transportation used to export the goods and the nature of the goods. The acceptability of the documentary evidence depends on whether the CRA is able to retrace the entire shipment of the property from its origin in Canada to the point at which the shipment leaves Canada. The necessary documentation may include:

- Purchase agreements or billings from the supplier to the recipient that identify the goods
- Transportation documents (bill of lading, waybill, probill, post office receipt, courier receipt, etc.) showing the point of delivery
- Customs brokers' invoices relating to the supply
- Import documentation required by the country of destination

In the case of motor vehicles, boats, ships and aircraft, copies of the registration from the foreign regulatory authority where the property has been licensed may also be used to establish that the property has been exported.

Customs Form B13A, Export Declaration, alone, is not acceptable as proof of export. For further information, see GST/HST Memorandum 4.5.2, Exports – Tangible Personal Property, Appendix: Evidence of exportation.

Foreign currency invoices. Suppliers may invoice in foreign currency and recipients may make payments to suppliers in foreign currency. If an invoice is issued in a foreign currency, it must be converted to CADs for reporting purposes (except under the simplified system for e-commerce where it is possible to file in US dollars or euros under certain conditions). In general, the Canadian currency equivalent may be determined by using the exchange rate in effect on the date on which the consideration for the supply is paid, the date on which the foreign currency was acquired or the average rate of exchange for the month in which tax became payable. Acceptable foreign currency exchange rates include those established by a Canadian chartered bank, the Bank of Canada or the Canada Border Services Agency. The method of conversion chosen by a registrant must be applied on a consistent basis.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. GST/HST-registered suppliers are not required to issue full GST/HST invoices to private (non-GST/HST-registered) customers. The documentary requirements are only in place for supplies made to GST/HST-registered customers, for them to be allowed the input GST/HST recovery.

Records. In Canada, examples of what records must be held for GST/HST purposes include records and books of account for GST/HST audit purposes. The records must generally be kept in French or English.

In Canada, GST/HST books and records can be kept outside the country. Records are generally required to be held at the person's place of business in Canada. However, the agency may permit a registrant to keep their records outside Canada in certain cases. To request permission, registrants should write to their tax services office. After conducting a review, the CRA will respond in writing indicating whether permission is granted and what, if any, terms and conditions apply. Where permission to maintain records outside of Canada is given, the records must be made available in Canada for review by the CRA upon request. Otherwise, the registrant must allow CRA officials to review the records by traveling to the country where they are maintained at the expense of the registrant.

Record retention period. Generally, electronic and other records must be retained for six years from the end of the calendar year to which they relate or for such longer period as may be prescribed by the regulations. However, the minister may authorize a person to dispose of its records before the normal retention period has expired or demand that it keeps them for a longer period. The authorization or demand must be made in writing.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Canada. Persons using electronic records must retain all business records in an electronically readable format, and the data must be capable of relating back to the supporting source documents.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Reporting periods are monthly, quarterly or annually, depending on the level of taxable and zero-rated supplies made by the registrant.

Registrants whose turnover exceeds CAD6 million a year must file returns monthly.

Registrants whose turnover is between CAD1.5 million and CAD6 million a year must file returns quarterly (with an option of filing monthly). Registrants whose turnover does not exceed CAD1.5 million must file annually (with an option of filing monthly or quarterly).

Any registrant has the option of filing returns monthly, even if revenue from taxable and zero-rated supplies is less than CAD6 million.

Nonresident vendors or nonresident distribution platform operators registered under the simplified system for e-commerce must file on a quarterly basis.

The filing deadline for a monthly or quarterly return is one month after the end of the reporting period. The filing deadline for an annual return is generally three months after the end of the fiscal year. Specific filing requirements apply for certain listed financial institutions (e.g., the deadline can be six months after the end of the year) and individual registrants who carry on a business.

Periodic payments. The payment deadline for GST/HST due is the same as the filing deadlines. As such, the payment deadline for a monthly or quarterly returns is one month after the end of the reporting period. The payment deadline for an annual return is generally three months after the end of the fiscal year. Specific payment requirements apply for certain listed financial institutions (e.g., the deadline can be six months after the end of the year) and individual registrants who carry on a business.

Payments must be made in CADs (except under the simplified system for e-commerce where it is possible to pay in US dollars or euros under certain conditions). Payments may be made in various ways, including electronically through CRA's website, in person or through a financial institution's internet or telephone banking system, or by mailing a check or money order.

In contrast to the rule that deems a return to be filed when it is mailed, a tax remittance is regarded as having been paid only when it is received by the receiver general. If a person makes their payment or remittance through a financial institution, the CRA is not considered to have received the payment until the financial institution processes the transaction.

Payments and remittances of CAD10,000 or more must be made to the account of the receiver general at or through a bank, credit union, trust company or mortgage lender. As well, such payments must be made electronically unless the payer or remitter cannot reasonably pay the amount in that manner. These measures apply in respect of payments and remittances made after 2023. Recent legislative amendments introduced the electronic remittance requirement and reduced the threshold for mandatory payments to be made at or through a financial institution from CAD50,000 to CAD10,000. These changes apply for payments and remittances made after 2023.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Canada, for certain taxable persons.

The legislation allows a person who is required to file a GST/HST return to file returns electronically if the person meets the criteria specified in writing by the minister. There are four electronic filing options that can be used to file GST/HST returns, based on a registrant's particular reporting circumstances:

- GST/HST NETFILE is a free, internet-based filing service that allows eligible persons with a four-digit access code to file their returns directly with the CRA over the internet.
- GST/HST Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) is a computer-to-computer exchange of information in a standard format. Eligible registrants can use EDI to file their returns and remit their GST/HST payments electronically.
- GST/HST Internet File Transfer (GIFT) is an option that allows eligible registrants to utilize third-party, CRA-approved accounting software to file their returns electronically.
- GST/HST Telefile is a method that allows eligible registrants to file their GST/HST returns using their four-digit access code, a touch-tone telephone and the toll-free number +1 (800) 959-2038.

As well, certain persons are specifically required to file their returns electronically using the media specified in writing by the minister in GST/HST Memorandum 7.5, Electronic Filing and Payment. The following persons are required to electronically file their GST/HST returns in respect of reporting periods that begin before 2024:

- Registrants, other than charities, with greater than CAD1.5 million in annual taxable supplies (calculated by reference to the registrant and all associated persons)
- Registrants required to recapture ITCs for the provincial portion of the HST on certain inputs in Ontario and effective 1 April 2013, in Prince Edward Island
  Or
- Builders (including builders that are charities) that:
  - Sell grandfathered housing, where the purchaser is not entitled to claim a GST/HST new housing rebate or GST/HST new residential rental property rebate
  - Sell housing that is subject to HST when it was purchased on a grandfathered basis
  - Are required to report a transitional tax adjustment amount
  - Are reporting a provincial transitional new housing rebate
    Or
  - Apply for the GST/HST new housing rebate on behalf of a purchaser, pay or credit the purchaser with the rebate and claim that amount as a deduction from net tax on a GST/HST return

Nonresident vendors or nonresident distribution platform operators registered under the simplified system for e-commerce are also required to file their returns electronically.

As noted above, registrants with greater than CAD1.5 million in annual taxable supplies are required to file returns electronically for reporting periods that begin before 2024. Mandatory electronic filing thresholds for registrants (other than charities or selected listed financial institutions) have been eliminated for reporting periods beginning after 2023. As a result, most GST/HST registrants are now required to file returns electronically (i.e., not just those with annual taxable supplies exceeding CAD1.5 million*).*

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Canada.

Special schemes. Small businesses. The Streamlined Accounting (GST/HST) Regulations set out several methods that eligible small businesses as well as eligible public service bodies may elect to use for calculating their net tax liability. The methods, which are intended to simplify the calculation of net tax, are:
- The quick method
- The special quick method for public service bodies
- The streamlined ITC method

Charities that are registered or required to be registered for GST/HST purposes are required to use the special net tax calculation for charities method.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Canada.

Supplementary filings. Financial institutions. Financial institutions are required to file an annual information schedule, Form GST111, Financial Institution GST/HST Annual Information Return. No other supplementary filings are required in Canada. In general, this filing requirement applies to financial institutions with notably total annual revenue exceeding CAD1 million. At the time of preparing this chapter, a notice of the ways and means motion was tabled on 28 November 2023 that would increase the revenue threshold from CAD1 million to CAD2 million for fiscal years ending after 9 August 2022. However, this change has not been enacted.

E-commerce. Certain persons must file information returns in accordance with the specified GST/HST regime applicable to e-commerce supplies (see the subsection Digital economy above). An accommodation platform operator that facilitates supplies of short-term accommodation in Canada is required to file an annual information return concerning the accommodation providers making sales through the platform. Similarly, a distribution platform operator that is a GST/HST registrant and that facilitates supplies of goods through a digital platform is required to file an annual information return concerning the vendors making sales through the platform.

To help platform operators adjust to the new reporting requirements, the CRA did not require information returns for the 2021 calendar year. Canada has adopted the OECD model rules developed for reporting by digital platform operators on platform sellers (see the subsection Online marketplaces and platforms above). As a result, the CRA has indicated that neither accommodation platform operators nor distribution platform operators are required to file annual information returns until further notice.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Generally, if an error is made in a previous return but the required adjustment would produce an increase in ITCs, with no corresponding increase in the tax collected for the same period (i.e., where there would be a decrease in the net tax payable for the period), an amended return should not be filed. In this case, the adjustment to increase the ITC should be made on the return for the next reporting period. There is an exception to this rule in the case of recaptured ITCs where excess amounts were recaptured, and the excessive recapture must be adjusted. If these recapture errors or any other mistakes that would involve an increase in the net tax payable for a reporting period are caught by the taxable person, refiling of the GST/HST return should be considered.

In Québec province, taxable persons must submit a prescribed form to amend a previously filed QST return. Whereas for registrants based outside of Québec, there is no prescribe form to file. Instead, a letter should be faxed to the local CRA tax center of the registrant (i.e., the tax center where returns are normally filed). This letter should indicate the registrant's business number, the reporting period being amended, the correct amounts that should have been filed (by line number), and a name and contact number of a person who may be contacted regarding the adjustments if needed. This letter must be signed by an authorized representative. The CRA will also accept amendments to previously filed returns through the My Business Account online portal.

The tax authorities are not obliged to accept amended returns, and the amended return remains subject to audit. In addition, where an error is identified that could require the submission of amended returns for multiple periods, the use of a voluntary disclosure should be considered to minimize applicable interest and penalties and ensure that all appropriate adjustments are made. For further information about the current voluntary disclosure program, see GST/HST Memorandum 16.5, Voluntary Disclosures Program.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Canada.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Every person who is engaged in a commercial activity in Canada (other than a small supplier, a person whose only commercial activity is the making of supplies of real property by way of sale other than in the course of a business or a nonresident person who does not carry on any business in Canada) is required to apply to be registered for the GST/HST before the 30th day after the day the person first makes a taxable supply in Canada otherwise than as a small supplier.

A person who is required to apply to be registered is also required to collect and remit the GST/HST on taxable sales whether or not the person is actually registered. Interest is payable at the prescribed rate where a person fails to remit or pay an amount on account of tax when required under the GST/HST legislation.

Penalties for late payment and filings. If a person fails to pay or remit an amount of tax when due, interest (at a rate prescribed by law) is payable on the amount unpaid or not remitted. Interest is compounded daily.

A person who fails to file a return when required is liable to pay a penalty equal to 1% of the outstanding balance plus 0.25% per month for each complete month the return is outstanding, up to a maximum of 12 months.

A person who fails to comply with a demand to file a return for a period or transaction is liable to a penalty equal to CAD250.

Payments or remittances of CAD10,000 or more must be made through electronic services provided by a bank, credit union, trust company or mortgage lender (see the subsection Periodic payments above). A person that fails to comply with this requirement is liable to a penalty of CAD100 for each failure. These measures apply in respect of payments and remittances made after 2023.

Penalties for errors. Administrative monetary penalties and criminal offenses apply where electronic suppression of sales is used by businesses to modify or delete transaction records with a view to hiding sales and evading GST/HST and income taxes.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's GST/HST registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to GST/HST registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. A person who knowingly, or under circumstances amounting to gross negligence, makes or participates in making a false statement or an omission in a return or other document is liable to a penalty equal to the greater of the following:
- CAD250
- 25% of the amount of tax owing underdeclared or overclaimed rebate

In addition, tax advisors may be subject to penalties for false statements made for tax purposes. These penalties are often referred to as third-party civil penalties and, depending on the circumstances, can be substantial.

Personal liability for company officers. Where a corporation fails to remit an amount of net tax as required, the directors of the corporation at the time the corporation was required to remit the amount are jointly and severally, or solidarity, liable, together with the corporation, to pay that amount and any interest or penalties that arise. A director of a corporation may be held liable not only for unremitted net GST/HST amounts, but also for net tax refund amounts to which the corporation is not entitled.

The legislation does not define the term "director." Therefore, it is necessary to look to the corporation's governing legislation, such as the Canada Business Corporations Act or one of the provincial counterparts, e.g., the Ontario Business Corporations Act. Where an individual is formally appointed or elected as the director of a corporation under such legislation, the individual is referred to as a de jure director. However, an individual may also be a director of a corporation in fact (referred to as a de facto director) even if not legally appointed or elected to the position. The liability of a director generally arises only upon the conclusion of unsuccessful collection proceedings against the corporation, the liquidation or dissolution of the corporation, or the bankruptcy of the corporation.

An action or proceeding against a director to recover any amount payable must be commenced within two years after an individual last ceased to be a director of that corporation.

A director is not liable if they have exercised "the degree of care, diligence and skill to prevent the failure that a reasonably prudent person would have exercised in comparable circumstances."

In the case of unincorporated bodies, each officer (not including a partnership, trust or estate) is jointly and severally, or solidarity, liable with the body and its other officers to pay and remit the taxes and other amounts for which the body became liable while they were an officer. Persons who may be liable under this provision include the president, chairperson, treasurer and secretary of the body. Where these officers do not exist, any member of a managing committee may be held liable. Where a body does not have such officers or a managing committee, liability falls on each of the body's members. As is the case with a director of a corporation, a former officer or member of an unincorporated body may not be assessed more than two years after they ceased being an officer or member.

In addition to the civil liability discussed above, where a person other than an individual (such as a corporation, trust, partnership or unincorporated organization) is guilty of an offense under the legislation, every officer, director or agent of the person who directed, authorized, assented to, acquiesced in or participated in the commission of the offense is a party to that offense. On conviction, the officer, director or agent is liable to the same punishment provided for that offense, whether or not the person has been prosecuted or convicted. Under this provision, the liability of an officer, director or agent does not absolve the corporation or other body of liability for the offense.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Canada is four or seven years. A GST/HST registrant or other person required to file a return for a reporting period may be assessed by the CRA for the tax payable or remittable for the period. The assessment must be made within four years after the day on which the return for the period is required to be filed. Where the return is not filed on time, the assessment may be issued within four years after the day on which the return is actually filed. The same limitation period applies to reassessments. The statute of limitations is seven years in some very specific cases.

Where a taxable person fails to collect tax on a taxable supply in Canada, the minister may assess the recipient of the supply for the tax. An assessment or reassessment of a taxable person for this tax must be issued within four years after the day on which the taxes became payable.

Generally, an assessment or reassessment of a penalty must be issued within four years after the day on which the taxable person became liable to pay the penalty.

The limitation periods on assessments may be set aside in cases of misrepresentation attributable to neglect, carelessness or willful default, or in cases of fraud. This may apply even where there has been a voluntary disclosure by the taxable person. Under the voluntary disclosure program, an administrative program run by the CRA, the CRA's policy is to not to prosecute or seek civil penalties where a taxable person has disclosed all the facts at a time when no investigation is under way as to the taxable person's liability.

Under a "stop-the-clock" rule, where requirements for information served to taxable persons or compliance orders are contested, the reassessment period is extended while the requirement for information or compliance order is contested.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions made in Chad:
- Supply of goods or services made in Chad by a taxable person
- Importation of goods

The territory of Chad includes air space and other areas where, in accordance with international law, the Republic of Chad has sovereign rights for the purposes of exploration and exploitation of the natural resources of its soils, subsoil and water.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Chad, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

In Chad, the "use and enjoyment rules" refer to the "territoriality rules" in for VAT. As such, all taxable transactions carried out in Chad, even when the residence or the head office of the taxable person is located outside Chad, are subject to VAT in Chad.

As regards services, they shall be deemed to be carried out in Chad when they are used or enjoyed in Chad. As such, they shall be subject to VAT in Chad. This applies only to business-to-business (B2B) in particular when the beneficiary of the service is a taxable person for VAT purposes.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Chad, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where a business is being transferred. This is decided upon the basis of the transfer documents and is reviewed on a case-by-case basis. Otherwise, if it is only assets being transferred, these are subject to VAT at the standard rate.

Transactions between related parties. In Chad, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any business entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services or importation of goods in the course of a business in Chad. A taxable person that begins activity must notify the tax authorities of its liability to register for VAT purposes.

"Large contributors" are also subject to VAT. "Large contributors" are taxable persons registered in the Large Taxable persons' Division with annual turnover more than XAF500 million. For entities not treated as large contributors, there are two different tax regimes depending on the business revenue. There is the "simplified" regime and "not subject" regime. The "simplified" regime is for entities that exceed the threshold from XAF50 million to XAF500 million. However, while the "simplified" regime is mandatory for such entities, they have the option of applying for the "large contributors" regime. The other regime is the "not subject" regime is for entities that are not subject to VAT obligations (turnover less than XAF50 million).

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Chad does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Chad does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Chad.

Fixed establishment. In Chad, there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the permanent establishment (PE) rules that apply for direct taxation also apply for VAT purposes. Under the Chad General Tax Code, PE means a fixed place of business through which the enterprise carries on all or part of its activities, and specifically covers the following:

- A place of management or operation
- A branch office, a sale store
- A warehouse
- An office
- A factory

- A workshop
- A mine, quarry or other place of extraction of natural resources
- A construction or assembly site or supervisory activities thereon, where such site, project or activities are of a duration of more than six months
- The provision of services, including consulting, by an enterprise acting through employees or other personnel engaged by the enterprise for that purpose, but only if such activities continue for the same or a related project in the territory of Chad for a period or periods totaling more than 183 days within any 12-month period

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no permanent establishment in the territory of Chad. Non-established businesses that perform taxable operations in Chad must nominate a representative who will be jointly responsible for payment of the VAT due. The representative must comply with all the obligations created under the VAT Code for taxable persons namely the declarative and registration obligations.

If no tax representative is nominated, the VAT due should be assessed and paid by the purchaser (if the purchaser is a taxable person for VAT purposes).

Tax representatives. As mentioned above, non-established businesses must appoint a tax representative for VAT purposes in Chad. In case of default (nonpayment of VAT due within the legal deadline), the representative and the non-established business are jointly liable for the payment of the VAT due.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable in Chad. Whenever a non-established entity fails to nominate a VAT representative, the non-established entity sends to the local customer (purchaser) an invoice without local VAT. The VAT is calculated and remitted to the tax authorities by the purchaser within 15 days of the month following the supplier's payment. This VAT paid will be deducted in the declaration of the following month to the extent there is a full right of deduction.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Chad.

Digital economy. There are no special VAT rules in Chad for digital supplies.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B supplies are not required to register and account for VAT due on supplies in Chad. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are also not required to register and account for VAT due on supplies in Chad. Instead, as there is no reverse-charge mechanism for private individuals, no VAT is accounted for on B2C supplies.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Chad.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Chad.

Registration procedures. Under the General Taxable person Registration regime, all Chadian businesses or non-established entities that have a head office or other establishment in Chad must be registered. The submission should be made by paper and sent to the General Taxable person Registry. The documentation needed would is the following:

- Copy of the company's deed registered by the notary
- Copy of the registration of the Company or natural person with the trade register
- Copy of the ID of the partners, directors and technicians of the company or passport/residence card (for foreign persons)

The registration must be done within 15 days following the start of its activity.

Deregistration. Individuals or companies subject to VAT must, within 15 days from the date of termination of activity, submit a Statement of Termination of Activity to the General Director of Taxation.

Changes to VAT registration details. Taxable persons must, within 15 days from the date of change in its VAT registration details, inform the General Director of Taxation. A copy of the notification of the change must be submitted by paper and sent to the General Taxable person Registry. In the case that the change is not done, the tax administration will not consider the change.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 19.25%
- Reduced rate: 9.9%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the reduced rate, zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Chad.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." As a general rule, an invoice should be issued before the fifth business day following the basic time of supply. The actual tax point becomes the date on which the invoice is issued. However, if no invoice is issued, tax becomes due on the fifth business day after the basic tax point. If the payment occurs before the invoice is issued, even if only partially, VAT is due at that time on the amount paid. The same is applicable in case payment occurs or invoices are issued before the finalization of the taxable operations.

The basic time of supply for goods is when they are made available to the client or at the time the transaction was fully or partially settled (before the client has received the goods).

The basic time of supply for services is at the time the referred provision of services was fully or partially settled (before the service has been provided).

Deposits and prepayments. For advance payments, the tax point is the date on which the advance payment is received. The supplier must issue an invoice as soon as an advance payment is received.

Continuous supplies of services. For continuous supplies of services based on agreements foreseeing successive payments, the time of supply occurs at the end of the period concerning each payment. However, when the payment schedule is not defined or exceeds 12 months, the VAT is due at the end of each 12-month period.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Chad for goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Chad for reverse-charge services. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Leased assets. Leasing agreements are also considered a continuous supply of services, and as such the time of supply occurs at each payment.

Imported goods. The tax point for the importation of goods will be the moment during which the formalities of customs duties are completed.

Construction works. Qualified as service providers and entrepreneurs in property renovation or enterprises with mixed activities covering the delivery of goods and the provision of services, with the exception of transactions made with the State or local authorities, may be authorized to pay VAT according to the debits. In the case of receiving installments before the debit memo, the tax is payable when the VAT is collected according to the debits.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax incurred with the acquisition of goods and services deemed indispensable for the maintenance of the business. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax charged on the supplies of goods or services carried out as well as tax paid on the import of goods.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Chad, VAT paid on import of goods and VAT self-assessed on the reverse-charge services.

To deduct VAT, the taxable person must be in possession of invoices or other equivalent documents and this invoice must contains mandatory information provided by the Tax code.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Chad is two years.

Nondeductible input tax. In principle, for registered taxable persons, VAT applied upstream on the price of a taxable operation shall be deductible from the final tax applicable to such transactions, provided that the said operation is necessary for the company exploitation. However, the Chadian General tax code has limited the deduction to certain goods and services.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Expenses for housing, accommodation, catering, reception, shows, vehicle hire and transport of persons. This exclusion does not concern professionals in tourism, catering and shows
- Imports of goods and merchandise re-dispatched in its current condition
- Services related to goods excluded from the right to deduction
- Oil products, with the exception of fuel purchased for resale by importers or wholesalers
- Assets transferred without remuneration or in return for remuneration much less than their normal price, particularly commissions, salaries, bonuses or gifts, whatever the capacity of the beneficiary or the form of the distribution
- Tax that has been paid on vehicles or machinery, irrespective of their type, designed or developed to transport persons or for mixed uses constituting a fixed asset
- The spare parts, accessories and expenses for maintenance and/or repairs for the said vehicles or machinery, except:
  - Road vehicles including, other than the driver's seat, more than eight seated places and used by enterprises for the exclusive transport of their personnel
  - The fixed assets of vehicle hire enterprises or enterprises for the public transport of persons
- VAT on invoice paid in cash when the amount is more than XAF500,000

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Raw materials and supplies used in producing goods and services
- Purchase of goods and merchandise used for business purposes
- Capital goods used for business purposes, excluding items listed above
- Purchases of assets

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to exempt supplies of goods or services is not generally recoverable. If a Chadian taxable person makes both exempt and taxable supplies, it may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption." The VAT Code provides two methods to recover VAT when a company makes both exempt and taxable supplies.

The first is a pro rata method according to which VAT is only deductible in the same ratio as the annual amount of operations that originate deductibility versus the exempt operations. A second method, referred to as the "direct allocation method," prescribes the real allocation of all or part of the goods and services used.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Chad. Special methods are not allowed in Chad.

Capital goods. Taxable persons are obliged to record their purchases of capital goods to allow the monitoring of the input tax deductions made.

The records should contain, for all goods, the following elements (requirements):

- Data of the acquisition
- Value of the input tax
- Value of the input deducted
- Such records should be made until the following deadlines:
  - Output operations: until the last day of the following month to which the operations refer to
  - Input operations: until the last day of the following month to which the operations refer to

The referred deadline should be counted from the earlier of the following:
- The date of the reception of the invoice or equivalent documents that proves the purchase of the good
- The date of the conclusion of the constructions works
- The date in which the rectifications should be processed

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a monthly period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that period, the taxable person has an input tax credit that will be carried forward to the next taxable periods.

However, if the taxable person has been in a credit position, the refund can be requested if the tax credit is less than 24 consecutive months from the beginning of the credit.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Chad is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Taxable persons may deduct the VAT amount related with bad debts revealed in its accounting records, as well the irrecoverable debts resulting from the process of execution and insolvency. A bad debt is considered to exist in case of debts that nonpayment risk is duly justified namely where the credit is overdue for many months and there are objective proofs of its impairment and actions performed regarding its payment, including the asset being recognized in the accounts.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Chad.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Chad is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Taxable persons must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made – including exports. Non-established entities that are required to nominate a representative must issue invoices with the VAT number and address of the chosen representative additionally to the other ordinary requirements of any invoice.

The 2023 Finance Law introduced new rules relating to standardized invoicing that shall enter into force as from 1 January 2024. Standardized invoicing refers to an authorized invoicing machine approved by the tax authorities that allows taxable persons to issue invoices this way.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be issued to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply (e.g., return of the goods or a discount). A credit note must be cross-referenced to the original invoice and contain the following statement: credit note. The supplier can make the reductions if it has in its possession the proof that the customer agreed and acknowledged with such procedure.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is not allowed in Chad.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is not allowed in Chad. As such, only paper invoices are allowed in Chad.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Chad. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Chad.

Proof of exports. VAT is charged on supplies of exported goods at the rate of 0%. For the application of this rate, exports must be supported by evidence that confirms the goods have left Chad.

Sufficient evidence is the receipt of the country of destination of the goods and proof of the repatriation of funds by the exchange services.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices can be issued in any currency, as well as the domestic currency, which is the Central African CFA franc (XAF). A currency conversion requirement is in place, except when the invoices are related with import and export operations, which are subject to the international trade rules.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Chad. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In Chad, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include original invoices, contracts and submitted VAT returns.

For VAT purposes, all invoices must be recorded with a chronological number and kept available in Chad.

In Chad, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

In addition, the tax authorities can check a resident taxable person's VAT accounting software to confirm the status of the accounting entries. This is done in person in Chad.

Record retention period. All invoices or equivalent documents must be kept, according to the legislation in place, by the taxable person for 10 years.

There are no specific record keeping requirements for VAT in Chad. The documents must be kept in a form accessible to the tax authorities in case of a tax audit.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is not allowed in Chad. Archiving must be made in paper form only.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns must be submitted monthly or quarterly. They must be filed together with full payment of VAT. VAT returns must be submitted within 15 days of the month following the realization of taxable operations.

State-owned companies, public and para-public institutions, as well as private companies for which the list is established and published by the General Director of Taxation, are required to withhold VAT on the invoices received from their suppliers. However, this withholding does not apply to reciprocal transactions between companies entitled to withhold VAT at source. Any compensation between withheld VAT and taxes due is prohibited. Withholding VAT must be reversed by the 15th of the following month.

Periodic payments. VAT amounts due should be paid to the collection service of the tax department, by the same date as the VAT return filing deadline, i.e., by the 15th day of the month following the realization of taxable operations.

The VAT returns, according to the template provided by tax authorities, shall be subscribed in two copies, signed and dated by the taxable person or its authorized agent. This form is submitted jointly with the proof of payment (notice of credit of tax administration bank account). When confirmation of payment is received, the tax receipt reference is mentioned on the declaration and copy given to the taxable person.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Chad. This is following the changes in the Finance Law 2023, which take effect from 1 January 2023. Taxable persons can submit their VAT returns by paper or electronically. The said returns must be filed with the tax authorities within the legal deadlines.

If a taxable person opts to file returns electronically, to start with they must file returns both electronically and by paper. Then the tax authorities will review the taxable person's compliance and payments. Subject to review, they will then confirm to the taxable person when they can start to file returns only electronically, and not also by paper. This process has been introduced as the implementation of electronic filing and is new and under review.

Electronic filing is made via the tax authorities' online portal (eTax).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Chad.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Chad.

Annual returns. Taxable persons are required to file an annual tax return for the period ended 31 December. The taxable person must submit the annual return by 30 April of the following year. The annual return must include a summary of VAT payments made during the prior calendar year (January to December), including output tax, input tax and the net VAT paid to the tax administration of VAT credit position at the end of the year. This annual return must also contain the reference of tax receipts issued by the tax administration. The prescribed format of the annual return is provided by the tax authorities.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Chad.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A taxable person can voluntarily correct a previously filed VAT return, within the last two months from its submission. If correction is not done within this deadline, such corrections cannot be accepted by the tax administration. The penalty for failure to make such a correction is the fact that the amended return can be rejected by the tax administration.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Chad.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Late registration of taxable persons liable to VAT generate immediate taxation by tax authorities. Immediate taxation refers to arbitrary assessment procedure in which tax authorities unilaterally determine the amount of taxes due by the taxable person. This procedure is only possible when the taxable person has not regularized its situation within seven days following reception of a reminder representing a notice to register. The taxation is based on the gross margin realized by the taxable persons. This immediate taxation is in addition to a penalty of 25% of tax due, for late registration of VAT.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Whenever the taxable person fails to submit a VAT return or pay the VAT due on time or does so after the legal deadline has passed, the amount of tax due is increased by 100%. The increase is raised to 150% in the event of a repeat offense. Notwithstanding the application of these penalties, the taxable person owes an interest of delay of 5% per month up to 50%.

If the VAT return is not submitted on time, the taxable person will receive a reminder letter to declare within seven days receiving the letter. In case of nonperformance, the tax authorities will proceed with an arbitrary assessment. The basis used to calculate due taxes is the gross margin realized with penalty of 25%.

If the taxable person fails to pay VAT assessed by the tax authorities within the established deadline, proceedings aiming at the coercive collection of tax due will ensure. However, if the taxable person voluntarily submits the missing VAT return before the deadline expires, as a result, the tax assessed by the tax authorities will no longer be due. Notwithstanding, penalties for late submission may still be applicable.

Penalties for errors. Deficiencies, omissions or inaccuracies that affect the basis or elements of taxation and that lead the tax authorities to make any adjustments will result in the application a late payment interest of 5% per month, capped at 50%. For any missing invoices, false invoices or invoicing and accounting errors, the penalties are as follows:

- Nondeduction of the VAT mentioned on the invoice in case of absence of the ID number or 5% penalty applied on invoice amount in certain circumstances
- A fine of 100% of the transaction value with a minimum of XAF500,000

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Any fraudulent activities can result in the increase of 150% of the amount due without prejudice to criminal proceedings.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Chad.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Chad is three years. The time limit that the tax authorities can go back to review and identify errors and impose penalties is three years. This means that the statute of limitations starting point is 1 January of the year following that under which the input tax that is incurred. For example, input tax incurred in March 2024, the starting point is 1 January 2025, and the deadline is 31 December 2027. Hence, the tax authorities will not have the right to audit input tax incurred in 2024 after 31 December 2027.

The tax authorities allow two months for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns.

B. Scope of the tax

In general, VAT is imposed on the sale of tangible goods located in Chile and on the provision of services rendered or utilized in Chile. The following are significant aspects of the VAT rules in Chile:

- For VAT purposes, the law provides that "sales" are all transactions that result in the transfer of movable and immovable tangible goods (excluding land). A seller is any person that habitually carries out this kind of operation.

- On the other hand, "services" are all actions that any person does for another for consideration (i.e., payment). Since 1 January 2023, all services are subject to VAT, except for those particularly exempt by law (i.e., health and educational services, certain services hired through a tender process with the State of Chile, services provided by entities that qualify as "professional companies").
- VAT also applies to the importation of goods into Chile.
- Other taxable transactions specified by law include withdrawals of inventory, contributions in kind and leasing of movable goods.

The "recurrent or habitual sale" of real estate is a taxable event (regardless of whether the seller is a construction company or another entity or an individual). The law establishes certain situations in which it presumes the transaction is habitual, such as when the time elapsed between the purchase and sale of the real estate is less than one year or when condominiums are sold by floors or units. However, the sale of land is still exempt, so in calculating the taxable base, the value of the land must be subtracted.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Chile, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions. As a general rule, only residents who are domiciled suppliers are subject tax to VAT, except in the case of digital services (as outlined below under the Digital economy subsection).

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in Chile. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. The VAT law states in Article 8 letter f that the sale of commercial establishments or any other universality that includes movable and immovable tangible assets of its type of business or its fixed assets, the latter, provided that they meet certain legal requirements, are subject to VAT. The transfer of ownership rights or shares is not subject to VAT.

Transactions between related parties. In Chile, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties.

C. Who is liable

A VAT taxable person is an individual, business or entity that performs VAT taxable transactions (that is, the habitual transfer of goods or the rendering of listed services) in the course of doing business in Chile. No VAT registration threshold applies. All business entities must file a business initiation application on commencement of operations and an application for a taxable person identification number (Rol Único Tributario [RUT]). These measures also apply to permanent establishments of foreign entities in Chile.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Chile does not contain any provision regarding exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Chile does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration, as there is no registration threshold (i.e., all entities that make taxable supplies are obliged to register for VAT). All persons subject to any Chilean tax must obtain a tax ID.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Chile.

Fixed establishment. In Chile there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, permanent establishment (PE) is defined in the income tax law as a place that is used (exclusively or not) to carry out the activities of an entity not domiciled or resident in Chile, on a permanent or habitual basis, such as offices, agencies, facilities, construction projects and branches. Likewise, a foreign entity is considered to have a PE when it carries out its activities in Chile represented by an agent who habitually concludes contracts related to the main type of business and plays a principal role that leads to their conclusion or negotiates essential elements of them without being modified by the principal (the foreign entity). In both cases the business is not deemed a PE if the activities performed in Chile are auxiliary or preparatory of the business. PEs are subject to the same VAT taxation as companies domiciled or resident in Chile.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in Chile. If a non-established business intends to carry out transactions in Chile that are subject to VAT (such as the transfer of goods or the provision of listed services), it is required to be registered for VAT purposes. Consequently, the non-established business must submit an application for a RUT number and a business initiation application and must appoint a representative in Chile to act on its behalf. However, taking these actions may result in the conclusion that the non-established business has a PE in Chile.

Tax representatives. A tax representatives must be provided with the power to represent the business in its dealings with the tax authorities and must also register an address in Chile for this purpose. If foreign individuals are appointed as the tax representatives, in addition to the obligation to register an address in Chile, they must also be in possession of a valid visa that allows them to act in this capacity.

Reverse charge. In certain circumstances, for example, if the supplier is a foreign taxable person and does not have any PE or established business in Chile and the transaction is subject to VAT, the law states the obligation to withhold VAT turns to the purchaser. The purchaser issues a "purchase invoice" and collects VAT on behalf of the foreign supplier.

Domestic reverse charge. Domestic reverse charges are available in Chile only when the law or the national director of the IRS establishes a "change of the taxable person." Cases that involve a domestic reverse charge normally are related to particularly exceptional situations in informal/undeveloped markets where there is a lack of tax compliance (e.g., multilevel marketing schemes that include multiple transactions among individuals before the products are purchased by end consumers, sales of metal scrap and agro-products from small producers).

Digital economy. In accordance with current regulation, the following digital remunerated services, performed by providers domiciled or residing abroad, are subject to VAT:

- The intermediation of services provided in Chile, whatever their nature, or of sales made in Chile or abroad, provided that the latter give rise to an import
- The supply or delivery of digital entertainment content, such as videos, music, games or other analogous content, by means of downloading, streaming or other technology, including for these purposes texts, magazines, newspapers and books; the tax authority has stated in Rulings 1660-2023/1609-2023 and 2064-2021 that in the case of this taxable event, the subscription to electronic magazines provided by a nonresident supplier is subject to VAT regardless of the fact that the purpose of the same is not entertainment but education, since the taxable event is the digital content, within which are the "digital magazines"
- The provision of software, storage, or computing platforms or infrastructure
- Advertising, regardless of the medium or means through which it is delivered, materialized or executed

Business-to-business (B2B) and business-to-consumer (B2C) transactions may fall under the digital services taxable event and should be subject to VAT. VAT may apply if the following requirements are met:

(i) The services are provided by a foreign service provider and used in Chile.
(ii) The payment is not subject to withholding tax.

Digital services provided to non-VAT-taxable persons' Chilean clients must be declared and paid by the foreign service provider through a simplified VAT regime for which they must register online. Declaration and payment can be done every month or every three months in CLP, USD or EUR. No legal invoice is required for taxable persons subject to this regime. Therefore, in this case, nonresidents providing electronically supplied services must register for VAT via the simplified regime for the purposes of declaring and paying applicable VAT.

In summary, foreign service providers that provide digital services to individuals in Chile must register for the simplified VAT regime and withhold VAT at the standard rate on the payment for digital services. Noncompliance could trigger audits from the tax authority and withholding through credit card issuers. In case of suppliers that are not registered, the local tax authorities may include them in a prohibited list of noncompliance suppliers and transfer the responsibility to charge the VAT to the local financial intermediaries (i.e., payment card issuers). Thus, local financial intermediaries would be held responsible for withholding VAT and paying it to the tax authority, which would be deducted from the fees collected among the local clients. An annual public list of noncompliant providers is posted by the tax authority. Suppliers will remain on this list unless they are registered in due course, pay the entire amount of VAT due or demonstrate that all supplies were engaged with VAT taxpayers (where the obligation to withhold and report VAT is for the Chilean entity).

For services rendered to a Chilean VAT taxable person, the reverse-charge mechanism explained above applies.

Services subject to withholding tax are normally VAT exempted. However, a detailed analysis is required to determine if withholding tax applies to a certain service.

B2C digital services described above are always exempted from withholding tax and, therefore, subject to VAT.

Imported goods that are acquired online are subject to VAT at the standard rate, to be paid by the importer. A foreign seller or intermediary may voluntarily request to declare and pay said tax through the simplified regime mentioned above.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Although the new VAT taxable events for digital services don't make a specific reference to online marketplaces or platforms, regulations from the IRS (Circular Letter No. 42 of 2020) considered them an intermediation service that should fall under the scope of these new taxable events.

Registration procedures. Every legal entity or individual that performs activities subject to income tax must register and obtain a tax identification number (RUT). Form 4415 must be completed, signed and filed before the IRS, electronically (www.sii.cl) or by hard copy.

In general terms, a legal entity must fulfill the following requirements: i) prove that it is legally incorporated by means of the public deed certificates of good standing, existence or validity – duly apostilled and translated into Spanish if required – and ii) prove that it has one or more legal representatives domiciled or resident in Chile. If the taxable person is acting through an agent or representative, it must also show the power of attorney – duly apostilled or authorized before a notary public (defending the case) – that grants the person such powers.

For VAT purposes, the IRS always will have to check the domicile and activities described in Form 4415 before authorizing VAT documentation (invoices, notes, dispatch orders, etc.). A simplified registration procedure has to be followed by the foreign digital service providers that are subject to the simplified VAT regime, which is done online on a digital VAT portal of the IRS.

Deregistration. As the RUT is for VAT and other tax purposes, there are no specific deregistration rules for VAT.

Changes to VAT registration details. Any change in the name of a taxable person, address or any other modification of the information given to the IRS must be notified to it within two months through the tax electronic folder, which will contain a form with the information to be filed and that the IRS will make available for every taxable person online. After the notification is done, the IRS will have to modify the pertinent information.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT.

The VAT rates are:
• Standard rate: 19%

Also, additional taxes ranging from 10% to 50% may be imposed under the VAT law on the provision of specific items. Some of the taxed items and applicable rates are jewelry (15%); alcoholic beverages (from 20.5% for fermented to 31.5% for distilled); soft drinks with high sugar content (18%); other natural or artificial soft drinks, including energy or hypertonic drinks (10%); and 50% over the first sale or import of pyrotechnic items.

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction. However, while the supply of exports of goods is exempt, exporters can recover input tax.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and supply of services

• Used motorized vehicles
• Importation of goods by the National Ministry of Defense
• Certain real estate transactions
• Admission to artistic, scientific or cultural events, sponsored by the Public Education Ministry
• Premiums for or payments from life insurance contracts
• Exports of goods
• Entrance to sporting events
• Importation of cultural or sporting awards and trophies
• Freight from other countries to Chile and vice versa
• Importation of capital assets incorporated to investment projects in Chile, under certain circumstances

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Chile.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic tax point for the transfer of goods is the earlier of the following:
• The time when the goods are delivered
• The time when the invoice is issued

The basic tax point for the provision of services is the earlier of the following:
• The time when the invoice is issued
• The time when a full or partial payment of the consideration is received

Deposits and prepayments. The VAT law in Chile does not contain any provision for advance payments or deposits; therefore, the general time of supply rules apply in these circumstances. According to several rulings issued by the Chilean tax authority, if an invoice relates to an advance payment paid prior to the time when the goods are delivered, the VAT associated with that advance payment is due when the invoice is issued.

Continuous supplies of services. For the continuous supply of services, VAT is due at the final date of the payment period if this event occurs before the invoice is issued or the payment is received.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The VAT law in Chile does not contain any provision for goods sent on approval for sale or return, therefore the general time of supply rules apply in these circumstances (if the goods have been delivered, VAT is due when the buyer gives its approval, and the sale is legally perfected).

Reverse-charge services. The VAT law in Chile does not contain any special provision for reverse-charge services; therefore, the general time of supply rules apply in these circumstances.

Leased assets. For lease contracts of movable tangible assets, furnished immovable property and immovable property equipped with installed goods necessary for conducting a commercial or industrial activity, VAT is due when the invoice is issued, or the payment is received. For leasing of immovable tangible assets with a purchase option, VAT is due when the respective invoice or invoices are issued.

Note that a lease may trigger different taxable events (i.e., if there is an option to purchase or not) on the following scenarios:

- In the case of movable tangible assets, a lease should always be subject to VAT, regardless of if there is a purchase option.
- In the case of real property, a lease would be subject to VAT if:
  - The real property is furnished or has equipment that allows it to develop commercial or industrial activity, regardless of if there is a purchase option.
  - In case of the lease of a real property without any furnishes or equipment – but there is in place a purchase option. The lease of mere real property without furnishes, equipment and with no purchase option is not subject to VAT.

Historically the sale/purchase of real property has not been subject to VAT in Chile. Recent changes introduced VAT in respect to real properties – but mainly in the case of real estate entrepreneurs that actively purchase and sold this type of assets. The sale of a real property among two individuals should not be subject to VAT.

Note that rules regarding how to compute the VAT tax basis normally allow to deduct the value of the land from the transaction to apply the VAT. VAT is aimed to affect the "valued added," i.e., constructions, furnishes and equipment placed in the land.

Imported goods. For imports, VAT is due when the goods clear all customs procedures. In this case, the Customs Service is responsible for collecting the VAT triggered by the import.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A VAT taxable person may recover input tax (also known as VAT credit), which has been charged on the goods acquired by it and the services provided to it, if these acquisitions are directly related to the performance of activities that are taxable for VAT purposes. VAT taxable persons generally recover input tax by deducting it from output tax (also known as VAT debit), which is VAT charged on sales made and services provided.

Input tax includes VAT charged on the goods acquired and the services provided in Chile, and VAT charged on imports of goods. In general, for input tax to be recoverable, it must arise from the acquisition of current or fixed assets or from general expenses, if these acquisitions are directly related to the performance of activities that are taxable for VAT purposes. If the taxable person performs activities that are taxable for VAT purposes, together with VAT-exempt activities or nontaxed activities, the common VAT credits can only be proportionally recovered, consistent with the proportion that the income from activities subject to VAT represents in the taxable person's total income.

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Chile. This mean that effectively the input tax (VAT credit) may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery.

Exporters also may recover the VAT paid with respect to their export activities. However, because exports are exempt from VAT, VAT credits are recovered through cash reimbursements to exporters rather than under an input-output mechanism.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must always support a claim for input tax recovery.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on the purchases of goods and services that are not directly related to the performance of activities taxable for VAT purposes. In such cases, VAT paid constitutes an additional cost of goods or a deductible expense if it satisfies all the requirements to be a deductible expense for income tax purposes. If VAT is paid for the acquisition of goods or services not related to the taxable income of the taxable person, VAT paid may not be deductible.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Business gifts
- Private use of business

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Input tax is deductible on every item that complies with the requirements (subject to VAT and related to a taxable business use).

Partial exemption. Input tax cannot be recovered if it relates to exempt or nontaxable activities. VAT taxable persons that carry on both taxable and nontaxable or exempt activities may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as a "partial exemption." The percentage of input tax that may be recovered is calculated based on the value of taxable operations carried out during the period, compared to total turnover. These rules apply to any type of input tax incurred, whether it is generated by the acquisition of inventory, general expenses or capital goods. Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Chile. Special methods are not allowed in Chile.

Capital goods. No special input tax rules apply for input tax incurred on capital goods. If the usage of capital goods is split between taxable and exempt, a split calculation must be carried out, in line with the partial exemption rules (see above).

Refunds. If the amount of input tax (VAT credit) recoverable in a certain period (a month) exceeds the amount of output tax (VAT debit) payable, the excess credit may be carried forward to offset output tax in the following tax periods.

If a VAT taxable person pays excess VAT as the result of an error, it may request a refund of the overpaid amount from the tax authorities. Taxable persons may request a refund of the overpaid tax within three years after the end of the period for which the claim is made.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Chile is not recoverable.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Chile.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Chile is not recoverable. Chile does not refund VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established nor registered for VAT purposes in Chile unless the VAT was paid as a result of an error.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must generally provide a tax invoice for transactions subject to VAT, including exports. A tax invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction. Invoices must be issued in Chilean pesos (CLPs).

Credit notes. A VAT taxable person may also issue credit notes for rebates, discounts or transactions voided with respect to the acquirer of the goods or beneficiary of the services. A credit note must contain the same information as a VAT invoice.

A VAT taxable person may also issue debit notes for increases in the tax basis of VAT. A debit note must contain the same information as a VAT invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Chile for all taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Chile. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Chile. As a general rule, taxable persons must issue electronic invoices for transactions with other sellers, importers and service providers (B2B). This includes B2G supplies. These documents must be issued in case of transactions subject to and non-subject to VAT. For B2C supplies, it is mandatory for suppliers to issue an electronic bill and receipt. An electronic bill is a type of tax document that is issued for sales or services rendered for B2C supplies. An electronic bill does not entitle the customer to a VAT tax credit. Since 2014, the law states that the vouchers generated for transactions paid by electronic payment methods (credit cards or other options) are equivalent to the issuance of an electronic bill.

The above rules also apply for other tax documents, such as debit notes, credit notes, purchase invoices, etc. There are some exceptions for taxable persons whose transactions are carried out in geographical areas without mobile data connection or electricity.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Chile. As such, full VAT invoices are required. However, taxable persons subject to the simplified VAT regime that applies to foreign digital service providers are exempted from issuing invoices.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Chile.

Proof of exports. Chilean VAT does not apply to the export of goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports must be properly supported by evidence confirming that the goods have left Chile. Invoices for export transactions must be issued in accordance with the regulations established by the National Customs Service and must be stamped by the Chilean Internal Revenue Service.

Foreign currency invoices. Generally, invoices must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Chilean peso (CLP). Equivalent sums in foreign currency can be expressed in the detail lines of the document using the exchange rate of the day of issuance. However, as an exception, export invoices may be issued in foreign currency.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. VAT taxable persons must issue a till receipt (una boleta) to final customers for goods sold or services rendered. However, the Chilean tax authority may permit small merchants and service providers that sell products or render services directly to the public to not issue till receipts for those types of transactions. A till receipt is not required for sales valued at less than CLP180.

Moreover, certain taxable persons may obtain an authorization from the Chilean tax authority to be exempted from the obligation to issue till receipts for sales made through vending machines.

Records. In Chile, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include tax returns, invoices, notes, dispatch orders, registry of sales and purchases and other related reporting obligations. In Chile, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country.

Record retention period. Taxable persons must keep a record of invoices issued and received on the Chilean tax authority website for six years. However, for income tax purposes it is advisable to keep documentation from the date tax losses have been generated.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Chile. Taxable persons may keep their VAT records in Chile or abroad, either electronically or on paper. Also consider that VAT documentation (e.g., tax returns, invoices, notes, dispatch orders, registry of sales and purchases, other related reporting obligations) will be kept in the IRS's online system. The IRS online system (the electronic purchase and sales registry) in which the electronic invoices issued by or to a taxable person are registered automatically. There is no limitation for taxable persons to maintain or store their VAT records in Chile or abroad.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns are submitted for monthly periods on Form 29. VAT returns are due by the 12th day of the month following the end of the return period. For taxable persons that issue electronic tax documents, VAT returns are due by the 20th day of the month following the end of the return period.

Periodic payments. Payments in full are due by the 12th day of the month following the end of the return period. For taxable persons that issue electronic tax documents, payment in full is due by the 20th day of the month following the end of the return period. Return liabilities must be paid in Chilean pesos (CLPs).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Chile for all taxable persons. VAT returns and VAT payments must be filed through the Chilean IRS website. To do this, taxable persons will need a password associated with their tax ID that must be requested from the Chilean tax authority by the taxable person.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Chile.

Special schemes. Small businesses. Certain small businesses, as selected by the tax authority, that sell products or render services directly to the public may opt for a simplified VAT regime. In this simplified regime, the monthly VAT basis is determined by decree to every activity or group of taxable persons. The tax basis is calculated considering variables such as the estimated amount of sales or services, stock turn rate and other factors. The VAT rate is not modified. Only natural persons may opt for this regime.

Educational establishments. Income obtained by educational establishments for their education activities is out of scope of VAT.

Passenger transportation. Income from transport of passengers received by airlines, cruise companies, train companies and bus companies is out of scope of VAT.

Non-regular suppliers. Income obtained by a non-regular seller is out of scope of VAT. Nonetheless, this should be reviewed case by case as it is a subjective matter.

Professional services. Income obtained by professional services is out of scope of VAT but should be reviewed case by case.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Chile.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Chile.

Correcting errors in previous returns. If VAT was underpaid due to an omission or mistake (i.e., an invoice issued was not considered), the appropriate way to regularize this situation should be by replacing the VAT tax return by filing an amended VAT tax return (i.e., Form 29 monthly tax return) and paying any VAT difference that may arise (plus applicable penalties, which may include adjustments, interest and fines, if any).

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Chile.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Penalties related to late registration normally involve fines up to CLP600,000 (approx. USD800). However, additional penalties may result if this leads to, as a consequence of the late registration, a late payment of VAT.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Penalties in case of late payments and filings are subject to interest (1.5% per month) and fines of up to 60% of due taxes.

Penalties for errors. Penalties are assessed for a range of errors and omissions related to VAT accounting. In general, penalties for VAT errors are calculated as a percentage of the tax underpaid; penalty measures may also include closure of the business. The amount of the penalty depends on the severity and frequency of the error. The following are the classes of offenses:
- Serious: e.g., failure to issue an invoice
- Less serious: e.g., omitting a required detail from an invoice
- Light: e.g., failure to issue a credit note

In addition, interest is assessed at a rate of 1.5% monthly on unpaid VAT.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty from approximately USD65 to USD780. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Criminal tax evasion may be punished by a term of imprisonment, a fine or both, depending on the severity of the case. There are no implications for tax advisors in case of fraud, as penal responsibilities are personal responsibilities of the taxable person.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Chile.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Chile is three to six years. The general time limit for the tax authorities to audit returns is three years from the date on which the tax return was filed. However, if no tax return was filed or if it was maliciously false or untrue, the limit is six years. The same time limit should apply to voluntary rectifications.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- The supply of goods or taxable services for consideration in China, by a taxable person in the course or furtherance of any business
- The importation of goods into China, regardless of the status of the importer

The following transactions are treated as supplies of goods:

- Sales made through an agent
- Sales of goods on consignment
- The application or appropriation of goods by a taxable person for any of the following purposes:
  - VAT-exempt activities
  - Capital investment
  - Appropriation to shareholders or investors
  - Collective welfare or personal consumption
  - Making gifts

A transfer of goods from one branch to another branch of the same taxable person for the purpose of sale is also treated as a supply of goods, regardless of whether any consideration is paid, unless the branches are located in the same county (municipality).

A self-supply of goods occurs if a taxable person diverts goods to private or exempt use and if the goods were manufactured or otherwise acquired by the taxable person and the person was entitled to an input tax deduction (see Section F below).

The aforementioned taxable services include the following types of services:
- Processing services (see below)
- Repair and replacement services (see below)
- VAT pilot services (see below)

The term "processing services" means services supplied by a contractor for producing goods in accordance with a customer's specifications by using raw materials and principal parts consigned by the customer. The term "repair and replacement services" means repairing damaged taxable goods and returning them to their original condition.

The terms "VAT pilot services" refers to services that are within the taxable scope of the pilot program of switching from business tax to VAT (B2V) which was first started in 2012 and later extended to all sectors across China in 2016 with the announcement of Caishui [2016] No. 36 (Circular 36) Notice regarding the final stage of the VAT pilot arrangements. The title of "pilot" is still effective because the enactment of the VAT law is still in progress in China, thus the principal scope of VAT is still entitled by Circular 36 and the Provisional Regulations on VAT.

VAT pilot services include the following:
- Sales of services (see below)
- Sales of intangible assets (see below)
- Sales of immovable properties (see below)

Sale of intangible assets refer to activities of transferring ownership or rights of use of intangible assets. Intangible assets must refer to assets that can bring out economic interest without tangible forms, including technologies, trademarks, copyrights, goodwill, rights of use of natural resources and other beneficial intangible assets.

Sale of immovable properties refer to activities of transferring ownership or rights of use of immovable properties. Immovable properties must refer to the properties that cannot be moved or will be changed in nature or in shape after moved, including buildings, structures, etc.

Sale of services includes the following:
- Transportation
- Postal
- Telecommunications
- Construction
- Financial
- Research and development
- Information and technology
- Cultural, creative and sports
- Logistics supporting
- Leasing
- Authentication and consulting
- Radio, film and television
- Business support
- Education and medical

- Tourism and entertainment
- Catering and accommodation
- Daily residential services (e.g., municipal administration, housekeeping, care and nursing)

The following supplies are considered as supplies outside of China and are not subject to VAT:
- Supplies made by overseas entities or individuals that supply taxable services or intangible assets that are completely incurred overseas to entities or individuals within the territory
- Supplies made by overseas entities or individuals that lease tangible property that is completely used overseas by entities or individuals within the territory
- Other circumstances regulated by the MOF and STA

Special rules apply to mixed transactions consisting of sales of taxable goods and supplies of taxable services. To ease tax administration, mixed transactions carried on by enterprises and sole proprietor businesses engaged in or mainly engaged in the production, wholesale and retail supply of goods are deemed to be supplies of goods. Other units and individuals that supply mixed transactions are regarded as providing taxable services.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In China, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions. However, services, intangible assets sold by overseas entities or individuals and tangible movables rented by overseas entities or individuals to entities or individuals in China shall not be deemed sales of services or intangible assets in China and thus are out of the scope of VAT if such supplies occur entirely outside of China.

Certain cross-border services that are consumed entirely outside China may apply the zero-rate or tax exemption with condition (registration with tax authority required). Refer to Section D Rates, subsections Examples of goods and services taxable at 0% and Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services below.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In China, the transfer of goods in an asset restructuring (involving the transfer of entire or partial tangible assets together with their related creditor's rights and liabilities) shall not be subject to VAT. In a complicated restructuring of a corporate group that involves multiple transfers of goods in an asset restructuring (involving multiple transfers of entire or partial tangible assets together with their related creditor's rights and liabilities), such multiple transfers are also considered to be not taxable for VAT purposes, as long as ultimately the assets/rights/liabilities and manpower are transferred to the same transferee.

Transactions between related parties. In China, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, generally in cases where the price of a taxable supply by a taxable person is evidently low or high for no reasonable commercial purpose, or there is no sales amount for a supply deemed to be a supply of goods or services, the tax authorities in charge shall have the right to determine the sales amount in accordance with the following sequence:
- Determine according to the average price of the same type of services, intangible assets or immovables of the taxable person's recent supplies

- Determine according to the average price of the same type of services, intangible assets or immovables of other taxable persons' recent supplies
- Determine according to composite taxable value. The formula for computation of the composite taxable value is:

$$\text{Composite taxable value} = \text{cost} \times (1 + \text{profit rate of cost})$$

The profit rate of cost shall be determined by the STA.

"No reasonable commercial purpose" shall mean reduction, exemption or deferred payment of VAT or increase of VAT refund through contrived arrangements for the purpose of reaping tax benefits.

If the transactions between related parties fall into the above situation, the tax authority may revalue the taxable sale amount based on statutory computation method.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any business "unit" or individual that sells goods or supplies taxable services in China, unless the person's sales are below the relevant taxable thresholds. VAT is also payable on the importation of goods. The term "unit" includes enterprises, administrative units, business units, military units and social organizations.

There are two classes of taxable persons:
- General taxable persons, which are taxable persons with an annual turnover of CNY5 million or more
- Small-scale taxable persons, which are taxable persons with an annual turnover of less than CNY5 million

For these purposes, the term annual turnover refers to cumulative VAT taxable sales within an ongoing operational period of up to 12 months, including the taxable sales amounts shown on tax returns, taxable sales amounts not yet paid and the adjusted taxable sales amount resulting from a tax assessment.

State and local authorities including administration units, business units, military units, social organizations and other government units are treated as taxable persons for the purpose of VAT.

Exemption from registration. The VAT regulations in China do not contain any provision for exemption from registration. However, there are special rules for small businesses with monthly sales amounts or turnover of less than CNY100,000. The sales could be exempted from VAT. See the subsection Voluntary registration and small businesses below.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT regulations in China do not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration. However, voluntary registration is applicable for a small-scale taxable person that wishes to convert into a general taxable person. A small-scale taxable person may elect to register and pay VAT in accordance with the relevant provisions applicable to general taxable persons if it can demonstrate that it has a sound accounting system, maintains proper accounting records and is capable of generating accurate information for VAT assessment purposes.

To support the development of small businesses, small-scale taxable persons with a monthly sales amount or turnover of less than CNY20,000 may be exempted from VAT. This threshold has undergone multiple changes. The current applicable threshold is CNY100,000 of monthly sales amounts (or CNY300,000 for small-scale taxable persons who adopt the quarterly filing basis) for the period from 1 January 2023 to 31 December 2027.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in China.

Branches of the same enterprise are required to register separately for VAT, unless the head office and the branch(es) are located in the same county (municipality). However, subject to the approval of the tax authorities, the head office of an enterprise may be allowed to submit combined VAT returns for branches located in different counties (municipalities).

Transactions between branches may be subject to VAT, unless the relevant branches are located in the same county (municipality). A movement of goods between branches located in different counties (municipalities) is subject to VAT regardless of whether any consideration is paid. A distinction is made between a movement of goods to a branch for the purpose of a sale to customers and a 5201 movement of goods to a branch for storage. By default, a movement of goods from one branch to another is deemed to be for the purpose of sale to customers unless the enterprise can prove that it fulfills both of the following conditions to the STA is faction of the tax authorities:

- The branch that receives the goods will not sell the goods to customers on its own account, issue the relevant invoices or collect sales proceeds from the customers.
- The enterprise has obtained a special permit from its supervising tax authority that allows it to keep inventory outside the place where it is established.

If both of these conditions are fulfilled, the goods may be regarded as being moved to a branch for pure storage purposes and the transaction is not liable to VAT.

There is no minimum time period required for the use of combined returns. Generally, a branch can be removed from the combined VAT return if approved by the tax authority.

At the time of preparing this chapter, there is currently no nationwide VAT regulation clarifying if VAT group members are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties. According to local requirements, the tax authority would regularly inspect the head office and group members to check their compliance status in relation to the combined VAT returns, and in case of any noncompliance or underpayment, the assessed tax payment, late payment surcharge and penalty shall be settled locally by the relevant group member. Such noncompliance or underpayment may also affect the qualification for the combined VAT returns.

Fixed establishment. In China there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, there is a similar definition for "fixed premise," which refers to the contents stated in the "manufacturing and business address" column of the VAT General Taxpayer Registration Form. The definition of a "fixed establishment" in other laws and regulation outside the scope of VAT do not also apply for VAT, as there is no VAT rules addressing cross reference on this matter.

Non-established businesses. Subsidiaries of foreign enterprises that supply goods or taxable services in China are treated in the same manner as other taxable persons.

Foreign enterprises that do not sell goods or taxable services in China may not register for VAT. If a foreign unit or individual outside China provides taxable services in China and does not have a business office in China, the purchaser must be the withholding agent.

Tax representatives. A taxable person or withholding agent may appoint a tax agent to handle various tax matters on its behalf, including but not limited to filing of tax returns, tax consultation, tax planning, tax-related authentication, tax payment review, bookkeeping and other tax-related services. The tax agent must comply with the relevant measures and requirements specified by the STA.

Representative office. Under the current business regulatory rules, a representative office of a foreign enterprise may engage only in certain activities, such as liaison and support. A representative office may not engage in direct profit-making activities, and it is prohibited from making sales of goods. Consequently, in general, VAT is not payable with respect to the activities of a representative office and VAT registration is not permitted. However, if a representative office engages in profit-making activities, it could be liable to VAT for any revenues generated.

Reverse charge. The reverse charge does not apply in China. As such, where an entity or individual located outside the territory of China conducts taxable activities within the territory without establishing an operating institution within the territory, the corresponding buyer must be the VAT withholding agent, unless as otherwise specified by the MOF and the STA. The VAT withholding agent can recover the VAT withheld as input tax.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in China.

Digital economy. Imports supplied cross-border via the internet (i.e., e-commerce) must, according to the types of goods, be subject to import VAT. Individuals purchasing any imported goods retailed through cross-border e-commerce must be taxable persons; the actual transaction prices must be a dutiable price; and e-commerce corporations, corporations specialized in e-commercial transaction platforms or logistic enterprises can be the withholding agent for VAT.

Imported goods retailed through cross-border e-commerce are subject to single transaction limits of CNY5,000 and annual individual limits of CNY26,000. The tariff for any commodities imported within these transaction limits are fixed at 0% temporarily; and the exemption for import VAT and consumption tax are canceled and temporarily levied at 70% of the statutory tax. Where the single transaction is beyond the single transaction limits and the annual transaction limits and the dutiable price is greater than CNY5,000, for single indivisible goods, the tax is levied in full.

Where cross-border e-commerce retail imports are returned within 30 days from the date of customs clearance, a tax refund may be claimed, and individual transaction limits should be adjusted accordingly.

For supplies of e-commerce services, the individual buyer shall be treated as the taxable person (liable to pay the VAT) while the e-commerce company, platform or the logistic company can be the withholding agent. For electronically supplied services provided by nonresidents, the buyer is the withholding agent, and the nonresident supplier is not required to register for VAT in China except for a temporary tax registration, which is required for the withholding process. For this temporary tax registration, the nonresident supplier does not need to provide any information.

At the time of preparing this chapter, a new draft law, along with integrating numerous existing rules, proposes that foreign suppliers of digital services in China should comply with the local VAT laws. On 28 August 2023, the second draft of the VAT law was submitted to the fifth session of the standing committee of the 14th National People's Congress for deliberation and subsequently sought public opinions in September. There has not been any confirmation on the enforcement of this draft law.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Domestic e-commerce activities conducted within the territory of China must be governed by the "E-commerce Law of the People's Republic of China." Operators of e-commerce platforms and e-commerce operators must register and fulfill their tax obligations according to the existing laws and regulations. E-commerce operators must issue paper or electronic invoices for selling commodities or providing services.

Registration procedures. To register for VAT, enterprises (i.e., incorporated or similar) should apply to the administrative departments of market regulation for the business licenses with a unified social credit code, which could be used for tax affairs purposes.

In general, the following documents are required for the application of business license:
- Application form
- Articles of association

- Proof of identity of the investor
- Appointment document of legal representative, directors, supervisors and managers
- Identification document of legal representative, directors, supervisors and managers
- Proof of use of the residence (i.e., lease agreement)
- Other prerequisite documents if necessary

The above documents are required for the business license, and the tax registration must be done within 30 days of obtaining the business license. Normally there is no additional document required for the tax registration.

The application for a business license may be submitted in person (or through a local agent) or online.

Deregistration. Where a taxable person's obligation to pay tax is terminated in accordance with the law due to dissolution, bankruptcy, cancellation or other reasons, the taxable person must provide the relevant certificates or materials and go through the formalities for tax deregistration with the tax authorities that handled its original tax registration before it proceeds to deregister with the industry and commerce administrative authorities and other relevant bodies.

As for taxable persons who do not need a deregistration with the market regulation administrative authorities and other relevant bodies, it must, within 15 days after obtaining relevant approval or termination announcement, provide the relevant certificates or materials and go through the formalities for tax deregistration with its original tax authorities.

Where a taxable person's business registration is revoked by the market regulation administrative authorities, or when the registration is canceled by other relevant authorities, the taxable person must go through the formalities for tax deregistration with its original tax authorities within 15 days after the business registration has been revoked or canceled.

Where a change of tax registration authorities is required for a taxable person due to a change in its domicile or business place, the taxable person must provide the relevant certificates or materials and go through the formalities for tax deregistration with its original tax authorities before it proceeds to modify registration or deregister with the market regulation administrative authorities and other relevant bodies, or to change its domicile or business place. It is also required to apply for tax registration with the tax authorities at the new location within 30 days after the tax deregistration.

Where a foreign enterprise is engaged in construction, installation, assembling or exploration or provides services in China, it must provide the relevant certificates or materials and go through the formalities for tax deregistration with its original tax authorities after the project is completed and no less than 15 days before its departure from China.

Changes to VAT registration details. Where a change occurs in the contents of the tax registration of a taxable person, the taxable person must, within 30 days of the date of completing the formalities for such change in the business registration with the authorities for the administration of market regulation, report to and complete the formalities for the change of tax registration with the tax authorities upon presentation of the relevant supporting documents.

Examples of the change include company name, address, legal representative, registered capital, business scope, etc.

The change of tax registration can be done online or in person.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to VAT at any rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 13%
- Reduced rates: 3%, 5%, 6%, 9%
- Special rates: 3%, 5% (for small-scale taxable persons)
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard VAT rate applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate or an exemption.

Some supplies are classified as tax exempt with credit (zero-rated), which means that no VAT is chargeable, but the supplier may recover the related input tax.

To further support the development of small- and micro-sized enterprises (SMEs) and individual business, the VAT reduction and exemption policies for small-scale taxable persons has been extended again. From 1 April 2021 till 31 December 2027, all small-scale taxable persons will be subject to a lowered rate of 1% on their taxable sales revenues subject to VAT rate of 3% on a deemed basis; for items subject to prepayment of VAT at the rate of 3%, the VAT prepayment will be made at a reduced rate of 1%.

Other temporary rate changes are in place from 1 May 2020 till 31 December 2027: When taxable persons engaged in the distribution of used vehicles sell used vehicles they have acquired, VAT will be levied under the simple taxation method at the rate of 0.5%, instead of 2%, after a reduction from the 3% rate on a deemed basis.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 3%

- Certain taxable used goods
- Consignment goods sold by consignment agencies
- Certain goods sold by pawnbrokers
- Specific duty-free items sold by duty-free shops
- Certain electricity produced by qualified hydroelectric-generating businesses
- Certain construction materials
- Certain biological products
- Tap water (rate applies if taxable person chooses simplified computation method with no input tax recovery)
- Certain concrete cement goods sold by general taxable persons
- Non-academic education services
- Interest income from agricultural loan provided by Agricultural Development Bank of China and its affiliates
- Certain rare disease drugs (orphan drugs)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%

- Labor dispatching service

Taxable persons that supply items eligible for tax exemption or tax reduction must book these sales separately. Otherwise, no tax exemption or reduction applies.

Special rules apply to sales of used fixed assets.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. Taxable persons that could be eligible for VAT exemption may choose to give up the right of VAT exemption and pay VAT. Once the choice is made, the taxable person cannot switch back to applying for VAT exemption within 36 months.

E. Time of supply

The "time of supply" is the time when VAT becomes due (that is, the tax-triggering point).

The following are the principal aspects of the time of supply rules for goods:

- If the sales proceeds are received directly from the buyer, the time of supply is when sales payment is received or when evidence for demanding the sales payment is issued, whichever is earlier, regardless of whether the goods have been delivered.
- By "sales payment is received," it means that the payment is received by the taxable person in the course of or after the sales of services, intangible assets or real property.
- "The day when evidence for demanding the sales payment is issued" refers to the payment date as stipulated in the written contract; or in the absence of a written contract or stipulation about such payment date in the written contract, refers to the date when the provision of the services or transfer of the intangible assets is completed or the ownership of the real property changes.
- If the sales proceeds are collected through a bank, the time of supply is when the goods are dispatched.
- If payments are made by installments in accordance with a sales and purchase agreement, the time of supply is when each installment is due. In the absence of a written contract or specification of the date of collection in the contract, the tax point is the date on which the goods are dispatched.
- If payment is made in advance, the time of supply is when the goods are dispatched. For large-scale machines and equipment, ships, aircraft and other goods whose production period exceeds 12 months, the time of supply is the date on which the advance payment is received, or the date of collection specified in the written contract.
- For supplies of goods made through a consignment agent, the VAT payable by the consignor is due when the consignor receives the sales confirmation list or the payment from the consignment agent, whichever is earlier. However, if the consignor receives neither the sales confirmation list nor the payment from the consignee within 180 days from the date of dispatching goods, the goods are regarded as having been supplied to the consignee and VAT will be payable accordingly.

The time of supply for the provision of taxable services is when the payment for the sale of the service is received or when evidence for demanding the sales payment is issued, whichever is earlier.

If the taxable person is engaged in the transfer of financial instruments, the time of supply is the day when the ownership of the financial instruments changes.

If the taxable person provides services or the transfer of the intangible assets or real property, the time of supply is the day when the provision of the services or transfer of the intangible assets is completed or the ownership of the real property changes.

The obligation to withhold VAT arises on the day when the VAT payment obligation arises for the taxable person.

Deposits and prepayments. For a refundable deposit, in general it would not be subject to VAT and no VAT invoice should be issued (but if VAT invoices are issued, VAT would be due). A refundable deposit is not perceived as a consideration for a supply. In this regard, the treatment would be the same whether the supply takes place or not. With regard to a nonrefundable deposit, VAT is due if the nonrefundable deposit is treated as part of the consideration to be paid by the purchaser. VAT would not be due if a nonrefundable deposit has no linkage with the consideration and the supply, and it is solely for the purpose of securing the transaction.

If payment is made in advance, the time of supply for goods is when the goods are dispatched. For large-scale machinery and equipment, ships, aircraft and other goods whose production period exceeds 12 months, the time of supply is the date on which the advance payment is received, or the date of collection specified in the written contract.

Where payment is made in advance for leasing services provided by the taxable person, the time of supply on the prepayments is on the day when the advance payment is received. The taxable person must prepay tax to the competent tax office within the tax declaration period for the month following the month when the advanced payment is received.

Continuous supplies of services. There is no specific regulation for the time of supply rule for continuous supplies. As such, the normal time of supply rules for services apply.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Goods sent on approval would not create a time of supply under the general rules. The general time of supply rules mentioned above would apply; in other words, the date of VAT invoice issuance, the date when sales proceeds are received or evidence for demanding the sales proceeds is issued, and the date when goods are dispatched would be assessed to judge when the VAT obligation would arise, subject to business trading mode.

In an event that a VAT invoice has been issued, if the goods are returned in the following months, a red-letter invoice (credit note) should be issued. If goods are returned in the current month, the VAT invoice could be canceled and reissued.

Reverse-charge services. The reverse charge does not apply in China. As such, where an entity or individual located outside the territory of China conducts taxable activities within the territory without establishing an operating institution within the territory, the corresponding buyer must be the VAT withholding agent, unless as otherwise specified by the MOF and the STA. There is no special time of supply rule for such supplies, and as such the general rules apply.

Leased assets. The general time of supply rules noted above apply to leases. If payment is made in advance for leasing services provided by the taxable person, the time of supply for the prepayments is the day when the advance payment is received. The taxable persons must prepay the tax to the competent tax office within the tax declaration period for the month following the month when the advanced payment is received.

Imported goods. VAT is payable for imported goods when the goods are declared to customs.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by crediting it against output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made. However, input tax credit is not allowed for small-scale taxable persons that are subject to VAT at a flat rate (see Section D). Input tax includes VAT paid by a taxable person on the acquisition and importation of taxable goods and services that are acquired for the purposes of the taxable person's business activities. No credit is permitted with respect to purchases made for other purposes. To claim input tax credits, a taxable person must comply with the following conditions:

- It must be registered with the tax authorities as a general taxable person (not as a small-scale taxable person).
- It must maintain a reliable accounting system and provide accurate information for assessing its VAT liabilities.
- It must hold a valid VAT invoice obtained from the vendor (see Section H), a tax certificate issued by the customs authorities or other valid supporting documents including transportation invoices and agricultural product procurement certificates.

A taxable person may recover input tax as soon as it has a valid VAT invoice, or a tax certificate issued by the customs authorities or other valid supporting documents. It is not necessary to wait until the purchaser has paid for the goods or the supplier has paid the output tax to the tax authorities.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in China is the same month that the invoice is verified. In rare cases (e.g., force majeure), the taxable person may apply for reclaiming input tax by special application. This time limit is abolished for invoices issued after 1 January 2017. The claim for input tax credit must be made in the VAT return for the period in which the invoice or other documents are validated by the tax authorities.

For the tax invoices and other documents issued before 31 December 2016, a taxable person must verify all input tax invoices and other documents within 360 days after the date of issuance of the documents; for tax invoices and other documents issued from 1 January 2017, there is no period limit for verification and declaration of deductions.

In calculating its net VAT payable, a taxable person may also claim an input tax credit equal to 11% of the purchase value of VAT-exempt agricultural products purchased from primary agricultural producers or agricultural cooperative societies. The input tax on road, bridge and gate tolls paid by general taxable persons can be calculated on the basis of the fee amount indicated in the toll invoice received by the taxable persons.

Input tax on real estate acquired by a taxable person after 1 May 2016 and accounted for as fixed assets under the accounting system, as well as real estate construction in progress after 1 May 2016, is deducted from output tax in two yearly installments at a deduction ratio of 60% in the first month and 40% in the 13th month of obtaining the special VAT invoices. Starting from 1 April 2019, it can be offset (one-off) by the output tax upon obtaining the special VAT invoices.

A taxable person that supplies goods for export must register with the relevant local authorities responsible for overseeing foreign trade to obtain an approved Foreign Trade Operator Registration Form. It can use this form to complete a registration with the relevant tax authorities and confirm its entitlement to export refund.

With the exception of certain types of goods, exports of goods are generally exempt with credit; that is, input tax previously paid on the purchase of goods and services used for the production of goods for export is refunded on application. This procedure is commonly known as the "VAT export refund." However, the VAT exemption with credit mechanism does not apply to certain types of goods. For those goods whose VAT export refund rates are less than the applicable VAT rates for normal supply, the taxable person must bear the difference as a cost, even though the goods are sold for export. Such VAT cost is commonly referred to as an "export VAT leakage" or "input tax disallowance."

Depending on the type of exporting enterprise, the VAT export refund and the input tax disallowance are calculated based on different methods.

Eligible enterprises or other entities may file a tax refund (exemption) application. After approval, enterprises or other entities must make the declaration on VAT refund (exemption) and exemption with the competent authority within the declaration period of VAT payment.

For the goods exported through an agent, the entrusting party must be responsible for declaring VAT refund (exemption). For the water, electricity and gas supplied to the special areas, the manufacturing enterprises within the special areas, as the purchasers, must be responsible for declaring the tax refund.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for taxable business purposes.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Goods or services used in VAT-exempt activities
- Goods or services used in activities subject to VAT on a simplified basis
- Goods or services for collective welfare or personal consumption
- The "abnormal loss" of purchased taxable goods and associated processing, repair or replacement services or transportation services
- The abnormal wastage of purchased taxable goods or services consumed in the production of merchandise or finished products
- The abnormal loss of real estate and associated purchased goods, design services or construction services consumed
- The abnormal wastage of purchased goods, design services or construction services in the construction of real estate
- The purchase of loan services, catering services, residential daily services and entertainment services
- Other situations that are specified by the Ministry of Finance and the State Administration of Taxation

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Purchase, lease or hire of a car, van or truck
- Fuel for cars, vans and trucks
- Car maintenance
- Business travel (see the subsection Domestic passenger traveling expenses below)
- Advertising
- Hotel accommodation
- Mobile phone expenses

Partial exemption. Taxable persons that make taxable supplies and other supplies (such as exempt supplies and outside the scope supplies) are only entitled to claim input tax incurred in making their taxable supplies as credits. Input tax is not creditable for any purchases that are directly related to making exempt supplies.

If a taxable person has purchases or imports that are used to make both taxable and exempt or outside the scope supplies while the non-creditable input tax could not be distinguished, an apportionment of input tax is allowed. The allowable input tax credit must be calculated using the ratio of turnover from taxable supplies compared with the total turnover of that month from all supplies.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption apportionment method (i.e., the standard method) in China.

Capital goods. The same rules apply for goods and services supplied for business purposes. There is also no specific definition for capital goods. However, starting from 1 January 2018, input tax on fixed assets or immovable properties rented by taxable persons that are used for supplies subject to tax under the general calculation method and a taxable item subject to tax under the simplified calculation method, a VAT-exempt item, collective welfare or personal consumption purposes is allowed to be recovered in full, against the output tax.

Refunds. Upon discovering that a taxable person has paid an amount in excess of the tax payable, the tax authorities must immediately refund the excess amount to the taxable person.

When a taxable person discovers that it has paid in excess of the tax payable within three years from the date the tax payment was made, it may claim from the tax authorities a refund of the excess amount and interest based on bank deposit for the same period.

Upon examination and verification, the tax authorities must immediately make the refund. If the refund involves returns from the State Treasury, the refund must be given according to the provisions of laws and administrative regulations relating to the administration of State Treasury.

Incremental excess input tax refund regime. The incremental excess input tax refund regime came into effect from 1 April 2019. Taxable persons meeting all the following criteria may apply to their in-charge tax authority for the refund of incremental excess input tax:

- Starting from the tax filing period of April 2019, the incremental excess input tax is more than zero for a consecutive six months (or consecutive two quarters if the filing is on a quarterly basis), and the incremental excess input tax at the sixth month is not lower than CNY500,000
- The taxable person's tax credit rating would need to reach Grade A or Grade B
- Within the 36 months before applying for the incremental excess input tax refund, the taxable person has not committed any fraudulent application for tax refund from (1) excess input tax, (2) export VAT refund and (3) false issuance of special VAT invoice
- Within the 36 months before applying for incremental excess input tax refund, the tax authorities have not punished the taxable persons for more than two times (including two times) due to tax evasion
- They have not adopted any of the Refund Upon Collection as well as Collection First Refund Later measures

The incremental excess input tax refundable to a taxable person for the current period must be computed using the formula below:

$$\text{Amount of incremental excess input tax refund} = \text{Incremental amount of excess input tax} \times 60\% \times \text{input tax ratio}$$

The input tax ratio refers to the proportion of the VAT specified in the special VAT invoices, customs importation special VAT payment certificates and tax payment certificate for remitting taxes from April 2019 to the tax period before the application for an incremental excess input tax refund in all credited input tax in the same period.

In addition, from 1 June 2019, eligible taxable persons in the advanced manufacturing industry manufacturing and selling nonmetallic mineral products, general purpose equipment, special purpose equipment and computers, communication and other electronic equipment may apply for a refund of the incremental tax credit monthly from 31 March 2019. An allowed refund of an incremental retained tax credit = the incremental retained tax credit x the input composition ratio.

From 1 April 2021, the advanced manufacturing industries of pharmaceuticals, chemical fibers, railway, marine, aerospace and other transport equipment, electrical machinery and equipment, instruments and apparatus are also included and eligible for this preferential treatment.

From 1 July 2021, the scope of qualifying taxable persons has further expanded to include enterprises (including self-employed industrial and commercial households) in the following industries: retail and wholesale; agricultural, forestry, animal husbandry and fishery; accommodation and catering; resident services, repairs and other services; education; hygiene and social work; culture, sports and entertainment industries. The eligible enterprises engaging in the above-mentioned seven industries may apply for a refund of incremental input tax credits and accumulated input tax credits brought forward from previous periods (a lump sum) in the VAT filing to be completed in July 2022 or onwards.

Super input tax credit regime. From 1 January 2023 to 31 December 2023, general taxable persons whose aggregate sales derived from qualifying services (i.e. postal services, telecommunications services, modern services and life services) of more than 50% of their total sales, would be eligible for an additional 5% super input tax credit. From 1 January 2023 to 31 December 2023, a general taxable person whose aggregate sales derived from lifestyle services (i.e., culture and sports services, education and medical services, tourism and entertainment services, catering and accommodation services, daily services for individuals, other lifestyle services) exceed 50% of their total sales would be eligible for an additional 10% super input tax credit.

From 1 January 2023 to 31 December 2027, advanced manufacturing enterprises, which refers to general taxable persons of high and new technology enterprises (including their unincorporated branches) in the manufacturing industry are entitled to an additional 5% super input tax credit. It is notable that lists of advanced manufacturing enterprises shall be determined by provincial/municipal industry and information technology departments in conjunction with other relevant departments.

From 1 January 2023 to 31 December 2027, general taxable persons engaging in integrated circuit design, manufacturing, equipment, materials, packaging and testing, as well as general taxable persons manufacturing and selling advanced industrial machinery products, are entitled to an additional 15% super input tax credit. These are also subject to approval by the STA and the relevant authorities.

Qualifying taxable persons must submit a declaration to their in-charge tax authority to confirm the sales amount on an annual basis to be eligible for the additional input tax.

Domestic passenger travel expenses. General taxable persons can recover input tax when they have collected specific documentary evidence for the domestic passenger travel costs/expenses that are for business purpose. Where the taxable person cannot obtain a special VAT invoice, the input tax must be tentatively determined in accordance with the following:

- Where an electronic normal VAT invoice is obtained, the tax amount indicated on the invoice must apply
- Where an e-ticket itinerary receipt for air transport with passenger identity information indicated is obtained, the input tax must be calculated as per the following formula:

$$\text{Input tax for air passenger transport} = (\text{airfare} + \text{fuel surcharge}) / (1 + 9\%) \times 9\%$$

- Where a railway ticket with passenger identity information indicated is obtained, the input tax must be calculated as per the following formula:

$$\text{Input tax for railway passenger transport} = \text{face value} / (1+9\%) \times 9\%$$

- Where other passenger tickets for roads, waterways, etc., with passenger identity information indicated are obtained, the input tax must be calculated as per the following formula:

$$\text{Input tax for other passenger transport such as roads and waterways} = \text{face value} / (1 + 3\%) \times 3\%$$

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in China is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in China.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in China.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in China is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A general taxable person must register and procure approved VAT invoices from the tax authorities. The taxable person must also designate and register an individual employee as a representative who is responsible for administering the custody and control of VAT invoices. A valid VAT invoice is needed to support any claim for input tax recovery.

A special VAT invoice may only be issued for supplies of taxable goods or services made to taxable recipients. The supplier may not issue a special VAT invoice for the following:
- The supply of goods (such as cigarettes, alcohol, foods, garments, shoes, hats and cosmetics) to ultimate consumers by taxable persons that engage in retail sales
- The supply of taxable services to individuals
- The sale of VAT-exempt goods unless otherwise stipulated by specific rules or regulations
- The supply of taxable goods or services by small-scale taxable persons, except for certain cases the small-scale taxable persons are eligible to issue special VAT invoices by its own; however, small-scale taxable persons can apply to the relevant tax authority to issue VAT invoices on their behalf for supplies of taxable goods or services

Credit notes. If goods are returned after an invoice has been issued, a credit note (also known in China as a "red-letter invoice") must be issued. The original invoice must be returned and "invalid" written clearly on it, or a notification must be obtained from the other party.

If sales discount is given after an invoice has been issued, the original invoice must be returned and "invalid" written clearly on it before reissuing a new invoice, or a red-letter invoice must be issued after a notification is obtained from the other party.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in China, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in China. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in China.

Currently, there are two main types of electronic invoices in use (1) an electronic VAT invoice; and (2) fully digitalized e-invoice. Both types are allowed but not mandatory.

The electronic VAT invoice applies for normal VAT invoices only; taxable persons may choose to issue either a normal electronic VAT invoice or normal paper VAT invoice. Electronic invoicing for normal VAT invoices has been implemented in China for all taxable persons from 1 December 2015. In addition, for special VAT invoices, from 21 January 2021, the electronic invoicing of special VAT invoices has been implemented for new taxable person throughout the nation.

Pilots for the fully digitalized e-invoices were launched from 1 December 2021 in selected areas with selected taxable persons as a more evolved replacement of the electronic VAT invoice. Under the pilots, the fully digitalized e-invoices include special VAT invoices and normal VAT invoices, which serve the same purpose as the existing paper invoices. The scope of taxable persons that may receive the fully digitalized e-invoices has steadily expanded to all taxable persons in China by the end of 2022. Meanwhile, the scope of the taxable person that may issue fully digitalized e-invoices has also extended to more taxable persons in more cities and provinces.

At the time of preparing this chapter, most of regions in China have launched the pilots of fully digitalized e-invoicing. In regions that have launched the pilots, the scope of taxable persons that may issue the fully digitalized e-invoices includes the newly established and registered taxable person, and pilot taxable persons who are selected by the local tax authority. As China aims to achieve the goal of implementing fully digitalized e-invoices to cover all business sectors, transactions and elements by 2025, it is only a matter of time until the pilots are further expanded and eventually implemented on a national basis.

Generally speaking:
- Taxable persons not within the fully digitalized e-invoicing pilot region: taxable persons are still using old invoices, including paper invoices and old electronic VAT invoice
- Taxable persons that are within the fully digitalized e-invoicing pilot region: the new fully digitalized e-invoicing applies to:
  - The newly established and registered taxable persons (included in the pilot by default)
  - Pilot taxable persons that are selected by the local tax authority (the criteria for the selection of pilot taxable persons are not disclose to the public)

Simplified VAT invoices. Subject to the following circumstances, a full VAT invoice is not required to be issued:
- Selling any service, intangible asset or real property to any individual consumer
- Any taxable activity to which the provisions on VAT exemption apply

For the above circumstances, what is known as a "normal" VAT invoice must be issued.

Normal VAT invoices are simplified VAT invoices issued to small-scale taxable persons and individuals. However, general taxable persons would not be able to recover input tax with normal VAT invoices, except for domestic passenger travel expenses. For supplies to general taxable persons, special VAT invoices (i.e., full VAT invoices) must be issued for the taxable person to recover respective input tax.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in China.

Proof of exports. For proof of export, the requirements include:
- Declaration forms required by tax authority for exemption, deduction or refund of tax on exported goods
- Foreign exchange declaration for the export of goods (copy for export refund)
- Export invoice
- For goods exported on assignment, verification issued by the assignee for the export of the goods and a photocopy of the export agency agreement

For foreign trade enterprises, the requirements include:
- Declaration forms required by tax authority for exemption, deduction or refund of tax on exported goods
- Foreign exchange declaration for the export of goods
- VAT invoice (credit copy), declaration by batch form for imported goods with export refund, tax payment certificate for imported goods
- For goods exported on assignment, verification certificates issued by assignees in charge tax authorities for the export of goods on assignment and a photocopy of the export agency agreement
- For items subject to consumption tax, consumption tax payment certificate, consumption tax payment certificate for imported goods

Foreign currency invoices. VAT invoices are issued and printed through the Golden Tax System (GTS) – a tax control system connected to the database of the tax authorities. VAT invoices in China must be issued in Chinese yuan (CNY). Where a taxable person settles the sales amount in any currency other than CNY, the average CNY exchange rate on the date the sales amount occurs or on the first day of the current month may be used at the discretion of the taxable person. The taxable person must decide in advance on a conversion rate and may not change it within 12 months once such a conversion rate is determined.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. The supplier should not issue a special VAT invoice for the supply of goods (such as cigarettes, alcohol, foods, garments, shoes, hats and cosmetics) to final consumers by taxable persons that engage in retail sales but should issue a normal VAT invoice upon request.

Records. In China, examples of records that must be held for VAT purposes include accounting books, account supporting vouchers, tax payment receipts and other relevant information.

Taxable persons and withholding agents must establish accounting books in accordance with the relevant laws, administrative regulations and provisions formulated by the authorized fiscal or tax department under the State Council and keep records and carry out accounting based on legitimate and valid vouchers.

The taxable persons engaging in production or business operations must submit their financial and accounting systems or methods and accounting software to the tax authorities for record.

Accounting books, account supporting vouchers, tax payment receipts and other relevant information must not be forged, revised or damaged without approval.

In China, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. While no special rules apply to the location where such records must be held, in the case of a request by the tax authority, the taxable person is allowed to hold the records outside of China and then provide them to the tax authority within a reasonable time period.

Record retention period. The accounting books, accounting vouchers, statements, receipts of tax payments, invoices, vouchers for exportation and other tax-related materials must be kept for 10 years unless otherwise specified in the laws and administrative regulations.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in China. Taxable persons may keep electronic accounting documents created in the course of transactions in electronic format in accordance with the measures and requirements specified by the MOF and the National Archives Administration (NAA).

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. In China, VAT periods vary in length. A VAT period may be one day, three days, five days, 10 days, 15 days, one month or one quarter. The length of the tax period is determined by the local tax authorities, based on the amount of VAT payable by the taxable person.

Taxable persons that have a VAT tax period of one month or one quarter must submit VAT returns on a monthly or quarterly basis within 15 days after the end of the period. Taxable persons that have a VAT tax period shorter than one month must submit a VAT return for the previous month by the 15th day of the following month.

Periodic payments. If VAT payments cannot be made on a fixed-period basis, VAT may be paid on a transaction basis.

Taxable persons that have a VAT tax period of one month or one quarter must pay the VAT due on a monthly or quarterly basis within 15 days after the end of the period. Taxable persons that have a VAT tax period shorter than one month must make provisional VAT payments within five days after the end of the tax period. They must also settle the VAT payable for the previous month by the 15th day of the following month.

VAT payments are made through bank transfer, and only amounts in CNY are acceptable.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in China, but not mandatory. However, electronic filing is recommended by tax authorities in China. Taxable persons can log in to the tax declaration website and file the electronic VAT tax return with the relevant appendix. When electronic filing is unsuccessful or encounters any difficulties, paper filing is acceptable.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in China.

Special schemes. Secondhand goods. In general, sales of secondhand taxable goods by taxable persons are chargeable to VAT on a simplified basis at a rate of 3% with a further reduction to 2%. Sales of secondhand taxable goods by nontaxable individuals are exempt from VAT.

Flat rate. Small-scale taxable persons account for VAT at a rate of 3% on a simplified flat rate basis and input tax paid on purchases is not deductible.

Netting mechanism. The VAT pilot rules contain a new computation method, which incorporates the "netting" mechanism. Only the following services specified by law could be applicable to the netting mechanism:

- Financial leasing with approval from the People's Bank of China, the Ministry of Commerce and the China Banking Regulatory Commission. The sales amount must be the balance of the total price and expenses (including residual value) after deduction of the loan interest (including foreign currency loan and CNY loan interest), interest of bond issuance, vehicle purchase tax.
- Transfer of financial products
- Agency services
- Tourism services
- Construction services applicable to simplified methods
- Sale of immovable properties developed by the real estate companies that are taxable persons
- Labor dispatching services
- HR outsourcing services

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in China.

Supplementary filings. Taxable persons are required to file returns for the following local surcharges, which are calculated based on the amount of VAT payable at the same time of the VAT returns filing.

Urban construction and maintenance tax. An urban construction and maintenance tax is levied at a certain rate on the amount of indirect tax payable (i.e., VAT payable) by the taxable person. There are three different rates depending on the taxable person's location, i.e., 7% for urban areas, 5% for county areas and 1% for other areas.

Educational surcharge. An educational surcharge is levied at 3% on the amount of indirect tax payable (i.e., VAT payable) by the taxable person.

Local educational surcharge. A local educational surcharge is levied at 2% on the amount of indirect tax payable (i.e., VAT payable) by the taxable person.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Amendments to the VAT returns for prior periods can be submitted online or in paper. Depending on the amendment result, the taxable person may need to settle the additional tax payable or apply for a tax refund.

Digital tax administration. Taxable persons may file a VAT return in an electronic form online or in paper at tax authorities. From 2015, the STA implemented the "1,000 Accounts Plan," which is targeted at large enterprises, requesting access to detailed transaction detail to account for all tax types. The list of qualified enterprises is announced by STA on an annual basis.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. The VAT regulations in China do not contain any penalty provision for late VAT registration. But there are penalties for small-scale taxable persons who do not register as general taxable persons in time when their annual taxable sales amount exceeds the threshold.

Taxable persons must settle the relevant formalities within 15 working days from the end of the tax declaration period in the month (or quarter) when the annual taxable sales amount exceeds the threshold. If a taxable person fails to comply within a prescribed time limit, the competent tax authorities must produce a Notice of the Tax Affairs within five working days after the end of the prescribed time limit and notify the taxable person that it must settle the relevant formalities at the competent tax authorities within five working days; if the taxable person still fails to comply after the expiration of this time limit, the tax payable is calculated based on the sales amount and the VAT rate as of the following month, and the taxable person is not allowed to deduct input tax and use special VAT invoices until it completes the relevant formalities.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Where a taxable person underpays or fails to pay taxes within the time limit prescribed in provisions or a withholding agent underremits or fails to remit taxes within the time limit prescribed in provisions, the tax authorities must, in addition to ordering the taxable person or withholding agent to pay or remit the taxes within a prescribed time limit, impose a fine on a daily basis at the rate of 0.05% of the amount of tax in arrears, commencing on the day the tax payment was defaulted.

If the taxable person or withholding agent fails to pay the tax within the new time limit, the tax authorities may impose a fine of not less than 50% and not more than 500% of the amount of tax in arrears.

If a withholding agent fails to withhold or levy an amount of tax that should have been withheld or levied, the tax authorities must seek the payment of the tax from the taxable person and concurrently impose on the withholding agent a fine of not less than 50% and not more than 300% of the amount of tax that should have been withheld or levied.

Authorized tax officers have extensive powers relating to the inspection and seizure of records. If a tax officer is of the opinion that a taxable person has underpaid the VAT due, the officer may issue an assessment based on the correct figures or on an estimate.

Penalties for errors. In the event that a taxable person or withholding agent fails to pay taxes or underpay taxes due to its own errors such as a miscalculation, the tax authorities may, within three years, pursue the payment of the tax amount and late payment fines. In special circumstances, such time period for pursuing payment may be extended to five years.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a fine of not more than CNY2,000. The tax authorities may also order the taxable person to make rectifications within a time limit. In serious cases, the tax authorities may impose a fine of not less than CNY2,000 and not more than CNY10,000 on the taxable person. For further details, see the subsection above Changes to VAT registration details.

Penalties for fraud. Where a taxable person fails to pay or underpays the amount of tax payable by means of forging, altering, concealing or, without permission, destroying accounting books or account supporting vouchers or overstating expenses or failing to state or understating incomes in accounting books or refusing to report tax returns after being notified by the tax authorities to do so or filing false tax returns, it must be regarded as tax evasion. For taxable persons who evade taxes, the tax authorities must seek from them the payment of the unpaid or underpaid taxes and late payment fines, and concurrently impose a fine not less than 50% of and not more than 500% of the amount of taxes unpaid or underpaid. For cases that constitute crimes, criminal liabilities must be investigated according to law.

If a withholding agent fails to remit or underremits the amount of tax withheld or collected by the means listed in the above paragraph, the tax authorities must seek the remittance of unremitted or underremitted taxes and late payment fines, and concurrently impose a fine not less than 50% of and not more than 500% of the amount of taxes unremitted or underremitted. For cases that constitute crimes, criminal liabilities must be investigated according to law.

If a taxable person or withholding agent falsifies tax calculation bases, the tax authorities must order him to make rectifications within a given time limit and impose a fine of not more than CNY50,000.

In the cases of tax evasion, tax refusal or tax fraud, the tax authorities must not be restricted by the time limit set forth in the preceding paragraph in pursuing payments of taxes unpaid or underpaid, late payment fines or tax amount defrauded.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in China.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in China is three years. This depends on the situation, as the time limit for tax authorities to impose penalties is generally three years but can increase to five years (for amount more than CNY100,000), or no limit (in the case of tax evasion, tax refusal or tax fraud). Normally the time limit for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns is three years from the time of submission.

Where a taxable person or withholding agent fails to pay or underpays tax due to the responsibility of the tax authority, the tax authority may, within three years, require the taxpayer or withholding agent to pay back the tax, but no late payment fee shall be imposed.

In the event that a taxable person or withholding agent fails to pay taxes or underpays taxes due to its own errors, such as a miscalculation, the tax authorities may, within three years, pursue the payment of the tax amount and late payment fines. In special circumstances, such time period for pursuing payment may be extended to five years.

In the case of tax evasion, tax refusal or tax fraud, the taxation authorities must not be restricted by the time limit set forth in the preceding paragraph in pursuing payments of taxes unpaid or underpaid, late payment fines or tax amount defrauded.

Upon discovering that a taxable person has paid an amount in excess of the tax payable, the tax authorities must immediately refund the excess amount to the taxable person. When a taxable person discovers that it has paid in excess of the tax payable within three years from the date the tax payment was made, it may claim from the tax authorities a refund of the excess amount and interest based on bank deposit for the same period. Whereas, if an overpaid tax is discovered by a taxable person beyond three years, it is not clear in the current tax regulation whether the taxable person could claim a refund from the tax authorities. As the local practice, the refund may not be claimed.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- The sale of movable and immovable tangible goods (some exceptions apply: sale of movable goods considered as excluded)
- The sale or transfer of rights over intangibles associated with industrial property
- Services rendered in Colombia or from abroad (i.e., services executed abroad that are used in Colombia if the recipient of the services is located, domiciled or resident in Colombia)
- Importation of movable goods into Colombia
- Services of the operation of games of chance or the sale of tickets for games of chance (excluding lotteries and those games operated exclusively online)

Sales of fixed assets are not subject to VAT.

In general terms, the tax base is equal to the total value of the sale, i.e., the sale price of goods or services, plus any reimbursed expenses as part of service, warranties, commissions, insurance and other complementary items even though those items are billed separately. The tax base in importations includes any expenses incurred plus customs. Law 2277 of 2022 established a special tax base on VAT applicable to gambling machines located outside casinos. The effective discounts included in the invoice that are not subject to any condition and that are commonly used in the market are not part of the VAT tax base. However, for cleaning, surveillance and temporary employment services, construction agreements and public infrastructure construction contracts, the tax base corresponds to the fee paid to the service provider/constructor rather than to the whole value of the contract. In such cases, the creditable input tax is the tax incurred by the constructor/service provider that is directly associated with its invoiced fee. The constructor/service provider is not entitled to credit for VAT paid on expenses that are associated with the part of the income that is not subject to VAT (i.e., the difference between the fee and the whole value of the agreement).

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Colombia, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in Colombia. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In Colombia, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, the valuation of the provision of services or sale of goods between related parties will be subject to the arm's-length principle established by the transfer pricing regime and applicable valuation methodologies. In general, any transaction must consider the commercial value of the goods at the time of its sale.

C. Who is liable

Generally, any individual or entity that undertakes an activity subject to VAT must register for VAT purposes, unless provided otherwise. The requirement to register also applies to permanent establishments (PEs) of foreign entities (i.e., branches of foreign entities) if the PE carries out taxable activities or business in Colombia, and to those who provide services in Colombia located abroad.

In Colombia, the applicable regime classifies taxpayers as VAT responsible and VAT non-responsible.

All individuals or legal entities that undertake VAT taxable activities must register for VAT purposes. Retailers, traders and artisans, as well as individuals or legal entities engaged in agriculture and cattle farming activities, and service providers, must not register as VAT responsible if they meet all of the following requirements:

- Their gross income in the current or immediately preceding year derived from their taxable activity (or agreement for selling goods or services or bank deposits of revenues derived from taxable operations) is less than approximately USD35,300 (based on an exchange rate of COP4.200 per USD).
- They have a maximum of one commercial establishment, office, premises or business where they perform activities.

- They do not use a franchise, concession agreement or royalty agreement with respect to the commercial establishment.
- They are not customs users.
- In the prior year, or in the current year, they did or do not enter into sales agreements for goods or services exceeding approximately USD35,300.
- During the prior year, or in the current year, bank deposits and financial investments made did or do not exceed approximately USD35,300.

Additionally, the following taxpayers will be considered as VAT non-responsible:
- Being registered as part of the "simple" tax regime (i.e., a tax regime that applies to certain entities and individuals that replaces income tax, consumption tax and industry and trade tax) and engaging exclusively in one or more activities specified of taxpayers under the "simple" tax regime.
- Individual taxpayers under the "simple" tax regime will be considered as VAT non-responsible when their gross income does not exceed approximately USD35,300.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Colombia does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. VAT law in Colombia does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration. Special rules apply for small businesses (see above).

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Colombia.

Fixed establishment. In Colombia there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the PE rules also apply for VAT. There are two scenarios under which a PE can be configured in Colombian territory: (i) a fixed place of business or (ii) execution of activities by a dependent agent.

For a PE from a fixed place of business, a PE is understood to be: "a fixed place of business located in the country, through which a foreign company, whether a legal entity or any other foreign entity, or individual without residence in Colombia, as the case may be, carries out all or part of its activity." Therefore, for a PE to be configured in Colombia, from a fixed place of business scenario, the following elements must be fulfilled:
- Place of business: the foreign entity has a physical space available in the country.
- Permanence criteria: there must be an intention of conducting business on a permanent basis and not a temporary basis.
- Execution of the activity: the foreign company or entity must perform all or part of its economic activity through that fixed location.

For a PE from the execution of activities through a dependent agent, a PE can be constituted in Colombia when the foreign entity has: (i) a dependent agent (legally or economically) that acts permanently on behalf of the foreign entity; or (ii) an independent agent that performs all or most of its activities on behalf of such entity, and between said entity and the agent, commercial or financial conditions are established that differ from those that would have been established or agreed upon between independent legal entities. In both cases, the agent is required to have and regularly exercise, within Colombian territory, activities that allow him to execute acts or agreements on behalf of the foreign company.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that satisfies the following two requirements:
- It does not have a permanent activity.
- It does not conduct activities in Colombia through a branch of a foreign company in Colombia (i.e., a PE).

If a Colombian VAT taxable person receives a service from a non-established business, the reverse-charge mechanism applies (i.e., for business-to-business [B2B] supplies). Otherwise, the non-established business must register in Colombia for VAT purposes and account for the VAT due (i.e., for business-to-consumer [B2C] supplies).

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Colombia.

Reverse charge. Under the reverse-charge mechanism, the Colombian resident must include in the VAT withholding tax return the value of the VAT due in the operation without subtracting such an amount from the payment made to the service provider. VAT self-assessed by the Colombian resident will be treated as creditable VAT if the relevant requirements provided by law are met.

The withholding mechanism designates certain entities as VAT withholding agents, including government departments, large taxable persons, entities paying nonresident entities, individuals and VAT taxable persons belonging to the common regime, entities that are issuers of debit and credit cards, as well as entities and individuals that provide goods or services to international trading companies. For transactions performed with nonresident entities and individuals, or the sale of tobacco and scrap metal, the withholding rate is 100% of the applicable tax rate (19%).

Domestic reverse charge. Reverse charges are only applicable as previously indicated. However, as outlined above, note that the withholding for VAT purposes will be equivalent to 15% of the corresponding tax, except in those cases where the government determines a different percentage, which in any case may not exceed 50% of the tax charged.

Digital economy. VAT is triggered on any sale of goods and services performed through electronic commerce. In this event, VAT is charged by the seller of the goods or services or through the administrator of the platform that provides such solutions. The VAT rate applicable is the general one.

The nonresident provider of digital services is solely responsible for VAT purposes if the recipients of such services are not deemed as taxable persons, i.e., a VAT registered customer (a B2C supply). In case the operation is carried out with a Colombian VAT-registered customer (a B2B supply), the reverse-charge mechanism will apply, and nonresidents will not be liable to register and account for VAT in Colombia.

VAT addresses digital services as a taxable event. Taxation is applied through a withholding mechanism on electronic payments. Foreign service providers that render digital services from abroad must register as VAT responsible with the Colombian Tax Office. For this purpose, they must obtain a Colombian Tax ID, Número de Identificación Tributaria (NIT). These entities must collect the VAT due and file the corresponding VAT return to wire the VAT collected to the tax office. The latter is followed unless VAT due is collected by the beneficiary of the service through the reverse-charge mechanism (i.e., if the beneficiary of the service is VAT responsible). Also, there is an exception to being registered if payments for this type of services are made through certain financial entities, such as those that issue credit or debit cards and the collection from third parties (i.e., VAT withholding agents) for certain services (i.e., services provided through digital platforms). In this case, the issuer entity of the respective credit or debit cards will be the withholding agent.

At the time of preparing this chapter, the latest tax reform (Law 2277 of 2022) establishes a digital services regime on nonresidents with a significant economic presence (SEP) in Colombia and income from digital services. However, this regime only applies to income tax from 2024, so it will not be applicable to VAT.

Taxed services include:
- Digital supply of audiovisual services (including but not limited to music, video, movies, games and transmission of any event)
- Digital distribution platform
- Online publicity services
- Online training or education services
- Rights for use or exploitation of intangibles
- Other digital or electronic services for users located in the Colombian territory

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Colombia.

Online marketplaces and platforms. The seller of services or goods, being VAT registered, must charge and collect VAT on supplies made in an online marketplace and platform. As part of determining the status of an online marketplace and platform, the concept of a significant economic presence (SEP) in Colombia shall also be considered.

Registration procedures. Registration in the Registro Único Tributario (RUT) must precede initiation of economic activity or the rendering of services from abroad not subject to the reverse-charge mechanism. An applicant registers in the RUT by filing forms designed for such effects with the tax authorities DIAN accompanied by hard copies, among others, of the following documents:
- Photocopy of the valid document by which the existence and legal representation is accredited
- Photocopy of the ID of the legal representative, with exhibition of the original
- In case of legal entities that are not obliged to register before the chamber of commerce and do not include their main address in their document of existence, they must provide a certification signed by the legal representative stating the main address of the entity, which should contain: (i) address, (ii) city, (iii) state, (iv) country, (v) email, (vi) telephone numbers
- Certificate of bank account; this procedure takes an average of 15 days; the registration in the RUT shall be valid indefinitely; the RUT registration process can be carried out online (through the tax authority's online platform) or in person at the tax authority offices

Deregistration. When a taxable person ceases the economic activity for which it was registered, it should deregister in the RUT within the next month following such termination of taxable activities. A certificate signed by the tax auditor or public accountant demonstrating the absence of activities subject to VAT and the absence of inventory pending sale is required.

Changes to VAT registration details. Taxable persons must report any change regarding their general and formal information, otherwise they may be charged penalties.

On a general basis, RUT updates can be made electronically; nevertheless, a few special or specific updates (i.e., a change in VAT responsibility) must be made at the tax authority offices.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are subject to VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 19%
- Reduced rate: 5%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate (e.g., exemption) or exclusion.

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are subject to VAT at the zero rate. Purchasers of exempt supplies may receive an input credit for the VAT they paid on inputs, generating VAT balances in their favor that can be requested as refund.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0% (e.g., exempt supplies)

- Exports of movable tangible goods if the exporter is registered with the National Tax Registry (i.e., the RUT), has received a taxable person identification number and can, at the request of tax authorities, provide proof of agreements to provide exports, such as contracts, offers or purchase orders. It also includes sales to international trading companies, which are considered as an export activity.
- Services rendered exclusively in Colombia and used exclusively abroad by companies or individuals who are not engaged in business in Colombia. (Companies not engaged in business in Colombia include companies that are direct beneficiaries of the services, the VAT exemption does not extend to related parties such as a subsidiary, branch, affiliate, representative office or home office in Colombia.)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%

- Toasted coffee
- Wheat
- Sugar cane
- Cotton seeds
- Soy
- Rice
- Prepaid health services
- Health insurance
- Storage of agricultural products

The term "excluded supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services (e.g., excluded supplies)

- Interest and financial income from credit operations
- Education services provided by preschool, primary, middle and intermediate, higher and special or non-formal education establishments recognized as such by the national government
- Energy and public energy services based on gas or other inputs
- Water for the provision of public water supply and sewerage services, public water supply and sewerage services, public sanitation services and public garbage collection services
- Import of goods subject to postal traffic, express shipments or fast delivery shipments whose value does not exceed USD200
- Sale of tickets related to cultural events, such as cinema and concerts (note, this excludes the sale of tickets related with animal spectacles such as dog races and bullfights, which is taxable at the standard rate, as per the Law 2277 of 2022)

Note that the VAT exclusion for the import of goods subject to postal traffic, express shipments or fast delivery shipments whose value does not exceed USD200 is limited, and therefore will only be applicable if the import of goods is made from countries with which Colombia has executed a free trade agreement in which it is specified that VAT is not levied. Compliance with the requirements and conditions established in each free trade agreement entered with Colombia must be proved to qualify for the benefit.

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Colombia.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of sale" or "tax point."

For a sale of goods, the tax point is the earlier of the following events:
- The issuance of the invoice or the delivery of the goods
- Withdrawal of movable goods by the taxable person for its own use or to form part of its fixed assets

For a supply of services, the tax point is the earliest of the following events:
- The issuance of the invoice or equivalent document
- Termination of the provision of the service
- Payment or accrual, whichever occurs first

Deposits and prepayments. In Colombia, there is no requirement to account for VAT on deposits. For prepayments, there is no special time of supply rule in Colombia. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Continuous supplies of services. There are no special time of supply rules in Colombia for continuous supplies of services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above). So, if there is a continuous service being provided, the VAT will be due as the service is being rendered.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There is no special time of supply rule in Colombia for the supply of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above), where for the sale of goods, VAT is due when the seller issues the invoice or when the property over the asset is transferred, whichever occurs first.

Reverse-charge services. In Colombia, the reverse-charge mechanism only applies when Colombian VAT taxable persons belonging to the common VAT regime acquire services from foreign entities/individuals without domicile in Colombia and those services are subject to VAT in Colombia (i.e., services rendered from abroad for the benefit of a Colombian resident). No reverse charge is applicable when goods are acquired to be imported into Colombian territory.

The reverse charge is self-assessed and carried out by the customer. The VAT collected through the reverse-charge mechanism is included by the customer in its withholding tax return of the period in which the accrual is made. This VAT does not impact the amount payable to the supplier. The VAT included in the withholding tax return as a VAT reverse charge may be recovered by the Colombian taxable person/customer as a creditable input tax, subject to the normal recovery rules.

Leased assets. For ordinary leasing agreements (i.e., a pure rental agreement, such that it is not agreed to transfer the property of the goods at the end of the contract) VAT is due each time the lessor charges the lease fee to the lessee or in the absence of an invoice, at the time in which the payment is demanded according to the respective terms of the agreement. If at the end of the agreement, the asset is sold to the lessor, this transaction is deemed to be a different and separate transaction from the lease operation. In fact, in this case the transaction would correspond to a sale that would not be subject to VAT provided that the asset sold to the lessee is a fixed asset for the lessor; if the asset sold is deemed as an inventory for the lessor, the sale would be subject to VAT.

Financial leasing. Financial leasing is a financed acquisition of an asset and may have one or more of the following characteristics:
- At the end of the agreement, there is a transfer of property of the asset to the lessee.
- The lessee has a purchase option with regard to the asset, at a significantly lower price.
- The lease covers almost all the lifespan of the asset.

- At the beginning of the lease, the minimum payments are at least equivalent to the commercial value of the asset.
- Leased assets are of such a specialized nature that only the lessee can use them without making significant modifications to them.

Where the property over the assets is transferred to the lessee, this does not trigger VAT as it is considered an excluded transaction.

International leasing. International leasing can be used to finance long-term temporary importation of capital goods, which may remain in the national customs territory for more than five years. In addition, the DIAN may allow long-term temporary imports of accessories and spare parts that do not arrive as part of the same shipment if they are imported within the five-year term. Custom duties (tariffs and VAT) are paid biannually. The maximum term for deferment is five years, even though the goods may remain for a longer period in Colombia. When the agreement's duration exceeds five years, with the last payment corresponding to such period, all customs duties that have not been paid must be paid.

This alternative can be complemented with a provision that allows VAT-free treatment of temporary imports of equipment and machinery, considered as heavy machinery for basic industries in Colombia.

Imported goods. For the importation of goods, the tax point is when the goods are "nationalized," that is, when the goods have cleared all customs formalities for importation. VAT is due at the time of the importation. Companies that the DIAN recognizes as "high-volume exporters" (this qualification will be replaced by the Authorized Economic Operators, Operadores Económicos Autorizados [OEAs]) are entitled to enjoy tax and administrative benefits such as:

- No VAT imposed for regular imports of industrial machinery that is not produced in the country and is used to transform raw materials.
- Possibility of obtaining authorization from the DIAN to operate an industrial processing warehouse that allows the import of supplies and raw materials with suspension of customs duties and of VAT, as long as the supplies and materials are used in the production of export products.

Colombia has special importation-exportation programs (Plan Vallejo), that allow temporary importation of such supplies as capital goods, raw materials, inputs and parts with significant customs and tax benefits, subject to compliance with the requirement that the imports are used to manufacture and export finished goods or services.

Plan Vallejo is applicable to the imports and exports of companies of which the main activity consists of one of the following:

- Raw materials
- Services export, such as:
  - Services of transmission, distribution and commercialization of electric energy
  - Special design services, value added telecommunications and software exports

Free trade zones. A free trade zone (FTZ) is a territorial area where industrial and commercial activities are developed under a special customs, tax and foreign trade regime. Merchandise that enters a free trade zone is considered to be outside Colombian territory for customs purposes only. The objective of these zones is to promote new jobs, new investment in fixed real assets and the creation of scale economies.

The main benefits of operating under a free trade zone are:

- No customs duties or VAT on the capital goods, equipment and machinery that enters into the FTZ for as long as these goods stay in the FTZ.
- VAT exemption on purchases of movable tangible goods, as long as these are effectively exported or transformed.

- VAT exemption for local sales when the purchaser is an industrial user of a FTZ and the goods (e.g., raw materials, spare parts, semifinished goods) will be used in compliance with FTZ rules and regulations.
- The intermediary production services that these companies may provide are equally exempt from VAT, as long as the final product is effectively exported.
- Exemption from withholding tax in the payment or credit to account for the acquisition of goods, destined to be exported, provided a certificate of purchase is issued to the seller in which a declaration is made regarding the future export of the product.
- If the sale of products is to the rest of the Colombian territory, the taxable basis includes foreign goods and local goods acquired for such finished goods plus all national components (i.e., services and goods).

International trade companies. International trade companies (ITCs) are intended to trade and sell Colombian products abroad. These products are purchased in the domestic market or may be manufactured by partners of an ITC. These companies must be registered before the DIAN.

The most important benefits of these companies are:
- Exemption from VAT on purchases of movable tangible goods, as long as these are effectively exported or transformed.
- The intermediary production services that these companies may provide are equally exempt from VAT, as long as the final product is effectively exported.
- Exemption from withholding tax in the payment or credit to account for the acquisition of goods, destined to be exported, provided a certificate of purchase is issued to the seller in which a declaration is made regarding the future export of the product.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may treat as creditable (i.e., credit) VAT paid on purchases (i.e., input tax) from VAT charged on sales (i.e., output tax) if the input tax related to certain types of expenditure.

Input tax paid on the acquisition of movable tangible goods and on services supplied to a taxable person, or VAT paid on imports of movable goods, may be claimed as creditable (i.e., credit) up to a limit determined by applying the rate of VAT charged on the supply of the goods or services provided by the taxable person to the input tax incurred.

Any excess input tax paid (i.e., the amount of input tax exceeding the limit determined by applying the VAT rate charged on the supply of goods and services) may be requested as a refund but only after the income tax return for the given period has been filed and if such balance in favor corresponds to the authorized refundable VAT (i.e., exempted activities or VAT derived from withholding applied to the taxable person; as described below).

In addition, for transactions with foreign suppliers, the reverse-charge (i.e., self-assessment) mechanism must be used, and the VAT withheld may be treated as input tax in accordance with the general rules and limitations if the taxable person can prove to the tax authorities that the tax has been withheld. Alternatively, the VAT withheld can be treated as a higher cost or expense if the rules to claim the input tax as a credit are not met.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Colombia is two years. Requests for balances in favor must be filed no later than two years from the due date to file the corresponding VAT return.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for making taxable supplies or that are not used for business purposes (e.g., goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). If expenditure relates to both business and nonbusiness activities, only the portion related to the business may be recovered. In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Construction services, the accrual of the tax is recognized on the income obtained by the builder. For construction services, a special taxable base is required where VAT is levied only on the income corresponding to the fees obtained by the builder or in the event that no agreement is reached on the utility of the latter. In this sense implicitly, the utility must be reported and/or known by the contracting party. In the same sense, only the VAT paid on expenses directly related to the fees received or the profit obtained is deductible. Consequently, the possibility of recovering the VAT paid by the builder is limited, so most of the VAT paid will constitute a greater value of the work.
- Input tax paid associated with excluded goods or services will be considered as a higher cost of such services/goods and will not be creditable for VAT purposes.
- Input tax associated with the acquisition of fixed assets; however, there are special rules that apply for input tax incurred on capital goods. See the Capital goods subsection below.

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- In general terms, input tax paid associated with exempt and taxable activities will be considered as creditable for VAT purposes as long as the payments constitute a deductible cost or expense for corporate income tax purposes.

Partial exemption. If a taxable person makes both taxable and excluded transactions, it may not deduct the input tax incurred in full. It may deduct only the amount of input tax related to the goods and services used in taxable transactions, and not the input tax that relates to excluded transactions. Where input tax is incurred that relates to both taxable and excluded supplies, the business must carry out a proportionality calculation to determine the amount of input tax recoverable. This is referred to as "partial exemption." The apportionment may be calculated based on the value of taxable transactions carried out compared with the total turnover.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Colombia. Special methods are not allowed in Colombia.

Capital goods. The general rule is that the VAT paid on the acquisition, construction or import of fixed asset must be carried as a higher value of the asset, i.e., it must be part of the tax cost of the fixed asset. However, the Colombian tax legislation allows another alternative, in which the taxable person may take the VAT paid on the acquisition of real productive fixed assets as an income tax deduction.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a taxable period exceeds the amount of output tax payable, the taxable person earns an input tax credit. The credit may be requested in a refund on a bimonthly basis if either of the following applies:

- The taxable person is an exporter of goods or services and is duly registered as an exporter.
- The taxable person supplies zero-rated (0% rate) goods or has been subject to VAT withholding and the total balance arises from the withholdings.

In addition, a refund of VAT paid on the acquisition of materials used to construct "housing of social interest" may be requested if the construction plans were approved by the Colombian government.

If a VAT balance in favor of the taxable person exists because of VAT rate differences, the balance may be carried forward, offset or refunded under certain conditions (see Section 481 of the Colombian Tax Code). The balance in favor must originate from the previous taxable period and will be determined according to a proportionality mechanism.

Pre-registration costs. VAT invoiced for pre-registration supplies can be deducted when the costs directly relate to subsequent taxable business activities.

Bad debts. If a customer is unable to pay a supplier for supplies on which the supplier has paid VAT, the supplier can claim bad debt relief, but the supplier must have exhausted all customary procedures for collecting the debt.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Colombia.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Colombia is not recoverable. However, members of accredited diplomatic missions and members of the United Nations may claim a refund of VAT paid.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports. An electronic invoice or authorized equivalent document is necessary to support a claim for input tax credit.

Credit notes. Credit notes should be issued when returns or cancellations are made, as long as the transaction has not been accepted by the acquirer. The canceled invoice numbers cannot be reused and a record of the canceled invoices must be kept. Credit notes must correspond to a consecutive numbering system and must contain at least the number and date of the invoice to which they refer, name or business name and NIT of the acquirer, the date of the note, number of units, description, VAT (where applicable), unit value and total value. This only affects the generated VAT; scenarios such as discounts do not apply.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Colombia, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in Colombia.

The electronic invoicing system is mandatory for the purchase and sale of goods and services and other operations such as payroll payments, exports, imports and payments in favor of those who are not responsible for the VAT.

The following taxable persons are not required to issue electronic invoicing in their transactions:
- Banks, financial corporations and financing companies
- Credit unions, higher-level cooperative organizations, cooperative support institutions, multiactive and integral cooperatives, and employee funds, in relation to their financial operations
- Individuals considered as VAT non-responsible, provided they meet all the conditions
- Companies incorporated as legal or individuals that provide urban or metropolitan public passenger transportation, in relation to these activities
- Individuals bound by a labor or legal and regulatory relationship, and pensioners in relation to the income derived from these activities
- Individuals who solely sell excluded goods or provide services not subject to VAT and who received total gross income from these activities in the previous year or the current year amounting to less than approx. USD33,700 (gross income does not include income derived from a labor or legal and regulatory relationship, pensions or occasional gains)
- Service providers from abroad without tax residence in Colombia for the provision of electronic or digital services
- Community Action Boards (Juntas de Acción Comunal), provided they do not require requesting refund and/or offset of favorable balances in VAT

At the time of preparing this chapter, a regulation has been proposed to create an electronic document equivalent to an electronic invoice, which will be applicable to some of the taxable persons listed above. Currently there are 12 equivalent documents to the electronic invoice. The proposed regulation seeks to regulate the electronic equivalent document for an electronic invoice. No further details have been released.

All electronic invoices for tax recognition purposes must be validated prior to their issuance by the tax authority or an authorized technological supplier. As a consequence, the invoice shall be deemed to have been issued only when it has been validated and delivered to the acquirer. In cases where prior validation of the electronic invoice cannot be carried out, for reasons attributable to the tax authority or to an authorized supplier, the party obliged to invoice is entitled to deliver the electronic invoice to the acquirer without prior validation.

In all cases, the responsibility for the delivery of the electronic invoice, for its validation and the delivery to the purchaser once validated, corresponds to the party obliged to invoice.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Colombia. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Colombia. Special rules apply where the tax authority can require an invoice from a business for the withdrawal of stocks for self-consumption. In addition, with implementation of the electronic invoice, it is required to invoice the payroll department.

Proof of exports. VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods. Exports are exempt from VAT. However, to qualify as VAT free, exports must be supported by customs documents that prove that the goods have actually left Colombia. The exporter must file a return to the tax authorities by filling out a Declaración de Exportación (DEX) and be registered as an exporter with the Registro Único Tributario (RUT). In Colombia, sales of goods required for the normal development of the businesses of operators or industrial users located in free-trade zones and sales to International Commercialization Companies are considered to be exports if the goods are effectively supplied to the purchaser. Consequently, these transactions are also exempt from VAT.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices may be issued in a foreign currency but must be paid in the domestic currency, which is the Colombian peso (COP), unless the customer is a foreign entity. When transactions take place locally, the VAT amount must be converted to COP using the market exchange rate on the date of the transaction. The Colombian Central Bank manages the exchange system. Colombian tax legislation establishes that the electronic sales invoice must expressly indicate the exchange rate on the day of issuance of the invoice to identify the corresponding value in COPs (in accordance with Annex 1.8 of Electronic Invoicing, the exchange rate must be included).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. In Colombia there are no special VAT invoicing rules for supplies made by taxable persons to private consumers. Full VAT invoices must always be issued for all taxable supplies.

Records. In Colombia, examples of records that must be held for VAT purposes include accounting books, together with the internal and external receipts that led to the accounting records, in such a way that it is possible to verify the accuracy of the assets, liabilities, equity, revenues, costs, deductions, exempt income, credits, taxes and withholdings recorded therein. This includes specific information and evidence contemplated in the regulations in force, which entitle or allow taxable persons to verify their income, costs, deductions, tax credits, exemptions and other tax benefits, as well as withholdings and other factors necessary to correctly determine applicable taxable base and liquidate the corresponding tax.

In Colombia, VAT books and records can be held outside the country. However, if such records are requested by the tax administration, they must be readily available within the timeframe provided by the tax authorities and in Spanish from the main domicile of the taxable person.

Record retention period. According to the current legislation there is an obligation to preserve information and evidence, for purposes of auditing of the taxes administered by the DIAN, individuals or entities, taxable persons or nontaxable persons, must keep for a minimum period of five years, counted from 1 January of the year following its preparation, issuance or receipt, information and evidence, of the tax returns filed and the receipts corresponding to payments, which must be made available to the tax administration, when required. Finally, it is important to consider that the VAT returns statute of limitations period is three years from the filing of the income tax return for the year in which the VAT is filed.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Colombia. Same retention period mentioned above would apply for electronic invoices.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns are filed bimonthly during March, May, July, September, November and January by large taxable persons, which are those whose gross revenues are equal to or higher than (92,000) UVT (tax value unit or unidad de valor tributario), or approx. USD886,800. Taxable persons with gross revenues lower than (92,000) UVT file VAT returns every four months during May, September and January. For those that are considered as exporters of goods the periodicity to file returns is bimonthly.

Periodic payments. Payments must be made directly using the portal of the tax authority to submit the returns and using the financial system considering the due date set by the government each year. At the time of preparing this chapter, the 2024 calendar for filing deadlines in Colombia had not been released by the tax authorities.

Liabilities must be paid in COPs using the receipts established on the website of the tax authority.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Colombia for all taxable persons. All returns must be filed electronically. Provided the taxable person has a digital signature; VAT returns must be filed electronically at www.dian.gov.co. When the taxable person is obliged to have a statutory auditor, the return must be signed also by this auditor.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Colombia.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Colombia.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Colombia.

Supplementary filings. Consumption tax return. A consumption tax applies to certain goods and services, including but not limited to restaurant services (including catering services), mobile phone services, the sale or import of certain vehicles, the sale of jewelry, the sale of plastic bags and the sale of medicinal cannabis.

The consumption tax rates are as follows:
- Certain vehicles based on their free on board (FOB) value: 8%
- Restaurant services: 8%
- Mobile phone services: 4%
- Medicinal cannabis: 16%
- Plastic bag consumption: COP60 per bag in 2023
- Luxury vehicles, chassis, hot air balloons and airships: 16%

The tax is levied at the date and time the invoice is issued to the final consumer or upon delivery of the goods or services to the final consumer.

Returns for the consumption tax are filed quarterly, starting on the date when taxable activities commenced and ending at the end of the calendar quarter.

Consumption tax paid does not generate input tax (i.e., VAT credit) but may be treated as a deduction for income tax purposes, except in the case of plastic bags.

Correcting errors in previous returns. When a taxable person has filed tax returns with inaccurate information or delay, it has the obligation to amend them and pay an amendment penalty. The opportunity for the taxable person to amend its own tax return is either by initiative or requirement from the tax administration. If the taxable person decides not to amend its tax returns, the tax authority can proceed to establish a penalty for inaccuracy. Colombian legislation establishes that in the specific scenario in which the taxable person decides to amend its return, the penalty would be paid regarding the higher payable tax or the lower balance in favor in the amendment made.

Digital tax administration. Magnetic media. Known in Colombia as "magnetic media," it is an obligation for individuals and legal entities to file a report before the tax authority regarding all fiscal and commercial relations with third parties. For VAT purposes, any individuals, legal entities, public and private entities and others obliged to carry out a withholding tax must comply with this obligation. In accordance with the Colombian Tax Code, the DIAN has the authority to request tax information. The Tax Code empowers the DIAN to request from individuals or entities, taxable persons and nontaxable persons, information to carry out studies and cross-checks necessary for the proper auditing and control of taxes, as well as to comply with other functions within its competence, including those related to compliance with obligations and commitments enshrined in the tax conventions and treaties signed by Colombia.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A penalty corresponding to one (1) tax unit (i.e., UVT), which in 2023 is COP42,412 is levied for each day of late registration.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The penalty for late filing and payment applies for each calendar month (or fraction of a month) of delay. It equals 5% of the total tax due or withheld in the taxable period, up to a maximum of 100% of the tax.

If the taxable person is not required to pay VAT, the penalty for each month of delay (or fraction of a month) equals 0.5% of the gross income received by the taxable person, up to a maximum of 5% of such income, or twice the balance in favor of the taxable person in the return period (if applicable) or 2,500 UVT if there is no balance in favor. If the taxable person does not perceive any income during the taxable period, the penalty per month (or fraction of a month) equals 1% of net equity for the preceding year, without exceeding 10% of the taxable person's net equity for the preceding year, or twice the balance in favor (if any) or 2,500 UVT if there is no balance in favor.

The taxable person must include the appropriate amount of penalty in a tax return that is filed late.

The interest rate charged on late payments of VAT is determined every month by a national decree. The current rate established by the government for October 2023 is 37.80% annually. At any time, it is necessary to review and confirm the interest rate published.

Penalties for failure to file consumption tax returns are calculated in the same manner as for VAT.

Penalties for errors. There are two specific rates to calculate the penalty for taxable persons that fail to amend errors in their previously filed returns Each one is linked to a specific scenario. The first one is a 10% rate applicable only when the taxable person amends its errors prior to an official act from the tax authority or before it orders a tax inspection. The second scenario is a 20% rate if the amendment is made after the official act has been notified or a tax inspection has been made. If the tax authority must take further action, the taxable person would have to pay a penalty for inaccuracy, which could amount to a 200% rate.

In accordance with Colombian legislation, any mistake on the filing of magnetic media has sanctions that vary from 0.5% to 1% (as long as the penalty doesn't exceed 7,500 UVT) of the values that were incorrectly reported to the tax authorities. On the one hand, the foregoing fine shall be reduced to 10%, 50% or 70% of the amount of the penalty if the omission is corrected before a statutory notice is issued by the tax authority, before the notification of the penalty or if the omission is corrected within the two months following the date of notification of the penalty, respectively.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authority of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in penalties. Also, if the taxable person incurs on a late registry scenario or a does not update the RUT within the terms established by tax authorities, a penalty corresponding to one (1) tax unit (i.e., UVT) (which in 2023 is COP42,412) is applied for each day in which the obligation has not been carried out. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

In certain scenarios, a penalty may be gradually reduced by the tax authorities if the taxable person can conclude and demonstrate that the same misconduct has not been repeated, either in the last one or two years.

Penalties for fraud. The Criminal Code includes penalties for two specific conducts:

- Assets omission or inclusion of nonexistent liabilities: The omission of assets, the filing of a lower value or the filing of nonexistent liabilities in tax returns for an amount equal to or greater than 1,000 monthly minimum wages will be punished with 48 to 108 months of imprisonment. Assets of lower value will be submitted for analysis under the rule of equity appraisal.
- Tax evasion or avoidance: Those who do not file, exclude income, include nonexistent expenses, claim invalid tax credits, withholdings or improper advance payments resulting in a lower amount to be paid or a higher tax credit balance in tax returns equal to or higher than 100 monthly minimum wages and lower than 2,500 will be punished from 36 to 60 months of imprisonment.

Personal liability for company officers. When there are debts of a tax nature, the responsibility of the shareholders will be applicable with regard to taxes, updates and interest, limited exclusively to their participation in the share capital and depending on the time during which they have held their participation.

As a general rule, in companies by shares, there is no unlimited responsibility of the shareholders. Finally, when there are debts of a tax nature, the responsibility of the shareholders will be applicable with regard to taxes, updates and interest, limited exclusively to their participation in the share capital and depending on the time during which they have held their participation.

The penalties that can be imposed are the ones outlined above.

The Colombian Commercial Code establishes a subjective liability for legal representatives or company directors through which they are jointly and severally liable for damages caused to the company, partners or third (i.e., the tax authority) parties with intent or negligence.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Colombia is three or five years. This depends on the conditions under which the income tax return is filed for the taxable year to which the VAT return corresponds. However, as a general rule, income and VAT, tax returns and their amendments have a statute of limitation of three years, which is counted from the filing due date of the corresponding taxable period, if the tax authority has not issued any request for information over the returns that are subject to questioning. In addition, when returns have been filed in an untimely manner, the three years shall be counted from the date in which the tax return was filed.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies in the Republic of the Congo (RoC or Congo) to transactions carried out for consideration by natural or legal persons in the framework of an economic activity. Such transactions are as follows:

- Supply of goods and tangible assets to third parties
- Services provided to third parties
- Self-supply of goods
- Self-provision of services
- Supply of secondhand goods by professionals
- Transfer of taxable assets (i.e., those not included in the list of exempt goods referred to in Article 241 of the Customs Code, as amended by Acts n°2/92-UDEAC-556-CD-SE1 of 30 April 1992 and 2/98-UDEAC-1508-CD-61 of 21 July 1998)
- Imports of goods and services
- Export of goods and services
- Rental income of undeveloped land and bare premises by real estate professionals
- Subsidies of a commercial nature of any kind received by taxable persons in respect of its taxable activity
- Loan remissions and debt waivers
- The refining, distribution and release for consumption of petroleum products
- Reimbursements of expenses incurred on behalf of others other than those re-invoiced on a free-of-charge basis

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In the Congo, services provided by non-established businesses are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions. The related services may be tangible or intangible and executed inside the jurisdiction from abroad and being subject to VAT, provided that the customer is based in Congo.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In the Congo, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT as far as it is subject to a special taxation. In the Congo, the TOGC is specifically subject to registration duties, hence the non-application of VAT.

Transactions between related parties. In the Congo, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties.

C. Who is liable

Natural or legal persons, including public authorities and bodies governed by public law, are treated as VAT taxable persons in the Congo.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in the Congo does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in the Congo does not contain any provision for voluntary registration, nor special VAT registration rules for small businesses.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in the Congo.

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in the Congo where it has a fixed place of business through which the company carries out all or part of its activity. The permanent establishment rules applicable in terms of direct taxation do not apply for VAT.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no permanent establishment in the territory of the Congo. Non-established businesses must designate a solvent accredited resident representative. The representative must be a taxable person in the Congo. The resident representative is liable to declare and pay the VAT on behalf of the non-established business (it is jointly and severable with the non-established business). If no tax representative is nominated, the VAT due should be assessed and paid by the purchaser (if the purchaser is a taxable person for VAT purposes).

Tax representatives. Non-established businesses are required to appoint a representative resident in the Congo. The non-established business may appoint only one representative for all its operations in the Congo. In the absence of a representative, the tax and the penalties relating to it are payable by the resident beneficiary of services on behalf of the non-established business.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable whenever a non-established business fails to nominate a VAT representative. In such a case, the local taxable person (i.e., the customer) will be liable for VAT on the supply made by the non-established business. As part of the VAT reverse-charge mechanism, the VAT must be declared as output and input tax in the same tax return. Therefore, there will be no cash impact for the customer, to the extent there is a full right of deduction.

Any VAT paid for and on behalf of the non-established business by the Congolese taxable person is simultaneously deductible by the latter (i.e., the customer).

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in the Congo.

Digital economy. No special rules exist for digital economy supplies. Nonresidents that provide electronically supplied services to Congolese residents do not need to register for VAT in the Congo. Also, there are no special VAT rules for e-commerce for imported goods.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in the Congo.

Registration procedures. There is no VAT registration threshold in the Congo. The VAT number is the same as the Tax ID number. In other words, VAT registration is mandatory for any legal or natural person irrespective of the type of activity carried out or the amount of turnover generated by such activities. VAT registration is also mandatory for those who are not allowed to invoice with VAT.

Taxable persons must apply for VAT registration within the 15 days following the issuance of their trade register (i.e., those entities incorporated in the Congo). The VAT registration application must be submitted to the Center for Companies Formalities. For businesses, the application must include a statement of existence, a trade register and articles of incorporation. For individuals, they may send their application to any homeland tax unit, with their ID card and two small ID pictures.

The registration procedure can only be done on paper. There is no fee payable to apply for VAT. The application process generally takes three to six months. Upon approval, the VAT number issued is equivalent to the tax ID number. This is also referred to as the unique identification number, numéro d'identification unique (NIU). The VAT number is 17 characters as follows:

- One letter attributed as per the nature of the beneficiary (M for legal persons, P for individuals, E for self-businesses)
- Four figures representing the year of issuance
- Two figures accounting for the location of issuance
- Seven figures following the sequential order or chronology
- Two figures constituting the key to access the personal information recorded into the government network

Deregistration. Deregistration from VAT in the Congo is mandatory for any taxable person ceasing to trade in the Congo. For that purpose, the said taxable person should notify the tax authority (Direction Générale des Impôts et des Domaines [DGID]) and obtain a tax clearance and a fiscal good conduct certificate. However, before issuing the tax clearance, the DGID needs to ensure that the taxable person is debt free from the DGID. Thus, the taxable person's tax current account balance should be zero, i.e., nothing to pay to the DGID. In most of the cases, the request for VAT deregistration (or acknowledgement of the winding-up of the company) triggers a full tax audit.

Changes to VAT registration details. Taxable persons must notify the DGID concerning any change to its VAT registration details, such as address, name and business activities. This is to ensure that the DGID has updated files for each taxable person registered. This obligation must be fulfilled within the 15 days following the said change.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 18% (effective rate 18.9% as surtax at 5% applies at the same time as VAT and is not deductible)
- Reduced rate: 5%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for the zero-rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%
- Exportation of goods and services
- Supply of local timber
- International transportations (e.g., international shipping and airline transport, including sea and airline freight, but also passenger transportation)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%
- Diesel and lubricants imported from Cameroon by forestry companies
- Supply of local cement
- Everyday consumer goods (sugar, tomatoes, soap, oil, etc.)
- Butane gas conditioned in Congo

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services
- Supply of products arising from extractive activities
- Banking and insurance operations

- Certain necessity goods (pharmaceutical products, rice, salt, bread, meat and poultry, corrective glasses, schoolbooks, fertilizers, etc.)
- Transfer/sale of a business

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in the Congo.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic time of supply is when the goods are delivered or when the services are performed. The invoice for the transaction must be issued at the time of supply.

Deposits and prepayments. For deposits and prepayments, the VAT becomes due at the time payment is received. Deposits or prepayments that are refundable are outside the scope of VAT.

If the supply does not take place because of the cancellation or waiver of the operation, VAT may be recovered via a new invoice canceling and replacing the initial invoice (i.e., the supplier must issue a credit note to the customer).

Continuous supplies of services. For continuous supplies of services, the VAT becomes due at the time payment is received. For continuous supplies of goods, the time of supply is when the goods are delivered.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. For the supply of goods sent on approval for sale or return, the VAT is due when the goods are delivered. If the goods are returned to the seller, VAT may be recovered through a compensation made on further supplies, provided that a new invoice canceling and replacing the initial invoice is sent to the customer.

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for reverse-charge services received by a Congolese taxable person is the date of receipt of the invoice sent by the non-established business.

Leased assets. The time of supply for leased assets is the time of possession by the lessee.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is the time they are released for consumption.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

Input tax is deductible for taxable persons duly registered as liable to VAT, provided that the transaction is made for the purposes of its business activities. Input tax recovery is only allowed on services and goods that are necessary and allocated to operations carried out in the framework of the business.

To be deductible, VAT must appear on the invoice issued by the registered supplier and report its NIU and the VAT amount.

The time limit for recovering input tax is until the end of the following year from the time the transaction takes place. For example, if input tax is incurred 31 October 2023, the taxable person would have until 31 December 2024 to recover it.

Nondeductible input tax. As a rule, input tax is not deductible if the expenses made by the taxable person are not related to its economic activity, and in particular if costs are incurred for personal/domestic needs of the managers and employees. Above all, if both the NIU of the supplier and VAT amount is not included in the invoice, VAT thereof cannot be deductible in any cases.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Gifts or and goods sold at under market-value (low) prices
- Accommodation and related restoration expenses
- VAT paid with cash above XAF500,000 (the domestic currency in the Congo is the Central African CFA Franc [XAF])

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to taxable business use)

- Purchase of goods
- Services payments
- VAT paid for non-established business subjected to withholding tax

Partial exemption. Where a taxable person makes both taxable and exempt supplies, the input tax incurred is recoverable under a pro rata, which means that it cannot recover the input tax in full. This pro rata is calculated as per a formula in which taxable operations are added to exports plus special exempted operations and divided by the total turnover.

During the year, the taxable person may set up a temporary pro rata for the purposes of the monthly tax filings. However, it is required to make the calculation of the final pro rata by April of the following year at the latest to regularize the input tax deductible.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in the Congo. Special methods are not allowed in the Congo.

Capital goods. The VAT on acquisition of capital goods for the business purpose is deductible. There are no special time limits or rules for the recovery of input tax incurred on capital goods.

Refunds. In the Congo, the concept of the deduction is different from the refund. VAT is deductible for all taxable persons as outlined earlier, but the actual reimbursement of VAT (i.e., in cash or by compensation) is restricted to certain taxable persons. It is intended that when some specific activities cannot generate sufficient output tax to enable the ordinary mechanism of deduction to be fully operational, only the reimbursement of VAT can ensure the neutral effect of this tax for the concerned taxable persons; hence the typology foreseen by the law.

Only four categories of taxable persons are eligible for VAT refunds:

- Exporters
- Industrialists who have made investments following an establishment agreement
- Taxable persons engaged in the winding up process
- Diplomatic agents, subject to reciprocity and as per the ratio defined jointly by the Minister of Finances and of Foreign Affairs

The request for refund gives rise to an audit conducted by the DGID. If the VAT credit is recognized partially or totally, the taxable person receives either an authorization to offset the amount with its future tax liabilities or a reimbursement by cheque or transfers. In all cases, before the reimbursement of the VAT credit, the Public Treasury reviews the taxable person's VAT position, and if there is any outstanding debt with the State, the taxable person will only receive a net amount (i.e., the VAT credit amount minus the debts outstanding).

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in the Congo is not recoverable.

Bad debts. For the write off of bad debts or of accounts receivable (AR) which are unpaid, to recover the output tax accounted for on such supplies, the initial invoice must be replaced by a duplicate indicating the outstanding gross amount as well as the VAT amount. The "duplicate" is the same invoice, but the taxable person must insert some specific information thereon, notably: Invoice remained unpaid for the gross amount of ... XAF and for the amount of ... XAF corresponding to the VAT, which is no longer deductible.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in the Congo.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in the Congo is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A VAT invoice must be issued for each transaction made and include all the mandatory information, including the amount excluding VAT, the amount of VAT and the total including VAT. The VAT invoice must be issued at the time of supply.

Credit notes. For canceled transactions, the related invoice and VAT should be canceled. Therefore, a credit note should be raised to cancel the original invoice. The recovery of the VAT to be paid to the supplier is subordinated by the DGID and the sending to the customer of a new invoice or credit note canceling or replacing the original invoice. Thus, the original invoice must be crossed out and kept in the chronological order.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is not allowed in the Congo.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For business-to-business (B2B), business-to-consumer (B2C) and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is not allowed in the Congo.

At the time of preparing this chapter, there is currently a government project on electronic invoicing. It is intended that taxable persons will be supplied with equipment to issue electronic invoices by the governmental body in charge of the regulation and monitoring of electronic communications within the Congo. This platform will be opened and accessible to the DGID so they will be able to directly check the invoicing flows generated by the taxable persons to claim for taxes. It is expected that an electronic invoicing system will be effective in a few months. No further developments have been announced.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in the Congo. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in the Congo. It is only allowed for the self-supply of goods or self-provision of services. In these cases, the VAT is due: at first use, for the self-supply of goods and at the date of the execution of services for the self-provision of services.

Proof of exports. VAT for exported goods is zero-rated. To obtain the zero rating, copies of the export declarations certified by the customs authorities (i.e., customs declaration) must be provided.

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices cannot be issued in a foreign currency in the Congo. All invoices must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Central African CFA Franc (XAF).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in the Congo. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In the Congo, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include tax invoices, nominal/general ledger, trial balance, etc. In the Congo, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. All invoices or equivalent documents must be kept, according to the legislation in place, for 10 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in the Congo. Records can be kept manually or electronically.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The VAT return must be filed with the DGID on a monthly basis, by the 20th of the following month. The VAT return must be submitted with the proof of payment of the VAT. Without proof of payment, the DGID will not receive the VAT return (unless it is a nil VAT return). In the case of a VAT refund, the refund will be reported as a VAT credit in the return for the next month.

Periodic payments. The VAT is paid no later than the 20th of the month following the delivery of the goods (invoice) for the goods and payment received for the services. Any VAT due can be paid to the DGID by bank transfer or cheque.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in the Congo, but not mandatory. VAT returns can be filed electronically to the DGID through the official national tax portal, the E-Tax system, (https://impots.gouv.cg/portail-client-web/), by using a special form prepared by the DGID. Taxable persons can register with the E-Tax system once they receive a digital code from the DGID to file their declarations through this network. The document to be filled out is called the general form for remittance and is comprised of various items per taxes. However, the payment of any VAT due is not made electronically but manually at the public treasury desks based on the computational statement issued by the E-Tax system.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in the Congo.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in the Congo.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in the Congo.

Supplementary filings. In the Congo alongside the monthly VAT return, a detailed statement of deductions and an extract from the balance of each VAT account are required to also be filed.

Correcting errors in previous returns. To correct any errors or omissions from prior periodic filings, the taxable person can correct these in a new return, to be filed with the DGID. The revised returns must be filed during the next tax due date, thereby correcting the errors in the previous returns. Also, an explanatory letter outlining the errors or omissions must be sent to DGID to explain the revised returns.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in the Congo.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Where a taxable person fails to register for VAT on time, input tax cannot be recovered for any tax incurred until it registers. It will also be fined a penalty of XAF200,000.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The absence or late filing of VAT returns is subject to the following:
- Late payment interest of 5% per month based on the amount due but capped at 50%
- Penalty of 100% when it is done willingly

Penalties for errors. Any error found in a taxable person's tax documentation can lead to a penalty of 50% based on the tax due and 100% when it is done willingly.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authority of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Any fraudulent activity by a taxable person in relation to VAT, such as knowingly making a false statement or omission in a return or other document, is sanctioned with the penalty of 100% based on the tax due and 200% in case the bad faith is evidenced.

Personal liability for company officers. Company directors can be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting. The penalties range from XAF250,000 to XAF5 million and an imprisonment from two to five years may also be applied.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in the Congo is four years. The time limit that the DGID can go back to review returns and identify errors and impose penalties is four years. In case of declarations involving fraud, willful default or negligence, the statute of limitations is extended to six years from the date on which the VAT was due and payable.

Otherwise, the taxable persons can voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns during the filings of the next VAT return.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- All types of transfers of goods and the rendering of services in Costa Rica by taxable persons, unless a specific exemption is provided
- Self-consumption
- The importation of goods and services into Costa Rica, regardless of the status of the importer
- Lease of goods with purchase option

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Costa Rica, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Costa Rica, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the transfer is of the entire business or of one or several lines of business of the taxable person, in the cases of business reorganization by different means, such as the acquisition of shares, quotas or parts of interest, noncash contributions or in assets, mergers, acquisition of the mercantile establishment, total or partial purchase of assets and/or liabilities and others, when the acquirer continues in the exercise of the same activities of the transferor.

Transactions between related parties. In Costa Rica, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, the terms and conditions of intercompany transactions should be set in accordance with the terms and conditions that would have been agreed to by independent parties, considering the relative functions, assets and risks of the parties. The relevant aspects of the transfer pricing regulation that applies for VAT are as follows:

- The regulation applies to any transaction carried out between related persons or companies in relation to goods, services or intangible assets.
- The regulation applies to transactions carried out by taxable persons with related entities domiciled abroad and in Costa Rica.
- This regulation mainly defines the arm's-length principle. It includes a definition of related parties, regulates the criteria to be met by taxable persons for the comparability analysis and establishes the applicable pricing methods, based on the arm's-length principle.
- The transfer pricing information return is an annual obligation for taxable persons that: i) carry out cross-border and local related party transactions and ii) are classified as "Large Taxpayers" or persons or entities in free zone regime. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, a formal date or template for filing this return has not been established.

Additionally, there´s no differentiation between supplies of goods and services.

C. Who is liable

A VAT taxable person is any business entity or individual that sells taxable goods (including imports and exports of goods) or that provides taxable services on a regular basis. A permanent establishment of a foreign business in Costa Rica may be a VAT taxable person.

No turnover threshold applies to VAT registration. As soon as a taxable person begins a taxable activity, it must notify the VAT authorities of its obligation to register. A taxable person that does not notify the VAT authorities of its obligation to register may be automatically included in the registry of VAT taxable persons.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Costa Rica does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Costa Rica does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration as there is no registration threshold (i.e., all entities or individuals that make taxable supplies are obliged to register for VAT).

A simplified VAT regime applies to small taxable persons. The simplified regime applies to individuals who carry out a limited range of activities, such as small retail activities, including operating a grocery store or minimarket. To qualify as a small taxable person, the entrepreneur's annual purchases may not exceed CRC64.650 million (approx. USD103,628), and the entrepreneur may not have more than five employees. Under the simplified regime, presumed taxable turnover is calculated by applying an estimated profitability factor that is determined based on the taxable person's business sector. The VAT rate is applied to the presumed taxable turnover and the small taxable person pays VAT on that base.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Costa Rica.

Fixed establishment. In Costa Rica, there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the income tax law established the definition of "fixed establishment" (which also applies for VAT) as any office, plant, building or other real property asset; plantation, mining, timber and agricultural ventures or of any other type; warehouse or any other permanent business premises, including the temporary use of storage facilities; as well as those places used for the sale and purchase of goods and products within the country; and any other ventures of nonresident persons carrying out for-profit activities in Costa Rica.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in Costa Rica. In principle, a non-established business must register for VAT if it supplies goods or services in Costa Rica.

Tax representatives. When registering an entity as VAT taxable person, a tax representative must be appointed. The tax representative must be the legal representative of the entity.

Reverse charge. If a non-domiciled entity renders a service consumed and utilized within the Costa Rican territory, the local recipient should apply the reverse-charge mechanism to declare and pay the VAT within 15 days of the following month in which the service was rendered or the invoice was issued, whichever occurs first.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Costa Rica.

Digital economy. For business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies, the VAT law establishes that financial institutions responsible for processing credit or debit card payments should withhold VAT (at the standard rate of 13%) in payments made for services rendered to local customers through internet or digital platforms. As such, it should not be necessary for nonresidents providing electronically supplied services in Costa Rica to register and account for VAT. To this end, the tax authorities have updated the list of cross-border digital services whereby financial entities that process credit or debit cards are required to withhold VAT at the standard rate (13%). This list of services is available on the website of the Minister of Finance and became effective on 1 June 2023.

However, foreign entities and individuals may voluntarily register as foreign suppliers or intermediaries and register for VAT for local purposes to charge, collect and pay VAT to the tax authorities personally and not through third parties (i.e., financial entities).

Where a nonresident service provider or intermediary decides not to register and account for VAT, the financial entities are instead required to collect and account for the VAT due.

For business-to-business (B2B) supplies, the nonresident provider is not required to register and account for VAT in Costa Rica. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Costa Rica.

Online marketplaces and platforms. The tax authorities are authorized to charge VAT to providers and intermediaries that sell services consumed within the Costa Rican territory through a digital platform. Moreover, financial institutions that process credit/debit cards should act as withholding agents for VAT derived from the purchase of services through the internet and any other digital platform if they are consumed within the Costa Rican territory.

Registration procedures. Taxable persons must register at the time they start selling goods or providing services subject to VAT. Registration is in person at the tax administration offices by completing the VAT registration form (D-140) or online if the tax representative is a Costa Rican individual or has a tax identification number.

Deregistration. To deregister, the taxable person must file form D-140 in person at the offices of the tax administration or online, and the last VAT return must be filed within 10 days after deregistering. Note that the form D-140 is used for both registration and deregistration for VAT for taxable persons in Costa Rica (as well as changes to VAT registration details, see the Changes to VAT registration details subsection below.

Changes to VAT registration details. The taxable person has the obligation to inform the tax administration of any modification or change in its personal or legal data registered at the time of VAT registration. In this case, the taxable person must file the data modification return (D-140) within 10 working days from the date the change occurred. The notification process can be carried out online or personally at the offices of the tax administration.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 13%
- Reduced rates: 1%, 2%, 4%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods and services unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Goods and services destined for exports, goods and services sold to a beneficiary of Free Trade Zone Regime (FTZR)
- Books
- Services rendered for cultural radio stations
- Private education services when they are rendered by preschool, middle school, high school, college and any other education institution supervised by the Superior Education Counsel (in Spanish: "CONESUP")

Examples of goods and services taxable at 1%

- Goods that form part of the "basic consumption basket" (a list of items essential for the traditional household)
- Veterinary products and agricultural and fishing supplies for consumption, defined between the Agriculture and Livestock Department (in Spanish "MAG") and the Department of Finance

Examples of goods and services taxable at 2%

- Medicines
- Private education services

- Personal insurance premiums

Examples of goods and services taxable at 4%

- Private health services
- Local flight tickets

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Domestic monthly consumption of electricity not exceeding 280 kilowatts per hour
- Books
- Exported goods
- Re-importation of national goods within three years of their export
- Private education services, preschool, elementary, middle school, high school, university and technical education
- Sale or importation of wheelchairs, orthopedic equipment, prostheses in general, equipment used by persons with hearing problems, equipment used in rehabilitation and special education programs

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Costa Rica.

E. Time of supply

The time when the taxable event is considered to have taken place and VAT becomes due is called the "tax point."

For the sale of goods, the tax point is the earlier of the delivery of the goods or the issuance of an invoice. For services, the tax point is the earlier of when the services are performed, or an invoice is issued.

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in Costa Rica for deposits and prepayments. As such, the general time of supply rules apply, and the tax point is the earlier of the invoicing or delivery/performance.

Continuous supplies of services. There are no special time of supply rules in Costa Rica for continuous supplies. As such, the general time of supply rules apply, and the tax point is the earlier of invoicing or delivery/performance.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. If goods are sent on "approval" or for "sale or return" conditions, the tax is due when the goods are delivered. If the goods are ultimately returned, a credit note should be issued and VAT reversed.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Costa Rica for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. The lease of goods with or without an option to purchase are subject to VAT. The tax point is the earlier of the delivery of the goods or the issuance of an invoice.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is when the bill of lading or the customs form for the goods is accepted.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may offset input tax, which is VAT paid on the purchase of goods and services used to generate other goods and services subject to tax. Input tax is generally credited against output tax, which is VAT charged or collected on the sale of goods or the rendering of services. An input tax credit may be taken in the month of the import or the acquisition of goods and services. Taxable persons can receive a tax credit or deduction for tax paid with respect to the following:

- The purchase or importation of goods and services used in the production, trade and distribution of taxable merchandise or services, as long as such services are directly and exclusively linked to the taxable person activity
- The payment of insurance premiums for the protection of merchandise used or incorporated physically in the production of taxable merchandise or services, as long as such premiums are directly and exclusively linked to the taxable person activity
- The purchase of merchandise used during the production, trade and distribution of exempt merchandise or of goods for exportation (while these are exempt goods, when they are exported, recovery is allowed)

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Costa Rica is four years.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for an input tax credit.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used in the production, trade and distribution of the final goods and services supplied by the taxable person.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Overhead expenses of a business, generally

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Insurance premiums
- Wrapping, packaging, etc.

Partial exemption. Exempt activities do not give rise to a right of input tax recovery. The purchase of goods and services that are used for both exempt activities and taxable activities may give rise to the right of input tax proportionally based on the percentage of taxable activities in relation to the taxable person's total activities.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Costa Rica. Special methods are not allowed in Costa Rica.

Capital goods. Capital goods are defined as the goods used in the production and manufacture of other products and their purchase should exceed 15 base salaries (approx. USD11,500). When a taxable person purchases a capital good that is used exclusively on taxable activities, the tax paid should give rise to the right of tax credit in the same month of acquisition.

When a taxable person purchases a capital good used for exempt and taxable activities, it should give rise to the right of input tax proportionally on the percentage of taxable activities in relation to the total activities of the taxable person. However, for the following four years from the first December the capital goods were acquired, the proportionality should be adjusted considering the real figures that represented in each year the percentage of the exempted activities and taxable activities of the taxable person.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a month exceeds the amount of output tax payable, the taxable person obtains an input tax credit. The input tax credit may be carried forward to offset output tax in the following months. Under special circumstances, if the taxable person foresees that VAT credits will not be used within the following three months, the taxable person may request to use the credits to offset other tax liabilities.

Pre-registration costs. Taxable persons are not permitted to recover input tax paid on purchases made prior to VAT registration. Nevertheless, the VAT law provides that taxable persons may accrue tax credits generated after VAT registration for a maximum period of four years until the beginning of their economic activity, as long as they are directly and exclusively linked to the taxable person activity and are duly registered for VAT purposes.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Costa Rica.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Costa Rica.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are registered for VAT in Costa Rica is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. The tax authorities have set forth electronic invoicing ("e-invoicing") regulations and a resolution to ensure that all invoices must be issued electronically following specific technological requirements. Therefore, taxable persons must generally provide an electronic VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made at the time when the service is rendered or the good is purchased.

Credit notes. An electronic VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on the supply of goods and services.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Costa Rica for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Costa Rica for certain taxable persons. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Costa Rica.

Electronic invoicing is generally mandatory for all supplies (B2B, B2C and B2G), and all transactions are required to be properly documented through electronic invoices. The only taxable persons for whom electronic invoicing is not mandatory are those registered for the simplified tax regime. Such taxable persons are authorized to void the issuance of electronic invoicing; in such cases their suppliers may issue an "electronic invoice for purchase purposes." For further details, see the subsections Self-billing and *Simplified tax regime (*under Special schemes) below.

Invoices must be authorized by the tax authorities. The tax authorities may authorize the use of computerized systems to issue electronic invoices that are compliant with the requirements set forth by the e-invoicing regulations. Electronic invoices must include an official invoice number and the taxable person's identification number, and they must also show the VAT amount separately, among other requirements.

An electronic VAT invoice is generally necessary to support a claim for input tax credit.

At the time of preparing this chapter, the version of "Annexes and Structures" for electronic invoicing (of which version 4.3 is currently in force) is expected to be updated to version 4.4 and include relevant modifications to the rules on electronic invoicing. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, no estimated date has been announced for the issuance of the updated "Annexes and Structures."

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Costa Rica. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Costa Rica. Purchase electronic invoices can be issued by the customer, in the event where a supplier is not required to issue such invoices, (i.e., where the supplier is registered for the simplified tax regime). In this case, the customer may issue a purchase electronic invoice on behalf of the supplier as documentation to support tax credits and deductible expenses. For further details, see the subsection Simplified tax regime (under Special schemes) below.

Proof of exports. Costa Rican VAT is not imposed on the supply of exported goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports must be supported by customs documents that prove the goods have left Costa Rica. Suitable evidence includes export invoices and bills of lading. Exportation of services should not be levied with VAT.

Foreign currency invoices. In general, VAT invoices must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Costa Rican colón (CRC). However, invoices may also be issued in US dollars (USD) if the amount in colóns is also stated. The applicable exchange rate is the exchange rate on the date of issuance of the invoice, as established by the Costa Rican Central Bank.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Small taxable persons are not required to issue VAT invoices for sales under 5% of a base salary (approx. USD34) unless requested by the purchaser.

Unless requested by the purchaser, small taxable persons are not required to issue full VAT invoices. In practice, such taxable persons do not have the electronic platform to issue full VAT invoices, therefore the purchase electronic invoice is an alternative for the purchaser to have an invoice to support its input tax and deductible expenses.

Records. In Costa Rica, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include contracts, invoices, as well as other accounting information.

In Costa Rica, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. However, if records are held outside Costa Rica, they must be made readily available if requested by the tax authorities.

Record retention period. Records, invoices and other accounting information must be kept for five years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Costa Rica. Records can be kept electronically or physically in Costa Rica. There are no specific requirements to be met regarding the records. They may be kept and archived electronically or physically.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns (D-104 return) are submitted monthly. Returns must be submitted by the 15th day of the month following the end of the return period. A return must be filed even if no VAT is due for the period.

Periodic payments. Payment in full is due by the same date as the return submission, i.e., the 15th day of the month following the end of the return period. Tax due must be paid in Costa Rican colóns (CRC).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Costa Rica for all taxable persons. VAT returns must be filed online (www.hacienda.go.cr/ATV/Login.aspx). Filing requires a Tax ID (Nite or Dimex) issued by the tax authorities.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Costa Rica.

Special schemes. Secondhand goods scheme. To use the special tax regime for secondhand or used goods, a taxable person must register specifically for this scheme with the tax authorities. Secondhand or used goods are defined as tangible goods susceptible of lasting use that, having been used by a third party, are susceptible of new use for their specific purposes, and those that have been transformed are not considered used goods.

Simplified tax regime. VAT returns for small taxable persons must be submitted quarterly by the 15th day of the month following the end of the return period. The relevant months are October, January, April and July. Payment in full is due on the same date, and a return must be filed even if no VAT is due for the period.

The special tax regime is a voluntary regime set for small taxable persons to facilitate the control and compliance of these taxable persons. The tax authorities fix the parameters for which taxable persons can opt for this regime, based on the type of activity, annual sales, annual profits and number of employees, among others.

Taxable persons that voluntarily access this special tax regime are not required to issue electronic invoices and due to the nature of this regime should not be entitled for tax credits.

VAT is calculated based on a variable that would be assigned according to the taxable person's activity.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Costa Rica. However, tax credits generated from the acquisition of goods and services used indistinctly for operations subject to tax credits and operations not subject to tax credits, must be offset proportionally. In this sense, in every December return, taxable persons should calculate the proportion of their annual operations subject to tax credits to determine the percentage of their tax credits to be offset.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Costa Rica.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A taxable person should correct any errors or omissions from prior periodic filings by filing a rectification of the tax return that should be corrected. This filing can be submitted online or personally at the offices of the tax authorities.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Costa Rica.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A taxable person that fails to register for VAT on a timely basis cannot offset VAT credits generated from purchases that at the time of registration are included in inventory. Penalties and interest are also assessed for late registration for VAT.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Penalties apply to a range of VAT offenses in the following amounts:

- Late filing of a VAT return: a penalty of 50% of the average monthly Costa Rican wage ("base salary" as established by law is CRC431,000, approx. USD693). The amount of the penalty may be reduced up to 80%, depending on the time of payment.
- Late payment of VAT: a penalty of 1% of the unpaid amount for every month or fraction of a month. The maximum penalty is 20% of the unpaid amount.

Penalties for errors. A penalty of 50% of the unpaid amount (as determined by the tax authorities) is due for inaccuracies in the return. Such penalties may be increased to 100% or 150% if the inaccuracies qualify as severe or very severe. For this purpose, the unpaid amount must be higher than 500 times the value of the base salary and meet certain other requirements, such as deriving from the concealment of information or use of fraudulent means. These penalties may be reduced up to 80% depending on the time of payment.

In addition, interest applies to underpayments of VAT at the average interest rate charged by commercial banks to the commercial sector for the tax period.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may be subject to penalties. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Tax fraud occurs when the taxable person by any action or omission commits fraud against the tax authorities by incorrectly computing the amount of tax due. VAT fraud that results in an underpayment of VAT greater than 500 times the base salary is punishable by a term of imprisonment of 5 to 10 years.

A failure to file and satisfy reporting obligations in Costa Rica is subject to penalties ranging from half a base salary to two base salaries as follows:
- Not registering with the relevant tax authorities – penalty of half a base salary
- Failure to maintain accounting books or records required by law – penalty of one base salary
- Failure to maintain shareholder registry book – penalty of one base salary
- Failure to issue invoices as required by law – two base salaries

Personal liability for company officers. The directors of a company shall have no liability for any errors or omissions in the submitted VAT returns. They can only be liable where the local institutions consider that there was tax fraud carried out by the company.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Costa Rica is four years. The tax authorities have a four-year term to review the returns and identify errors to impose penalties for those who are duly registered with the tax administration, which corresponds to the statute of limitations.

The statute of limitations may be extended to 10 years in the event that a taxable entity or individual is not duly registered before the tax authorities or in the case they are registered, they file tax returns that should be qualified as fraudulent, or they had the omission of filing the tax return.

Finally, the taxable person has a four-year period to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns by means of a rectification.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
• The supply of goods or services made in Ivory Coast (IC) by a taxable person
• The importation of goods.

For VAT purposes, the territory of IC includes land territory, continental shelf, territorial waters and the exclusive economic zone.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In IC, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

In IC, only services used in IC are taxable in IC. A service is used in IC when a person for whose benefit the service is rendered, the activity or the good to which the service relates are located in IC.

Where a person who does not have a permanent establishment in IC and does not reside there carries out or makes taxable operations in IC, these are taxable in IC. The tax is paid by the person intervening in any capacity for the nonresident or, failing that, by the buyer or the recipient of the service.

According to Section 347 of the General Tax Code (GTC), operators of online sales platforms or digital services not established in IC are required to declare remotely the VAT payable on their transaction, according to a simplified procedure set up by the tax administration. This simplified procedure implies that the digital platform operator is registered in Côte d'Ivoire, unlike other foreign service providers.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be exempt from VAT in IC. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. In IC the sale of business or customer assets are exempt from VAT. However, separate sales of assets may be subject to VAT depending on the regime applicable to the asset sold.

Transactions between related parties. The price of transactions between related entities is at arm's-length prices. The price of services between related entities is capped at 5% of turnover and 20% of overheads.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any business entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services or importation of goods in the course of a business in IC.

Individuals or entities are only allowed to register for VAT (and subsequently charge VAT on their supplies) when their annual turnover of any tax included is more than XOF200 million. In principle, public transport companies for persons or goods are not liable to VAT. However, the draft of the annual financial statement for 2024 plans to include transport companies within the normal tax regime, subject to VAT. At the time of preparing this chapter, the draft of the annual financial statement for 2024 has not been finalized and enforced.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in IC does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration. According to Section 348 of the GTC, it is possible for a nontaxable business to register for VAT on a voluntary basis.

Voluntary registration only applies to the following types of taxable persons:
- Producers of coconut, plants and flowers, bananas and pineapples, when their annual all tax turnover exceeds XOF100 million
- Owners of bare buildings for commercial or industrial use

Voluntary registration is irrevocable and takes effect from the first day of the month following the day in which it is performed.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in IC.

Fixed establishment. There are three distinct noncumulative criteria in IC to evidence the existence of a permanent establishment, as follows:

- Fixed place of business
- The dependent agent
- The full business cycle

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no permanent establishment in the territory of IC. When a non-established business conducts taxable operations in IC, these operations are treated as taxable thereon. The tax is paid by the representative, who acting on behalf of the nonresident entity or by the purchaser or beneficiary of the service, is solidly responsible for the payment.

Tax representatives. As mentioned above, non-established businesses should nominate a tax representative for VAT purposes in IC. In case of default (nonpayment of VAT due within the legal deadline), the beneficiary of the services and the non-established business are jointly liable for the payment of the VAT due.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable to the following:
- Whenever a non-established entity fails to nominate a VAT representative
- When a taxable person acquires any provision of services from non-established entities

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in IC.

Digital economy. Any taxable person who supplies goods or services digitally (i.e., via the internet) to another taxable person business-to-business [B2B]) or ordinary consumer (business-to-consumer [B2C]) is required to issue an electronic invoice. Such electronic invoices must include an electronic tax stamp. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, the rules on electronic invoices requiring an electronic tax stamp are not final, as the decree that explains the process and the conditions has not been published.

Nonresidents that provide electronically supplied services don't need to register for VAT in IC. In IC, the VAT relating to services provided by a nonresident is paid by the beneficiary of the services (see the Non-established businesses subsection above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in IC.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in IC.

Registration procedures. All IC businesses or foreign entities that have a head office or other establishment in IC must be registered before starting their activities. The submission should be made to the head of the tax authorities.

Deregistration. There is no procedure for VAT deregistration.

Changes to VAT registration details. When there is a change in a taxable person's VAT registration details, the taxable person must inform tax administration within 10 days following the change, by submitting a new certificate of VAT registration to the tax authorities, with the updated details.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 18%
- Reduced rate: 9%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports of goods and services, such as:
  - Services provided for the direct needs of maritime commercial vessels, vessels used for industrial activity on the high seas, and rescue and assistance vessels at sea
  - Sales operations of gear and fishing net, as well as the search of all items and products intended for boats engaged in professional maritime fishing

Examples of goods and services taxable at 9%

- Milk (excluding yogurts and any other dairy products)
- Infant milk and composite food preparations intended for infants
- 100% durum semolina-based pasta
- Solar energy production equipment
- Petroleum products

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Book sales and book-making work
- Sales of newspapers and periodicals
- Sales of medicines and pharmaceuticals, as well as materials and petrochemicals
- Sales of natural food products for consumption in IC, with the exception of luxury rice and meat imported outside ECOWAS. At the time of preparing this chapter, the draft annual financial statement for 2024 plans to limit this exemption to the essential products listed below. This statement has not been finalized and enacted.
  - Corn, millet, sorghum, fonio, wheat and rice, with the exception of luxury rice and other cereals
  - Cassava, sweet potato, yam, potato, tarot and other tubers and roots
  - Beans, soya, sesame, peanuts, peas and other legumes
  - Onion, tomato, eggplant, okra, pepper and other vegetables and market garden products
  - Shell eggs
  - Fresh meat and offal, with exception of luxury meat
  - Unprocessed fish (fresh, smoked, salted or frozen), excluding luxury fish
  - Unprocessed milk
- Teaching activity excluding incidental operations such as sales of goods, housing supplies and food in boarding schools
- Sales of bread, cereal flours and cereals for the manufacture of these flours
- Fish freezing operations

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in IC.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply." According to the Ivorian Tax Code, the tax requirement varies depending on whether it is a supply of goods or services. The basic time of supply for goods is when goods are delivered or when the invoice has been issued, even if the goods have not yet been delivered according to the tax doctrine. The basic time of supply for services is when the price of services was fully or partially settled.

However, for intragroup services, the tax is due after two years even if the invoice has not been paid. The two-year period begins to run from the time the transaction is recorded in an expense account or the credit of a third-party account.

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply rule for deposits and prepayments varies for supplies of goods and services. For supplies of goods, the time of supply for deposits and advanced payments is when the goods are delivered. For services, the time of supply is the date on which the price or a part of the price is paid to the service provider.

Continuous supplies of services. The time of supply for continuous supplies of services based on agreements foreseeing successive payments is when the price or a part of the price is paid to the service provider.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The time of supply for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return is when the goods are delivered. If the goods are returned to the seller or not sold, the seller can record a provision or debit as an expense.

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for supplies of reverse-charge services is when the price or part of price are paid. However, for intragroup services, the tax is due after two years even if the invoice has not been paid. The two-year period begins to run from the time the transaction is recorded in an expense account or the credit of a third-party account.

Leased assets. Since leasing agreements are also considered a continuous supply of services, the time of supply occurs at the time of each payment.

Imported goods. The time of supply for the importation of goods is the moment at which the goods enter customs.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax incurred with the acquisition of goods and services deemed indispensable for the maintenance of the business. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax charged on the supplies of goods or services carried out, as well as tax paid on the import of goods.

Input tax includes tax charged on goods and services supplied, tax paid on import of goods and tax self-assessed on reverse-charge services.

To deduct input tax, goods and services must meet the following conditions:
- Be acquired for the needs of the company
- Is subject to VAT on all or only part of their transactions
- Borne VAT from the supplier or import
- Not be excluded from the right to deduction
- The VAT deductible must be on a supporting document (it can be an invoice, if it is a purchase or service; a customs document, if it is an import)
- VAT must be deducted within 12 months; this period begins to run from the billing date for supplies of goods and from the due date for payment the supply of services
- VAT deductible must be mentioned on the statements of deductible taxes
- The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in IC is three years. The reclaiming of input tax from a previous period can be requested over the last three years, plus the year of submission of the request.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for taxable purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use or services used for making exempt supplies).

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Buildings other than:
  - Buildings and premises for industrial and similar use
  - Administrative and commercial buildings
- Vehicles other than:
  - Internal means of handling, special vehicles

  - Touring vehicles with a horsepower of not more than 12 horsepower and two-wheeled vehicles whose purchase price does not exceed XOF3 million excluding taxes
  - Commercial vehicles, regardless of their payload
  - Vehicles acquired by transport companies that have exercised the option provided for in Article 348 of the General Tax Code and that are used for the public transport of persons and goods
- Furniture objects
- Banking operations carried out in a personal capacity on behalf of the directors of the company
- Services relating to excluded goods: rental, maintenance and repair of equipment, premises, objects or vehicles that are not deductible
- Hotel and restaurant expenses, excluding the supply of meals on oil platforms
- Representation expenses
- Fuel costs for vehicles, other than those used for the public transport of persons and goods by the transport companies that have made the option provided for by Article 148 of the GTC
- Repair and maintenance services of executive vehicles of oil companies, the guarding of their homes, as well as the various services provided to consultants used by oil companies
- Tax on purchases, works or services greater than XOF250,000 and paid in cash

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

If a taxable person meets the definition of a taxable supply, then that supply can have input tax claimed, unless it is specifically stated as a supply that an input cannot be claimed, see above.

Partial exemption. If a taxable person makes both exempt and taxable supplies, it may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption." The GTC provides one method to recover VAT when a taxable person makes both exempt and taxable supplies. According to this method, VAT is only deductible under a percentage.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in IC. Special methods are not allowed in IC.

Capital goods. No special input tax recovery rules apply to input tax incurred on capital goods. Normal input tax recovery rules apply (as outlined above).

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a monthly period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that period, the taxable person has an input tax credit that will be carried forward to the next taxable periods.

A refund may also be requested in these limited cases:
- Export and related operations
- Discontinuance of business
- Investments by industrials companies subject to VAT
- Lease operations
- Investments by commercial enterprises under the investment approval program
- Acquisitions of investment property or the right to deduction for a value of more than XOF40 million, including all taxes
- Transactions subject to the reduced-rate tax
- Operations granted a conventional exemption, as well as those carried out with members of diplomatic and related missions, in accordance with the rules of reciprocity

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in IC is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in IC. Taxable persons cannot deduct the amount of VAT related to bad debts disclosed in its accounting records, as well as unrecoverable debts resulting from the enforcement and insolvency process. The tax is neither refundable (if the taxable person has already declared the tax in advance), nor deductible.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in IC.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in IC, is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Taxable persons must generally provide a standardized invoice for all taxable supplies made.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may not be issued to reduce the VAT charged and claimed on a supply (e.g., return of the goods or a discount). A credit note is usually issued in case of rebates given after the time of supply.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in IC for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in IC. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in IC. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

For B2B and B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for any taxable person who supplies goods or services digitally (i.e., via the internet). Such electronic invoices must include an electronic tax stamp. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, the rules on electronic invoices requiring an electronic tax stamp in IC are not final, as the decree that explains the process and the conditions has not been published.

Non-established operators of online service platforms who provide services in IC are allowed to issue electronic invoices without an electronic tax stamp. There are some requirements for B2B invoicing, such as retaining their current methods for nonresident businesses and providing the following details to enable input tax recovery:
- The customer's name
- Taxpayer identification number
- The nature of the service
- The date of the service and the amount involved

Simplified VAT invoices. Certain taxable persons may issue nonstandard invoices. These include the following sectors:
- Water, electricity and telephone utility dealers for concession-covered activities, excluding services in areas open to competition
- Multiray sales companies whose retail operations result in the issuance of tickets or cash receipts
- Pharmacies
- Utility dealers responsible for identification
- Airline companies
- Oil companies benefiting from the production-sharing contract provisions
- Service stations only for their fuel sales operations
- Post offices
- Banks
- Insurance companies
- Transportation service dealers for their operations covered by the concession

- Non-utility transport companies that have not opted for their VAT liability
- Taxable persons that do not have professional IC facilities
- Gambling utilities for sales-to-end customers, excluding those made to resellers
- Licensed telephone companies
- Operators of digital platforms

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in IC. Taxable persons with turnover greater than XOF3 billion can request the tax authorities to print its own invoices but these invoices must contain all the requirements for a full VAT invoice.

Proof of exports. Proofs of exports will be necessary to identify chain transactions, incoterms used and zero-rating for export. The origin and destination of products if sold or purchased are key drivers for taxability and hence should be passed as data elements. Examples of documentation accepted include airway bills, bills of lading and international transport documentation, custom returns.

Foreign currency invoices. In case the invoice is issued in a foreign currency, the total VAT amount should be in the domestic currency, which is the West African Communauté Financière Africaine (CFA) franc (XOF). It is also recommended to mention the currency exchange in the invoice. However, operators of digital platforms are able to declare and pay in foreign currencies such as euros and US dollars.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in IC. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In IC, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include invoices, accounting documents, legal documents, etc.

In IC, VAT books and records must be held within the country. While there is no provision in IC VAT law outlining where records must be held, in practice, VAT books and records must be held within the country and made available upon request of the tax authorities.

Record retention period. All invoices or equivalent documents must be kept by the taxable person for six years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in IC. Backup copies of the invoices or equivalent documents can be archived on all support media (i.e., paper and electronically). However, records must be available to the tax authorities upon request, in paper format only. These obligations are not applicable to operators of digital platforms.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns must be submitted monthly for taxable persons under the normal regime. The normal regime applies to taxable persons whose annual turnover, including all taxes, exceeds XOF500 million.

VAT returns must be submitted quarterly for operators of digital platforms.

VAT returns must be filed together with full payment of VAT. The VAT return and payment of VAT is due by the following dates:
- By the 10th of the following month for industrial, oil and mining companies
- By 15th of the following month for commercial companies
- By 20th of the following month for providers

Periodic payments. Payment of VAT is due by the same deadline for filing (as outlined above).

Taxable persons whose annual turnover is greater than XOF200 million are required to pay the VAT due by bank transfer or automatic debit.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in IC, but not mandatory. However, taxable persons with a turnover of greater than XOF150 million are required to file their VAT returns electronically. Taxable persons with a turnover of less than XOF150 million have the option to file their VAT returns by paper or electronically.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in IC.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in IC.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in IC.

Supplementary filings. Deductions statement. All taxable persons must include on their VAT return a statement detailing the deductions made. This statement must highlight the delivery of goods and the services provided, as follows:
- Name and the supplier's taxable persons account number
- Amount of the deductible tax paid by the customer
- With regard to imports, the state must highlight:
  – Consumption declaration number
  – References to the release issued by Customs
  – Amount of VAT mentioned on the release

Correcting errors in previous returns. Taxable persons can correct errors in previous returns under the following conditions:
- Any error of this kind that has not been found by the tax authorities during the last three years.
- The taxable person is not subject to a tax assessment related to such errors.
- The taxable person has not received a notice of tax assessment from the tax authorities.

Subject to the above conditions, a taxable person can correct errors in previous returns by writing to the tax authorities, providing detail of the errors and previously filed returns. Then the tax authorities will review the corrections, and where it agrees with the corrections, the taxable person must then immediately pay any VAT due from the corrections and a late interest charge (10% of the tax due). However, the taxable person is not charged any additional penalties.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in IC.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A delay in VAT registration is punishable by a fine of XOF1 million.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Whenever a taxable person fails to submit a VAT return after the legal deadline, the late interest is 10% of the tax due. In addition to the penalty, interest accrues at a rate of 1% of the amount due for each additional month or fraction of a month of delay.

Penalties for errors. Whenever the tax administration finds errors in filed VAT returns, the taxable person must pay, in addition to the late interest charge outlined above, increases of the following:
- 30% if the amount of duties corresponding to inadequacies, inaccuracies or omissions does not exceed one quarter of the duties actually owed
- 60% if this amount is more than a quarter of the fees real due

Increases are only applicable in the case of a tax audit, and late interest is applicable in the case of spontaneous returns.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details to may result in a penalty of XOF100,000. For further details, see the subsection above Changes to VAT registration details.

Penalties for fraud. Any inaccuracies or omissions in a declaration or deed containing information to be withheld for the assessment or settlement of the tax, shall give rise to the application of a surcharge of 150% in the event of fraudulent practices.

Personal liability for company officers. Company directors can be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations. In this case, the penalties are a fine between XOF500,000 and XOF30 million and/or imprisonment between one month to two years.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in IC is three or six years. The time limit that the tax authorities can go back to review returns and identify errors and impose penalties is three years for input tax and six years for output tax. There is no time limit for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns. But the corrections should not be made during a tax audit. Note that corrections to input tax must be made within 12 months of invoicing.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- The supply of goods and services in Croatia for consideration by a taxable person, performed in the course of the person's business activity, and supplies made in accordance with the provisions of the law or decisions of state bodies

- Reverse-charge services received by a Croatian taxable person
- The intra-Community acquisition of goods from another European Union (EU) Member State by a taxable person (see the chapter on the EU)
- The importation of goods into Croatia, regardless of the status of the importer

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the chapter on the EU. For documentary requirements see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

As of 1 January 2020, the Quick Fixes have been adopted in Croatia. The Quick Fixes consist of the following four measures:

- VAT identification number of the customer constitutes an additional substantive condition for the application of the exemption in respect of an intra-Community supply of goods. Respective exemption is applicable only if the customer has provided its VAT number from another EU Member State and the supplier has reported it in its EC Sales list.
- Defined list of documents for proof of transport required to claim an exemption for intra-Community supplies. There is a rebuttable presumption in favor of the taxable person based on two independent pieces of evidence (noncontradictory proof by two different parties independent of each other, from the supplier and from the customer).
- Call-off stock simplification, according to which the transfer of goods to a stock located in another Member State with a view to supplying them at a later stage to a customer will no longer qualify for the supplier as a deemed intra-Community supply and a deemed intra-Community acquisition of goods. When the customer takes the goods out of the stock, the supplier is deemed to perform a direct intra-Community supply of goods to the customer.
- New rules in respect to allocation of the transport in chain transactions. According to these rules, the intra-Community transport is to be allocated to the supply made to the intermediary, who arranges the transport. There is an exception to this general rule in case the intermediary communicates to its supplier its VAT identification number granted by the EU Member State from which the goods are dispatched or transported. In that situation, the transport of the goods would be allocated to the supply made by the intermediary to its customer.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In Croatia, the following services are subject to the use and enjoyment provisions:

- Effective use and enjoyment rule shifting the place of supply of services from a place outside the EU to the territory of Croatia if the effective use and enjoyment of the services take place within Croatia
- Effective use and enjoyment rule shifting the place of supply of services to a place outside the EU if the effective use and enjoyment of the services take place outside the EU

Both rules apply only to business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies of rental of movable property and rental of boats.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Croatia, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:

- There has been a transfer of a totality of assets or part thereof that constitute a business unit (i.e., going concern)
- Both the transferor and the transferee are taxable persons, registered for VAT purposes in Croatia at the moment of the transaction
- Transferee will use the assets for an activity in respect of which VAT is deductible

Transactions between related parties. In case of certain supplies of goods or services between persons with family or other close personal ties or management, ownership, membership, financial or other legal ties, the taxable amount shall be the open market value. This applies to transactions where the consideration is:
- Lower than the open market value and the customer does not have a full right of deduction of the input tax
- Lower than the open market value and the supplier does not have a full right of deduction and the supply is exempt
- Higher than the open market value and the supplier does not have a full right of deduction

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any person who independently carries out any economic activity, regardless of the purpose or results of that activity.

VAT registration is required prior to commencing taxable activities in Croatia.

Exemption from registration. The VAT Act in Croatia does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A taxable person subject to the special scheme for small businesses may voluntarily register for VAT when beginning business activities or may register during the year. In the case of voluntary registration, the entrepreneur must remain a taxpayer for a period of three years.

A taxable person whose taxable supplies exceeded the prescribed threshold is considered to be a taxable person and must inform the tax authorities by submitting an application for VAT registration. Retrospective VAT registration is not possible.

Taxable persons established in Croatia can apply a special scheme for small entrepreneurs if their taxable supplies in the preceding or current calendar year do not exceed the EUR40,000 threshold. Taxable persons applying this scheme do not charge Croatian VAT as their transactions are exempt from VAT, but they also cannot deduct input tax.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Croatia.

Holding companies. Group VAT registration is not available in Croatia, and as such a pure holding company cannot be a member of a VAT group.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with Article 132(1)(f) of VAT Directive 2006/112/EC) has been implemented in Croatia. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, provided certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Croatian VAT Act). According to Article 39(1)(f) of the Croatian VAT Act, the supply of services by independent groups of persons, who are carrying on an activity that is exempt from VAT or in relation to which they are not taxable persons, for the purpose of rendering their members the services directly necessary for the exercise of that activity, where those groups merely claim from their members exact reimbursement of their share of the joint expenses, provided that such exemption is not likely to cause distortion of competition.

Fixed establishment. The definition of a fixed establishment provided for in Article 11 of Regulation 282/2011 is directly applicable in Croatia. Fixed establishment is characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources to enable it to receive and use the services supplied to it for its own needs or to provide the services it renders.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have an establishment in Croatia (including a fixed establishment). A non-established business that makes supplies of goods or services in Croatia is liable to account for VAT on these supplies.

However, if supplies are made by a non-established business that is not registered for VAT purposes in Croatia (requirement for non-registration entered into force on 1 January 2019) to a recipient who is either a taxable person or a legal person that is not a taxable person but registered for VAT in Croatia, Croatian VAT should be accounted for by the recipient of the supply.

Consequently, non-established businesses must register for VAT if they make any of the following supplies:
- Intra-Community supplies
- Intra-Community acquisitions
- Distance sales in excess of the threshold
- Supplies of goods and services that are not subject to the reverse charge (for example, goods or services supplied to private persons)
- Export supplies

Tax representatives. A foreign entity (taxable person) that has to register for VAT in Croatia may appoint a tax representative. Taxable persons in Croatia can be appointed as tax representatives if they are established or have their permanent address in Croatia and are not a branch or fixed establishment of a foreign company.

A foreign entity (taxable person) that has its seat of business outside the EU must appoint a tax representative. This requirement does not apply in case there are legal instruments with the third country in which that taxable person is established. Currently, these are the United Kingdom and Norway.

Reverse charge. The reverse charge applies to the supply of most goods and services performed by non-established businesses to taxable persons or nontaxable legal persons registered for VAT in Croatia (i.e., business-to-business (B2B) supplies).

Domestic reverse charge. As of 1 January 2019, a domestic reverse charge only applies if a non-established business is not registered for VAT in Croatia. The recipient of the supply accounts for VAT using the appropriate Croatian VAT rate.

Croatia applies a domestic reverse-charge mechanism for certain supplies (for B2B supplies). The following activities fall within the scope of the domestic reverse charge irrespective of whether the supplier is VAT registered or not:
- Construction work (repair, maintenance, alteration and demolition services in relation to immovable property) and supply of staff engaged in construction work
- Supplies of used-material waste, industrial and nonindustrial waste, recycling waste and partially processed waste
- Supplies of immovable property if the option to tax is exercised
- Supplies of immovable property in a compulsory sale procedure and similar
- Transfer of greenhouse gas emission units
- Supplies of concrete steel and iron, as well as products made of concrete steel and iron (armature)

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021. These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B, Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:

- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B) where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000 with effect from 1 July 2021). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, an e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In Croatia, the normal VAT registration rules apply (see the Registration procedures subsection below).

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:

- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Taxable persons established in Croatia that choose to apply the special scheme (or the taxable person that chooses Croatia as a Member State of identification for the special scheme) is obligated to notify the Croatian tax authorities electronically when it commences and ceases its taxable activities covered by the special scheme, or when it changes those activities in such a way that it no longer meets the conditions necessary for use of the special scheme.

Registration for the OSS purposes and possible changes of activities should be done through the HR OSS internet portal (https://eusustavi.porezna-uprava.hr/wps/portal/Home/MOSS/Registration/union/).

The taxable person making use of this special scheme is obligated to submit a VAT return by electronic means for each calendar quarter, whether or not the goods and services covered by the special scheme have been supplied, by the end of the month following the end of the tax period covered by the return.

Among other, the VAT return must show for each Member State of consumption in which VAT is due the total value of supplies of goods and services covered by the special scheme carried out during the tax period and total amount per rate of the corresponding VAT.

VAT amount is to be paid in EUR at the latest by the deadline for the submission of the respective VAT return.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance sales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT.

A taxable person established in Croatia that chooses to apply the special scheme for importation (or the taxable person that chooses Croatia as a Member State of identification for the importation special scheme) is obligated to notify the Croatian tax authorities electronically when it commences and ceases its taxable activities covered by the special scheme, or when it changes those activities in such a way that it no longer meets the conditions necessary for use of the special scheme.

Registration for the IOSS purposes and possible changes of activities should be done through the HR OSS internet portal (https://eusustavi.porezna-uprava.hr/wps/portal/Home/MOSS/Registration/union/).

Croatian tax authorities will allocate an individual VAT identification number (IOSS identification number) to the taxable person and to an intermediary making use of this special scheme, upon which they will notify them by electronic means.

The taxable person making use of this special scheme, or its intermediary is obligated to submit a VAT return by electronic means for each calendar month, by the end of the following month.

Among other, the VAT return must show for each Member State of consumption in which VAT is due the total value of supplies covered by the special scheme carried out during the tax period and total amount per rate of the corresponding VAT.

VAT amount is to be paid in EUR at the latest by the deadline for the submission of the respective VAT return.

For more details about the IOSS, see the chapter on the EU.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

Postal Services and Couriers Scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

In Croatia, when Croatia is a Member State of importation, the person presenting the goods to customs authorities on behalf of the person for whom the goods are destined within the territory of the Community (Croatian posts office, courier services) can apply special arrangements for declaration and payment of import VAT.

The person presenting the goods to customs authorities collects the VAT from the person for whom the goods are destined and effects the payment of such VAT.

According to the Croatian VAT Act, the standard rate of 25% is applicable when using this special arrangement. However, the person for whom the goods are destined can refuse the automatic application of the standard rate of 25% when according to the Croatian VAT Act the reduced rate is applicable to the importation of goods. In that case, the person presenting the goods to customs authorities can no longer apply the special arrangement and the regular procedure for the importation of goods will apply.

VAT collected under this special arrangement is to be reported electronically in a monthly declaration. The declaration must show the total VAT collected during the relevant calendar month.

VAT is payable in EUR by the end of the month following the importation.

For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the chapter on the EU.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules effective 1 July 2021, taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:

- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). Any intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes.

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

In Croatia, rules deeming online marketplaces and platforms as suppliers (in accordance with Article 14(a)(1)(2) of Directive 2006/112/EC) have been implemented.

According to the Croatian VAT Act, a taxable person who facilitates through an electronic interface, such as a marketplace, platform, portal or similar means, distance sales of goods imported from third territories or third countries in consignments of intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150 is deemed to have received and supplied those goods itself. Such taxable person can apply the IOSS special scheme.

Additionally, a taxable person who facilitates through an electronic interface, such as a marketplace, platform, portal or similar means, the supply of goods within the Community by a taxable person not established within the Community to a nontaxable person is deemed to have received and supplied those goods itself. Such taxable person can apply OSS special scheme.

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. "Voucher" means an instrument where there is an obligation to accept it as consideration or part consideration for a supply of goods or services and where the goods or services to be supplied or the identities of their potential suppliers are either indicated on the instrument itself or in related documentation, including the terms and conditions of use of such instrument.

"Single-purpose voucher" (SPV) means a voucher where the place of supply of the goods or services to which the voucher relates, and the VAT due on those goods or services, are known at the time of issue of the voucher.

"Multi-purpose voucher" (MPV) means a voucher, other than a SPV.

Each transfer of an SPV by a taxable person is regarded as a supply of goods or services to which the voucher relates. The transfer of an MPV is not treated as a supply for VAT purposes. The supply takes place when the actual handing over of the goods or the actual provision of the services in return for a MPV occurs.

Registration procedures. If a Croatian taxable person's annual taxable supplies exceed the prescribed threshold, the taxable person becomes liable to register as a taxable person in the current year (at the time when the prescribed threshold is reached).

Entrepreneurs whose taxable supplies do not exceed the threshold may also apply for VAT registration. After registering, such entrepreneur is obliged to remain in the VAT system for the next three years.

In case a Croatian taxable person intends to perform supplies within the EU, it should request a Croatian VAT ID number 15 days before the first supply is made.

Taxable persons in all cases mentioned above should file the request for VAT registration with the Croatian tax authority by submitting an application in person. The registration procedure may be initiated in person by a third party legally authorized by the company applying.

Application should be accompanied with excerpt from the court register and confirmation from the tax authorities in the country of establishment that the entity is a registered taxable person. In the case where a third party is authorized, a power of attorney (POA) is required.

All accompanying documents (which should be filed in hard copy) with the request should be translated to Croatian by an official interpreter. Documents may also be submitted via the Croatian tax authorities' web platform "e-porezna" or via email. Delivery of documents via email is dependent on the agreement with the competent tax authority office, since the Croatian tax authorities have not issued any formal decision on the subject. At the time of preparing this chapter, delivery of documents via email is still dependent on the agreement with the competent tax authority in the absence of legally binding decision with the specific date of the commencement and the end of such possibility still being unknown. For practical considerations it is important to note that some tax authority clerks accept documents submitted only via email while others demand concurrent submittal of documents in physical form. Registration for OSS purposes should be done through the HR-MOSS internet portal of the Croatian tax authority (https://eusustavi.porezna-uprava.hr/wps/portal/Home/MOSS/Registration/union/).

Deregistration. Taxable persons registered for VAT (because the VAT threshold was reached in past periods) may submit written application for deregistration to the Croatian tax authority until 15 January if the threshold in the preceding year was not reached.

Foreign taxable persons that have obtained a Croatian VAT ID number and cease the economic activities in Croatia for which they were registered should notify the Croatian tax authority about the cessation of business activities within eight days.

Croatian taxable persons that also perform intra-Community transactions may apply for cancellation of their VAT ID number if they cease to perform such transactions. The cancellation of a VAT number does not automatically mean that taxable person is erased from the VAT register in Croatia.

The tax authority can ex officio cancel the VAT ID number in certain cases, such as when the taxable person has not performed business activities in the EU for more than one calendar year; the taxable person has acquired goods valued at less than EUR10,000 in the previous two calendar years; the taxable person has not received services within the EU for more than one calendar year; or a foreign taxable person has not performed supplies in Croatia for more than one calendar year.

In the case of fraudulent activities, deregistration occurs almost automatically.

The tax authority can also cancel the VAT ID number if it determines that there is no further reason for VAT registration in Croatia or if the taxable person has misused the VAT ID number.

In case the tax authority suspects the VAT ID number was assigned without actual justification, the tax authority may request from the taxable person in question that it provides securities, i.e., VAT payment guarantees for the period not longer than 12 months. If the taxable person does not provide requested securities, the tax authority will cancel the taxable person's VAT ID number and render a resolution on such decision.

Tax authorities may suspend the VAT ID number if they suspect it has been misused. A suspended VAT ID number can be reactivated if the taxable person submits evidence that eliminates the reason for the suspension within one year. Failure to do so will result in cancellation of the VAT ID number.

Changes to VAT registration details. A taxable person must notify the tax authorities if there is a change in its VAT registration details (e.g., name of company, address, type of business, VAT status, etc.). The taxable person must submit a notification of the respective change together with an excerpt from the relevant register where the change is visible. There is no prescribed deadline for such notification.

All accompanying documents (which should be filed in hard copy) should be translated to Croatian by the official interpreter. Documents may be submitted via the Croatian tax authorities' web platform "e-porezna" or via email. Delivery of documents via email is dependent on the agreement with the competent tax authority office, as the Croatian tax authorities have not issued any formal decision on the subject. At the time of preparing this chapter, delivery of documents via email is still dependent on the agreement with the competent tax authority in the absence of legally binding decision with the specific date of the commencement and the end of such possibility still being unknown. For practical considerations it is important to note that some tax authority clerks accept documents submitted only via email while others demand concurrent submittal of documents in physical form.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supply" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including supplies that are exempt with the right to deduct input tax.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 25%
- Reduced rates: 5%, 13%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports of goods outside the EU and related services
- Intra-Community goods and services supplied to another taxable person established in the EU or to a recipient outside the EU.
- Supply and installation of solar panels on and adjacent to private dwellings, housing, and public and other buildings used for activities in the public interest

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%

- Public service of collecting mixed municipal waste, biodegradable municipal waste and separate waste collection under special regulations

- Restaurant and catering services

The term "exempt supply" refers to all supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Public interest activities
- Postal service
- Hospital services and health care services
- Social care services
- Financial services
- Insurance transactions
- Real estate transactions

Option to tax for exempt supplies. An option to tax is available for the provision of credit that is connected with the taxable person's supplies of goods or services. The taxable person may also opt for taxation of supplies of real estate and land (except construction land) to another taxable person who is fully entitled to input tax deduction for the respective acquisition. The option may be exercised at the moment of supply.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "chargeable event" or "tax point." Under the general rules the chargeable event occurs when goods are delivered or when services are performed.

If no invoice is issued for supplied goods or services, VAT is due on the last day of the tax period (month) in which the goods are delivered or the services performed.

Deposits and prepayments. If a payment is made before the supply (prepayment), VAT is due the moment the prepayment is received. A regular VAT invoice must be issued when a prepayment is received. The above rules do not apply to prepayments in connection with intra-Community supplies and acquisitions.

Continuous supplies of services. If the service is being provided continuously through several tax periods, VAT becomes due at the end of each tax period in which the service is provided, regardless of whether the invoice has been issued.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Croatia for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. The supply of reverse-charge services becomes generally taxable when the service is supplied, i.e., consumed by the recipient.

Leased assets. VAT law prescribes specific VAT treatment of leasing agreements. It differentiates VAT treatment of lease transactions depending on whether the lease in question is an operating or finance lease. In general, a finance lease arrangement is treated for VAT purposes as a supply of goods while an operating lease would be treated as provision of services.

In the case of a finance lease where the lessee bears depreciation costs and may acquire ownership rights over the asset, the VAT liability for total value of the lease arises for the accounting period in which the asset has been supplied to the lessee. In the case of an operating lease where the lessor bears depreciation costs of the leased asset and the lessee does not have the purchase option, VAT liability arises with respect to respective rental fees incurred in the tax period. If rental fees are not determined for the tax period, i.e., a month, it should be calculated for each month.

Imported goods. VAT on import is due when goods are imported or when the goods leave the duty suspension regime and are released for free circulation.

VAT is considered to be paid if the importer includes the VAT amount in question on its VAT return. The condition is that the importer must be the taxable person who has a full right to VAT deduction and has indicated in the customs declaration that they will account for import VAT under the postponed accounting scheme. In such cases, the reverse charge would apply (no cash flow effect).

Intra-Community acquisitions. Tax point is the moment when goods are acquired within the EU. VAT is due the moment the invoice is issued. The invoice should be issued no later than the 15th day of the month following the month in which the goods are delivered. If the invoice for the supply is not issued in time, VAT is due on the 15th day of the month following the month in which goods were acquired.

Intra-Community supplies of goods. Generally, for intra-Community supplies of goods, the time of supply is when the invoice is issued. Otherwise, the time of supply is the 15th day of the month following the month in which goods are supplied. However, intra-Community supplies of goods are exempt from VAT in Croatia if the supplier proves that the goods have left the territory of Croatia and a VAT ID is obtained from the customer. The customer's VAT ID must be reported in the EC Sales List.

Distance sales. The time of supply rules for the supply of distance sales is the moment when the payment has been accepted by the supplier.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is the VAT charged on goods and services supplied to the taxable person for its business purposes. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made. Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Croatia, VAT paid on imports and self-assessed VAT on intra-Community acquisitions of goods, acquisition of goods within the triangulation and reverse-charge services (see the chapter on the EU).

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Croatia is six years. The right to deduct input tax arises at the time when the deductible tax becomes chargeable. The Croatian General Tax Act does not set a statute of limitations for the right to recognize input tax from incoming invoices, which means that input tax from incoming invoices can be deducted when the prescribed conditions for deduction are met regardless of the "age" of the incoming invoice. However, the general statute of limitation of six years applies. The statute of limitation starts from the year following the year when the tax became deductible.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for the private use of entrepreneurs). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- 50% of costs related to the purchase and lease of passenger cars, including purchase of any related goods or services. Passenger cars are considered to be motor vehicles for transport of people which, except for the driver's seat, have no more than eight seats. As an exception, the above rule will not apply to passenger cars used for drivers' training, vehicle testing, security services, business activities that include transport of passengers, goods, deceased, leasing or are acquired for further sale; nor will it apply to certain categories based on specific tariff declarations and are not subject to taxation according to the special regulations.
- The purchase of goods or services for the purpose of business entertainment, which is defined as payment for accommodations, gifts, holidays, sport or pleasure of business partners, as well as payment for rentals of cars, boats, aircraft, summer houses, etc.

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Advertising
- Purchase, lease, fuel and maintenance of test vehicles, taxis and rental vehicles
- Telephones
- Books and newspapers
- Attendance at seminars and training courses (except food and drinks)
- Business gifts up to EUR22
- Hotel accommodations

Partial exemption. If an entrepreneur uses goods and services in its business activity for which an input tax deduction is allowed and uses them with respect to the supply of goods and services for which input tax deduction is not allowed, the amount of "mixed" input tax must be divided between deductible input tax and nondeductible input tax.

To determine the amount of input tax that may be recovered, one of the following methods may be used:

- The deductible input tax may be determined based on accounting and other documentation that relates to taxable and exempt supplies.
- If the taxable person cannot determine the amount of input tax as described above, a pro rata method can be used to determine the amount of deductible input tax. Under the pro rata method, the total annual supplies (exclusive of VAT) for which input tax is deductible is divided by total annual supplies, including supplies for which VAT is not deductible and subsidies.

- The amount of deductible input tax may be determined separately for each business segment of the taxable person. The taxable person must maintain separate accounting records for each business segment and notify the tax authorities before this method is applied.

If a taxable person performing both taxable and exempt supplies of goods and services determines under the pro rata method that it has the right to deduct 98% or more of input tax, it is entitled to a 100% input tax deduction.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Croatia.

Special methods are allowed in Croatia. The taxable persons may determine the part of the input tax that it may deduct separately for each part of its business, provided that it keeps separate books for each part. If the taxable person chooses the method of determining part of the input tax in this way, it must inform the competent branch office of the tax administration before the beginning of the tax period in which it begins to apply this method of division of input tax.

Capital goods. Capital goods are goods classified according to accounting standards as long-term assets. Input tax is deducted in the year in which the goods are acquired or produced. In general, input tax on the purchase or lease of vehicles for personal transportation is 50% deductible (as of 1 January 2019, 50% of input tax should be deductible on the purchase of passenger cars regardless of their value).

If the conditions applicable to the deduction of input tax change within a five-year period beginning with the year in which the goods begin to be used, the amount of input tax is corrected in the period after the change. For real estate, the adjustment period of 10 years applies.

The capital goods adjustment also applies to additional construction and refurbishment services relating to immovable property that is capitalized.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a tax period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that same period, the taxable person has an input tax credit. An input tax credit may be carried forward to the following tax period and used as a payment for future VAT liabilities or may be claimed as a VAT refund. A taxable person is entitled to a VAT refund upon request within 30 days after submitting a VAT return, or, in the case of a tax audit, 90 days from when the audit started.

The tax authorities must pay interest on delayed repayments of VAT. As of 1 July 2023, the annual penalty interest rate is 7%.

Pre-registration costs. The economic or other activity of the taxable person begins with preparatory activities undertaken to starting the economy activity. Input tax in relation to preparatory activities can be deducted if all other requirements for the deduction of input tax are met. In case a taxable person has applied the special scheme for small enterprises, input tax could be deducted as of the date of VAT registration (based on the invoice for supplies received from the date of VAT registration).

Bad debts. As of 1 January 2024, new amendments have been introduced to simplify the method of correcting a taxable person's VAT obligation. Thus, the taxable person will be able to adjust the tax base in the event of inability to recover all or part of an overdue receivable that has not been collected for more than one year, within six months calculating from the day when the right to reduce the tax base arose, if all actions of a good businessperson have been carried out.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Croatia.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Croatia is recoverable. The Croatian VAT authorities refund VAT incurred by businesses that are not established in Croatia and that are not registered for VAT in the country. Non-established businesses may claim Croatian VAT to the same extent as VAT-registered businesses.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU Directive 2008/9/EC. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Croatia during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge). For full details see the chapter on the EU.

Find below specific rules for Croatia:
- The minimum claim period is three months, and the minimum claim amount for a period of less than a year is EUR400. For an annual claim, the minimum amount is EUR50.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive. For full details see the chapter on the EU.

Croatia applies the condition of reciprocity with respect to refund claims made by applicants from non-EU countries. The current list of jurisdictions that Croatia applies the reciprocity condition, can be found at the tax authorities' website.

The VAT refund procedure under the EU 13th Directive may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Croatia during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge).

For non-EU businesses, the deadline for refund claims is 30 June following the calendar year in which the tax was incurred. The application must be completed in Croatian or English.

The minimum claim period is three months, and the minimum claim amount for a period of less than a year is EUR400. For an annual claim, the minimum amount is EUR50.

The tax authorities are obliged to decide whether the request is approved in full, partially or not approved within eight months of receiving the application for the VAT refund. If the request is approved, the tax authorities must pay the refund within 10 working days following the eight-month deadline.

All claims must be supported by valid original invoices.

The completed application and supporting documents identified above should be sent to the following address:

Porezna uprava
Područni ured Zagreb
Avenija Dubrovnik 32
10 000 Zagreb
Croatia

Late payment interest. For businesses established in the EU, interest is paid for late refund payments of VAT, provided that it is approved upon request of the Croatian tax authorities and that the applicant submits additional requested information within the prescribed time limit. Interest is accrued from the day following the last day for payment of the refund until the day the refund is paid. The interest rate applicable is the interest rate applied for delayed repayments of VAT to taxable persons established in Croatia. As of 1 July 2023, the annual penalty interest rate is 7%.

For businesses established outside the EU, interest is not paid for late refund repayments of VAT.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must generally issue invoices for all taxable supplies, including exports and intra-Community supplies made to other taxable persons and legal entities that are not taxable persons. Invoices may not be issued for certain exempt financial services and for certain other supplies. A document qualifies as a valid invoice if it complies with the requirements set out in the Croatian VAT Act.

A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction or a refund under EU Directive 2008/9/EC or the EU 13th Directive refund schemes.

Credit notes. Where the tax base is changed subsequently because of recall, discounts or impossibility of collection, the taxable person that made a supply or performed a service can correct its VAT liability: in the case of revocation or different types of discounts, provided that the taxable person to whom the goods or service were supplied is informed of the correction carried out. In the event of inability to recover all or part of an overdue receivable that has not been collected for more than a year, the tax base can be subsequently reduced within six months calculating from the day when the right to reduce the tax base arose, if all actions of a good businessperson have been carried out. For further details see the Bad debts subsection above.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Croatia, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Croatia. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU). Electronic invoicing is mandatory in public procurement procedures. Additionally, electronic invoicing is mandatory in case of public procurement procedures of "small" value that are carried out on the basis of purchase orders, i.e., for the procurement of goods and services below the thresholds of EUR26,544 and the procurement of work under EUR66,361.

For B2B and B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Croatia. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU (see the chapter on the EU).

In the context of the project Fiscalization 2.0. Croatian government submitted a request to the European Commission to derogate from the provisions of VAT Directive in respect to planned introduction of mandatory e-invoicing in B2B sector. Planned deadline for the introduction of the obligation to issue e-invoices for B2B supplies is 1 January 2026.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Taxable persons that issue or receive electronic invoices or store invoices electronically should, upon request, grant Croatian tax authorities the right to access, download and use these invoices.

For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the chapter on the European Union.

Simplified VAT invoices. A simplified invoice may be issued for supplies made within Croatia (i.e., local supplies) that do not exceed EUR100. A simplified invoice cannot be issued for supplies to other EU Member States where VAT is due by the recipient.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Croatia. An invoice can be issued by the recipient under the condition that there is a prior agreement between the supplier and the recipient for the acceptance of each invoice by the supplier. A prior agreement means that it should be concluded before the start of self-billing. When a customer issues the invoice on behalf of the supplier, the invoice must be marked "self-invoicing" (samoizdavanje računa).

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. Croatian VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods or on intra-Community supplies of goods. However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports and intra-Community supplies must be supported by evidence that the goods have left Croatia/EU. Acceptable proof includes the following documentation:

- For an export, a copy of the export document (customs declaration) officially certified by the customs authorities.
- For an intra-Community supply, two suitable pieces of evidence that goods have been removed from Croatia to another Member State. The pieces of evidence should be issued by two different parties that are independent of each other, of the supplier and of the customer.

No special documentation applies in Croatia for evidencing the application of the Quick Fixes. Normal intra-Community documentation rules apply.

Foreign currency invoices. All amounts stated on an invoice should be in the domestic currency, which is the Euro (EUR). Amounts may also be stated in any other currency if the VAT liability and the total amount of the invoice are stated in EUR, applying the Croatian National Bank's exchange rate applicable on the date when VAT liability occurred. As an alternative, the taxable person may use the exchange rate published by the European Central Bank (ECB) at the time the tax becomes chargeable.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in Croatia. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a full VAT invoice must be issued. However, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, then no full VAT invoice is required unless requested.

Records. In Croatia, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include invoices issued and received, documents used for the VAT exemption, VAT calculations and all other documents relevant for VAT purposes.

In Croatia, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. However, if records are held outside of Croatia, the taxable person must inform the competent branch office of the tax authorities and make the records available to the competent authorities whenever they request so, without undue delay.

Record retention period. According to the provisions of the VAT Act, all issued and received invoices either on paper or electronically, credit notes, export and import documents, documents used for the VAT exemption, VAT calculations and all other documents relevant for VAT purposes should be kept for a period regulated by the General Tax Act. According to the General Tax Act, bookkeeping documents should be archived for the period of 10 years from the date when the statute of limitation commences, i.e., from the year following the year in which the tax return should have been filed, unless longer deadlines are prescribed by special regulations.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Croatia. Bookkeeping documentation, such as invoices, should be archived for at least 10 years starting from the last day of the year following the year to which the business records relate. The bookkeeping documents should be stored in original format (paper or electronic). Taxable persons can make electronic copies of the paper invoices, so long as the authenticity of the original invoices and the legibility and integrity of their content are kept throughout the whole storage period.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Croatian VAT returns are submitted for monthly or quarterly tax periods.

All taxable persons must submit VAT returns electronically. As an exception, VAT returns may be submitted in paper by:

- Taxable persons who are not established in Croatia, have no permanent establishment, domicile or habitual residence in Croatia and perform only occasional international road transport of passengers on the Croatian territory

- Small taxable persons who only receive and perform services for taxable persons from third countries or pay VAT on supplies subject to reverse charge received from taxable persons not established in Croatia

Quarterly tax periods coincide with the months of March, June, September and December. The tax period for a taxable person is determined on the basis of its turnover in the preceding calendar year.

Taxable persons with turnover up to EUR110,000 can submit quarterly tax returns if they do not perform intra-Community supplies. Taxable persons with turnover greater than EUR110,000 submit monthly tax returns.

The tax period for foreign taxable persons (non-established businesses) is always a calendar month. VAT returns must be submitted by the 20th day of the month following the accounting period.

Periodic payments. The VAT payment for the respective tax period must be made no later than the last day of the following month. For instance: the obligation for March must be paid by the last day of April. VAT due must be paid electronically.

Payment is made via bank transfer to the bank account of State Budget of the Republic of Croatia at Croatian National Bank. A special reference number indicating that the payment relates to VAT due must be used (1201 – followed by the taxable person's 11-digit personal identification number (OIB)).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Croatia for all taxable persons. VAT returns are submitted via Croatian tax authorities' web platform, e-Porezna.

The taxable person must obtain an electronic signature for the purposes of filing VAT returns online through the web platform e-Porezna. In practice, taxable persons usually appoint a third-party service provider to submit its VAT returns on their behalf. For this purpose, the third-party service provider needs to be authorized by the taxable person with a special power of attorney.

As an exception, VAT returns may be submitted in paper by:
- The taxable persons who are not established in Croatia, have no permanent establishment, domicile or habitual residence in Croatia and perform only occasional international road transport of passengers on the Croatian territory
- Small taxable persons who only receive and perform services for taxable persons from third countries or pay VAT on supplies subject to reverse charge received from taxable persons not established in Croatia

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Croatia.

Special schemes. Small enterprises. Small businesses whose yearly turnover is below a threshold of EUR40,000 may choose to apply this scheme. Taxable persons applying this scheme do not charge Croatian VAT, as their transactions are exempt from VAT, but they also cannot deduct input tax. Normal VAT filing requirements apply. For further details, see the above subsection Voluntary registration and small businesses.

Tour operator's margin scheme. This scheme applies to travel agents who deal with customers in their own name but use goods or services supplied by other taxable persons. It does not apply to travel agents acting solely as intermediaries. All the transactions in the package are treated as a single service transaction. This service is taxable in the travel agent's home EU Member State. Travel agents are taxed only on the profits (the margin) they make by supplying a travel package. They are not allowed to deduct VAT on goods or services they buy from other businesses. Travel agents providing travel packages outside the EU are exempt from VAT on these transactions.

Normal VAT filing requirements apply. This scheme is applicable only to tour operators established in the EU.

Works of art, secondhand goods, antique goods and public auctions. Taxable dealers of secondhand goods (excludes precious metals and stones) works of art, collectors' items and antiques – as listed in Annex III of the Croatian VAT Act – may choose to apply this scheme. Taxable dealers who choose to use it will pay VAT on their profit margin (difference between buying and selling price). They will not charge or deduct any VAT on transactions covered by this scheme. Organizers of public auctions of secondhand goods, works of art, collectors' items or antiques, who act under a contract and for a commission, on behalf of certain other people/bodies, may also apply this scheme. Normal VAT filing requirements apply.

Investment gold. Supply, intra-EU acquisition, importation and futures and forward transactions leading to a transfer of ownership or claims are exempt from VAT without the right of deduction, as are the services of any intermediaries involved in the supply. Taxable persons who produce investment gold or transform gold into investment gold may waive this exemption for supplies of investment gold to other taxable persons (i.e., to choose to have these supplies taxed). Normal VAT filing requirements apply.

Cash accounting. All taxable persons whose supplies in the preceding calendar year did not exceed EUR2 million (without VAT) may apply the cash accounting scheme. Taxable persons who choose to apply the cash accounting scheme are not able to deduct input tax on invoices received from their suppliers until they have paid them.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Croatia.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. The Intrastat reporting threshold for 2024 is EUR450,000 for arrivals and EUR300,000 for dispatches.

The Intrastat reporting period is monthly, and the report covers the month in which receipts or deliveries occur, i.e., that month in which the goods physically enter or leave the territory of Croatia. When no reportable transactions occur in the respective month, a "nil return" should be filed.

The deadline for submission of the Intrastat form is the 15th day of the month following the reporting period. If the 15th day of the month is a nonworking day, the deadline is the last working day before the 15th day of the month.

The Intrastat report is submitted electronically to the customs authorities by Intrastat application.

EC Sales List. All businesses registered for VAT are required to complete and submit the EC Sales List (ESL) if they do any of the following:
- Make supplies of goods to a VAT-registered customer in another EU Member State
- Act as an intermediate supplier in triangular transactions between VAT-registered businesses in other EU Member States
- Make supplies of services covered by the "general rule" (to which the reverse charge applies in the customer's Member State) to a VAT-registered customer in another EU Member State

The ESL should be filed electronically on the prescribed form by the 20th day of the month following the end of the month in which reportable events occurred. There is no requirement to submit the ESL if there were no reportable sales in the respective month.

EC Acquisitions List. All businesses registered for VAT are required to complete and submit the EC Acquisitions List if they receive supplies of goods or services from a VAT-registered supplier in another EU Member State.

The EC Acquisitions List should be filed electronically on the prescribed form by the 20th day of the month following the end of the month in which reportable events occurred. There is no requirement to file if there were no reportable supplies in the respective month.

Form PPO. Croatian taxable persons supplying goods and services for which the recipient is obliged to calculate and pay VAT in accordance with the domestic reverse-charge mechanism report those supplies on Form PPO. Examples of supplies subject to the domestic reverse-charge mechanism are construction works (repair, maintenance, alteration and demolition services related to immovable property), supply of staff engaged in construction work, supplies of used material and waste. The form is filed electronically on a quarterly basis.

A Croatian taxable person that acts as a VAT representative of a foreign taxable person involved in customs procedures 42 (exemption from VAT for import of goods that are intended for other EU Member States) and 63 (exemption from VAT for re-import of goods that are intended for other EU Member States) should file a report to the Croatian tax authorities by the 20th of the month following the reporting month and disclose the information of the foreign taxable person.

Special evidence for local purchases. Taxable persons that are registered for VAT purposes in Croatia must submit a report outlining all local taxed purchases in Croatia. These are the purchases where Croatian VAT has been incurred. The special evidence is submitted electronically together with the VAT return.

Requirements for payment service providers. To prevent VAT avoidance, in particular from non-residents operating in other EU Member States, payment service providers are required to collect certain payment information. As of 1 January 2024, payment service providers are required to keep sufficiently detailed records of payees and of cross-border payments. The cross-border payment is reported by the payment service provider of the payee in case the payee has its registered seat in the EU. In case the payee has its registered seat outside the EU, the cross-border payment is reported by the payment service provider of the payer.

Correcting errors in previous returns. In case there are errors or omissions in previously filed VAT returns, a corrective return should be submitted online via the tax authorities' web platform, e-Porezna. In addition, a letter that explains the error or omission should also be sent to the tax authorities.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Croatia.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Penalties for non-registration range from EUR260 to EUR66,360 for the company and from EUR130 to EUR6,630 for the responsible person within the company.

Penalties for late payment and filings. For late payment of VAT, the interest rate is calculated based on the average interest rate for the reference period, determined by the ECB and published on 1 January and 1 July in the Official Gazette. As of 1 July 2023, the interest for late payment of VAT is charged at an annual rate of 7%.

Penalties for errors. The penalties for non-registration (see above) may also apply for errors.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty of up to EUR26,540 for a legal entity and up to EUR5,300 for the responsible person within the legal entity for not reporting changes to the tax authorities. For further details, see the above subsection Changes to VAT registration details.

Penalties for fraud. The penalties for non-registration (see above) may also apply for fraud.

If the criminal offense of tax evasion is an amount higher than EUR2,654.46, it is punishable by a term of imprisonment ranging from six months to five years. However, if the criminal offense causes great damage, the term of imprisonment may range from 1 to 10 years.

Personal liability for company officers. A responsible person within the company can be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting. Penalties from EUR260 to EUR2,650 may be imposed for the responsible person within the company in case of errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting.

A responsible person within the company may be a company director, head of finance department or person responsible for VAT reporting. It is not always easy to determine a responsible person within the company. One of the elements that should be considered is the systematization of jobs and the employment contract, the essential content of which includes, among other things, the name of the job, i.e., the nature or type of work for which the worker is employed or a short list or job description. However, the company director still has a certain responsibility and should refer the court to the responsible person, and in that sense attach a contract, internal act or other appropriate evidence for the responsible person.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Croatia is six years. The statute of limitations for the determination of tax liabilities by the tax authorities for a particular tax period expires at the end of the sixth year following the year in which the tax liability has arisen.

The statute of limitations for collection of tax and interest commences in the year following the year in which the taxable person determined the tax liability itself or by the end of the year in which the resolution by which the tax authorities determined the tax liability and interest became enforceable.

The tax authorities can perform a tax audit within three years following the commencement of the statute of limitations. This is considered as a mandatory time limit, the expiry of which has the effect that the tax authorities cease to be entitled to commence a tax audit.

A taxable person is entitled to make voluntary corrections to its VAT returns within three years following the deadline for the submission of the VAT return. If, before the expiration of the three-year time limit, a tax audit is initiated, the corrections to the VAT returns can be made no later than the date of the delivery of the notice on the commencement of the tax audit.

The government announced plans for new regulations and amendments to the Turnover Tax (TOT) Ordinance on 3 March 2023. These new regulations relate to the introduction of withholding and remittance of part of the TOT due by local banks, tax and duty-free shopping for tourists, exemption from import duties on purchases in the Free Economic Zone, the designation of online platform companies as taxpayers for sales tax and the introduction of the cash accounting system. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, no further news had been released.

B. Scope of the tax

TOT applies to the following transactions:
- The delivery of goods or services in Curaçao by a taxable business as part of its business
- The import of goods into Curaçao

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for TOT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Curaçao, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a TOT-registered or TOT-registrable business will be subject to TOT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of TOT. In Curaçao, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of TOT where the following conditions are met:

- The transfer must include elements that encompass whole or part of a taxable business
- The buyer or recipient intends to continue the taxable activities, although it does not have to perform the same activities with these assets as the transferor

Transactions between related parties. In Curaçao, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for GET purposes for transactions between related parties. However, in general an arm's-length compensation should be considered.

C. Who is liable

A taxable business (i.e., a taxable person) is a business entity or individual who delivers goods or performs services (taxable activities) in Curaçao. This includes a representative that supplies services on behalf of a nonresident business. In principle, the business performing the services or delivering the goods is liable for TOT. In some cases, when the reverse-charge mechanism applies, the (business) customer will be liable for TOT on services enjoyed.

The definition of a business was broadened to include an entity or individual who manages an asset to obtain revenue from the asset on a permanent basis. For example, any form of leasing real estate located in Curaçao is subject to TOT, unless an exemption applies.

Exemption from registration. The TOT law in Curaçao does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The TOT law in Curaçao does not contain any provision for voluntary TOT registration, as there is no registration threshold (i.e., all entities that make taxable supplies are obliged to register for TOT).

Group registration. Group TOT registration is not allowed in Curaçao.

Fixed establishment. In Curaçao there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for GET purposes. However, generally a fixed establishment is understood to be a business establishment in Curaçao of an entity established outside of Curaçao, characterized by a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources to enable it to provide the services that it supplies and/or to receive and use the services supplied to it for its own needs. A fixed establishment should be capable of acting as a taxable person independently of the head office.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that does not have a fixed establishment in Curaçao. A non-established business is deemed to have chosen a domicile at the office of the Inspectorate of Taxes, unless the Inspectorate of Taxes has been notified in writing of a different domicile in Curaçao.

Tax representatives. A taxable person may be represented by a third party based on a power of attorney.

Reverse charge. The "reverse charge" generally applies to supplies of services made by non-established businesses to taxable persons established in Curaçao, provided that local TOT is due on these supplies. Under the reverse-charge provision, the recipient of the supply must account for the TOT due. The reverse-charge mechanism does not apply to supplies made to private individuals.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Curaçao.

Digital economy. TOT legislation does not specifically mention any regulations in connection with the digital economy, i.e., special TOT treatment for the supply of electronic or digital services.

For nonresidents providing electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies, TOT is generally applicable on the payment from the customer to the business. This is where the services provided by the non-established business are deemed to take place where the service is enjoyed. Note that electronically provided content is generally treated as a service for turnover tax purposes. For a B2B supply, the reverse-charge mechanism applies. In this case, the customer is expected to self-assess TOT on the payment to the business in its monthly turnover tax returns.

For nonresidents providing electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies, the supplier must register and account for TOT in Curaçao on such supplies.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Curaçao.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Curaçao.

Registration procedures. In general, a taxable entity that begins taxable activities must register with the Inspectorate of Taxes by filing a hard copy letter requesting registration along with some additional required documentation. Completion of the registration process may take from one week up through a few weeks.

TOT registration does not require a specific form, but application should be made in writing. The registration requires an indication of all taxes in scope and relevant estimations and, if applicable, power of attorney.

When registering a business, copies of the following documents must be submitted.

In case of a sole proprietorship/contractor:
- ID card/passport
- Chamber of commerce registration
- Business license

In case of a NV/BV/other legal entities, the following documents should be submitted additionally:
- Deed of incorporation
- Director's license

Deregistration. For the deregistration with the Inspectorate of Taxes, a taxable person should provide proof of deregistration as issued by the Curaçao Chamber of Commerce and some additional documentation. The deregistration with the tax authorities should be completed once all tax filing and payment obligations have been met by the taxable person.

Changes to TOT registration details. For any changes to a taxable person's TOT registration details (in particular a change in address but includes any change that could impact the tax position), they must notify the tax authorities (in writing) within one month after the change takes place.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of TOT.

The TOT rates are:
- Standard rate: 6%
- Special rates: 7%, 9%

The standard rate of TOT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a different rate or exemption.

Examples of services taxable at 7%

- Insurance (exemption for life insurance, funeral insurance, health insurance, reinsurance by insurance companies and services provided by brokers)
- Hotel accommodation

Examples of goods and services taxable at 9%

- Import of most goods
- Sale of motor vehicles
- Food prepared and suitable for immediate consumption
- Soft drinks with exception of fruit juices
- Alcoholic beverages
- Tobacco products
- Digital equipment for the storage of films, games and similar data
- Mobile phones and other means of communication
- Weapons and ammunition
- Fireworks
- Christmas trees (except synthetic Christmas trees)
- Motor vehicle rental
- Recreational outings for pleasure
- Scuba diving
- Admission to cinemas, expositions, adult entertainment and permanent recreational facilities
- Film and computer game rental
- Providing food, drinks and alcoholic beverages for consumption in hotels, bars, restaurants and related venues
- Participation in lottery games

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to TOT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Exports of goods (subject to evidence the goods have left Curaçao)
- Medical services
- Water and electricity services
- Public transportation services
- Betting and gaming (casinos)
- Postal services
- Services and goods to an oil refinery
- Bread
- Eggs
- Rice
- Potatoes
- Grain
- Flour
- Baby food
- Fruits and vegetables
- Bottled water
- Foreign-orientated activities of businesses in the possession of a foreign exchange license
- Liquefied natural gas by or through the intermediary of an LNG transfer station

- Certain services provided to companies or individuals that are in the possession of a foreign exchange license
- Sales to cruise tourists by qualifying taxable persons

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Curaçao.

E. Time of supply

The time when TOT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." In principle, the time of supply for taxable supplies is the date on which the invoice is issued or should have been issued.

In Curaçao, an invoice must be issued by the 15th day of the month following the month in which the supply takes place. The actual tax point becomes the date on which the invoice is issued. However, if no invoice is issued, tax becomes due, at the latest, on the day on which the invoice should have been issued.

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply rule for deposits and prepayments is the earlier of when an invoice has been issued, or should have been issued, for the delivery of goods or rendering of services.

Continuous supplies of services. The time of supply rule for continuous supplies of services is the earlier of when an invoice has been issued, or should have been issued, for the delivery of goods or rendering of services.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Curaçao for supplies of goods sent for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (see above).

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Curaçao for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (see above).

Leased assets. There are no special time of supply rules in Curaçao for supplies of leased assets. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (see above).

Imported goods. There are no special time of supply rules in Curaçao for supplies of imported goods. As such, the general time of supply rule applies, and the time of supply is considered to be the moment of importation.

F. Recovery of TOT by taxable persons

In principle, the recovery of TOT by taxable business is not allowed in Curaçao.

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Curaçao. This means that, effectively, the input tax may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery. However, while in principle there is no time limit, a taxable person must have a valid decree allowing it to effectuate the deduction of input tax. The decree must be renewed upon expiration.

Nondeductible input tax. In general, TOT is nondeductible in Curaçao. However, with regard to the import of goods, an entrepreneur may, subject to certain conditions and instructions, request the Inspectorate of Taxes to approve a 50% deduction of TOT.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Input tax due on services to a manufacturer with services that are not directly related to the production of taxable goods by such manufacturer in Curaçao.

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- TOT paid by the selling business on the import of a commodity

- TOT paid on the import of raw materials, semi-finished products and packing materials used for exported goods produced by the importing business

Fifty percent of TOT paid on imports is recovered by deducting it against TOT due in the TOT return for each TOT period. If the input tax exceeds TOT due in a period, the excess may be carried forward to the following TOT period and subsequent periods.

Partial exemption. In general, TOT is nondeductible in Curaçao. As such, there is no distinction between input tax incurred in relation to exempt and taxable supplies. Consequently, the TOT legislation does not specifically mention any regulations in connection with partial exemption.

Capital goods. In general, TOT is nondeductible in Curaçao. As such, there are no special rules regarding input tax incurred in relation to capital goods. Consequently, the TOT legislation does not specifically mention any regulations in connection with capital goods.

Refunds. In general, TOT is nondeductible in Curaçao. As such refunds are not allowed.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in Curaçao is not recoverable.

Bad debts. When an amount receivable will not be paid (in full), businesses can reclaim the remitted TOT. Entitlement to a TOT refund arises when it is established that a receivable will not be paid partially or in full, at the moment that this can be determined. Entitlement to a refund arises when it becomes clear the debtor will not pay its receivable. The refund request is not included in the regular TOT return, a separate request must in principle be made with the Curaçao tax authorities. Note that if a receivable has been marked as a "bad debt," and then is subsequently paid (in full or partially) after the overpaid TOT has been refunded, the business will have to repay (in full or partially) the refunded TOT.

Specifically, a refund of TOT can be requested if certain conditions are met, and the taxable person is sufficiently able to prove the following:
- The TOT paid was not actually due
- Payment for the supplied goods or services will eventually not be received by the taxable person
- Payment is reimbursed by the taxable person following the reduction of the amount due or in the event that the goods have been returned unused

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Curaçao.

G. Recovery of TOT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for TOT in Curaçao is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

TOT invoices. A taxable person must provide a receipt or invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports. The invoice must be issued within 15 days after the end of the month in which the goods were delivered, or the services were rendered. The invoice must include certain information of the supplier, such as address and tax identification number and the transaction.

Credit notes. A TOT credit note must be issued if the quantity or consideration shown on an invoice is altered. In general, credit notes must contain the same information as the original invoices.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Curaçao, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Curaçao.

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Curaçao.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Simplified TOT invoices. Simplified TOT invoices are allowed for certain industries. This includes entrepreneurs active in the hospitality industry, repair of retail products and sale of retail products, as well as entrepreneurs providing personal services. Such suppliers are required to provide a receipt to their customers instead of a full TOT invoice. A simplified version of a TOT invoice is a tax receipt, which should be provided at the time of transaction and contain the base information regarding the supplier and the transaction (rate, etc.).

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Curaçao.

Proof of exports. To qualify for the TOT exemption applicable to the export of goods, the following documents are required for the business's administration:
- A copy of the issued invoice
- A proof of payment
- Transport documentation evidencing that the goods have left the levy territory

Foreign currency invoices. All amounts indicated on an invoice can be in a foreign currency provided that the amount of TOT due is indicated in the domestic currency, which is the Antillean guilders (ANG).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. The Curaçao TOT legislation does not have any special rules for TOT invoices issued to private consumers. However, retailers, businesses that provide personal services, businesses in the catering industry ("horeca") and lottery vendors are required to use a cash register system, and in principle, they will need to issue receipts to their customers. All other businesses will need to issue invoices.

Records. In Curaçao, examples of what records must be held for TOT purposes include records of their assets and of everything relating to their business activities. Such records are required to be held in such a manner that at any time their rights, obligations and all other information relevant for tax purposes are clear and readily available within a reasonable time frame upon request from the tax authorities. Copies of all AR invoices and foreign AP invoices for services must be kept, as well as export documentation.

In Curaçao, TOT books and records can be kept outside of the country. Records may be kept outside Curaçao, provided these can be presented upon request of the tax authorities and the integrity and authenticity of the documents is safeguarded.

Record retention period. Records, invoices and other accounting information must be kept for 10 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Curaçao.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. TOT returns can be filed on a monthly or annual basis. TOT returns are generally submitted for monthly periods. Returns must be filed by the 15th day of the month following the end of the reporting period.

The Inspectorate of Taxes may allow the filing of an annual TOT return instead of monthly TOT returns in one of the following situations:
- It concerns a small enterprise (see below under the Special schemes subsection)
- The taxable person almost exclusively provides TOT-exempt supplies and the TOT taxable revenue does not exceed the threshold of ANG30,000

The annual tax return (and payment) is due on 15 February following the respective calendar year.

Periodic payments. TOT due must be paid by the 15th day of the month following the end of the reporting period. The TOT due for the period must be remitted together with the return.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Curaçao for all taxable persons. TOT returns must be filed electronically upon online registration with the tax authorities (http:/www.online.belastingdienst.cw).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Curaçao.

Special schemes. Small enterprises. A small enterprise is a resident individual who has a business or permanent establishment in Curaçao and who had turnover (excluding TOT) in the preceding calendar year of ANG30,000 or less. If a request is filed with the Inspectorate of Taxes and it is granted, a small enterprise is not liable for TOT. However, the small enterprise must still submit TOT returns for monthly periods. Upon request of the small enterprise, the small enterprise may submit annual TOT returns.

If the annual turnover of ANG30,000 is exceeded in any year, TOT is due on the excess amount. Furthermore, the business will also lose its status as a small enterprise.

The arrangement for small enterprises mentioned above does not apply to businesses who manage real estate to obtain revenue from the real estate on a permanent basis.

Nonprofit organizations. Supplies by organizations of a social, cultural, charitable, sports or religious nature may also be exempt from TOT if there is no profit motive nor distortion of competition.

Gambling companies. The term "gambling" refers to the participation in lottery and bingo games. If the exploiter is a non-established business, the organizer or the contract arranger of the gambling games is liable for TOT.

E-zones. In principle, E-zone companies are not liable for TOT as the economic zone is excluded from the levy area.

Offshore companies and onshore banks. Companies and banks that are taxed under the so-called offshore tax regime and hold a foreign-exchange license are generally business liable for TOT but exempt for their foreign-orientated activities. The offshore regime is grandfathered up to and including the year 2019. Foreign-orientated activities of businesses in the possession of a foreign exchange license are exempt, as well as certain services provided to businesses in the possession of a foreign exchange license.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Curaçao.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Curaçao.

Correcting errors in previous returns. In case a taxable person needs to correct any errors, they will need to file a new return over the respective period or a reconciliation return. A taxable person can also file an objection against an incorrectly filed return and thus reclaim an overpayment.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Curaçao.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. There is no specific penalty in Curaçao for the late registration of TOT. However, if the late registration results in the late payment of TOT or the late submission of TOT returns, penalties may be imposed.

Penalties for late payment and filings. TOT penalties are imposed for the late submission of a TOT return or for the late payment of TOT, in the following amounts:
- For the late submission of a TOT return, the maximum fine is ANG2,500.
- For the late payment of TOT, the maximum fine is ANG10,000.
- If the late payment is caused by negligence, fault or intent, a fine of 100% of the TOT payable may be imposed.

Penalties for errors. A negligence tax penalty of up to 100% of the additional tax due can be imposed if the deficit is attributable to the intent or gross negligence of the taxable person.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's TOT registration details can result in a regular administrative penalty.

Penalties for fraud. Criminal penalties may also apply in certain circumstances, such as in cases of fraudulent conduct.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers cannot be held personally liable for errors and omissions in TOT declarations and reporting in Curaçao.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Curaçao is five years. However, in the case of bad faith, this increases to 10 years.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of goods or services made in Cyprus by a taxable person
- The intra-Community acquisition of goods from another European Union (EU) Member State by a taxable person (see the chapter on the EU)
- Reverse-charge services received by a taxable person in Cyprus
- The importation of goods from outside the EU, regardless of the status of the importer

Special rules apply to intra-Community transactions involving new means of transport and distance sales (see the chapter on the EU).

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the chapter on the EU. For documentary requirements see Section H. Invoicing. Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

The Cyprus government has partially implemented into domestic law the Quick Fixes provisions with effect from 1 January 2020. Specifically, Cyprus VAT law has up to now implemented the provisions relevant to the four Quick Fixes being the simplified treatment of call-off stock transactions (for sales of goods stored in another Member State), the requirement for evidence/proof that the goods have been actually transported to another Member State, the simplification rules for chain transactions and the existence of a valid VAT registration number of the recipient of the goods for applying the VAT exemption/zero rate.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In Cyprus, the following services are subject to the use and enjoyment provisions:
- Hiring of means of transport
- Hire of goods
- Broadcasting services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies only
- Electronically supplied services
- Telecommunication services
- Transport of good services

Transfer of a going concern. In Cyprus, a transfer of a going concern (TOGC) is not a taxable transaction, subject to the following conditions:

- The result of the transfer is that the new owner acquires a business that can operate as such.
- The business or part of it is a going concern at the time of the transfer.
- The assets transferred will be used by the new owner for the same type of business activities.
- No successive transfers should take place.
- The new owner should be VAT registered or become liable to register as a result of the transfer or registered voluntarily.
- There is no significant interruption of business operations.
- For partial transfers of a business, the part that is transferred should be able to operate independently.

Transactions between related parties. There are provisions within the VAT legislation with respect to related party transactions being applicable, where involved parties do not have the full/partial right to recover input tax.

Cyprus follows the rules as per the EU Directive regarding arm's-length adjustments on the taxable amount for related entities. Specifically, when the value of a transaction (supply of goods/services) is carried out by a taxable person for consideration and that person is related with the recipient of the supply, who does not have the full/partial right to recover input tax, the Cyprus Tax Commissioner may adjust the value of the transaction to be equal to the market value.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is any business entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services or intra-Community acquisitions or distance sales in the course of a business in Cyprus.

A person making taxable supplies must register at the end of any month if the value of taxable supplies in the year ended on the last day of that month exceeds EUR15,600. A person exceeding this threshold must notify the Tax Commissioner by submitting Form T.F. 2001, "Application for registration of a new taxable person and issue of tax identification number," and Form T.F. 1101, "Supplementary application for registration to the VAT registry," to the local VAT office within 30 days after the end of the relevant month. Registration is effective from the end of the month following the relevant month or from such earlier date as may be agreed.

If a person makes a supply of services to a taxable person in another EU Member State and if such services are taxable where the recipient of the services is established, the person making the supply must register from the date of making the supply. A person making such supply must notify the Tax Commissioner by submitting Form T.F. 2001, "Application for registration of a new taxable person and issue of tax identification number," and Form T.F. 1101, "Supplementary application for registration to the VAT registry," to the local VAT office within 30 days after the creation of the obligation. Registration is effective as of the date of the creation of the obligation.

A person must register for VAT purposes if reasonable grounds exist for believing that taxable supplies in the next 30 days will exceed EUR15,600. The taxable person must submit Form T.F. 2001, "Application for registration of a new taxable person and issue of tax identification number," and Form T.F. 1101, "Supplementary application for registration to the VAT registry," to the local VAT office within the 30 days and registration is effective from the beginning of that 30-day period.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Cyprus does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Cyprus contains a provision for voluntary registration for VAT for taxable persons who have a business establishment in Cyprus, or their usual place of residence is in Cyprus and make supplies outside Cyprus (that would be treated as taxable supplies if made within Cyprus).

Group registration. VAT grouping is possible for two or more taxable legal persons (i.e., companies) registered in Cyprus. The following are the principal aspects of grouping:
- One member of the group is appointed as the representative member.
- The representative member is responsible for the preparation and submission of the VAT returns and for paying or reclaiming any VAT on behalf of all group members.
- Any business carried on by a member of the group is treated as being carried on by the representative member.
- Any supply of goods or services performed by a member of the group to another member of the group is disregarded.
- Any supply of goods or services by or to a third party is treated as a supply to or by the representative member.
- All members of the group are jointly and severally liable for any VAT payable and/or penalties owed by the representative member. In addition, former members of the group continue to be liable for tax debts incurred during the time they were members of the group.

The tax authorities have discretion to dismiss a VAT group application for the purpose of protecting public revenue.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group.

Holding companies. In Cyprus, a pure holding company cannot be a member of a VAT group. However, there is scope to further examine applicability on a case-by-case basis.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f)) has been implemented in Cyprus. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, providing certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Cyprus VAT law).

Fixed establishment. A foreign business has a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in Cyprus if there is a sufficient degree of permanence and a suitable structure in terms of human and technical resources to receive and use or to make the respective supplies. Simply having a VAT identification number does not in itself mean that an establishment qualifies as a fixed establishment.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in Cyprus. A non-established business that makes supplies of goods or services in Cyprus must register for VAT if it is liable to account for Cypriot VAT on the supply or if it makes intra-Community supplies or acquisitions of goods.

Consequently, a non-established business must register for Cypriot VAT if it makes any of the following supplies:
- Intra-Community supplies
- Intra-Community acquisitions
- Distance sales in excess of the threshold
- Supplies of goods and services that are not subject to the reverse charge (e.g., goods or services supplied to private persons)
- Supplies of services that are taxable in Cyprus if the reverse charge is not applicable to the recipient

Tax representatives. The VAT authorities may instruct any taxable person that does not have any business establishment, fixed establishment or usual place of residence within the EU to appoint a VAT representative to act on its behalf with respect to VAT. This representative is personally liable for any VAT that is not paid. In most instances where a taxable person is established in Switzerland, a VAT representative appointment is not required.

If the taxable person fails to appoint a VAT representative, the Tax Commissioner may require the taxable person to provide adequate security for the payment of any VAT that is or may become due.

Reverse charge. The reserve-charge mechanism applies in situations where services subject to specific exceptions are supplied by a person outside Cyprus to a person who is carrying on a business in Cyprus. The recipient is treated as having made the supply himself and as if that supply was a taxable supply and thus must account for output tax. The person will then have the right to claim a corresponding amount as input tax, subject to their partial exemption status.

The reverse charge should be treated like output tax with a corresponding credit for input tax depending on the ability of a person to recover input tax.

Domestic reverse charge. If a taxable person provides services or services together with goods in the context of construction, alteration, demolition, repair or maintenance of a building or any civil engineering project, including services provided by developers, contractors, architects, civil engineers and quantity surveyors, to another taxable person who receives these in the furtherance of his business, then the supplier will not charge VAT.

With effect from 20 August 2020, the obligation of a taxable person to self-account for VAT by applying the reverse-charge mechanism on the above services has been extended to cases where the supplier of the services is not a taxable person. The requirement for the reverse charge is on the taxable person, whereby the supplier of the aforementioned construction services is not VAT registered. Such provision introduced for instances where the suppliers have fluctuating volume of services and/or did not register for VAT purposes.

The customer must account for the VAT in accordance with the reverse-charge rules. Reverse charge is also applicable for the recipient where a property supply arises under relevant restructuring laws or foreclosure procedures.

This amendment has been introduced as part of a package of measures in Cyprus to improve tax collection and to tackle VAT fraud by so practitioners. This implies that if a person provides construction services of low value and not registered for VAT purposes, the recipient (being a taxable person) of construction services would have an obligation to self-account for VAT through the reverse charge. The Cyprus tax authorities did not impose a threshold for such reverse-charge application.

The supply of scrap and/or precious metals to a taxable person that acquires these materials in the course of the furtherance of their business is also subject to the local reverse charge. The purchaser must account for the VAT in accordance with the reverse-charge rules outlined above.

Moreover, with effect from 1 October 2020, the supply of mobile phones, other devices operating in networks, microprocessors, central processing units, gaming consoles, tablets and laptops is subject to a local reverse charge. The purchaser will also need to account for VAT in accordance with the reverse-charge rules, with immediate right for input tax recovery.

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (i.e., e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021. These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules, because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see the Section B. Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:

- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.

- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000 with effect from 1 July 2021). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" (OSS) mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, an e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Note that the European e-commerce rules (as outlined below) were transposed into the Cyprus VAT law via a number of regulations and amendments published in the Official Gazette of the Republic in December 2021. The rules have a retrospective effect (i.e., effective from July 2021).

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the non-established businesses subsection above).

In Cyprus, to register for VAT it is necessary for the nonresident supplier to have an establishment in Cyprus or appoint a representative. Registration is made via the submission of a Form T.F. 2001 to the VAT authorities. In case the nonresident supplier will appoint a representative, it is necessary to also submit form 104,

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:
- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

In Cyprus, registration for OSS can be made online (https://tax-oss.mof.gov.cy/login). For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance ales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT.

For more details about the IOSS, see the chapter on the EU.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

Postal Services and Couriers Scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the chapter on the EU.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules, effective 1 July 2021, taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:

- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). The intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State, as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. As from 1 January 2019, the Cypriot VAT treatment of vouchers is determined in line with the EU VAT Directive. In essence, the Cypriot VAT law provides definitions of what constitutes a voucher separating a single-purpose voucher (SPV) and a multi-purpose voucher (MPV) according to their contractual terms and conditions.

A SPV is a voucher for which the country of supply is known at the time of the issue and the goods/services that can be redeemed are subject to one VAT rate (one of 5% or 9% or 19%). VAT is accounted at the time of issue or subsequent transfer (sale) of the voucher.

An MPV is a voucher for which at the time of its payment, the nature of goods/services that will be delivered is not known. VAT is accounted at the time of redemption. Issue and subsequent transfer (sale) is not subject to VAT.

Registration procedures. A person making taxable supplies must be registered at the end of any month if the value of the taxable supplies in a period of 12 months has exceeded EUR15,600. The person must notify the VAT authorities by submitting in person Form T.F. 2001, "Application for registration of a new taxable person and issue of tax identification number," and Form T.F. 1101, "Supplementary application for registration to the VAT registry," to the local VAT office within 30 days of the end of the relevant month. A person is also liable to register if there are reasonable grounds for believing that taxable supplies in the next 30 days will exceed EUR15,600, also by submitting Form T.F. 2001, "Application for registration of a new taxable person and issue of tax identification number," and Form T.F. 1101, "Supplementary application for registration to the VAT registry," to the local VAT office within 30 days. Online registration is not available, and the process can be completed within one to four weeks.

Deregistration. Registration is canceled in the following cases:
- Decreasing business turnover. Where any registered person notifies the Tax Commissioner that the value of taxable supplies in one year has fallen below EUR13,668.81 and applies for cancellation of his registration, then an authorized VAT officer, if satisfied of this fact, shall cancel the registration with effect from the date of the notification or from any other later date as may be agreed between the Tax Commissioner and that person.
- Termination of taxable supplies or termination of the intention to make taxable supplies. When a registered person ceases to make taxable supplies and is not entitled to remain registered or ceases to have the intention to make taxable supplies, it must notify the Tax Commissioner within 60 days of the date of the termination by submitting an Application for Cancellation of Registration (Form VAT 204). Failing to comply, the person is liable to a levy of EUR85. If an authorized VAT officer is satisfied of the fact of the termination, it must cancel the registration with effect from the date that the person ceased to make taxable supplies or ceased to have the intention of making taxable supplies or from any other later date as may be agreed between the VAT officer and that person.
- Deregistration in the case of distance sales. A person registered for making or intending to make distance sales in Cyprus is liable to apply for deregistration when it no longer makes or intends to make distance sales in Cyprus and it is not liable to register in Cyprus for any other taxable transactions.
- Deregistration in the case of acquisitions. A person registered for making or intending to make acquisitions in Cyprus is liable to apply for deregistration when that person no longer makes or intends to make acquisitions in Cyprus.
- Retrospective cancellation of registration. If the VAT officer is satisfied that on a specified date, a registered person was neither entitled nor liable to be registered, the VAT officer can cancel the registration with effect from that date.

Changes to VAT registration details. If there are changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details, they must notify the tax authorities immediately (i.e., as soon as it comes to the knowledge of the taxable person) by submitting Form T.F 2003. Online submission is not available. There is no specific deadline or penalties that apply for such notification.

D. Rates

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Real estate (except: "new buildings," transfer of developed building land intended for the construction of structures in the course of carrying out a business activity, and leasing of immovable property to taxable persons for taxable business activities, for which a permanent non-imposition of VAT can be exercised by the lessor)
- Services of doctors and dentists
- Social welfare
- Finance (except Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunications [SWIFT] services)
- Insurance and reinsurance
- Human organs
- Education services

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Cyprus.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point."

For a supply of goods, the tax point is the earliest of the following:
- The date of delivery of goods
- The date of issuance of the invoice
- The date of payment

For a supply of services, the tax point is the earliest of the following:
- The date of completion or performance of the services
- The date of issuance of the invoice
- The date of payment

If an invoice is issued within 14 days after the date of delivery of the goods or the performance of the services, the tax point is the invoice date, unless this date is overridden by the date of an earlier payment. The period of 14 days may be extended with the approval of the VAT authorities.

Deposits and prepayments. Prepayments create a tax point for Cypriot VAT purposes for the value of the paid amount. However, in the case of intra-Community supplies, a prepayment does not create a tax point for Cypriot VAT purposes.

Continuous supplies of services. In the case that no invoices have been issued and/or no payments have been made for a period of a calendar year, an annual tax point is created.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. Goods sent for "sale or return" are considered as a supply of goods for VAT purposes, only where it is certain that the sale will take place (i.e., client shows intention to keep the goods or pays for the goods).

If no sale or return of the goods takes place within a period of 12 months and the 12-month period has elapsed, then the tax point is created at 12 months. Where it is certain that the sale will take place, the normal tax point rules in relation to goods apply (as per the above) being the earliest of delivery, invoice issuance or payment.

Reverse-charge services. For reverse-charge supplies, the tax point is the earliest of:
- The date of completion or performance of the services
- The date of issuance of the invoice
- The date of payment

For continuous supplies of reverse-charge services, refer to the paragraph below for continuous supplies of services.

Leased assets. There are no special time of supply rules in Cyprus for supplies of leased assets. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above). In accordance with Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) case law, financial leases where the economic rationale lies in acquiring the asset at the end of the lease may be considered to be supplies of goods and VAT on the full amount of the asset's value is due from the onset of the lease.

Imported goods. The time of the supply for imported goods is either the date of importation or the date on which the goods leave a duty suspension regime

Intra-Community acquisitions. For an intra-Community acquisition of goods, the tax point is the earliest of the following:
- The 15th day of the month following the month in which the goods are sent
- The date of issuance of the invoice by the supplier

Intra-Community supplies. For an intra-Community supply of goods, the tax point is the earliest of the following:
- The 15th day of the month following the month in which the supplier sent the goods, or the recipient receives them to transfer them outside Cyprus
- The date of the issuance of the invoice by the supplier

Distance sales. There are no special time of supply rules in Cyprus for supplies of distance sales. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. Input tax is generally recovered by deduction from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied within Cyprus, VAT paid on imports of goods and VAT self-assessed on the intra-Community acquisition of goods and reverse-charge services (see the chapter on the EU).

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Cyprus is six years. This is from the date of submission of the relevant VAT return with a refundable balance, unless otherwise approved by the Tax Commissioner.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Purchase, hire and lease of saloon cars
- Accommodation, food and entertainment (other than for employees)
- Private expenditure

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Purchase, hire, lease and maintenance for vans and trucks
- Fuel
- Parking costs
- Attending conferences, seminars and training courses
- Business gifts (if valued at more than EUR17.09, output tax is due)
- Business use of home telephone
- Mobile phones (the invoices must be issued in the name of the business)
- Advertising

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to the making of exempt supplies is generally not recoverable. If a Cypriot taxable person makes both exempt and taxable supplies, it may not recover input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption."

Input tax directly relating to taxable supplies is fully recoverable and input tax directly relating to exempt supplies is not recoverable. Non-attributable input tax (i.e., common expenses) must be apportioned. The standard method for apportioning input tax is to multiply non-attributable input tax by the ratio of the value of taxable supplies to the value of total supplies.

The services supplied by businesses in the insurance and financial sectors are generally exempt from VAT, with no right to input tax deduction. However, input tax paid by businesses that provide insurance and financial services, such as insurance companies, banks and other financial institutions, may be reclaimed if these services are supplied to persons established in countries outside the EU. Services covered by this measure include the supply of life and general insurance, the granting of loans and other credit facilities, the operation of bank accounts, foreign-exchange dealings and transactions that relate to shares, bonds and other securities.

If a business provides services described above to customers both in the EU and outside the EU, the amount of refundable input tax is apportioned accordingly.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Cyprus. However, while it is not a mandatory requirement, it is recommended for the apportionment method to be confirmed with the authorities in advance through a VAT ruling.

The tax authorities expect a fair and reasonable method to be applied with respect to input tax calculation. There are provisions within the domestic regulations that allow for special methods to be used as long as advance approval is obtained from the Cyprus Tax Department.

Capital goods. Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is deducted in the VAT year in which the goods are acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition and first use. However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted over time if the taxable person's partial exemption recovery percentage changes during the adjustment period.

The capital goods scheme in Cyprus applies to the following transactions:
- The acquisition of tangible fixed assets maintained and used by a business (the cost of repairs and maintenance are not included in the value of the tangible fixed assets) and intangible fixed assets, such as the use of property rights, trademarks, patents and goodwill, that have more than one use and a value of EUR17,086 or more.
- The transfer of all or part of a building including the land if the transfer takes place before the first occupation.
- The transfer of ownership of all or part of a building including the land under a sales or lease agreement that is transferred at the end of the agreement, if the transfer takes place before the first occupation.
- The construction of buildings constructed by a taxable person on immovable property not owned by the taxable person.

The input tax adjustment lasts for a period of five years for the capital goods except for immovable property for which the input tax adjustment lasts for a period of 10 years.

The adjustment is applied each year following the year of acquisition to a fraction of the total input tax. The adjustment may result in either an increase or a decrease of deductible input tax, depending on whether the ratio of taxable supplies made by the business has increased or decreased compared with the year in which the capital goods were acquired and first used.

In Cyprus, the capital goods adjustment does not apply to any services.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a quarterly period exceeds the amount of output tax payable in that period, the taxable person has an input tax credit. The input tax credit is offset against future payments, or it is refunded to the taxable person after submission of a claim electronically through the "Tax For All" system if the input tax relates to one of the following categories:
- The making of zero-rated supplies
- The supply of services provided outside Cyprus
- The acquisition of fixed assets
- The taxable supplies of the taxable person

In addition, late refunds may be eligible for interest under certain conditions.

Pre-registration costs. VAT costs paid on the purchase of services during the six months prior to the effective date of registration can be recovered, and for the purchase of goods, the recoverable period is three years prior to the effective date of registration.

Bad debts. Where a taxable supply has been made, VAT has to be accounted and paid for with reference to the quarter in which the tax point falls, irrespective of whether payment has been received from the customer. VAT can be recovered after making a claim to the Commissioner of VAT on the grounds that payment from the customer has not been received provided that:
- The VAT on the supply has been paid to the VAT authorities.
- The consideration for the supply has been written off in the vendor's records as a bad debt.
- All necessary steps to recover the consideration have been taken.
- A period of 12 months has elapsed.

A claim must be made within a period of four years following the later of:
- The date on which the consideration that has been written off as a bad debt becomes due and payable
  Or
- The date of supply

Where the purchaser is a taxable person, the claimant must notify that purchaser that bad debt relief is being claimed.

Noneconomic activities. A taxable person who is engaged in noneconomic activities, such as holding activities, may not deduct input tax on local and reverse-charge expenses that are directly related to noneconomic activities.

A taxable person that carries out both economic and noneconomic activities and that purchases local and reverse-charge services relating both to its economic and noneconomic activities must apply a reasonable basis for the apportionment of the input tax on the general overhead expenses to economic and noneconomic activities. A taxable person may deduct the portion of input tax based on this reasonable percentage of input tax attributed to economic activities of the taxable person.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Cyprus is recoverable. The Cypriot VAT authorities refund VAT incurred by businesses that are not established in Cyprus and that are not registered for VAT in the country. Non-established businesses may claim Cypriot VAT to the same extent as VAT-registered businesses.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, a refund is made under the terms of the EU 2008/9/EC Directive. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business is not established and/or registered for VAT in Cyprus and did not perform any taxable supplies in Cyprus during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge). For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Find below specific rules for Cyprus:
- For a person registered for VAT in an EU country, a claim for repayment must be made by 30 September of the calendar year following the refund period. To obtain a refund of Cypriot VAT, a taxable person not established and/or registered for VAT in Cyprus must submit an application in electronic format in the EU Member State of its establishment via the electronic portal of that Member State.
- If the refund application relates to a refund period of less than one calendar year but not less than three months, the minimum amount of VAT for which an application for a refund can be submitted is EUR400. If the refund application relates to a refund period of a calendar year or the remainder of a calendar year, the minimum amount of VAT for which an application for a refund can be submitted is EUR50.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive. For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

For a person established in a country outside the EU, the refund system applies if that country provides reciprocal arrangements for similar repayments to be made to Cypriot businesses. In addition, to take advantage of this refund system, the person must not be established or registered in any of the other EU Member States. Cyprus has a reciprocity agreement with Switzerland for the refund of 13th Directive VAT claims. Cyprus also provides refunds on the basis of reciprocity to Norway and Israel. In the event of such refund applications, advance consultation ought to be sought.

For persons established in a country outside the EU, claims with respect to VAT incurred in the one-year period from 1 July to 30 June must be made within six months of the end of that one-year period (i.e., by 31 December).

Claims may be submitted in Greek language. The application for refund must be accompanied by the appropriate documentation (see the chapter on the EU).

The minimum claim period is three months; the maximum period is one year. The minimum claim for a period of less than a year is EUR25.63. For an annual claim, the minimum amount is EUR205.03.

Applications for refunds of Cypriot VAT may be sent to the following address:

Commissioner of Tax
VAT Headquarters
1471 Nicosia
Cyprus

Late payment interest. In case of late VAT refund payments to EU businesses, according to the Directive n° 2008/9/EC, implemented in the Cyprus VAT law, Cyprus must pay late payment interest at a rate of 2.25% per year for late refund payments (i.e., payments made later than 10 days following the day of the approval of the refund application).

In Cyprus, interest is not paid on late refunds to non-EU non-established businesses.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A Cypriot taxable person must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports and intra-Community supplies. Invoices are not automatically required for retail transactions valued at less than EUR85 (if the supply is not to a person in another EU Member State), unless requested by the customer.

A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction or a refund under the EU 2008/9/EC Directive or 13th Directive refund schemes (see the chapter on the EU).

An invoice should be issued, if a prepayment has been received for the supply of goods or services to a customer.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply of goods or services. Credit notes adjusting the initial amount of VAT charged may be issued if a genuine mistake or overcharge has been made or if agreement on a discount has been reached. To be valid for VAT purposes, the credit note must be issued within one month after the date on which the mistake is discovered or the agreement on the discount is reached. It must be marked "Credit Note" and contain details of the original supply and the circumstances under which the credit is given (e.g., the return of faulty goods).

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Cyprus, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Cyprus. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU and 2014/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU).

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Cyprus. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the chapter on the European Union.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified invoices are allowed for retail supplies where the gross value does not exceed EUR85. Such invoices must contain the name, address and VAT number of the supplier, the date of issue, a description of goods supplied, the total gross value of the goods inclusive of VAT, as well as for each applicable VAT rate – the total amount payable inclusive of VAT together with the applicable VAT rate.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Cyprus. Cyprus VAT law permits self-billing upon pre-approval from the Tax Commissioner and subject to certain conditions in line with the EU VAT Directive. The person operating the self-billing system is liable for any understated VAT. There are various requirements for self-billing and the mutual consent of the two parties is a prerequisite. Such requirements among others include:
- The existence of a self-billing agreement between the parties, whereby the customer will be authorized to bill itself for supplies by the supplier (no invoicing by supplier).
- Period for the effect of such agreement is 12 months, unless prolonged by the Tax Commissioner.
- Self-billing documentation to be signed by both parties.

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. Cypriot VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods or on intra-Community supplies of goods (see the chapter on the EU). However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports and intra-Community supplies must be supported by evidence that the goods have left Cyprus. Acceptable proof includes the following documentation:
- For an export, a copy of the export document, officially validated by the Department of Customs and Excise, showing the supplier as the exporter
- For an intra-Community supply, a range of commercial documentation, such as purchase orders, transport documentation, proof of payment and contracts

No special documentation applies in Cyprus for evidencing the application of the Quick Fixes. Normal intra-Community documentation rules apply. Normal documentation rules apply.

Foreign currency invoices. If Cypriot VAT is charged on an invoice, the invoice must be issued in euros (EUR). If an invoice is issued in a foreign currency, the amount before VAT and the VAT amount must be converted to euros using the exchange market rate or the rate issued by the Department of Customs and Excise.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. A VAT-registered person who carries out a taxable supply of goods/services to a nontaxable person/consumer in Cyprus should issue a legal receipt at the time of the supply. The legal receipt should include at least the following:
- Date of issuance
- Serial/ID number
- The name, address and VAT registration number of the supplier
- Sufficient description of the goods/services supplied
- Total gross amount inclusive of VAT
- For each applicable VAT rate, the total gross amount inclusive of VAT together with the relevant VAT rate
- Indication of whether it relates to cash payment, prepayment or otherwise

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a legal receipt or simplified invoice must be issued (even though such legal receipts bear a lot of characteristics of full invoices). Similarly, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, no full VAT invoice is required unless requested.

Records. In Cyprus, examples of what records that must be held for VAT purposes include the following:
- Purchase books/ledgers
- Sales books/ledgers
- Records of daily takings, such as till rolls

- Records in relation to annual inventory count
- Records in relation to privately used assets or assets given as gifts
- Records in relation to self-supplies
- Records for purchases for which no right for input VAT recovery exists
- VAT account and VAT returns filed together with their workings
- Import and export documentation
- Cash book
- Documentation in relation to dispatches/acquisitions of goods to/from other EU Member States
- Archive of temporary movements of goods to other EU Member State
- Credit or debit notes that the taxable person issues or receives
- Orders and delivery notes
- Relevant business correspondence

In Cyprus, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. While in principle, the records that a Cypriot taxable person needs to maintain should be stored in Cyprus, there is the option for the taxable person to store its records outside Cyprus, provided that the Tax Commissioner is notified in advance and provided that online access to the data is available. Invoices, whether in paper or electronic format, must be stored in the original form in which they have been sent or made available.

Upon request of the Tax Commissioner, the records of a Cypriot taxable person must be made available to the tax authorities within a period of five days.

Record retention period. Records, invoices and other accounting information must be kept for at least six years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Cyprus. Online access to information can be granted to the Tax Commissioner in cases where the Commissioner wishes to review the documents.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Cypriot VAT returns are submitted for quarterly periods. Quarterly VAT returns must be filed by the 10th day of the second month following the end of the VAT quarter.

Periodic payments. Any VAT due must be paid by the same date as VAT return submission, i.e., by the 10th day of the second month following the end of the VAT quarter. Payment of the VAT due can be made at the till of any commercial bank in Cyprus, by wire transfer or through designated internet banking services of selected major banks in Cyprus.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Cyprus for all taxable persons. The submission of VAT returns and VIES forms is only possible through the "Tax For All" system, while Intrastat submissions are only possible through the "TAXISnet" system. This does not apply for retrospective VAT returns, final VAT returns before VAT deregistration, as well as revised Intrastat and VAT Information Exchange System (VIES) forms, which must be submitted in printed form and duly authorized. The deadlines for submission have not changed, following the abolition of paper-based returns and forms.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Cyprus.

Special schemes. Profit margin scheme. The method of calculating the taxable value and output tax of supplies of secondhand goods differs from the standard rules, as do the records that a taxable person is required to keep. The tax due is taken to be included in the gross margin of the trader, provided that a margin has been realized. The sale of assets previously used by a company is a taxable supply if the company is already a taxable person.

Farming. Sales by farmers of their produce are standard rated; alternatively, farmers can choose to claim 5% of the value of their sales to taxable persons as notional input tax and do not have to charge output tax.

Tour operators. The method of calculating the taxable value for tour operators is taken to be the travel agent's gross margin on the sale of package tours after deduction of the actual cost to the travel agent.

Retail schemes. Under these schemes, the method of calculating the taxable value and output tax on supplies deviates from the general rules, as do the books and records that retailers must keep.

Retail export scheme. This is an optional scheme for registered retailers where a supply of goods, on which a positive rate of VAT was originally imposed, is converted to a zero-rated supply through correction of the VAT account after the retailer receives certification from customs that the goods were exported.

Cash accounting. The scheme is applicable since 20 December 2013 for businesses whose turnover does not exceed EUR25,000 in the last 12 months.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Cyprus.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. A Cypriot taxable person that trades with other EU countries must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of either its sales or purchases of goods exceeds certain thresholds. Separate reports are required for intra-Community acquisitions (i.e., Intrastat Arrivals) and for intra-Community supplies (i.e., Intrastat Dispatches).

The Intrastat thresholds for 2023 are EUR270,000 for Arrivals and EUR75,000 for Dispatches. Traders that make intra-Community supplies and acquisitions below these thresholds are not required to complete all the information required on the Intrastat return. At the time of preparing this chapter, the thresholds for 2024 are not known.

Intrastat forms are submitted electronically through the TAXISnet system and has been obligatory for all taxable persons who are registered for Intrastat purposes in Cyprus and submit monthly Intrastat forms to the VAT authorities.

Intrastat returns must be submitted electronically by the 10th day of the month following the end of the month to which they relate. Cypriot taxable persons must complete Intrastat declarations in EUR, rounded up to the nearest whole number. The Intrastat return period is monthly.

EU Sales Lists. Every VAT-registered person who supplies goods and/or provides services to VAT-registered persons in other EU Member States has been required to submit an EU Sales List (i.e., a VIES form) every month to the Cypriot VAT authorities.

The VIES form must be submitted electronically by the 15th day of the month following the end of the relevant month. The VIES form must be submitted even if no intra-Community supplies are made in the month.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Correction of Intrastat form. A corrected Intrastat table must be submitted to the tax authorities with one corrected table per month. Submission can be made either in person or via email to the tax authorities.

Correction of a VIES form. A corrected VIES table must be submitted to the tax authorities with one corrected table per month. Submission can be made either in person or via email to the tax authorities. If corrections need to be made for more than one monthly VIES form, then one corrective table should be submitted for each relevant monthly VIES form that needs correction/amendment.

Correction of VAT returns. A company is entitled to claim input tax on prior period expenses without a correction, provided that the total VAT amount does not exceed the threshold of EUR1,708. If the threshold is exceeded, a company can submit a correction of error letter to the tax authorities to claim input tax. Submission can be made either in person or via email to the tax authorities.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Cyprus.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A penalty is applied to late registration equal to EUR85 for each month the failure continues.

Penalties for late payment and filings. A one-off penalty of EUR100 per late submitted VAT return applies. Late payment of an outstanding VAT amount results in the imposition of a penalty of 10% of the outstanding amount. Interest is charged at the rate of 2.25% per annum on the outstanding amount and the penalty (interest is calculated for complete months).

For Intrastat forms, a one-off penalty of EUR15 is imposed for each late submitted form. Any omission or delay in submission of Intrastat forms for a period beyond 30 days constitutes a criminal offense and in case of conviction the penalty may reach up to EUR2,562.

For VIES forms, a one-off penalty of EUR50 is imposed for each form that is submitted late. Continuous omission to submit the VIES forms constitutes a criminal offense and in case of conviction the penalty may reach up to EUR850.

Penalties for errors. Penalties may be also assessed for the following offenses:
- Failure to apply the reverse charge: a EUR200 one-off penalty per VAT return but does not exceed the total penalty amount of EUR4,000
- Failure to keep records for a prescribed period: a penalty of EUR341
- Issuing an unauthorized invoice: a penalty of EUR85

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Fraudulent evasion of VAT may be penalized by up to three years' imprisonment or a fine up to three times the amount due, or both.

Receipt of goods on which VAT was evaded may result in up to 12 months' imprisonment or a fine of EUR8,543, or both.

VAT shown in assessments issued by the Tax Commissioner and not paid may result in up to 12 months' imprisonment or a fine of EUR8,543, or both.

Personal liability for company officers. In accordance with legislation and recent case law, any persons of authority (i.e., directors and secretaries) may be personally liable for the above offenses.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Cyprus is six years. Following the submission of a VAT return, the Cyprus tax authorities have six years from the end of the relevant tax year to go back and raise an assessment/tax audit to the taxable person. Taxable persons have three years to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns following the end of the specified VAT return period for which the tax return was filed. The Tax Commissioner may also approve a voluntary correction of error application made even after the three-year limit passed upon its discretion.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- The supply of goods or services made for consideration in the Czech Republic by a taxable person acting as such, including the transfer of real estate

- The intra-Community acquisition of goods for consideration made in the Czech Republic by a taxable person acting as such (see the chapter on the EU)
- The intra-Community acquisition of goods by a nontaxable legal person (see the EU chapter
- The acquisition of a new means of transport from another Member State of the EU for consideration by a person who is not a taxable person (see the EU chapter
- The importation of goods into the Czech Republic regardless of the status of the importer

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the EU chapter. For documentary requirements, see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

As of 1 September 2020, the Quick Fixes rules are obligatory for all taxable persons. The Czech Republic fully implemented the amendment to the EU VAT Directive without any significant deviation. The following rules were introduced:

- New, substantive conditions for the application of a VAT exemption for intra-EU supplies of goods, namely the following:
  - The acquirer of goods has to be VAT-registered in another EU Member State.
  - The supplier should declare the supply in his recapitulative statement (i.e., EC Sales List).
- Call-off stock simplification: Call-off stock rules were unified across the EU. The old Czech rules for call-off stock were abolished. Based on the new rules, the Czech customer declares an intra-EU acquisition of goods upon withdrawal of the goods from the warehouse. The transfer of goods to the Czech warehouse is reported in the EC Sales List of the supplier and also in the stock records of both the customer and the supplier. The new rules bring significant administrative requirements for both supplier and the customer. The rules, among others, introduce a 12-month limitation period for storage of goods under simplification rules.
- Rules for chain transactions: In chain transactions, where the goods are directly transported from the first supplier to the final customer and the transport is organized by an intermediary, the cross-border transportation will be allocated either to the supply made to the intermediary or to the supply from the intermediary to his customer, depending on what VAT number the intermediary communicated to his supplier.
- Proof of transportation. The transportation of goods to another EU Member State is deemed to be proved if the supplier submits noncontradictory evidence based on Article 45a of the Council Implementing Regulation 282/2011. The Czech tax authorities confirmed that other proof of transportation will also be accepted.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In the Czech Republic, the use and enjoyment provision applies for business-to-business (B2B) supplies in cases where the customer, being a taxable person, is established or has a fixed establishment in a non-EU country and at the same time is registered as a VAT payer in the Czech Republic. If such service is used and enjoyed in the Czech Republic, the place of supply will be the Czech Republic.

For business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies, the use and enjoyment rules apply on short-term and long-term rental of means of transport. If the service is actually used in the Czech Republic, it is subject to the Czech VAT. Thus, the non-EU supplier would be obliged to pay Czech VAT either through local registration or through the One-Stop-Shop (OSS) non-Union scheme. If the service (e.g., transport rental) is actually used outside the EU, it is not subject to the Czech VAT.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In the Czech Republic, there are no specific conditions for a TOGC. Case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) is generally followed by the Czech tax authorities.

Transactions between related parties. In the Czech Republic, certain transactions between related parties are subject to special rules for VAT. Particularly where one of the related parties applies pro rata to reduce its VAT deduction entitlement, the VAT base for supplies between the related parties should be the arm's-length price. For this purpose, the parties are considered to be related if they are connected through 25% of their capital and/or by other personal connections.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is an individual or business that independently carries out economic activities. In addition, a taxable person is a legal entity that was not established for the purpose of doing business if it undertakes economic activities. Employees are deemed not to perform the activity independently of the business. There are two different kinds of VAT registrations in the Czech Republic: (1) VAT payers and (2) VAT-identified persons. In the Czech Republic "taxable person" and "VAT payer" have different meanings. A "VAT payer" is a taxable person that is VAT-registered or should have been VAT-registered, while "taxable person" is more general.

A taxable person that is established in the Czech Republic must register as a VAT payer particularly in any of the following circumstances:

- The taxable person's turnover in the preceding 12 consecutive calendar months exceeded CZK2 million. A taxable person must file an application for VAT registration by the 15th day of the calendar month following the month in which the threshold was exceeded. The taxable person then becomes a VAT payer as of the first day of the second month following the month in which the turnover threshold was exceeded. Specific rules apply to certain types of supplies, e.g., a sale of long-term assets is typically not included.
- The taxable person provides a service (except for an exempt-without-credit service) with a place of supply in the Czech Republic, or it effects distance sales of goods or imported goods to the Czech Republic with a place of supply in the Czech Republic through its fixed establishment located outside the Czech Republic. The taxable person must file an application for VAT registration by the 15th day following the tax point of the supply.
- The taxable person engages in certain other specified transactions. For example, a taxable person acquires a property from a VAT payer based on the TOGC concern agreement, or a taxable person becomes a successor company in a business transformation in which the dissolving company is a VAT payer.

A taxable person that is established in the Czech Republic and is not a VAT payer must register as a VAT identified person in the following circumstances:

- It acquires goods from another EU Member State subject to tax (i.e., above the threshold of CZK326,000) This applies also to nontaxable legal persons.
- It receives a service subject to the reverse-charge mechanism (in general, see Article 44 of EU Directive 2006/112/EC) from a non-established business. The taxable person must file an application for registration by the 15th day following the tax point of the service (see Section E. Time of supply).

- It receives a service according to Article 47, 48, 53, 55 or 56 of EU Directive 2006/112/EC, goods with installation, or electricity or gas from a non-established business, and the place of supply for such item is in the Czech Republic. The taxable person must file an application for registration by the 15th day following the tax point of the supply.
- It provides an Article 44 service with a place of supply in another EU Member State except for services that are VAT exempt in another EU Member State. The taxable person must file an application for registration by the 15th day following the tax point of the service.

Exemption from registration. Businesses that exclusively make exempt supplies, that is, supplies that are exempt without the right to deduct input tax, may not register for VAT.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Both established and non-established taxable persons may register for VAT voluntarily if they make supplies with a right to credit in the Czech Republic.

An established VAT taxable person may register as a VAT identified person in the Czech Republic provided:

- It is going to supply goods and/or services to nontaxable customers using the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS) regime, then the Czech Republic will be their state of identification for OSS purposes.
- It is going to receive services, goods with installation or supply of gas and electricity from non-established supplier with the place of supply in the Czech Republic.
- It is going to supply services with the place of supply in another EU Member State according to Article 44 except for services that are VAT exempt in that EU Member State.

Regardless, if a taxable person is established or non-established in the Czech Republic, it may opt to register as a VAT identified person provided it is going to acquire goods from another EU Member State.

Group registration. Group registration for VAT purposes is possible in the Czech Republic. Entities that are closely connected (through capital or management) may choose to register as a VAT group. Nontaxable persons may also join a VAT group.

A VAT group is treated as a single taxable person, where members of the VAT group are not regarded as independent taxable persons. Only persons established in the Czech Republic may be part of a VAT group. Any establishments (e.g., a seat or fixed establishment) of such persons outside the Czech Republic may not be part of a VAT group (i.e., are excluded). The group members share a single VAT number and submit a single VAT return.

Group members are jointly and severally liable for all VAT liabilities. A group member can continue to be jointly and severally liable once it has left the group.

An application for group registration must be filed before 31 October for the group registration to be effective from 1 January of the following year. There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group.

Holding companies. A pure holding company may be included in a VAT group, as long as its residence or permanent establishment is in the Czech Republic.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption, in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f), has been implemented in the Czech Republic from 2009. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, providing certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in the Czech Republic VAT law).

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in the Czech Republic, if it has a branch of a taxable person that is sufficiently permanent and has appropriate personnel and technical resources to be able to:
- Supply goods or provide services, i.e., active fixed establishment
- Receive and consume services, i.e., passive fixed establishment

Although the Czech VAT Act contains the word "branch," the Czech tax authorities respect the EU concept of a fixed establishment. This means that a fixed establishment can be created in the Czech Republic without having a formal branch registration.

Non-established businesses. For the purposes of determining if a person is liable for payment of VAT to tax authorities, the Czech VAT Act defines a non-established business as a taxable person that:
- Does not have a seat or fixed establishment in the Czech Republic
- Has a fixed establishment that does not participate in the effected supply of goods or services in the Czech Republic

There are two different kinds of VAT registrations of persons without a seat in the Czech Republic – VAT payers and VAT identified persons.

A taxable person not established in the Czech Republic must register as a VAT payer particularly in any of the following circumstances:
- It makes a taxable supply of goods or provision of service with the place of supply in the Czech Republic except for the supplies subject to reverse-charge mechanism or the OSS regime. The taxable person must file an application for VAT registration by the 15th day following the tax point of the supply.
- It makes an intra-Community supply of goods from the Czech Republic to another EU Member State or transfer of own goods. The taxable person must file an application for VAT registration by the 15th day following the tax point of the supply.
- Certain specified transactions occur. For example, a taxable person acquires a property from a VAT payer based on the transfer of a going concern agreement, or a taxable person becomes a successor company in a business transformation in which the dissolving company is a VAT payer.

Similarly, as in the case of taxable persons established in the Czech Republic, a taxable person without a seat in the Czech Republic must register as an identified person for VAT in any of the following circumstances:
- It acquires goods from another EU Member State subject to tax (except for acquisition of goods made by a middleman under the simplified rules of triangulation). This applies also to nontaxable legal persons.
- A fixed establishment of a taxable person without a seat in the Czech Republic receives a service subject to the reverse-charge mechanism from a non-established business or it receives a service, goods with installation, or electricity or gas from a non-established business, and the place of supply for such item is in the Czech Republic or it provides a service with a place of supply in another EU Member State.

The taxable person must file an application for registration by the 15th day following the tax point.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are allowed in the Czech Republic, but not mandatory. This is also the case for non-EU taxable persons. General rules concerning representation for tax proceedings (including the possibility of representing a person with respect to tax registration) may apply.

VAT registration applications for non-established businesses must be sent to this address:

Tax Authority for Moravian-Silesian Region, Territorial branch Ostrava I (Financni urad pro Moravskoslezsky kraj – Uzemni pracoviste Ostrava I)
Jureckova 940/2
700 39 Ostrava
Czech Republic

Reverse charge. In general, the reverse charge applies to services and supplies of gas and electricity with the place of supply in the Czech Republic if provided by a non-established supplier in the Czech Republic to a Czech VAT payer or a Czech identified person. Further, the reverse charge applies to supplies of goods and supply of goods with installation with the place of supply in the Czech Republic if provided by a taxable person not established and not registered as a VAT payer in the Czech Republic to a purchaser that is a VAT payer in the Czech Republic.

Domestic reverse charge. Certain local transactions (supplies between persons registered for Czech VAT and acting as taxable persons) are subject to the reverse charge. For example:
- Supplies of construction services, including supply of construction staff
- Supplies of gold
- Certain types of waste
- Emission allowances
- Certain supplies of immovable property (real estate)
- Supply of electricity and gas to a trader via distribution systems or networks including transfer of guarantees of the origin of an energy source
- Certain telecommunication services

Additionally, the local reverse charge applies to certain commodities for transactions exceeding CZK100,000, for example:
- Mobile phones
- Laptops and tablets
- Game consoles
- Certain integrated circuits
- Cereals and technical crops
- Certain raw or semi-processed metals

The vendor and the customer may agree in written form to waive the threshold and apply the reverse charge also to supplies not exceeding CZK100,000.

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021 (in the Czech Republic this was implemented from 1 October 2021). These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules, because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B. Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:
- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (i.e., B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (i.e., B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.

- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (i.e., B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000 with effect from 1 July 2021). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a OSS mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021 (in the Czech Republic this was fully introduced from 1 October 2021), an e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In the Czech Republic, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:
- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services.
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return.

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

In the Czech Republic, to register for the OSS EU scheme as a Member State of Identification, a taxable person is required to be registered as a VAT payer or a VAT identified person. The registration application for OSS must be filed electronically on the website of the Czech tax authorities using an authorized form of identification (e.g., electronic signature, data box).

The registration application also includes a request for user access to the authenticated part of the tax portal in a special application for OSS (i.e., the EU scheme), where tax returns are submitted later. Requests for access can also be made after registration, for example, if the user requests access for other people.

After submitting an application for the EU scheme, the applicant will receive a decision on registration for the EU scheme from the tax administration. The EU Member State in which the applicant registers for the EU scheme is considered to be the so-called Member State of Identification.

The registration is effective from the first day of the tax period following the submission of the application for registration, or from the date of the selected supply, which the applicant stated in the application for registration.

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance sales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT.

In the Czech Republic, the requirements and the application process for the IOSS are similar to those for the EU scheme (see above). Registration in the EU scheme is feasible only after obtaining a decision on VAT registration as a VAT payer or an identified person from the Czech tax authorities.

The application for registration also includes a request for user access to the authenticated part of the tax portal in a special application for IOSS, where tax returns are submitted later. A request for access can also be submitted after registration, e.g., if the user requests access for other people.

After submitting the application for the import regime, the applicant will receive a decision on registration for the import regime from the tax administration. In the decision on registration, the tax administrator assigns the user a tax registration number for the purposes of the import regime, so-called IOSS number.

Registration for the import scheme is effective from the date of notification about the decision regarding registration.

For more details about the IOSS, see the EU chapter.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

Postal services and couriers scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

In the Czech Republic, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the EU chapter.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules, effective 1 July 2021 (in the Czech Republic, this was fully implemented from 1 October 2021), taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:

- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply)

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow thee-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State, as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

In the Czech Republic, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. There are two types of vouchers that need to be distinguished – single-purpose vouchers (SPVs) and multi-purpose vouchers (MPVs). A voucher is regarded to be an SPV if upon the issue of the voucher, at least the place of supply and VAT rate of future transactions is known. Such a voucher is taxed upon any transfer (i.e., is VAT inclusive), while the actual supply of goods or services in return for the voucher is not taxed. If, however, the SPV is redeemed by a person who did not issue the voucher, the redeemer will be deemed to provide the supply to the issuer. Any other voucher should be treated as an MPV and should be taxed upon actual supply of goods or services.

Registration procedures. A taxable person that becomes a VAT payer by law or would like to register for VAT must file electronically an application form that is available online in the Czech language on the Czech Ministry of Finance website at http://www.mfcr.cz by the 15th day following the tax point of the supply. The Tax Administrator should issue an official registration decision within 30 days from the date a complete and correct application for registration (including all relevant documents) is filed.

Non-established persons should accompany the VAT registration form with the extract from the Commercial Register, certificate of tax (i.e., VAT) registration and trade license. The tax authorities often require the application to also include the proof of the economic activity and other information and/or documents. The Czech VAT Act does not contain a precise list of documents.

Deregistration. If a company does not perform economic activities, it is deregistered for VAT. The tax authorities also deregister a VAT payer if it makes only exempt supplies without credit or if it does not make any supplies within 12 consecutive calendar months without notification of reasons.

An established taxable person may apply for deregistration if either of the following occurs:
- Its turnover falls below the registration threshold. Although deregistration is not compulsory in these circumstances, it may be requested after one year from the registration date, at the earliest.
- It ceases to effect economic activity in the Czech Republic.

A non-established taxable person may apply for deregistration if either of the following occurs:
- It did not make any taxable supplies or supplies of goods to another EU Member State that are exempt with credit in the Czech Republic within the previous six consecutive calendar months, except for taxable supplies from which the recipient would be obliged to declare output tax under the reverse-charge mechanism, or supplies of goods that would qualify for triangular simplification if the supplier were not registered for VAT in the Czech Republic, or supplies declared in OSS.
- It ceased to carry out economic activities in the Czech Republic.

A non-established business is likely to be deregistered from VAT by the tax authorities if it did not make any taxable supplies or VAT-exempt supplies with credit in the preceding 12 calendar months.

The VAT registration will be also canceled by the tax authorities in certain specific cases if the VAT payer breaches its tax administrative obligations.

A VAT-identified person may apply for deregistration if it is not registered for OSS in the Czech Republic and any of the following circumstances exist:
- Its liability to account for VAT (e.g., from incurred services, supplies of goods with installation or assembly) did not arise within the previous six consecutive calendar months.
- Neither in the current calendar year nor in the preceding year has it acquired goods from another EU Member State subject to Czech VAT.
- It ceased to effect economic activity in the Czech Republic.

The tax authorities may deregister an identified person if the person was not liable to declare any VAT in two previous calendar years. Group registration is typically deregistered from VAT only as of 31 December. The application for voluntary de-registration of a VAT group must be filed before 31 October of the current year. Otherwise, the group registration will be canceled as of 31 December of the following year.

Deregistration shall be supported by sufficient evidence that the conditions for deregistration are fulfilled.

Changes to VAT registration details. It is mandatory to report any changes in information declared during the registration, especially the name of the company, bank account numbers, seat of the company. The change must be reported within 15 days from the change via a special electronic form (see the Electronic filing subsection below, under Section I. Returns and payment).

Guarantee for unpaid VAT. The VAT law stipulates several instances when purchasers may be held liable (as guarantor) for unpaid VAT by the seller, such as:
- The purchaser knew or should have known at the moment the transaction was carried out or paid for that VAT would not be paid by the seller.
- The seller is listed as an unreliable VAT payer, (which are those who seriously breach their obligations) on websites of the Ministry of Finance.
- The consideration is obviously different from a fair market price and the reason is not properly explained.
- The consideration exceeds CZK 540,000 and is paid by bank transfer partly or in full to a bank account that is not properly published on the websites of the Ministry of Finance.
- The consideration is paid using a virtual asset.
- The consideration is paid to a foreign bank account.
- The supplier of fuels was not at the moment of supply properly registered as a distributor of fuels according to the relevant legislation.

The VAT guarantee can be avoided if the purchaser agrees with the seller that the amount of VAT will be remitted directly to the bank account of the tax authorities.

D. Rates

In the Czech Republic, the term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT.

The following are the VAT rates:
- Standard rate: 21%
- Reduced rate: 12% (with effect from 1 January 2024)
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for the reduced rate or exemption.

With effect from 1 January 2024, there are only two applicable VAT rates – the standard VAT rate of 21% and the reduced VAT rate of 12%. The new reduced rate of 12% replaces the previous two reduced rates of 10% and 15%, which have been converted into the single reduced rate of 12%.

Some supplies are classified as "exempt-with-credit" or "zero-rated," which means that no VAT is chargeable, but the supplier may recover input tax related to the supply.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports of goods
- Intra-Community supplies of goods
- International transportation of passengers and their luggage
- Transport and services directly related to the importation or exportation of goods
- Books in paper or electronic form and certain similar supplies

Examples of goods and services taxable at 12%

- Public transport
- Heating
- Newspapers and magazines in paper or electronic form
- Medications
- Medications for veterinary use
- Necessary baby food
- Restaurant and catering services,
- Children, senior and disabled home care
- Drinking water supplied through a pipe (i.e., drinkable tap water), milk, some milk-based drinks and milk-equivalent products (applies both to sale as goods and as part of restaurant services)
- Water distribution and treatment of sewage
- Accommodation services
- Admission charges to cultural and sport events
- Services of fitness centers
- Surface ski lifts
- Services of saunas and baths
- Foodstuffs
- Certain medical equipment and devices
- Medical and social care (unless exempt)
- Children's car safety seats
- Transfers of "social housing" (includes apartments with a maximum floor area of 120 square meters and family houses up to 350 square meters)

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction. These supplies are sometimes referred to as "exempt without credit."

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Basic postal services
- Insurance
- Financial services
- Transfer of real estate (after lapse of five years from issuance of first building permit, first approval for use or from the first use; substantial change of the real estate restarts the five-year exemption test) or non-building land
- Rent of real estate (excluding short-term rent, rent of parking space, safety boxes and machines)
- Education
- Betting and gambling
- Medical care
- Social welfare

Option to tax for exempt supplies. Under certain conditions, a VAT payer can opt to tax a supply of real estate that qualifies for exemption (approval of the customer may be required in some cases). In such cases, the local reverse-charge mechanism applies if the buyer is a VAT payer.

A VAT payer can also opt to tax a rent of real estate if a tenant is also a VAT payer and will use the immovable property for his economic activities. From 1 January 2021, this option of taxation will be limited to renting of nonresidential premises only.

E. Time of supply

VAT is charged at the time of the earlier of the following events (known as the tax point):
- A taxable supply is carried out.
- Payment for the supply is received.

Supply of goods is generally considered to be carried out on the date of supply (i.e., delivery).

Supply of services is generally considered to be carried out on the date on which the service is performed or the date on which the tax document is issued, whichever date is earlier.

Deposits and prepayments. If the payment is received by the supplier before the supply takes place, the supplier is generally obliged to issue the VAT document for the received payment and declare and pay output tax. This applies only if the taxable supply and its VAT treatment are sufficiently specified upon the receipt of the payment.

Continuous supplies of services. If the service is provided for a longer period, the parties can agree on the partial supplies in the contract (for certain types of supplies). In such a case, the days of supply are the days agreed in the contract. Alternatively, if there is no such agreement between the parties, the day of supply is the last day of the period in which the service is provided unless payment is received earlier.

If the taxable supply is being provided in the Czech Republic for more than 12 calendar months, it is usually regarded as having taken place, at the latest, on the last day of each calendar year, following the calendar year in which the provision of the supply began.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in the Czech Republic for supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. For reverse-charge services, the tax point is the earliest of the following dates:
- The date on which the service is rendered (specific rules may apply to particular types of services).
- The date on which consideration is paid (applies only to certain types of services). This does not apply if the taxable supply is not sufficiently specified upon the receipt of the payment or if the prepayment relates to supplies with different VAT rates or VAT regimes.
- The last day of each calendar year if the service is being provided for more than 12 calendar months and if no consideration is paid during this period.

Leased assets. The time of supply of leased assets depends on the type of leasing and contractual documentation agreed between the parties.
- In case of financial leasing where the customer can buy the asset after the leasing, the time of supply is the date on which the asset is handed over to the customer if under the normal course of events the customer will likely buy the asset at the end of lease.
- In the case of a standard lease, the VAT is typically payable based on the agreed (e.g., monthly or quarterly) installments.

Imported goods. The time of supply for supplies of imported goods is either the date of release of goods for free circulation (or another customs procedure that leads to a liability to pay VAT) or the date on which the goods leave a duty suspension regime.

Import VAT liability needs to be reported by the VAT payers in the VAT return (i.e., postponed accounting) where input tax deduction may generally be claimed at the same time (if the standard conditions are met). The import VAT due is calculated based on the import customs declaration.

The self-assessment of VAT does not apply to identified persons or private individuals who are not registered for VAT.

Intra-Community acquisitions. VAT on intra-Community acquisitions of goods is charged at the earliest of the following dates:
- On the date of issuance of the tax document
- On the 15th day of the month following the month in which the supply took place

Intra-Community supplies of goods. The time of supply for intra-Community supplies of goods that meet the conditions for the VAT exemption laid down by the Czech VAT Act is the 15th day of the month following the month of supply unless the VAT document for the supply was issued earlier.

Distance sales. There are no special time of supply rules in the Czech Republic for supplies of distance sales. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

In addition, in case of distance sales of imported goods where IOSS is used for distance sale of goods via market interface, the supply is deemed to take place on the day when the payment is received. This day is stipulated according to Article 41a of the EU VAT Regulation 282/2011.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A VAT payer may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to the VAT payer for business purposes. A VAT payer generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in the Czech Republic, VAT self-assessed on intra-Community acquisitions of goods and on services subject to the reverse-charge mechanism and VAT paid on imports (see the chapter on the EU).

VAT payers prove their entitlement to VAT deduction by valid tax documents. Input tax on local supplies made by another Czech VAT payer may not be deducted earlier than the tax period in which the recipient obtains a valid tax document (i.e., invoice).

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in the Czech Republic is three years. Input tax cannot be recovered afterward (limited exceptions may apply).

Identified persons may not claim input tax deduction.

From 1 January 2024, input tax deduction for input tax incurred on the purchase of personal cars is generally limited to CZK420,000. Certain exceptions apply, especially for the resale of such goods.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes such as goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur. In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure (e.g., input tax incurred on gifts with an acquisition cost exceeding CZK500 excluding VAT).

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible only if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Business entertainment
- Nonbusiness expenditure
- Goods and services used exclusively for the making of exempt supplies without credit

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Passenger car acquisition (see the limitation above)
- Car hire
- Fuel for vehicles
- Books
- Conferences
- Advertising
- Accommodation
- Mobile phones

Partial exemption. A Czech VAT payer is entitled to a full VAT deduction with respect to purchases used within its economic activity for taxable supplies (that is, supplies on which output tax is charged), certain other supplies that fall outside the scope of Czech VAT (that have a place of supply abroad) and supplies that are exempt-with-credit.

A VAT payer may not deduct input tax related exclusively to the following supplies:
- Supplies that are exempt-without-credit.
- Supplies used exclusively for noneconomic activity (for example, private consumption or private consumption of employees).

The VAT payer must reduce the input tax deduction as follows to:
- Claim only a proportional deduction of input tax with respect to supplies used for both economic and noneconomic activities.
- Claim only a partial deduction of input tax with respect to supplies used for both taxable (or exempt-with-credit) and exempt-without-credit supplies.

The final entitlement for input tax deduction is calculated taking into account both proportional deduction (economic and noneconomic activity) and partial deduction (taxable and exempted supplies). In particular:
1) The VAT payer identifies the input tax that may be directly allocated to economic activity and noneconomic activity (private use, holding, public authorities).

Input tax directly related to noneconomic activity cannot be deducted. The only exception from this rule is private use and private use of employees. In case of private use and private use of employees, it is possible to deduct the input tax in full and subsequently pay output tax on nonbusiness consumption. This option is not possible for capital goods or other types of noneconomic activity.

The input tax from supplies received in connection with both economic and noneconomic activity (i.e., which cannot be allocated to one of them only) should be reduced to a proportion using any reasonable method of calculation (the Czech VAT Act does not state any particular method).

2) The input tax from received supplies that was fully allocated to the economic activities of the VAT payer and also the proportion of input tax related to received supplies only partly allocated to economic activity, should be further investigated with respect to their use for taxable and exempted output supplies.

Input tax directly allocated to exempt supplies without credit is not deductible. Input tax directly allocated to taxable supplies or exempt supplies with credit is deductible in full.

The remaining input tax that cannot be allocated to one type of output supplies but relates to both taxable (or exempt-with-credit) and exempt-without-credit should be reduced using yearly pro rata of the taxable person. For example, this treatment applies to the input tax on general business overhead costs. In general, the ratio is based on the value of taxable and exempt-with-credit supplies, compared with total turnover. If the ratio is at least 95%, full input tax deduction may be claimed.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in the Czech Republic. Special methods are not allowed in the Czech Republic.

Capital goods. Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is deducted in the tax period in which the goods have been acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition (see the Partial exemption subsection above). However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted over time if the taxable person's partial exemption recovery percentage changes during the adjustment period or when the use of the capital goods changes. For example, a taxable person that acquired an asset and recovered VAT in full at the time of its acquisition must adjust the amount of recovery if the asset is later used for an exempt activity. In contrast, if the asset was originally acquired for an exempt activity and no input tax was reclaimed, and the asset is later put to a fully taxable use, input tax may be recovered when the use changes.

In the Czech Republic, the capital goods adjustment applies to the following assets:
- Long-term tangible assets with a value higher than CZK80,000
- Long-term intangible assets if treated as a long-term intangible asset based on internal accounting rules
- Land (unless accounted for as merchandise)
- Technical appreciation (substantial improvement) of fixed assets
- Assets or land leased by financial leasing

The adjustment period is generally five years (10 years for real estate), beginning with the calendar year of the acquisition of the asset and extending for the subsequent four or nine calendar years. In the tax period of acquisition, the input tax is deducted depending on whether and to what extent the goods are used for taxable activities (see the Partial exemption subsection above). A portion of the total input tax must be adjusted according to the use of the goods (i.e., exempt, nonbusiness or taxable) in that particular year.

No change needs to be made if the difference between the use in the current year and in the first year is not material (i.e., the difference in use is not more than 10 percentage points).

If, within the adjustment period, the capital goods are damaged, lost or stolen and these losses are not properly documented, then a VAT adjustment should be done for all remaining years left within the adjustment period. The adjustment should be done in the VAT period in which the VAT payer found out about the loss.

A three-year VAT adjustment period applies to business property that does not qualify as capital goods. The input tax claimed must be adjusted if the actual use of the respective business property differs from the purposes reflected in the original input tax claim. In case business property is damaged, lost or stolen and these losses are not properly documented, the VAT amount should also be adjusted.

An unlimited VAT adjustment period applies to buildings, flats and business premises that do not qualify as capital goods prior to their first use.

In the Czech Republic, the capital goods adjustment applies also to input tax incurred on repairs of real estate exceeding CZK200,000 upon their supply. The adjustment period for repair services is 10 years.

Refunds. If the amount of VAT recoverable in a taxable period exceeds the amount of VAT payable, the taxable person has a VAT credit. A refund of the VAT credit is claimed by submitting the VAT return. The Czech tax authorities should generally make repayments within 30 days after the filing deadline for the return (unless an investigation by the tax authorities has started).

Pre-registration costs. A VAT taxable person can deduct VAT from received taxable purchases incurred before VAT registration:
- During the preceding 12 consecutive calendar months, if these purchases were used for economic activities and are included in the business assets on the registration date
- During the preceding 60 consecutive calendar months, provided the incurred input supply became part of long-term asset and it was completed and ready to launch for usual business use during the preceding 12 consecutive calendar months before the taxable person became VAT payer and this long-term asset is still part of the business assets on the registration date
- During the preceding six consecutive calendar months and used for exportation of goods outside the EU
- Provided the taxable person would be entitled to apply for VAT refund according to VAT Directive 2008/9/EC but could not apply for refund only due to requirement of minimum time period for VAT refund

Bad debts. A VAT payer can recover output tax declared and paid on supplies provided to customers who were VAT registered at the time the supply was made and became insolvent. This relief is subject to specific rules and conditions.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in the Czech Republic.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in the Czech Republic is recoverable. The Czech VAT authorities refund VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established (by means of seat or fixed establishment) in the Czech Republic nor registered for VAT. Non-established businesses may claim Czech VAT to the same extent as VAT-registered businesses.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refunds are made under the terms of EU Directive 2008/9/EC.

The VAT refund procedure under EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in the Czech Republic during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge and supplies reported in OSS). For full details see the EU chapter.

Below are specific rules for the Czech Republic:
- A non-established taxable person that was not registered as a Czech VAT payer during the relevant refund period may request a refund of Czech VAT by filing an application through the electronic portal in its country of establishment (i.e., either in the Member State of its business seat or Member State of the fixed establishment, if the latter is the actual recipient of the supply).
- The application must include invoices or import documents (in accordance with thresholds mentioned in Article 10 of Council Directive 2008/9/EC).
- The application must be substantiated with statement of the applicant, that it did not make any taxable supply in the Czech Republic during the relevant period for refund (it must be the condition within the frame of filling in application in Member State of establishment).

- The application must include the amount of VAT claimed in CZK.
- An applicant must be registered for VAT purposes in the Member State of establishment during the relevant period for refund (it must be the condition within the frame of filling in application in Member State of establishment).

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive. For full details, see the EU chapter.

The Czech Republic applies the principle of reciprocity. That is, a non-established business may claim a refund if it is established in a country that refunds VAT to Czech VAT payers or in a country that does not apply VAT or similar consumption tax. There is no precise list of countries included in VAT refund scheme.

The VAT refund procedure under the EU 13th Directive may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in the Czech Republic during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge, import of goods and services connected to it, exempt transaction with no right to deduct).

The claim, to be submitted to Czech Republic tax authority, must contain the following:
- Official application for VAT refund
- Original invoices and other tax documents
- Tax statement that claimant is VAT registered in their home country; this document must be issued by relevant tax authority and cannot be older than one year; it must be translated into Czech language

The minimum amount of a yearly claim is CZK1,000. The minimum amount of a quarterly claim is CZK7,000. The deadline is 30 June of the following year.

The application must be submitted on a form prescribed by the Ministry of Finance (Ministerstvo Financí). The claim cannot be submitted electronically. The form must be sent to the following address of the Czech tax authorities:

Finanční účád pro hlavní mesto Praha
Štěpánská 619/28
111 21 Praha 1

Late payment interest. Interest is paid to both EU and non-EU, non-established businesses. Interest accrues from the day following the date on which the refund had to be paid until the day of refund. The interest rate for a late refund corresponds to the annual rate of interest rate set by the Czech National Bank (repo rate) for the first day of a calendar half-year in which a refund had to be paid, increased by 8%.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A Czech VAT payer must generally provide a tax document for all taxable supplies and exempt supplies with credit made to another taxable person or nontaxable legal person. A Czech VAT payer must also issue tax documents for distance selling supplies that have a place of taxable supply in the Czech Republic (except for distance selling reported in OSS). The taxable person must provide tax documents for supplies of services, goods with installation and supplies of gas and electricity with a place of supply outside the Czech Republic. The tax documents must be issued no later than:
- 15 days after the tax point
  Or
- 15 days after the end of the calendar month in which the exempt supply with credit or out of scope supply took place

A VAT payer is obliged to make all possible efforts to deliver the tax document to the customer by means agreed between the parties (i.e., in paper or electronically) also within the period for issuance of invoice.

A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction or refund under EU Directive 2008/9/EC or the EU 13th Directive refund schemes. If a VAT payer is required to account for VAT on the private use of business assets, the VAT payer must issue "a document of use" similar to a VAT invoice.

A taxable person is not required to issue a tax document for a supply that is exempt-without-credit.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note is used to reduce the VAT originally charged on a supply. The value of the supply must be reduced, for example in the following circumstances:
- The supply is canceled (in full or in part).
- A supply is returned (in full or in part).
- A discount is provided after the tax point.
- The payment on which a VAT payer was required to charge VAT was subsequently used for purposes of another supply.
- The payment was returned as the supply did not take place.

The VAT base and VAT amount can generally be corrected within three years starting from the end of taxable period in which the tax point of the respective supply occurred. The limitation period stops during the court proceeding or arbiter proceeding, which may affect the amount of VAT base.

A VAT debit note is used to increase the value of the original supply if the price increases after the tax point.

The amount of VAT credited or debited should be separately itemized on the credit or debit note. The credit or debit note must satisfy all the following requirements:
- It must contain the reason for the correction.
- It must be cross-referenced to the original tax document. If the credited amount relates to several original supplies and if the VAT payer is not able to link the credit note to particular original invoices, a general reference to original invoices (or example, a period in which they were issued) should be sufficient. In such a case, VAT credited or debited may be stated on the document as a summary value.
- It must contain generally the same information as the original tax document.

A VAT payer is obliged to issue and to make all possible efforts to deliver the credit note or debit note to the customer by means agreed between the parties (i.e., in paper or electronically) within 15 days from the day when the obligation to issue the document arose.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in the Czech Republic, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in the Czech Republic. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU and 2014/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU).

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in the Czech Republic. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing. For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the EU chapter.

Simplified VAT invoices. A VAT payer can issue a simplified VAT invoice, provided the total amount on the invoice does not exceed CZK 10,000. For certain supplies, the VAT law precludes simplified VAT invoicing, e.g., distance selling of goods, goods subject to excise duty, supplies of goods or services where output tax should be declared by the recipient.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in the Czech Republic. A supplier may authorize in writing, that their customer or a third party is approved to issue invoices on their behalf. If such an authorization is granted electronically, it should be signed by certified electronic signature. Authorization by any means (e.g., orally) other than in writing or electronically is not accepted in the Czech Republic.

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. Czech VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods. To prove VAT exemption, the supplier should show that the goods were transported by them or by the customer and that they left territory of the EU. Exit from the EU can be proved either by export customs declaration or by other means. Release of goods into a specific customs regime is not a condition for VAT exemption, and the tax authorities, in addition to customs declaration, should accept also other proofs of exit of goods from EU.

Czech VAT is not chargeable on goods supplied to taxable persons in other EU Member States (see the EU chapter). For a sale to another EU Member State to qualify as an exempt, intra-community supply, the following conditions must be satisfied:

- The Czech VAT payer must prove that goods were delivered to another EU Member State by the VAT payer, the customer or a third party authorized by the Czech VAT payer or customer.
- The customer is VAT registered in the other EU Member State and indicated his VAT number to supplier.
- The acquisition of the goods must be subject to VAT in the other EU Member State.
- The supplier correctly set out information about this supply in his EC Sales List.

No special documentation applies in the Czech Republic for evidencing the application of the Quick Fixes. Normal intra-Community documentation rules apply. However, proper allocation of transportation to the relevant transaction is crucial in chain supplies.

Transportation documents (e.g., Convention on the Contract for the International Carriage of Goods by Road) confirmed by the customer and the transporter are suitable proof of the above. In certain cases, written statements of the customer or an authorized third party or other similar documentation may also be sufficient.

A supplier may also prove the transportation of goods by combination of documents listed in Article 45a of the EU Implementing Regulation 282/2011.

Foreign currency invoices. A Czech tax document may not be issued in a foreign currency only. If a foreign currency is used, for VAT purposes at least, the VAT amount must be converted to the domestic currency, which is the Czech koruna (CZK).

For VAT purposes, the exchange rate used to convert foreign currency to CZK is generally the exchange rate declared by the Czech National Bank or European Central Bank valid for the VAT payer on the date on which the VAT becomes chargeable.

A tax document may also be issued in electronic form, provided that the person for which the taxable supply or supply exempt from VAT with credit was affected, agrees with it.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Generally, it is not mandatory to issue an invoice to non-VAT taxable customers, apart from nontaxable legal persons. There are some exceptions to this rule, for example, distance selling of goods and intra-EU supply of new means of transport.

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a full VAT invoice must be issued. However, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, then no full VAT invoice is required unless requested.

Records. In the Czech Republic, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include VAT records that contain all the information necessary for preparation of the VAT return, VAT ledger and EC Sales List. The VAT records should also contain information about supplies that are not subject to VAT and information about business assets. The VAT law does not specify the format of VAT records.

In the Czech Republic, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. If the documents are kept outside the Czech Republic, the tax authorities should be informed about the address of storage in advance.

Record retention period. All VAT documents and VAT records (e.g., VAT invoices, proofs of intra-EU supplies, call-off stock records) should be retained for 10 years starting from the end of taxable period in which the taxable supply occurred.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in the Czech Republic. This is allowed as long as the authenticity of origin, integrity of content and legibility of the documents is guaranteed.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Czech VAT returns are generally submitted for monthly periods. If the turnover of the taxable person for the preceding calendar year has not reached CZK10 million, the taxable person may opt for quarterly VAT returns. Newly registered VAT payers, unreliable VAT payers and VAT groups do not qualify as quarterly VAT return filers.

VAT returns must be filed within 25 days after the end of the tax period. So-called nil returns must be filed if no taxable transactions have taken place in the period. Non-established VAT payers are not obliged to file nil VAT return.

Periodic payments. Payment of the VAT liability must be credited to the bank account of the tax authorities within the same time period as the return submission, i.e., within 25 days after the end of the tax period. VAT liabilities must be paid in CZK. A taxable person should properly identify its payment by using a correct variable symbol (which is its Czech VAT number).

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in the Czech Republic for all taxable persons. All VAT reports should be filed electronically in the prescribed xml format. There are several options how VAT payers may submit VAT filings. However, they are typically difficult to comply with by foreign taxpayers with no Czech representative.

It is also possible to file VAT reports electronically by uploading the data to a special application of the Ministry of Finance without the certified electronic signature. In such a case, the VAT payer should confirm its filing also in paper form within short deadline.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in the Czech Republic.

Special schemes. Travel agents. Special scheme for travel agents has to be applied by travel agents who act in their name when providing travel services. Under the special scheme, Czech VAT is paid from the margin of travel agents established in the Czech Republic. VAT charged by travel agents under the special scheme cannot be deducted by the customers. Significant changes to this regime were introduced in 2022, as follows:

- Taxable persons are not allowed to calculate their margin on period basis but must calculate margin for every single travel service.
- Taxable persons are obliged to declare the VAT also from received prepayments.

Secondhand goods, works of art, collector's items and antiques. The application of this special scheme is optional and can be applied by a taxable person who purchased the named goods from nontaxable persons, taxable persons that are not Czech VAT payers or from other taxable persons.

VAT is paid from the taxable person's margin. VAT charged by taxable persons under the special scheme cannot be deducted by the customers.

Investment gold. Supply of investment gold in the Czech Republic, intra-Community acquisition of investment gold or its importation are exempt from VAT without entitlement to input tax deduction, as well as services of arranging for these transactions. Taxable persons who produce investment gold or transform gold into investment gold can decide to charge VAT if such gold is subsequently supplied to another taxable person in the Czech Republic. In such case, the taxable person is entitled to deduct input tax incurred in connection with production or transformation of investment gold.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in the Czech Republic.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. A Czech VAT payer or person identified for VAT that trades with other EU Member States must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of either the VAT payer's sales or purchases of goods exceeds certain thresholds. Separate reports are required for intra-Community acquisitions (i.e., Intrastat Imports) and for intra-Community supplies (i.e., Intrastat Exports).

The 2024 threshold for Intrastat Imports and Intrastat Exports is CZK15 million per calendar year.

From 1 January 2022, an Intrastat simplified declaration was introduced. Entities whose annual turnover of goods exported and/or imported is in the range between CZK15 million and 30 million and, at the same time there are no specific product types concerned, is allowed to submit a simplified declaration within the deadline for submitting the January declaration for the given year. However, the reporting entities still must follow up on whether the threshold of CZK30 million has been exceeded or the movement of selected types of goods concerned.

From 1 January 2022, both numerical and textual changes to the Common Customs Tariff have been made. In addition, from 1 January 2024, certain new tariff codes were introduced.

The Intrastat report period is monthly. Intrastat reports must be submitted to the competent customs authorities by the 10th working day of the month following the calendar month to which they relate if submitted in paper form, or by the 12th working day of the month following the calendar month to which they relate if submitted electronically. Submission in paper form is allowed in specific cases only.

EU Sales Lists. If a Czech VAT payer makes intra-Community supplies of goods or provides services to a taxable person established in another EU Member State in any tax period, it must submit an EU Sales List (ESL) to the Czech tax authorities together with the VAT payer's VAT return. Filing of the correct ESL is a material condition for the VAT exemption of supply of goods to another EU Member State. An identified person providing service with a place of supply in another EU Member State must also file an ESL. The filing of an ESL is also obligatory in case the supplier transfers its own goods under the call-off stock arrangement to another EU Member State. For this purpose, the ESL must contain special attachment detailing this.

Generally, an ESL must be filed monthly; quarterly filings are possible in limited cases. An ESL is not required for any period in which the taxable person has not made any intra-Community supplies or has not provided the services mentioned above.

VAT ledgers. VAT payers are obliged to submit the VAT ledgers to the tax authorities. The VAT ledgers include detailed data (e.g., tax base, tax rate, tax point, invoice number, business party VAT ID) about effected and received supplies, particularly the following:
- Domestic taxable supplies or receipt of advance payment
- Domestic acquisition of goods or services or provision of advance payment

- Transactions falling within the local reverse-charge regime
- Services received from persons not established in the Czech Republic and intra-Community acquisitions of goods
- Special scheme for investment gold

The system is designed to enable the tax authorities to cross-check the transactions reported by suppliers with the transactions reported by the customers in order to identify suspicious chain supplies and VAT fraud.

VAT ledgers must be submitted electronically by the 25th day of the month following the reporting period. For legal persons, the reporting period is always one calendar month without regard to the taxable period. For natural persons, the reporting period corresponds to the taxable period.

Correcting errors in previous returns. It is possible to file a corrective VAT return if the mistakes or omissions have been found after filing of the original return but still before the 25th day of the month following the reporting period. A corrective VAT return should include all data from the reporting period.

However, if a correction must be made after the deadline for filing has elapsed, it is necessary to file a supplementary VAT return containing only the differences in amounts between the original statement and the correction and reason for filing. The deadline for filing is by the end of the month following the month when the obligation to file became known. Penalties may be imposed for late filings and payments (see the Penalties for late payment and filings subsection below).

Supplementary VAT ledgers must be filed within a deadline of five working days after identification of an error. Otherwise, automatic penalties are imposed.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in the Czech Republic. The previous obligation to report electronic registration of sales revenues (ERS) in real time was abolished as of 1 January 2023

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. If a taxable person fails to register for VAT, it will be registered retrospectively. The tax authorities can impose a penalty for breaching non-monetary obligations. Moreover, the tax authorities will assess sanctions if VAT returns, and VAT ledgers are filed late or if payments of VAT liability are late.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Late filing of VAT returns results in a penalty of 0.05% of VAT liability of VAT overpayment for each day of the delay. The penalty is capped at 5% of the VAT liability of VAT overpayment or at CZK300,000 for each VAT return. The first five working days following the deadline are penalty free.

A penalty is charged at a flat rate of 20% of the additionally assessed VAT if the VAT liability is increased or the deduction of VAT is decreased based on the findings of the tax authorities.

The fine for failure to file a Czech VAT return electronically is now CZK1,000.

Default interest is charged for the late payment of VAT due on a VAT return, beginning with the fourth working day. The interest is calculated as a repo rate declared by the Czech National Bank (CNB) to be valid on the first day of the respective calendar half-year increased by 14 percentage points. Starting from 2021, the late payment interest rate is decreased to the CNB repo rate, plus 8 percentage points (the repo rate represents an interest rate at which the CNB purchases discounted bills from the Czech commercial banks). The default interest may be applied up to a maximum of five years.

For Intrastat, a penalty of up to CZK1 million may be imposed for late submission or for missing or inaccurate declarations.

The fine for failure to file an EC Sales List electronically is now CZK1,000.

Penalties in connection with the obligation to file the VAT ledgers are assessed automatically upon the breach of obligation and the range is from CZK1,000 to CZK500,000 (penalties may be waived if certain conditions are met).

Penalties for errors. There are no specific penalties in the Czech Republic for errors. The only consequences of the errors are penalized (as outlined above).

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details (i.e., the breach of the notification duty) or breach of duty to keep VAT-related records may result in a penalty of up to CZK500,000 (approx. EUR20,500). For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. The Czech VAT Act does not provide for any specific penalties for fraud. If a business knew or should have known that the respective VAT will not be paid, the tax authorities may either reject input tax deduction from such input supplies, or the business may be held jointly liable for unpaid VAT using mechanism of VAT guarantee described above.

Personal liability for company officers. The statutory body (director) must act with care of a diligent manager. According to the Czech criminal law, both the company and its statutory body (director) may be held liable in case of intentional nonpayment or underpayment of tax obligations. The mere preparation for the tax evasion is also considered as criminal act.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in the Czech Republic is three years. Generally, the tax authorities have three years to go back to assess tax, identify errors and impose penalties. The three-year limitation period starts from the day in which the deadline for filing a tax return elapsed.

The three-year limitation period is prolonged by 1 year if in the last 12 months before the expiry of the tax assessment period certain situations take place, for example, filing of a supplementary VAT return. In some situations, a new three-year limitation period is introduced, for example, in case the tax audit was initiated, or regular tax return was filed. In some cases, the limitation period is ceased, for example, in case the respective tax is being subject to court proceeding.

VAT should generally not be assessed after 10 years from the beginning of the limitation period (specific exceptions apply, e.g., in case of criminal charges).

Apart from the objective statute of limitation described above, there is also a subjective statute of limitation for filing a supplementary tax return. A supplementary tax return (where VAT is payable to the tax authorities) must be filed by the end of the month following the month in which the taxable person found out the fact decisive for the correction.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC):
- Supply of goods and tangible assets to third parties
- Services provided to third parties
- Self-supply of goods
- Self-provision of services
- Imports of goods and services
- Export of goods and services

All operations carried out in the DRC are subject to VAT, even though the residence of the taxable person may be located outside of the DRC.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In the DRC, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in the DRC. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In the DRC, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties.

C. Who is liable

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in the DRC does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Taxable persons operating in the DRC are required to register with the tax authorities. Moreover, taxable persons with a minimum annual turnover of CDF80 million (approx. USD48,485) are required to obtain a VAT number. A taxable person with an annual turnover of less than CDF80 million (approx. USD48,485) can register for VAT in the DRC voluntarily. To register for VAT, the taxable person must send a request to the tax authorities accordingly.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in the DRC.

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in the DRC in the following circumstances:
- When they have a physical installation in the DRC, such as place of effective management, branches, factories, plants, workshops, agencies, stores, offices, laboratories, central buying or selling counters, warehouses, buildings rented out, a mine, oil or gas well, quarry, or any other place of exploration and extraction of natural resources, as well as any other any fixed or permanent installation of a productive nature
- In the absence of a material installation, when they exercise directly under their own corporate name an activity professional for a period of at least six months
  Or
- When they provide services, including consulting services, through employees or other personnel engaged by a company for this purpose, but only when the activities of this nature continue for a period or periods representing a total of more than six months within the limits for any period of 12 months

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a taxable person that has no permanent establishment in the territory of the DRC. Non-established businesses must designate a resident representative based on a legalized or notarized letter. This resident representative is liable to declare and pay the VAT on behalf of the non-established business. If no tax representative is nominated, the VAT due should be assessed and paid by the customer (if the customer is a taxable person for VAT purposes).

Tax representatives. Non-established businesses are required to appoint a representative resident in the DRC. The non-established business may appoint only one representative for all its operations in the DRC. In the absence of a representative, the tax and the penalties relating to them are payable by the resident beneficiary of services on behalf of the non-established business.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is applicable whenever a non-established business fails to nominate a VAT representative. In such a case, the local taxable person (the customer) will be liable for VAT on the supply made by the non-established business. As part of the VAT reverse-charge mechanism, the VAT shall be declared as output and input tax in the same tax return. Therefore, there will be no cash impact for the customer, to the extent there is a full right of deduction.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in the DRC.

Digital economy. Nonresidents providing electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are only required to register and account for VAT if its supplies are greater than the registration threshold. If a nonresident's supplies exceed the registration threshold, it must appoint a representative in the DRC for accounting for and paying the VAT due and filing the subsequent VAT returns on their behalf.

Nonresidents providing electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are only required to register if their supplies are greater than the registration threshold. The rules as outlined above on appointing a representative apply. However, if the nonresident does not appoint a representative in the DRC, the beneficiary of the services in the DRC (i.e., the customer) is required to self-account for the VAT due on the supply via the reverse-charge mechanism (see the subsection Reverse-charge above). This reverse-charge VAT should appear on the monthly VAT return of the beneficiary.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in the DRC.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in the DRC.

Registration procedures. A taxable person with an annual turnover of CDF80 million (approx. USD48,485) must within 15 days file a VAT registration form with the tax authorities. Each taxable person should be identified by a VAT number. In practice, the specific VAT number is not yet allocated to the taxable person, and the general tax ID is used currently instead.

The tax authorities consider the same general tax ID as the VAT number. However, the taxable person must send a letter to the tax authorities for the VAT registration and the tax authorities will then provide the taxable person with the acknowledgment receipt. The taxable person must apply for VAT registration by paper.

Deregistration. Deregistration from VAT in the DRC is mandatory for any taxable person ceasing to trade in the DRC. For the deregistration of a taxable person, it should provide the trade court with the decision made by the taxable person to cease the activity or declare the taxable person as dormant. With the acknowledgment receipt from the trade court while waiting for the deregistration, the taxable person will notify the tax authorities by providing them with a copy of the acknowledgment receipt from the trade court. Until the final decision from the trade court is issued, the taxable person will be required to continue to submit a nil VAT return. Once the final decision of the deregistration is made by the trade court, the taxable person will provide the tax authorities with it to obtain the tax clearance. However, before issuing the tax clearance, the tax authorities need to ensure that the taxable person is debt free from the tax authorities. Thus, the taxable person's tax current account balance should be zero, i.e., nothing to pay to the tax authorities.

Changes to VAT registration details. The taxable person has the obligation to notify the tax authorities within 15 days when a change occurs to its VAT registration details.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 16%
- Reduced rate: 8%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exportation of goods and services (i.e., services rendered by a resident company to a foreign entity abroad)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 8%

- Dry fish
- Bovine meat
- Rice
- Powdered milk
- Brown sugar
- Water bottle
- Soap
- Matches

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Supply of secondhand movable property, supplied by persons who used the goods for the purposes of their business when those goods do not have the right to deduct the VAT upon their acquisition
- Sales and imports made by not-for-profit associations legally constituted when these operations are of a social nature, sporting, cultural, religious, educational or philanthropic purpose
- Sales and imports of official stamps or stamped papers
- Importing bank notes, associated costs in the production process of the bank notes equipment serving in the manufacture of monetary signs and their spare parts made exclusively by the Currency Issuing Institute
- Sales and imports of boats

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in the DRC.

E. Time of supply

VAT is due when the payment has been received for the services provided (i.e., on a cash basis) and when goods have been supplied (i.e., on an invoice basis). The payment of the VAT to the tax authorities is due by the 15th day of the month following the transaction.

Deposits and prepayments. For deposits and prepayments, the VAT becomes due when the deposits and prepayments have been paid for the services provided (cash basis); and for the goods, VAT is due when goods have been supplied (invoice basis).

Continuous supplies of services. For installment payments or continuous payments with respect to continuous supplies of services, the chargeable event occurs when such installments or payments are made.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The time of supply for goods sent on approval for sale or return is when the goods are delivered to the customer.

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for a reverse-charge service received by a DRC taxable person is the date of payment for the service.

Leased assets. The time of supply for leased assets is when payment is made.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is the submission of the declaration of goods with the customs authorities.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in the DRC is by 31 December of the following year.

Nondeductible input tax. VAT may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for certain business expenses.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is for purposes of making a taxable supply.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Expense on accommodation, catering, reception, shows, rental of passenger vehicles and transport of persons, excluding expenditure incurred, under their taxable activity, by tourism professionals, catering and entertainment
- Goods and services acquired by the enterprise but used by third parties, the directors or the personnel of the company, excluding work or protective clothing, equipment assigned to the collective satisfaction of staff needs, as well as free accommodation in the workplace of salaried staff, especially of the surveillance or the guard of these places
- Services of any kind, including rental, maintenance, repair, relating to products or goods excluded from right to deduction

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Raw materials, intermediate goods and consumables included in the composition of taxable products, or those not entering in the finished product are destroyed or lose their specific qualities in a single operation of manufacturing the same products
- Goods for resale in the context of a taxable operation
- Services entering into the cost price of the operations giving right to deduction

Partial exemption. If a taxable supply to, or an import of goods by, a taxable person is partly for a taxable use and partly for another use, the amount of the input tax allowed as a credit is the part of the input tax that relates to the taxable use. This scenario is known as "partial exemption," and as such an apportionment percentage will be applied to the taxable person's input tax.

The apportionment percentage is equal to the sum of revenues (revenue from the items for which the deduction of the VAT is allowed, which includes exports and related transactions) then divided by the total of revenues realized (all revenues included) during the current tax year.

A partially exempt business should calculate their apportionment to find the correct percentage of apportionment to be applied and regularize the VAT due by 31 March of the following year. In case of all items are VAT deductible and full VAT has been applied, no regularization should be made.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in the DRC. Special methods are not allowed in the DRC.

Capital goods. The input tax incurred on the acquisition of capital goods for a taxable purpose is deductible. There are no special time limits or rules for the recovery of input tax incurred on capital goods.

Refunds. If for the same month, the amount of input tax exceeds the amount of output tax of the same period, the taxable person has a right to the VAT refund, which is a tax credit to be carried forward to the next taxable period(s). The tax credit cannot be refunded to the taxable person.

Except for exporters, companies making heavy investments, mining and oil companies in phase of research or development and construction of the mining or petroleum project, those who cease activities and public enterprises in which the state owns all of the share capital and whose VAT has been invoiced and has been subject to withholding tax, may get the refund of their tax credit on VAT resulting from the acquisition of movable property and services.

Heavy investment means acquisition of new property, plant and equipment in which the value of the project is not less than CDF1 billion.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in the DRC is not recoverable.

Bad debts. The output tax accounted for on supplies that are subsequently canceled or remain unpaid may be recovered by imputation on the tax due for subsequent transactions.

For unpaid transactions, when the claim is actually and definitively unpaid, the rectification of the invoice consists in sending a duplicate of the invoice with regulatory indications with the mention that the amount of the invoice remained unpaid at the price excluding VAT and of the amount of the corresponding VAT that cannot be deducted.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in the DRC.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in the DRC is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A VAT invoice must be issued for each transaction made and include all the mandatory information including the amount excluding VAT, the amount of VAT and the total including VAT.

Credit notes. For canceled transactions, the related invoice and VAT should be canceled. Therefore, a credit note should be raised to cancel the original invoice. The recovery of the VAT to be paid to the supplier is subordinated by the tax authorities and the sending to the customer of a new invoice or credit note canceling or replacing the original invoice. Thus, the original invoice must be crossed out and kept in the chronological order.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in the DRC, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in the DRC. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in the DRC. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

Electronic invoices must contain all the same required information as a full VAT invoice (and as such, a paper invoice). If this is not complied with, the tax authorities will challenge the deductibility of the input tax on such an invoice for the customer.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in the DRC. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in the DRC. It is only allowed for the self-supply of goods or self-provision of services. In these cases, the VAT is due: at first use, for the self-supply of goods and at the date of the execution of services for the self-provision of services.

Proof of exports. VAT for exported goods is zero-rated. To obtain the zero rating, the following evidence must be provided:
- A copy of the bank document establishing proof of payment by the exporter's customer and a copy of the transport document
- Copies of the export declarations certified by the customs authorities

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices cannot be issued in a foreign currency in the DRC. All invoices must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Congolese franc (CDF).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in the DRC. As such, full VAT invoices are required. Note that when the suppliers issue invoices to customers even if the customers are not registered for VAT, the VAT should be charged on these invoices, unless the customers show an exemption certificate. This means that invoices issued to customers that are exempt from VAT should not be charged VAT (and should not be included on the invoice). Otherwise, all the invoices issued by the suppliers to customers, including the ones who are not registered for VAT, are subject to VAT.

Records. In the DRC, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include tax invoices, nominal/general ledger, trial balance, etc. In the DRC, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. All invoices or equivalent documents must be kept, according to the legislation in place, for at least 10 years.

There is a prescription period for the recovery of taxes and other duties due after 15 years from the filing of the declaration or the issuance of the notice of recovery.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in the DRC. Records can be kept manually or electronically.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. The VAT return is filed with the tax authorities on a monthly basis, by the 15th of the following month. The VAT return must be submitted with the proof of payment of the VAT.

Without proof of payment, the tax authorities will not receive the VAT return (unless it is a nil VAT return). In the case of a VAT refund, the refund will be reported as a VAT credit in the return for the next month. No refund is paid back directly to taxable person (apart from mining companies). In practice, even the mining companies don't receive the refund easily or readily.

Periodic payments. The VAT is paid no later than the 15th of the month following the delivery of the goods (invoice) for the goods and payment received for the services.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in the DRC for certain taxable person. Electronic filing is mandatory for all taxable persons that are registered with the Direction des Grandes Entreprises. For the remaining taxable persons that are registered with the Centre des Impôts and the Centre des Impôts synthétiques, they must file VAT returns manually.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in the DRC.

Special schemes. Cash accounting. Cash accounting is allowed in the DRC. For service providers, the VAT is due when they receive the cash. By the 15th of the following month, they should proceed with the payment of the VAT and join the proof of payment to the VAT return and file the return with the tax authorities.

Purchase invoice scheme. For purchasers of goods, the VAT is due when receiving the invoice for the goods.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in the DRC.

Supplementary filings. Statement of deductions. In the DRC a detailed statement of deductions is required to be filed alongside the monthly VAT return. Also, in March, taxable persons are required to file a confirmation of the annual pro rata. This is for taxable persons that are partially exempt. These need to calculate the apportionment to find the correct percentage to be applied and to regularize the VAT by 31 March of the following year. In case of all items are VAT deductible and full VAT has been applied, no regularization should be made.

Correcting errors in previous returns. To correct any errors or omissions from prior periodic filings, the taxable person must send a letter to the tax authorities to communicate the errors or omissions. These will then be corrected in the next VAT return, which should be filed by the 15th of the following month as normal.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in the DRC.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Failure to register for VAT with the DRC tax authorities within the required period is subject to a fine of CDF500,000.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The absence or late filling of VAT returns is subject to a penalty of 25%. In the case of discretionary taxation for lack of declaration, the penalty is equal to 50% of the amount of the tax due. In case of recidivism, the penalty will increase to 100% of the same amount.

In the case of a tax audit, the penalty equals 20% of the amount of tax due. In case of recidivism, the penalty will increase to 40% of the same amount.

Penalties for errors. When supplying goods or providing service without invoice, the taxable person will be liable for the penalties amounting to twice the VAT due. In case of recidivism, the taxable person will be liable for the penalties amounting to triple of the VAT due.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Any abuse of VAT on an invoice or similar document is subject to a penalty equal to three times of the amount of the tax illegally invoiced.

The taxable person that issues a false invoice including VAT or falsifying an invoice presented as justification for a deduction is subject to the payment of a fine equal to three times of the tax due.

Any refund of credits from the VAT obtained on the basis of false invoices gives rise to an immediate reimbursement of the sums unduly received, with a fine equal to the same amount.

Any deduction made and not corresponding, in part or in whole, to an acquisition of goods or the provision of services is subject to a fine equal to the amount of duties unduly deducted.

The taxable person that fraudulently abuses the electronic filing system will be liable for the payment of the penalties amounting to CDF5 million (USD3,030) for the first time and triple in case of recidivism. However, because electronic filing has not been implemented in practice, the associated penalties have also not been implemented.

Personal liability for company officers. Company directors can be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting. Penalties can be imposed as 25% of the VAT due and/or (2% x number of months of delay) x VAT due.

Statute of limitations. There is no specific statute of limitations in the DRC. The tax authorities can go back to review returns and identify errors and impose penalties at any time.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:
- The supply of goods or services made in Denmark by a taxable person
- The intra-Community acquisition of goods from another EU Member State by a taxable person (see the chapter on the EU)
- Reverse-charge services received by a taxable person in Denmark
- The importation of goods from outside the EU, regardless of the status of the importer

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the chapter on the EU. For documentary requirements, see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

Quick Fixes have been implemented in Denmark since 1 January 2020. In general, the implementation follows the EU Directive; however, the Danish requirements regarding documentation for transport of goods to another Member State in connection with EU supplies have not been increased and are somewhat more lenient than the Quick Fixes EU Directive rules.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoy rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In Denmark, the following services are subject to the use and enjoyment provisions:
- Transfers and assignments of copyrights, patents, licenses, trademarks and similar rights
- Advertising services
- Services of consultants, engineers, consultancy firms, lawyers, accountants and other similar services, as well as data processing and the provision of information
- Obligations to refrain from pursuing or exercising, in whole or in part, a business activity or a right referred to in this list
- Banking, financial and insurance transactions, including reinsurance, with the exception of the hire of safes
- The supply of staff
- The letting of movable tangible property, with the exception of all means of transport
- The provision of access to a natural gas system situated within the territory of the Community or to any network connected to such a system, to the electricity system or to heating or cooling networks, or the transmission or distribution through these systems or networks, and the provision of other services directly linked thereto

- Telecommunications services (only for supplies from a Denmark supplier to non-EU taxable person or supplies from a Denmark supplier to any nontaxable person)
- Radio and television broadcast services (only for supplies from a Denmark supplier to non-EU taxable person or supplies from a Denmark supplier to any nontaxable person)

Transfer of a going concern. The Danish VAT Act stipulates that the transfer of a going concern (TOGC) is not a taxable transaction for VAT purposes. To qualify as a TOGC, the following conditions should be met:

- The transferred assets need to be a full or partial transfer of a business that can be run by itself (transfer of shares does not qualify, nor does stand-alone transfer of inventory)
- The transferring party will stop carrying out activities like those transferred
- If the seller is registered for VAT for the transferred business/activity, the receiving party must be or become registered for VAT in Denmark

Transactions between related parties. Denmark has rules for transactions between related parties. Related parties are:

- Parties closely related due to family or other personal relations
- Parties closely related due to legal, managerial or membership relations
- A party having economic interests in another party's company or property

If certain conditions are fulfilled, the tax authorities may fix the taxable amount at the open market value for the goods and services supplied.

If there is no proper market value for the goods and services or alike, the taxable amount must be the cost price (except for a normal markup), and the seller must take all cost elements into consideration.

The Danish tax authorities can adjust the taxable amount when:

- The payment for a VAT-taxable supply is lower than the cost price, and the buyer does not have full right to VAT deduction.
- The payment for a VAT-exempt supply is lower than the cost price, and the supplier has a limited right to VAT deduction (turnover split).
- The payment for a VAT-taxable supply is higher than the open market value, and the supplier has a limited right to VAT deduction (turnover split).

C. Who is liable

The term "taxable person" means any entity or individual that makes taxable supplies of goods or services, intra-Community acquisitions, or distance sales in the course of a business.

The VAT registration threshold is turnover of DKK50,000 a year for a business resident in Denmark. No registration threshold applies for a non-established business. Consequently, VAT registration is required as soon as a non-established business begins making supplies subject to VAT in Denmark.

Exemption from registration. If a business only makes supplies that are exempt from VAT, then it does not have to register for VAT. However, the business is often liable to register for salary duty. It is a duty, which some businesses must pay, when they deliver VAT exempt goods and services. For example, businesses that supply education, medical services, financial services, cultural services, etc., will have an obligation to register for salary duty. On the other hand, businesses that supply passenger transport to or from other countries or supplies made by writers, composers and performing artists are not obliged to register for salary duty.

If a business delivers supplies that are not exempt from VAT, the VAT law in Denmark does not contain any provision for exemption for registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The VAT law in Denmark does not contain any provision for voluntary VAT registration for foreign entities, as there is no registration threshold for businesses established outside of Denmark. Therefore, all foreign entities that make taxable supplies are obliged to register for VAT unless the business is registered for VAT via the One-Stop Shop (OSS) and only makes supplies that are covered by the OSS. This also includes the Import One-Stop Shop (IOSS).

Foreign entities that supply goods or services in Denmark for which they are not obliged to settle the VAT (because the VAT must be settled by the buyer under the reverse-charge regime) may not opt to register for VAT in Denmark.

Danish entities that are not required to register for VAT because their turnover does not exceed the threshold may choose to voluntarily register.

Both Danish and foreign businesses that lease out real estate can register voluntarily for the letting of real estate, which would lead to the letting becoming subject to VAT rather than exempt.

In certain cases where the sale of real estate would be exempt, it is also possible to voluntarily register for the sale of real estate to a VAT-registered business. In this case the sale would still be exempt, but the VAT incurred may be deducted and transferred as a VAT adjustment obligation under certain conditions.

It is also possible for certain businesses to register voluntarily for sale of investment gold.

Group registration. Groups of companies or related entities may request registration as a single taxable person (VAT group). If a company with exempt activities (partly or fully) wishes to be part of a VAT group, the parent company must be included in the VAT group. In this case, all group members must be 100% owned by the parent company and established in Denmark.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group.

The effect of VAT grouping is that no VAT is charged on supplies between group members. However, if any member of the group has exempt activities, the group must deduct input tax on a pro rata basis.

All members of a VAT group are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties.

Holding companies. In Denmark, a pure holding company may be part of a VAT group but only with fully owned group companies (similar to companies with exempt activities).

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f) has been implemented in Denmark. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, providing certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Danish VAT law).

It is possible for companies that have exempt activities to set up a cost-sharing group that can supply certain services to the members of the group under a VAT exemption. The services must be specific for the exempt activities of the members, the VAT exemption must not lead to distortion of competition, and only members whose activities are exempt under art. 132 of the EU VAT Directive can use the exemption. The payment from each member must exactly match the costs related to the services supplied to that member.

Fixed establishment. In Denmark there is no legal definition of when a fixed establishment will exist for VAT purposes. However, according to EU and local case law, a fixed establishment is assumed to have been established when the entity has the necessary presence of a sufficiently permanent character of the appropriate human and technical resources.

Non-established businesses. A non-established business must register for Danish VAT if it makes any of the following supplies:

- Goods that are located in Denmark at the time of supply
- Intra-Community acquisitions in Denmark
- Distance sales greater than the annual threshold (the registration may be under the OSS)
- Business-to-consumer (B2C) e-services, broadcasting and telecommunications to individuals with Danish residence (except if such EU sales do not exceed the threshold) (the registration may be under the OSS)
- Services that are not subject to the tax under the "reverse-charge" mechanism (for example, services related to real estate that are supplied to private persons) (the registration may in many cases be under the OSS). Most services supplied to taxable persons in Denmark are covered by the Danish reverse-charge regime

For details on how a non-established business registers for VAT in Denmark, see the subsection Registration procedures below.

Tax representatives. Businesses established in the following countries are not required to appoint a tax representative to register for Danish VAT:

Aland Islands	Faroe Islands	Iceland	United Kingdom (UK)
EU Member States	Greenland	Norway

However, businesses established in the above countries may choose to appoint a tax representative to register for VAT. If a business established in a country, which is not an EU Member State, imports goods into Denmark, there will be an obligation to appoint a fiscal representative who is jointly and severally liable for any VAT or customs duty payments due (also applies to the non-EU countries mentioned above).

VAT registration for non-established taxable persons from the Aland Islands, EU Member States, the Faroe Islands, Greenland, Iceland, Norway and the UK without a fiscal representative will mean that the Danish tax authorities will contact the business directly at their address in their home country.

Businesses established in other countries must appoint a Danish resident (either a business or a natural person) as tax representative to register for VAT. The representative and the nonresident business are jointly and severally liable for VAT liabilities.

The Danish tax authorities may require a non-established taxable person to provide security equal to its expected VAT liability for a three-month period. This may occur if the tax authorities believe a risk exists that the non-established business may not pay its indirect tax obligations.

Reverse charge. If a non-established business supplies services to a taxable person in Denmark the taxable person may be required to account for the VAT due under reverse-charge accounting. This means that the taxable person charges itself VAT. The self-assessed VAT may be deducted as input tax.

In case of digital services, telecom services or broadcasting services supplied in a B2B context, the place of supply is the place where the recipient is established. No Danish VAT should be charged, and reverse charge applies unless supplier and customer are established in Denmark.

In case of digital services, telecom services or broadcasting services supplied in a B2C context, Danish VAT is always due in case of supply to customers established in Denmark, disregarding whether the supplier is established inside or outside the EU (except for EU businesses whose B2C supplies do not exceed the threshold of EUR10,000).

The authorities can require banks, credit card companies and others handling transfer of payments to inform them of payments involving distance sales of goods made to Danish customers and electronic services supplied to nontaxable persons in Denmark.

Domestic reverse charge. The domestic reverse charge is applicable in Denmark for a limited number of supplies. The domestic reverse charge works the same way as the normal reverse charge, but domestically within country territory.

The mechanism applies to sales to taxable persons of metal scrap, mobile phones, computer chips, gaming devices, tablet-PCs, laptops, CO2 quotas, CO2 credits, and gas and electricity certificates. As of 1 January 2024, the domestic reverse charge also applies to suppliers of telecommunication services to resellers of these services.

For mobile phones, computer chips, gaming devices, tablet-PCs and laptops, the reverse-charge mechanism does not apply if the vendor's supply of products subject to domestic reverse charge (high-value goods) are made exclusively or predominantly to private consumers. If more than 50% of the sales of high-value goods are made to private consumers, the general rule applies, i.e., the Danish supplier must charge DK VAT on local sales.

The domestic reverse charge also applies to sales of investment gold to VAT registered businesses.

Finally, the reverse charge applies to sales of gas or electricity to a taxable person who is a reseller of the gas or electricity.

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021. These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B, Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:

- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000 with effect from 1 July 2021). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" mechanism.

At the time of preparing this chapter, suppliers of streaming services to Danish residents should be aware that Denmark is expected to adopt a "cultural levy" with effect from 1 January 2024. The levy is expected to be 2% of Danish turnover, with a possible additional 3% payable for companies who invest less than 5% of their Danish turnover in Danish content. No further details have been released.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, an e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In Denmark there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services. The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:

- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

In Denmark, taxable persons established outside EU can choose Denmark as the Member State of Identification, i.e., where the taxable person chooses to register for the OSS (only relevant where a taxable person uses the non-Union scheme, as the dispatch country is the Member State of Identification for the Union scheme). It is a two-step registration process. The non-established business must first register in Denmark with an administrative business number and hereafter register electronically in the OSS.

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance sales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt from VAT. For more details about the IOSS, see the chapter on the EU.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination, and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

In Denmark, taxable persons established outside the EU must register with an intermediary in Denmark if the Member State of Identification is appointed to be Denmark.

Postal Services and Couriers Scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

In Denmark, there are no additional specific local rules that apply.

For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the chapter on the EU.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules, effective 1 July 2021 taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:

- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). Any intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

In Denmark, online marketplaces and platforms established outside the EU must register in the country of dispatch. For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. Denmark has implemented the EU Voucher Directive in the Danish VAT law with effect as of 1 July 2019. Prior to this implementation, no definition of the VAT treatment of vouchers was included in the Danish VAT law. Thus, any voucher issued on 1 July 2019 or later shall from a Danish VAT point of view be treated under the new definition of single-purpose vouchers (SPVs) and multi-purpose vouchers (MPVs) set out in the Danish VAT law. The wording of the Danish Amendment Act implementing the EU Voucher Directive is very similar to the wording in the EU Voucher Directive.

Since there is only the standard VAT rate of 25% in Denmark (except for a 0% VAT rate on newspapers), any voucher that can only be redeemed in Denmark would in general be qualified as an SPV for VAT purposes, unless the voucher can also be used for exempt goods or services (or newspapers). According to the guidelines made by the Danish Tax Agency in connection with the implementation of the EU Voucher Directive, any SPV must be treated as if the issuer supplied the goods and services (even if it is not so from a civil law point of view). The issuer must therefore pay the VAT when the voucher is transferred. It is the opinion of the Danish Tax Agency that it makes no difference if an SPV is issued in own name or if the issuer acts as provider of the voucher in its own name. The tax base for an SPV is the payment received.

For an MPV, VAT is not settled until the actual transfer of the underlying good or service to the bearer of the voucher. Thus, VAT is not due until the time of redemption, and no VAT is settled of the preceding transfers of an MPV. The VAT basis for an MPV is a starting point of the counter value paid for the voucher. If an MPV can be used multiple times, it is only the part of the voucher that is redeemed of which VAT should be calculated.

Registration procedures. For domestic businesses, the registration process is performed online and requires a digital signature (MitID) (which could be that of a Danish advisor, e.g., an auditor or a lawyer).

For foreign businesses, the registration application can be submitted either electronically or in hard copy. It is often made by paper, as a foreign business will normally not have a Danish digital signature. However, if made electronically, it can be done by an advisor using their digital signature. Foreign businesses must register for VAT by filling out the following form: https://virk.dk/myndigheder/stat/ERST/selvbetjening/Registration_of_Non-Danish_Company__Start_-_40112/.

For foreign businesses, the registration application must include documentation for the company registration number in the home country (normally certificate of incorporation and articles of association), documentation of VAT registration in the home country (if applicable) and a confirmation from the tax authorities in country of establishment that the company has no unpaid debts to the tax authorities. For both domestic and foreign businesses, the VAT registration application must be submitted at the latest eight days before taxable activities are started in Denmark. If the application is not submitted or it is submitted late, or the information provided is not correct or insufficient, a penalty might be issued.

When a VAT registration is required, the business should submit a request to register at least 8 days before the start of the activities leading to the requirement to register. It is, however, possible to register retroactively.

The registration process normally takes roughly 14 days but can take up to 2 months. A certificate with the Danish VAT number can be downloaded at the e-tax platform. The business can login into the e-tax platform using its digital signature (MitID) or a special code (TastSelv code) issued by the Danish Tax Agency.

Deregistration. A taxable person that ceases to be eligible for VAT registration must deregister within eight days. For Danish businesses with a Danish business identification number, the VAT number will be the same if taxable activities are resumed. For foreign businesses, it is not possible to receive the same VAT number if taxable activities are resumed.

Changes to VAT registration details. Businesses with a Danish VAT registration must notify the Danish Tax Agency when there are changes to their VAT registration details, such as name of company, address and type of business. The business should notify the authorities as soon as the change is known. It could trigger a new VAT registration for the business in case the business obtains a new company number, i.e., significant changes to the legal person. This could be the case if the business moves its establishment to another country.

Domestic businesses and non-established businesses with a Danish company number can notify the authorities about changes online. Non-established business without a Danish company number must submit a paper form to the authorities.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 25%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Newspapers
- Supplies to ships
- Supplies of gold to the Danish National Bank

Some supplies are classified as "exempt-with-credit," which means that no VAT is chargeable, but the supplier may recover related input tax. Exempt-with-credit supplies include exports of goods and related services, intra-Community supplies of goods and intangible services supplied to either another taxable person established in the EU or a recipient outside the EU (see the chapter on the EU).

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to tax and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Medical services
- Education
- Financial services
- Insurance and reinsurance
- Supplies made by writers, composers and performing artists
- Cultural services
- Transport of passengers
- Investment gold
- Leasing of real estate

Option to tax for exempt supplies. It is possible to make a voluntary registration to tax letting and tenancy of real estate. The voluntary registration for letting of property must be at least two years. The two-year period starts when the first letting has commenced. In certain cases where the sale of real estate would be exempt, it may also be possible to obtain a voluntary registration for the sale to a taxable business.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic time of supply for goods is when they are delivered. The basic time of supply for services is when they are performed. However, if one of the other events described below occurs before the time of the actual supply, the VAT will become due at the time of that event.

If the invoice is issued prior to the actual supply, VAT is due when issuing the invoice. If the invoice is issued shortly after the actual supply, the invoice date is generally accepted as the "tax point." If any prepayments are made earlier than the actual supply or before issuing the invoice, VAT is due at the time of the prepayment (see the Deposits and prepayments subsection below).

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply for an advance payment is when the supplier receives the payment even if the supply has not been made. In this case, the VAT will be due for the prepaid amount at the time of prepayment. This also applies if an invoice is not issued at this point in time (in which case, however, the customer will not be able to deduct the VAT until they receive an invoice). A final time of supply occurs when the supply has been completed.

Continuous supplies of services. The time of supply of services where no final delivery has taken place, but payment has been made, is at the end of each VAT return period in which the payment covers. When, as part of a continuous supply of goods, the delivery is taking more than one month and has not concluded, delivery is considered to have taken place on the last day of the month. If delivery is taking more than one year and has not concluded and no payment has been made, delivery is considered to have taken place on the last day of the calendar year.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. When goods are supplied in consignment/commission (sale or return), it is possible to choose between two different time of supply rules:

- The time of supply

  Or

- The time of the payment to the consignee

If the last possibility is chosen, the invoice must be issued at the time of payment.

If the goods are returned to the seller, the treatment that applies depends on which time of supply the seller and consignee have agreed upon. If they have chosen the time of supply, a credit note must be issued. If they have chosen the time of the payment to the consignee, no payment has taken place and the consignee can return the goods without further issues.

If the goods are not sold, the VAT treatment depends on the circumstances. It may be that no supply has taken place, or it may be that a supply for no consideration has taken place.

Denmark does not have a specific time of supply rule for any supplies sent on approval for sale or return that are not under the consignment/commission setup, as outlined above. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Reverse-charge services. Certain services imported from outside Denmark by a taxable person are subject to the tax under the "reverse-charge" mechanism, which means that the recipient of the service must account for VAT. The time of supply for a reverse-charge service is the VAT period in which the service is supplied or the period in which the invoice is issued if the invoice is issued shortly after the supply.

Leased assets. There are no special time of supply rules in Denmark for supplies of leased assets. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is the date of the customs clearance or the date on which the goods leave a duty suspension regime.

Intra-Community acquisitions. The time of supply for an intra-Community acquisition of goods is the 15th day of the month following the month in which the acquisition occurred. If the supplier issues an invoice before this date, the time of supply is when the invoice is issued.

Intra-Community supplies of goods. The time of supply for an intra-Community supply of goods is the 15th day of the month following the month in which the supply occurred. If the supplier issues an invoice before this date, the time of supply is when the invoice is issued.

Distance sales. There are no special time of supply rules in Denmark for supplies of distance sales. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above) and is when the goods are delivered. For distance sales supplies, where the supplier is established outside the EU and the goods are supplied via an online marketplace and platform, the time of supply changes to the time of payment. The same applies for all supplies of goods under the import scheme.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. Taxable persons generally recover input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Denmark, VAT paid on imports of goods and VAT self-assessed on intra-Community acquisitions of goods and reverse-charge services.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Denmark is three years. If input tax has not been reclaimed (by error) in previous periods, the VAT return for the period in question may be adjusted to include the input tax until three years after the filing deadline for the VAT period where the input tax should have been reported.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible, and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Business gifts with a value of more than DKK100
- Purchase, lease or hire of a passenger car
- Maintenance costs for a passenger car
- Employee meals and entertainment

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- 100% of hotel accommodation, if strictly for business purposes
- 25% of restaurant services, if strictly for business purposes
- Books
- Long-term lease of cars used for a business (a proportion)
- Attendance at conferences, seminars and exhibitions
- 50% of home telephone bill (only applicable to landlines)
- Purchase and subscriptions connected with, e.g., mobile phones and laptops based on a split between business use and private use

Partial exemption. Input tax incurred that is directly related to making exempt supplies is not generally recoverable. Input tax wholly attributable to taxable supplies is recoverable in full. Only that portion of input tax attributable to exempt supplies is not recoverable. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption." Exempt with credit supplies are treated as taxable supplies for these purposes.

The amount of input tax that may be recovered is calculated in the following two stages:

- The first stage is the direct allocation of VAT to exempt and taxable supplies. Input tax directly allocable to exempt supplies is not deductible.
- The second stage is to prorate the remaining input tax that relates to both taxable and exempt supplies (for example, VAT incurred on business overhead) based on the percentage of total turnover that is taxable. The pro rata calculation must be performed each year, and the recovery percentage is rounded up to the next whole number. For example, a recovery percentage of 77.2% is rounded up to 78%.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Denmark. From 2024, taxable persons will need to report the pro rata rate to the tax authorities.

Special methods are not allowed in Denmark, except for certain costs relating to real estate (where special methods are mandatory for certain types of costs).

For costs relating to both taxable activities and activities not related to taxable or exempt activities, deduction should be made based on an estimate of the use that entitles to VAT deduction.

Capital goods. Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is deducted in the VAT year in which the goods are acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition. However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted over time if the taxable person's partial exemption recovery percentage changes during the adjustment period.

In Denmark, the capital goods adjustment applies to the following assets for the number of years indicated:

- Land and buildings including additions and alterations: adjusted for a period of 10 years
- Repair, maintenance and renovation of land and buildings if annual cost exceeds DKK100,000: adjusted for a period of five years
- Items of machinery, equipment and furniture costing more than DKK100,000: adjusted for a period of five years
- Services that are comparable to physical capital goods, including software and rights, where such services have a purchase price exceeding DKK100,000: adjusted for a period of five years

The adjustment is applied each year following the year of acquisition to a fraction of the total input tax (1/10 for land and buildings and 1/5 for other capital goods). The adjustment may result in either an increase or a decrease of deductible input tax, depending on whether the ratio of taxable supplies made by the business increases or decreases compared with the year in which the capital goods were acquired.

Refunds. If the input tax exceeds the output tax in a specific filing period, the business registered for VAT in Denmark is in a VAT refundable position. The VAT refund is claimed via the submission of the VAT return and the VAT refund is usually transferred to the business within 21 days after the submission of the VAT return. All businesses registered for VAT in Denmark should register an "Easy Account" (a regular bank account) with the Digitalization Agency and all transfers of funds from the Danish authorities will be transferred to this account.

Pre-registration costs. Pre-registration costs are refundable if they relate to the taxable activities of the business. Whether or not the costs qualify for a refund must be individually assessed. Where the business is not registered from the start of the activities, there is a time limit of three years for obtaining a retroactive deduction (corresponding to the general statute of limitation for VAT).

Bad debts. To claim bad debt relief, the supplier must be able to demonstrate the loss by use of a court order. If a debtor is bankrupt, in liquidation, etc., or the debtor is dead, this is treated as the equivalent to a court order.

Regarding bad debts not related to bankruptcy and the like, it is sufficient that the supplier has made an effort to claim the amount through a debt collection agency or a lawyer or that the supplier itself has tried in vain to collect the amount. The debt must be considered lost and minimum internal chasing procedure must be performed in order to render it probable that the debt cannot be recovered. The chasing procedure must be reasonable compared to the size of the debt and the costs related to the collection.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Denmark.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Denmark is recoverable. The Danish VAT authorities refund VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established nor registered for VAT in Denmark. Non-established businesses may claim Danish VAT to the same extent as a VAT-registered business.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refunds are made under the terms of EU Directive 2008/9/EC. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Denmark during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge). For full details see the chapter on the EU.

Find below specific rules for Denmark:
- Claims must be submitted in Danish, English, German or Swedish.
- The minimum claim for a period of less than a year is DKK3,000. For an annual claim, the minimum amount is DKK400.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th VAT Directive. For full details see the chapter on the EU.

Reciprocity is not applicable in Denmark. This means that the refund scheme is open to any country, as long as the non-EU business meet the specific rules (as outlined below).

The VAT refund procedure under the EU 13th Directive may be used only if the business was not established within the EU during the refund period. Furthermore, the business shall declare that no business activities triggering a VAT registration obligation in Denmark have been performed during the refund period. Find below specific rules for Denmark:
- The deadline for refund claims for non-EU businesses is 30 September of the year following the year in which the tax is incurred.
- The minimum claim period is three months, while the maximum period is one year. However, a claim for the remainder of a calendar year can be for less than three months. The minimum claim for a period of less than a year is DKK3,000. For an annual claim or a claim for a period for the remainder of a calendar year, the minimum amount is DKK400.
- The claimant shall provide documentation that business activities are performed in the non-EU jurisdiction of the business' establishment.
- Claims must be submitted in Danish, English, German or Swedish.
- Applications for refunds of Danish VAT should, for businesses established outside the EU, be sent to the following office:

  Skattestyrelsen
  Nykøbingvej 76
  Bygning 45
  DK-4990 Sakskøbing
  Denmark

- The Danish tax authorities are obliged to decide on the refund application no later than eight months after the application was submitted.

Late payment interest. In case of late VAT refund payments (to both EU and non-EU non-established businesses), according to the Directive n° 2008/9/EC, implemented in the Denmark VAT law, Denmark must pay late payment interest at a variable rate as from the date the refund should have been made. The rate is 8%, plus the lending rate fixed by the Danish National Bank on 1 January and 1 July each year. At the time of preparing this chapter, the rate is 11.25% (effective 1 July 2023).

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A Danish taxable person must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made, including exports and intra-Community supplies.

A VAT invoice is necessary to support a claim for input tax deduction or a refund under the EU Directive 2008/9/EC or the EU 13th Directive refund schemes (see the chapter on the EU).

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply. It must be cross-referenced to the original VAT invoice and contain the same information.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Denmark for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Denmark. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU). This is with effect from 2005. Technically this is based on non-VAT rules and require that invoices sent to public bodies are sent electronically in a specific format. If preferred, invoices can be issued normally for such supplies (i.e., by paper), but must then be uploaded electronically.

For B2B and B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed in Denmark, but not mandatory. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU (see the chapter on the EU). A wider e-invoicing framework based on non-VAT rules will be implemented during 2024-2026 as part of the digital bookkeeping regulations being rolled out in Denmark.

The Danish business authorities will gradually implement general B2B e-invoicing requirements during 2024-2026. The implementation means that businesses will be required to possess the technical capability to issue and receive e-invoices using either the OIOUBL or the Peppol BIS formats, although the use of e-invoices will not be mandatory. This means that businesses must have the infrastructure and systems in place to send and receive electronic invoices, but they can continue to use traditional paper invoices or other methods if they prefer.

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Denmark.

The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the chapter on the European Union.

Simplified VAT invoices. A simplified invoice can be issued if the total sales value does not exceed DKK 3,000 ex VAT. The simplified invoices must contain the following data:
- Date of issue
- Sequential invoice number
- Supplier's VAT number
- Supplier's name and address
- Quantity and nature of the goods/services supplied
- Total payable amount, including VAT
- Payable VAT amount or the necessary information to calculate the VAT amount, e.g., by stating that the VAT amount is 20% of the total payable amount including VAT (equal to the Danish VAT rate of 25%)

Companies mainly or only selling to private consumers must issue a simplified invoice, unless they use a cash register system and provide a cash receipt to the customer. The cash receipt must contain the following data:
- Date of issue
- Supplier's VAT number or supplier's name and address
- Quantity and nature of the goods/services supplied
- Total payable amount including VAT
- Payable VAT amount or the necessary information to calculate the VAT amount, e.g., by stating that the VAT amount is 20% of the total payable amount including VAT

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Denmark. It is possible to enter into an agreement where the customer issues the invoice to themselves on behalf of the supplier. The parties must enter into a written agreement to allow for self-billing. The agreement must include a description of the process, including how the supplier approves each invoice (may be by not opposing the invoice within a fixed number of days). The self-billing invoice must contain the same information as a regular invoice, plus the wording "selvfakturering" or "self-billing" and the customer's VAT registration number.

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods or on intra-Community supplies of goods (see the chapter on the EU). However, to qualify as VAT-free, exports and intra-Community supplies must be supported by evidence that proves the goods have left Denmark. Acceptable proof includes the following documentation:
- For an export, the seller must retain the signed customs documentation with a pro forma invoice and commercial evidence such as customer orders and contracts.
- For an intra-Community supply, the seller must indicate the customer's VAT identification number (from a different EU country) and must retain commercial documentation, such as purchase orders, transport documentation and evidence of both payment and receipt of goods.

No special documentation applies in Denmark for evidencing the application of the Quick Fixes. Normal intra-Community documentation rules apply.

At the time of preparing this chapter, it was not expected that EU rules regarding maximum documentation requirements will lead to additional requirements in Denmark in the situation where the seller is responsible for transport.

Notice that there are special documentation requirements for intra-Community supplies, when (1) the buyer picks up the goods at the seller's place of business in Denmark (EXW) and (2) the buyer pays at the time of picking up the goods (no credit/deferred payment). In this case the seller must have a buyer statement confirming:
- The goods are sent or transported outside Denmark
- The destination of the goods
- Means of transport and registration number
- The goods are received at the delivery address

The buyer statement must be documented by other documents for the transportation, e.g., tickets from ferries, bridges or similar.

Foreign currency invoices. A Danish VAT invoice may be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Danish krone (DKK), or euros (EUR). If another currency is used, the amount of VAT must be converted into DKK, either by using the current daily exchange rate or the official monthly customs exchange rate published by the Danish tax authorities.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Special rules apply to the place of supply for supplies of telecommunications, broadcasting and electronic services to nontaxable customers. Non-established businesses registered under the OSS scheme are exempt from the invoicing requirement when selling these services to Danish consumers.

Danish suppliers of these services are required to issue invoices to nontaxable customers.

Non-established businesses performing distance sales of goods to Danish consumers, registered via the OSS scheme, are exempt from issuing invoices.

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a full VAT invoice must be issued. However, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, then no full VAT invoice is required unless requested.

Records. In Denmark, examples of records that must be held for VAT purposes include bookkeeping materials (bookkeeping, financial statements, any documents that form the basis of the bookkeeping, etc.) and tax invoices. VAT registered businesses must in general comply with the Danish Bookkeeping Act.

In Denmark, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. Electronically archived records may be stored outside of Denmark. However, paper files may only be stored outside Denmark temporarily (for the month when the document is issued and the following month – to allow bookkeeping to take place outside of Denmark). Paper files can be stored in the Scandinavian countries if certain requirements are met.

Record retention period. VAT records must be kept for 5 years, and if the records concern immovable property covered by the capital goods scheme, they must be kept for 10 years.

The records should be kept in accordance with the Danish Bookkeeping Act. This means that they must be clear and transparent and make it possible for the tax authorities to audit that the VAT reporting is correct. The summarized information in the VAT return must be verifiable through the individual entries. From 2024, businesses will gradually be required to store invoices electronically, along with any supplementary records supporting these documents.

Taxable persons using the OSS schemes and the import scheme must keep the VAT records for 10 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Denmark, and a general requirement will be implemented during 2024-2026.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. A Danish taxable person whose turnover exceeds DKK50 million must submit VAT returns on a monthly basis. A taxable person with a turnover of between DKK5 million and DKK50 million generally submits returns on a quarterly basis (monthly returns are optional). A taxable person with turnover of less than DKK5 million must submit returns on a half-yearly basis.

Monthly VAT returns are due by the 25th day of the month following the return period. Quarterly VAT returns are due by the first day of the third month following the end of the return period. Half-yearly VAT returns are due by the first day of the third month following the end of the return period.

A summer VAT relief scheme allows filing for the June period to be made by 17 August.

Periodic payments. Returns must be completed, and liabilities must be paid in Danish kroner (DKK).

Monthly VAT payments are due by the 25th day of the month following the return period. Quarterly VAT payments are due by the first day of the third month following the end of the return period. Half-yearly VAT payments are due by the first day of the third month following the end of the return period.

A summer VAT relief scheme allows payment for the June period to be made by 17 August.

Payment is made by transferring the payable amount to the bank account of the tax authorities with reference to the VAT registration number of the company. Note that payment should not be made earlier than five days prior to the deadline, as the tax authorities may refund the amount in this case. Payment may be made by a direct bank transfer, by direct debit or by credit card payment. Payment by cash or cheque is not allowed in Denmark.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Denmark. It is compulsory for all taxable persons to submit VAT returns online, using the Danish tax authorities' website, www.skat.dk, through "E-tax for businesses" (TastSelv).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Denmark.

Special schemes. Artists. Artists (or their heirs) have a special scheme where the VAT on the first sale of the artist's own works may be calculated based on a reduced taxable amount of 20% of the regular taxable amount.

Dealers in secondhand goods, art, collectibles and antiques. Dealers in secondhand goods, art, collectibles and antiques may calculate the VAT payable based on the profit made on the sale (either calculated based on the individual sales or on the basis of the combined inventory of the dealer). For dealers in used cars, similar rules apply; however, the VAT payable must be calculated on the individual car. Due to the high Danish car registration tax, special rules apply for the calculation. In all cases, the rules are only applicable if the goods are purchased from a private individual or in circumstances where the goods were originally bought from a seller whose sale was exempt or also covered by the rules on secondhand goods.

Travel agents. Travel agents should calculate VAT on their supplies based on their profit on the travels sold.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Denmark. However, as of 2024, businesses with partially exempt activities must file the annual corrections regarding VAT deduction (variations from the expected pro rata to the realized pro rata) along with their regular VAT return, which covers the sixth month following the end of their accounting year.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. Danish taxable persons that trade with other EU countries must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of their sales or purchases exceeds certain thresholds. Separate reports cover intra-Community acquisitions (Intrastat Arrivals) and intra-Community supplies (Intrastat Dispatches). The threshold for Intrastat Arrivals in 2023 is DKK22 million. The threshold for Intrastat Dispatches in 2023 is DKK11 million. At the time of preparing this chapter, the thresholds for 2024 have not been announced. Intrastat declarations must be completed in DKK. The Intrastat return period is monthly. The submission deadline is the 10th working day of the month following the end of the Intrastat return period. For smaller businesses, an extended deadline applies. To qualify as a smaller business, acquisitions must be below DKK22 million, and dispatches must be below DKK16.5 million (2023 numbers). The deadline varies and will be informed to the businesses in question directly. They can also be found on the website of the Danish Statistics Agency: Intrastat – Statistics Denmark (dst.dk).

EU Sales Lists. If a Danish taxable person makes intra-Community supplies or renders services that are subject to reverse charge in another EU country in any return period, it must submit an EU Sales List (ESL). An ESL does not need to be submitted for a period in which no intra-Community supplies are made. ESLs must be completed in Danish kroner. ESLs return period is monthly and must be submitted by the 25th in the month following the return period. In some cases, businesses that have limited intra-Community supplies may obtain permission to submit ESLs on a quarterly basis.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Errors in previous returns should be corrected by filing corrective VAT returns. It is possible to correct past returns until three years after the date the individual VAT return was originally due.

Corrections must be made electronically (both for domestic and foreign businesses) by correcting the specific VAT return related to the error.

Under specific circumstances, it is possible to apply for extraordinary correction 10 years retrospectively. This could be the case where the practice of the Danish tax authorities is rejected by the Court of Justice of the European Union and the case before the CJEU is 10 years old or more. The Danish tax agency may also require the business to make corrections beyond the 3 years if they find that the business has filed incorrect returns due to gross negligence.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Denmark.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. There is no specific penalty in Denmark for the late registration of VAT. However, a penalty may be charged of up to twice the VAT amount due in the period during which the business should have been registered, if the authorities deem that this should be classified as gross negligence. Even where no penalties apply, the tax authorities will charge interest for late payment of VAT for previous periods when registering retroactively.

Penalties for late payment and filings. The penalty for the late submission of a VAT return is DKK65 per reminder for payment. If a business still does not submit its VAT return, the Danish tax authorities will submit a temporary VAT return on behalf of the business. An extra duty of DKK800 will apply for this. In addition, interest is levied for late payment of VAT. The interest rate for 2023 is 0.7% per month, calculated on a daily basis. This interest is not deductible for income tax purposes.

For Intrastat, if a report is late or missing, a fine of DKK550 is imposed. Continued failure to report will be sanctioned by the police and the legal courts.

If an ESL is late, a reminder penalty of DKK65 is imposed.

Penalties for errors. If the authorities find that an error was made by simple negligence, no penalty will normally apply if the business makes a self-disclosure to the authorities. This could include erroneously treating a supply as exempt when it should have been taxed, deducting input tax that was not deductible or miscalculating the deductible pro rata for partially exempt businesses. It should be mentioned that if the rules are very clear, it is the opinion of the tax authorities that it is not possible to regard an error as a result of simple negligence.

If an error is discovered during an audit and the error is excusable and/or common, the tax authorities will most likely simply issue a decision that the business must correct the error. If not, the authorities may issue a fine of up to two times the VAT wrongfully deducted or not reported.

As of 1 July 2023, new rules came into force regarding payment of additional VAT in connection with subsequent corrections of VAT returns. Interest will be charged on all corrections that lead to additional payment for the individual VAT period. The interest is calculated from the date of the payment deadline for the original VAT return. At the time of preparing the chapter, the current interest rate is a monthly rate of 0.7%. Generally, interest is levied on all errors that are post-declared, as outlined above, including erroneously treating a supply as exempt when it should have been taxed, or deducting input tax that was not deductible. It may also be relevant where a deduction has been made in a wrong period, as this will lead to additional payment for the period where the deduction was originally made. Interest is calculated monthly on a day-by-day basis as compound interest, meaning that interest on interest is paid. It is possible to request exemption from such interest, but it is expected that this will only be granted in very special cases.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. If a business by gross negligence or deliberately reports VAT incorrectly resulting in excess repayment of VAT or insufficient settling of VAT, the consequences will depend on several things. In the VAT rules, the penalty for fraud may be fines or prison for up to 18 months. In severe cases, the penalty code may be used, allowing for significantly longer prison sentences. In case of fraud, any involved tax advisors may also be subject to fines. This would require that the advisor has displayed gross negligence. In severe cases, it would be possible to prosecute the advisor under the penalty code, including sentencing the advisor to prison.

Personal liability for company officers. The VAT liabilities for a company with limited liability may only be collected from the company. However, if a company officer is found to have participated in activities to defraud the tax authorities by filing wrong returns, that person may be sued for damages. In addition, it is possible to bring criminal proceedings against that person, but this requires evidence of gross negligence or deliberate evasion on its part. In that case, both fines and prison sentencing may be applicable.

As of 1 July 2023, company officers of a company that has been discontinued may be held personally liable for taxes in cases where the individual is deemed to have contributed to incorrect reporting to the tax authorities that has led to insufficient reporting and /or payment of taxes.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Denmark is three years. This is for corrections both by the tax authorities and taxable persons, calculated from the filing deadline for the VAT return for the individual VAT period.

If the tax authorities find that the taxable person has demonstrated gross negligence, they may under certain conditions extend this period to up to 10 years (only applicable to the disadvantage of the taxable person). If case law (from Danish courts or the Court of Justice of the European Union) means that the Danish practice is amended, special rules apply that may allow for amendments going back up to 10 years (only applicable to the advantage of the taxable person).

B. Scope of the tax

ITBIS applies to the following transactions:
- Supply/transfer of industrialized goods
- Importation of industrialized goods
- Leasing and rendering of services

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for ITBIS in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In the Dominican Republic, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions. However, a draft bill is expected to be approved in the near future to levy with ITBIS digital services provided by foreign suppliers. At the time of preparing this chapter, there is no clear date for the approval of this regulation.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in the Dominican Republic. As such, ITBIS applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In the Dominican Republic, for a transaction between related parties the value for ITBIS purposes is calculated at an arm's-length basis. Transactions between a resident person and a related party should be agreed according to the prices or amounts that would have been agreed by independent parties in comparable operations and under the same or similar circumstances (arm's-length principle).

C. Who is liable

The following are ITBIS taxable persons:
- Individuals or business entities, whether domestic or foreign, that habitually supply industrialized goods as part of their industrial or commercial activities
- Individuals or business entities engaged in the importation of goods subject to ITBIS
- Individual or business entities that render services subject to ITBIS

No turnover threshold applies to ITBIS registration.

Within 30 days after beginning taxable activities, the taxable person must notify the tax authorities of its activities. In addition, ITBIS taxable persons must issue tax valid invoices for their operations. An authorization for fiscal supporting numbers (Números de Comprobantes Fiscales or NCF) for tax valid invoices to be issued by the ITBIS taxable person should be requested from the tax authorities prior to the issuance of any tax valid invoice.

Exemption from registration. The ITBIS law in the Dominican Republic does not contain any provisions for exemption from registration for entities or individuals that make taxable supplies.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The ITBIS law in the Dominican Republic does not contain any provision for voluntary ITBIS registration, as there is no registration threshold (i.e., all individuals or business entities that make taxable supplies or provide services (including exempted) are obliged to register for ITBIS purposes.

A taxable person may use a simplified tax procedure (Régimen Simplificado de Tributación or RST for its Spanish acronym) if it meets certain purchase or income criteria to qualify as a small or medium taxable person.

The RST based on purchases applies to a taxable person making annual purchases of DOP49.3 million (approx. USD872,000) or less and performs commercial activities related to retail sales to final consumers.

The RST based on income criteria applies to a small taxable person that satisfies all the following conditions:
- The taxable person is dedicated to the provision of services, production of goods or belongs to the agriculture sector.
- The taxable person has annual income of DOP10.7 million or less (approx. USD189,000).

The RST allows the taxable person to benefit from the following:
- No obligation to file monthly purchases and sales data through the data submission formats (606, 607, 608, among others) established by the Dominican tax administration (DTA)
- No advanced payments of income tax
- No payment of the asset tax
- Right to opt for automatic payment agreements for the payment of taxes
- Simplified annual tax returns forms for ITBIS and income tax

Group registration. Although the tax authorities do not apply group registration in practice, under the Dominican ITBIS provisions, the tax authorities may consider as unique taxable persons' entities, individuals, enterprises or a combination of them, if they supply or render ITBIS-taxable goods or services and if these activities are controlled by the same person or persons (individuals, entities or combinations). If an individual exercises control or administers several businesses or establishments, the ITBIS imposed is considered to be the ITBIS of such individual.

Members of an ITBIS group in Dominican Republic are not jointly and severally liable for ITBIS debts and penalties. Instead, the representative member is responsible for ITBIS debts before the tax authorities.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of an ITBIS group.

Fixed establishment. In the Dominican Republic there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for ITBIS purposes. However, there is permanent establishment (PE) definition for income tax purposes (which applies for ITBIS) establishing that a PE is a fixed place of business in which an individual, corporation or foreign entity performs all or part of its activities, including management sites, offices, branches, commercial agencies, factories, workshops, mines, petroleum or gas wells, quarries or any other type of extraction of natural resources, assembly projects (including monitoring activities), construction or supervision activities derived from the sale of plant or equipment when their cost exceeds 10% of the sales price of those goods, business advisory services, if and when these exceed six months in an annual period, and representatives or agents, whether dependent or independent, when the latter perform all or most of their activities on behalf of the company.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in the Dominican Republic. The Dominican Tax Law does not provide a mechanism for the withholding of the ITBIS from non-established businesses. Consequently, a non-established business must register to pay ITBIS to the tax authorities if it supplies goods or services in the Dominican Republic. Once registered with the local authorities, the entity will be considered domiciled for fiscal purposes and will have to comply with all tax duties and obligations as if it were a formal established entity. To register for ITBIS, a non-established business must register with the Chamber of Commerce and the tax authorities.

The Dominican tax regulations do not provide a reverse-charge or refund mechanism for these entities.

Tax representatives. At the moment of registering an entity as a taxable person, a tax representative must be appointed.

Reverse charge. The reverse-charge mechanism is not allowed in the Dominican Republic. Consequently, if a non-established business supplies goods or services in the Dominican Republic, it must register for ITBIS to pay the ITBIS to the tax authorities, due on the supply made.

Domestic reverse charge. Taxable persons that acquire goods or services from a non-registered local supplier may issue "purchase tax invoices" to support tax deduction, including ITBIS, from said type of purchases. In this case, the acquirer of the goods or services must withhold 100% of the ITBIS for the transaction and pay it to the tax authorities.

Digital economy. There are no specific ITBIS rules in relation to the digital economy. In principle, the same ITBIS rules should apply to goods and services that are provided digitally; nonetheless, the rules are not that clear. In practice, a non-established business providing digital services would generally be required to register for ITBIS and charge ITBIS on its supplies where the services are physically performed or used in the Dominican Republic.

At the time of preparing this chapter, the rules for registration and accounting for ITBIS in practice for nonresident providers of electronically supplied services (for both business-to-business (B2B) and business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies) are not clear. As such, a bill for the application of ITBIS to digital services is being discussed by the Dominican government and is expected to be approved and put into place. However, at the time of preparing this chapter, there is no clear date for approval of this regulation.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in the Dominican Republic.

Online marketplaces and platforms. The general rules for online marketplaces and platforms are provided through Law No. 126-02 on Electronic Commerce, Digital Documents and Signatures and its Regulation of Application the Decree No. 335-03. However, from a tax perspective, no specific ITBIS rules are provided for such supplies through online marketplaces and platforms.

Registration procedures. Tax registration can be done online via the virtual office of the tax authority or physically. In the case of individuals, Form RC-01 must be filed before the tax authority with a copy of their tax ID or passport. In the case of legal entities, a previous procedure before the chamber of commerce must be carried out to register all corporate documentation (bylaws, shareholders' meeting minutes, subscription list) regarding their legal constitution. Moreover, legal entities must file Form RC-02 before the tax authority, along with the previously registered documentation, to request their incorporation to the Taxable persons' Registry (RNC for its Spanish acronym).

Deregistration. To deregister from the RNC, taxable persons must request from the tax authority an authorization for business termination and additionally submit within 60 days after its business termination a final income tax return. Legal entities must also provide corporate documentation approving the dissolution or liquidation of the entity (as applicable).

Changes to ITBIS registration details. In the case of changes to the registration details of an individual or entity (i.e., name of company, address, type of business) Forms RC-01 and RC-02, respectively, must be filed online or physically with the tax authority, along with a copy of the corporate documents that demonstrate or justify the changes made, for example, Mercantile Registry Certificate, shareholders' meeting minutes, etc. The tax authority will review the new information and modify the registration within 30 days. Based on the Dominican Republic tax code, notifications of these changes must be made within 10 days after the date these changes are made.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of ITBIS, the zero rate.

The ITBIS rates are:
- Standard rate: 18%
- Reduced rate: 16%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of ITBIS applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exportation of goods

Examples of goods and services taxable at 16%

- Yogurt and other dairy derivatives
- Coffee
- Butter, margarine and oils
- Powdered cacao (with or without sugar) and unfilled cacao bars
- Sugar

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Live animals
- Fresh, refrigerated or frozen meat
- Fish for popular consumption or reproduction
- Milk, eggs and honey
- Non-processed fruit for massive consumption
- Cocoa, chocolate and some grains and cereals
- Certain types of medicines
- Certain types of books and magazines
- Education services, including theater, ballet, opera and dance
- Health services
- Electricity, water and garbage collection services
- Financial services (including insurance)

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in the Dominican Republic.

E. Time of supply

The time when the taxable event is considered to take place and ITBIS becomes due is called the "tax point."

The basic time of supply of goods is the earlier of the following: (i) when the invoice or document that supports the transfer of the goods is issued or, (ii) the time of the delivery or the withdrawal of the goods.

The basic time of supply for services is the earlier of the following: (i) when the service is performed, (ii) when the invoice is issued, or (iii) when the price is paid in full or in part.

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply for deposits and prepayments is when the price is paid in full or in part if it occurs before the issuance of the invoice or the provision of the service.

Continuous supplies of services. When there is a periodic payment/invoicing for ongoing services, the time of supply for the services is the earlier of when the invoice is issued or when the price is paid (in full or in part).

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The time of supply for goods sent on approval for sale or return is when an invoice is issued by the receiver of the goods once it sells it to a third party. If the goods are returned to the original seller, no ITBIS should apply.

Reverse-charge services. Local legislation in the Dominican Republic does not contain any provision for ITBIS for reverse-charge services.

Leased assets. The time of supply for leased assets is when the lease payment is due according to contractual terms or when it is paid, whichever occurs first. Local legislation does not provide a special rule if the lease results in the transfer of ownership of the underlying assets. Nonetheless, the general time of supply rules should apply.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is when the goods are placed at the disposition of the importer.

F. Recovery of ITBIS by taxable persons

An ITBIS taxable person may deduct as input tax the advance taxes paid with respect to the following purchases:
- The purchase of domestic goods and services that are subject to ITBIS
- The importation of goods subject to ITBIS

The right to deduct advance taxes must be supported by proper documentation related to the local purchase or the importation of the goods.

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in the Dominican Republic. This mean that, effectively, the input tax (ITBIS credit) may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery.

Nondeductible input tax. Taxable persons may deduct from their output tax the amounts that by concept of this tax have been paid in advance in the same period (input tax), if the following requirements are met:
- The input tax that is intended to be deducted corresponds to goods and services used to carry out activities subject to this tax, except in the case of exempt goods producers and exporters.
- The expense on which the ITBIS was incurred is deductible for the purposes of income tax.
- The input tax has been expressly transferred to the taxable person who intends to make the deduction.
- The input tax has not been considered as part of the cost or expense for the purposes of the allowable income tax deductions.
- The input tax does not come from acquisitions of goods that are part of Category 1 assets.
- The invoiced ITBIS is recorded separately in a fiscal invoice that meets the conditions established in the Dominican legislation.

When it is not possible to segregate whether the imports or acquisitions of local goods and services made by a taxable person have been used in taxed or exempt operations, the deduction of the taxes that have been charged will be made in the proportion corresponding to the amount of their taxed operations, considering the total of its operations in the period in question.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible
- The purchase of ITBIS subject goods used for the sale of ITBIS exempt goods.
- The purchase of goods used in the construction of a building.

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)
- Renting a car for a company employee for corporate use.
- Purchase of a mobile phone for a company employee for their professional activities.

Partial exemption. If it is not possible to determine whether the goods purchased or imported by a taxable person have been used in performing taxable or exempt activities, the ITBIS deduction is proportional. The deductible proportion is based on the value of the taxable person's taxable operations in the tax year compared with the value of its total operations for the tax year.

ITBIS not deductible according to this formula should be considered as a cost of production for the goods supplied or services provided.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in the Dominican Republic. When filing the ITBIS return, the taxable person notifies the tax authorities of the deduction made.

Special methods are not allowed in the Dominican Republic.

Capital goods. The Dominican Republic tax regulations do not establish a definition for capital goods for indirect tax purposes. There are no special input tax recovery rules for capital goods. As such, input tax recovery is subject to the normal rules (as outlined above).

Refunds. Exporters that have excess credits for advanced payments of taxes on the purchase of materials employed in the production of exported goods may request a refund for the advanced tax through an expedited process.

If an invoice is voided within 30 days after its issuance, a refund of the ITBIS may be requested in that period.

For other type of taxable persons, they must carry forward any input tax credit until they can deduct it with output tax. They still can claim a refund in case they consider that they have paid ITBIS in excess and prove they will not be able to deduct said credit with their regular operations, but it is an extended refund process.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in the Dominican Republic is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in the Dominican Republic.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in the Dominican Republic.

G. Recovery of ITBIS by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for ITBIS in the Dominican Republic is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

ITBIS invoices. An ITBIS taxable person must provide invoices indicating the amount of ITBIS collected for the taxable supplies made. In addition, invoices must include a Fiscal Supporting Number (Número de Comprobante Fiscal or NCF for its Spanish acronym) and the Taxable person's Registration Number (RNC), among other requirements.

An invoice showing the NCF, RNC and the ITBIS amount separate from the total amount is generally necessary to support a claim for an input tax credit.

The invoice for every supply of goods or services rendered must show an NCF. The NCF is made up of an alphanumeric sequence granted by the tax authorities at the request of the taxable person.

The NCF is required to support deductions for income tax purposes or ITBIS credits.

Invoices with NCFs may be printed directly by taxable persons through their computer systems or by establishments duly authorized by the tax authorities.

Credit notes. An ITBIS credit note may be used to reduce the ITBIS charged and reclaimed on a supply of goods and services within the next 30 days of the issuance of the invoice or the supply of the goods.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in the Dominican Republic, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in the Dominican Republic.

Mandatory electronic invoicing came into effect on 16 May 2023 with the enactment of Law No. 32-23, which establishes the electronic invoicing tax system, including its characteristics, optimization results, contingencies, entry deadlines, and the fiscal facilities granted to taxable persons. The electronic invoicing law covers natural, legal persons and entities without legal personality domiciled in the Dominican Republic that carry out operations involving the transfer of goods, cession in use or provision and location of services in return for a fee or free of charge. Transactions for which tax invoices are not ordinarily provided are not subject to the provisions of this law.

All taxable persons are required to issue electronic tax invoices (e-CFs) depending on their size within certain deadlines after the effective date of the law (16 May 2023), as follows:
- Large national taxable persons: 12 months from the effective date of the law
- Large and medium local taxable persons: 24 months from the effective date of the law
- Small, micro and unclassified taxable persons: 36 months from the effective date of the law

The tax authorities will issue a list of the taxable persons that are obliged to adopt electronic invoicing per the implementation schedule referenced above.

In some cases, the tax authorities will grant tax credits to taxable persons that become electronic issuers during the voluntary period and, likewise, to taxable persons that comply with the implementation schedule.

Simplified ITBIS invoices. Simplified invoices are not contemplated in the Dominican Republic legislation. Nevertheless, Dominican legislation establishes a "consumer's invoice," which can be used to invoice the ultimate consumer of a good or service that will not be used as part of any subsequent commercial operation or activity.

The format is the same as an invoice, except for the customer's tax information, which is not included in the consumer's invoice. It is not possible to deduct ITBIS from a consumer's invoice under any circumstances, provided that this kind of invoice is not used for tax purposes.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in the Dominican Republic. This is only in relation to minor expenses, purchases abroad and purchases to non-registered local suppliers, through the issuance of a special tax-valid invoice by the same taxable person. If ITBIS is applicable, the issuer is obliged to withhold the applicable ITBIS.

Proof of exports. Exported goods are zero-rated for ITBIS purposes. Under the ITBIS Law, a compensation and reimbursement procedure is provided for exporters. This procedure allows the compensation or reimbursement of the ITBIS charged with respect to goods to be used for exportation activities. Customs documentation that can be used as evidence to show that exports have left the country include single customs declaration, origin certificate, commercial invoice and shipping list/documents.

Foreign currency invoices. It is acceptable for invoices including NCF to be issued in a foreign currency, as well as the domestic currency, which is the Dominican pesos (DOP).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. Certain businesses could be exempted from issuing individual tax invoices for final consumers based on the volume of their operations (e.g., supermarkets, gas stations, retailers) by being allowed to group tax invoices to final consumers in a single tax invoice, per day. Approval from the tax authority is required for the application of this rule.

Records. In the Dominican Republic, examples of what records must be held for ITBIS purposes include tax returns, reports, documents, forms, invoices, proof of legitimate origin of goods, receipts, lists of prices, etc., related to events generating tax obligations, and in general, provide all requested clarifications. No special rules for record-keeping are provided for indirect tax purposes.

In the Dominican Republic, ITBIS books and records can be kept outside the country. Records may be held in or outside the Dominican Republic. However, records held outside the Dominican Republic must be readily available upon request by the tax authorities for review.

Record retention period. Conforming to the Dominican Republic tax code, accounting records need to be kept for 10 years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in the Dominican Republic. Records can be kept and archived electronically or physically (i.e., on paper). The Dominican Republic legislation does not establish a specific format for said documentation.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. ITBIS returns are submitted monthly. ITBIS taxable persons must file the return by the first 20 days of the following month of the verification of the tax liability. A tax return must be filed, even if no ITBIS is due by the taxable person for the period.

Periodic payments. ITBIS taxable persons must pay the corresponding ITBIS amount through the Form IT-1 by the first 20 days of the following month of the verification of the tax liability. Tax due must be paid in Dominican pesos (DOP).

Withholding obligations for payment processors. Acquiring companies, payment aggregators and electronic payment institutions have been designated as ITBIS withholding agents by General Norm No. 06-23, which was issued by the tax authorities and came into effect on 3 October 2023. This requirement is applicable with respect to transactions carried out through credit cards, debit cards or any other electronic payment instrument.

If the affiliate is registered as a taxpayer with an active status with the tax authorities, a rate of 2% withholding tax (WHT) of the invoiced amount will apply. If the affiliate is not registered or has a status of suspended, deregistered, or registered without recurring tax obligations, a rate of 18% will apply when the operation exceeds the amount of DOP300,000. However, in cases where the transaction does not exceed this amount, a WHT of 2% will apply.

A report of the transactions and withholdings should be submitted on a weekly basis (every Friday) via the tax authorities' virtual office (Oficina Virtual), through Form 200 as well as through Form IT-3.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in the Dominican Republic for all taxable persons. ITBIS returns should be monthly submitted via the tax authorities' virtual office, through Form IT-1. The virtual office (Oficina Virtual) is an electronic means that allows taxable persons to make safe and timely inquiries and submit tax returns. It can be accessed through the tax authorities' website (https://dgii.gov.do/cicloContribuyente/accesoOFV/Paginas/default.aspx)

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in the Dominican Republic.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in the Dominican Republic.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in the Dominican Republic.

Supplementary filings. Data formats. Along with the ITBIS monthly return, taxable persons must submit data formats 606 (to report purchases made), 607 (to report sales made) and 608 (for invoice cancellation).

Correcting errors in previous returns. Amendments to tax returns from past fiscal periods may be made through the virtual office of the tax authorities. In the case of ITBIS returns, for taxable persons to be able to make the amendments, they must follow some specific requirements and comply with certain conditions, as outlined by the tax authorities.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in the Dominican Republic.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A taxable person that fails to register for ITBIS on a timely basis may not deduct input tax paid on the purchase of goods and services. The tax authorities may assess unpaid ITBIS, and penalties and interest are also assessed for late registration.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Following are the penalties for late payment of ITBIS or for noncompliance with tax obligations:
- Surcharges: charged at 10% of the unpaid tax for the first month or fraction of a month, and at 4% per month for each successive month or fraction of a month
- Interest: charged at 1.10% per month or fraction of a month. This amount is added to the surcharge

Additionally, failing to file the corresponding tax returns is considered a violation of formal duties, and as such, a tax infraction subject to a penalty of five to 30 minimum wages. In practice, such penalty is currently established at approx. USD500.

The failure to pay ITBIS owed to the DTA on time would also lead to surcharges and interests.

Penalties for errors. Failure to fulfill formal tax duties could result in a fine of five to 30 times the minimum salary. Among others, the following are violations:
- Failure to maintain accounting books or records required by law
- Providing false information when registering for ITBIS
- Not registering in the relevant tax registries
- Refusing to provide information to the tax authorities
- Failure to file tax returns for the calculation of tax payments (among others)

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's ITBIS registration details may result in a penalty of five to 30 minimum wages that can be applied by the tax authority. For further details see the subsection Changes to ITBIS registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Tax evasion that does not constitute fraud occurs if, by any action or omission, a taxable person files an inaccurate tax return that results in a reduction in the tax payment to be made to the tax authorities. The penalty may consist of up to twice the unpaid amount plus interest and the closure of the business. If the amount of the unpaid tax cannot be determined, a fine ranging from 10 to 50 times the minimum salary (the minimum salary is approx. USD200) may be imposed. The tax evasion penalty may not be applied simultaneously with surcharges for late payment.

Tax fraud occurs when information has been altered in a manner that causes the tax authorities to incorrectly compute the amount of tax due. The consequences of tax fraud may include a penalty ranging from two to 10 times the amount of the evaded tax, closure of the business establishment or the cancellation of an operating license.

Personal liability for company officers. The tax liability is personal; however, presidents, vice presidents, directors, managers, administrators or representatives are jointly and severally responsible for the tax liability of taxable persons that are entities. Tax penalties may vary depending on the type of infraction, among which could be loss of privileges, closure of establishments, monetary fines, confiscation of property and imprisonment.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in the Dominican Republic is three years. This starts from the day after the filing of the tax return and payment of the tax is due. The tax authorities may review, question and amend the transactions carried out and tax returns filed by taxable persons for a period of three years. Nonetheless, in certain circumstances the statute of limitations may be suspended or interrupted and therefore extended for a total of five years, if:

- The taxable person or person responsible did not file the corresponding tax return or filed it with false information.

  Or

- The tax authorities have given notice to the taxable person of an audit or verification.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT is levied on the following transactions:
- The supply of goods or rendering of services performed in Ecuador
- The importation of goods and services from outside Ecuador
- The supply of copyrights, industrial property and related rights (this includes intellectual property)
- The importation of digital services (refer to the subsection below on the Digital economy)

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Ecuador, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation, including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Ecuador, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT. Some of the principal characteristics of a transfer of a TOGC are the following (as stipulated by the Ecuadorian Commercial Code):
- It is required to perform the transactions through public deed.
- The transfer of a TOGC has to be signed by the parties and a public accountant.
- It is required to detail the type of assets to be transferred and the specific registry obligations to consider (i.e., real estate, vehicles, among others)

Transactions between related parties. In Ecuador, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, the rules for income tax purposes are not applicable for VAT

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is an individual or business entity that, in the course of doing business in Ecuador, engages in the following actions:
- Transfers and/or imports of physical movable goods
- Performance and/or importation of services

No VAT registration threshold applies in Ecuador.

The definition of a taxable person also applies to a permanent establishment of a foreign business located in Ecuador.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Ecuador does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. The Ecuadorian VAT law contains the option of voluntary registration for nonresident digital service providers in Ecuador only when the service is imported by tax residents or permanent establishments of nonresidents in Ecuador.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Ecuador.

Fixed establishment. In Ecuador there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, only taxpayers legally incorporated or domiciled under Ecuadorian legislation will be considered as responsible for VAT purposes.

Non-established businesses. If non-established businesses perform transactions on which VAT is levied, the resident customer (taxable person) must account for VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism (business-to-business (B2B) supply). A sales and purchase receipt must be issued by the local company and the VAT payable is levied from the local company.

A non-established business is not required to be registered for tax purposes in Ecuador unless its activities trigger a permanent establishment.

Non-established businesses have the choice to register for VAT in Ecuador if they provide digital services. The VAT registration procedure for digital services providers requires that they also provide the following documentation:
- Registration form signed by the legal representative
- Agreement of responsibility and use of electronic media signed by the legal representative
- Certificate of tax residence of the company
- Certificate of existence of the company providing the digital service
- Appointment of the legal representative of the company providing the digital service
- ID of the legal representative

Tax representatives. Foreign companies may select a resident person or legal entity to represent the taxable person to the tax authorities. This is not limited to VAT issues but must include all tax matters between the taxable person and tax authorities in Ecuador.

Reverse charge. A self-invoice is issued in case of self-consumption or donation, and for imported services. In case of self-consumption or donation, the price must be the market price or higher, and VAT is levied. The legal requirements applicable are the same as for a normal sales invoice.

For imported services, the local entities must issue a sales and purchase receipt in order to charge the VAT over the services billed from abroad. The VAT on import of goods is settled by the local customs authority. For imported digital services, where payment is made by credit or debit card, the local credit or debit card entities shall act as withholding agents for 100% of the VAT due on such supplies.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Ecuador.

Digital economy. There are no specific requirements for digital economy transactions other than general VAT regulations. Non-established businesses have the choice to register for VAT in Ecuador if they provide digital services.

For B2B transactions, the services provided by a nonresident business are generally subject to 12% VAT with respect to imported services. The customer is expected to self-assess and pay VAT, which may be used as a tax credit. For business-to-consumer (B2C) transactions, which are also subject to 12% VAT, the payment is subject to a 3.5% outflow tax (OT) and will be reduced from 1 January 2024 to 2%, which is the responsibility of the customer. The OT also applies in general to any payments that are made by the customer to the supplier (for B2B and B2C transactions). The outflow tax will be charged to the local customer bank/credit card account used to perform the payment. This charge does not affect the amount received by the non-established business.

Note that a non-established business is not required to be registered for tax purposes in Ecuador unless their activities trigger a permanent establishment. For further details, see the Non-established businesses subsection above. The Simplification and Progressive Taxation Act was published 31 December 2019 and effective since 1 January 2020. Nonetheless, regarding digital VAT tax reforms, the effective day was 16 September 2020. This means that digital services are treated as taxable transactions for VAT purposes and subject to the standard rate of VAT.

"Digital services" are defined as those provided and/or contracted through the internet or any adaptation or application of protocols, platforms or technology used by the internet or other network, through which similar services are provided that, by their nature, are automated and require minimal human intervention, regardless of the device used for downloading, viewing or use. For digital services consisting in delivery and shipping of tangible movable goods, the tax will be calculated on the commission paid in addition to the value of the good.

The payment of the VAT generated on digital services supply would be assumed by the "importer of the service" (i.e., the Ecuadorian resident).

Tax residents in Ecuador and permanent establishments of nonresidents, in the acquisition of imported digital services, for purposes of supporting costs and expenses for the calculation of income tax, as well as the VAT tax credit, must issue a liquidation of purchase of goods and provision of services. The settlement of goods and services must indicate the value of the imported digital service and the corresponding VAT.

When the digital service provider is not registered with the IRS and there is no intermediary in the payment process, the digital service importer has the quality of a taxable person, and in addition to issuing the liquidation of purchases of goods and provision of services, will retain 100% of the VAT generated.

When the digital service provider is not registered with the IRS and the payment is made through an intermediary, the account statement generated by the company issuing the credit or debit card will constitute the withholding receipt.

The digital services necessary for the development, preproduction, production, postproduction and distribution of national audiovisual content contracted by taxable entities whose economic activity is national, audiovisual production are exempt from VAT. To apply this exemption, in payments made through intermediaries (payment platforms, credit and/or debit cards or other electronic means of payment), the importer of the digital service, prior to payment, must present the respective declaration of VAT-exempt transactions to the intermediary to refrain liquidation and withholding of VAT.

When the payment is made directly, without the use of intermediaries, the importer of the digital service must issue sales and purchases receipts and directly apply the VAT exemption. To determine which digital services will benefit from this exemption, the competent authority, together with the IRS, will prepare and publish a registry.

Online marketplaces and platforms. See the detail above for rules on online marketplaces and platforms (considered a "digital service" by the VAT law definition).

Registration procedures. Private entities must file before the tax authority the following documents:

- Form RUC-01-A signed by the legal representative
- Public deed of the constitution of the company duly registered in the Commercial Registry
- Legal representative's appointment duly registered in the Commercial Registry
- General data sheet provided by the Superintendence of Companies
- Legal representative's ID or passport

To register for VAT, the business must register for a tax ID and this must be performed directly in the tax authority's offices. All documents must be originals and notarized copies. The legal representative must perform the registration directly or file a letter of authorization to the person in charge of this process. The estimated time for this procedure is three hours.

There are additional documents required for a non-established business providing electronically supplied services to customers in Ecuador. See the Non-established businesses subsection above for further detail.

Deregistration. If a person or legal entity ceases its commercial activities in Ecuadorian territory, then a request to cancel the Tax ID must be submitted to the tax authority in order to prevent penalties and new tax obligations.

This process can be done online with the correspondent username and password to use electronic media of the company before the IRS.

Changes to VAT registration details. A taxable person must update its tax ID through Form RUC-01-A if there are any changes to its VAT registration details, such as address, business name, among others.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 12%
- Reduced rate: 8%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Unprocessed food
- Dairy products
- Machinery such as tractors used in the agricultural sector
- Agricultural goods (such as certified seeds, plants and roots) and equipment
- Drugs and veterinary products
- Paper, newspapers, magazines, books and publishing services
- Exported goods and services
- Transport of persons and materials and air cargo transport
- Education
- Health services
- Public supply of electricity, drinking water and sewerage services
- Rent for housing purposes
- Financial securities exchanges
- Electric kitchens with induction systems for domestic use
- Solar panels and plants for wastewater treatment
- Electric vehicle chargers

Examples of goods and services taxable at 8%

- Tourism activities that can only be applied on certain dates in the year, which may correspond to public holidays or weekends, and the total period cannot exceed 12 days in one calendar year

The term "exempt supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Sale of a business
- Mergers, spin-offs and conversions of companies
- Donations to charities
- Transfers of stock, shares and other negotiable instruments
- Real estate rental payments and related maintenance costs

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Ecuador.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic time of supply is when the goods are transferred or when the services are performed. The invoice for the transaction must be issued at the time of supply.

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in Ecuador for deposits and prepayments. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Continuous supplies of services. There are no special time of supply rules in Ecuador for continuous supplies of services. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply, and as such the tax is due when the goods are transferred, or the services provided. The time to issue the corresponding invoice and to levy the VAT is agreed between the parties if the services or the goods are delivered periodically. Nevertheless, the expense solely can be considered as deductible once the service is rendered or the goods are delivered.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. For the supplies of goods sent on approval for sale or return, and the sale takes place, then the normal tax point is when the goods are sold. However, where the goods are sent for approval and no sale takes place, then no VAT needs to be accounted for. If the goods, having been sent to the customer on approval, and no sale takes place, but the goods are returned to the supplier, then no VAT is to be refunded (as none was accounted for when sending the goods for approval) and no credit note is required to be issued. A credit note is only required to be issued when a sale takes place and then the goods are returned to the supplier, and refund is required.

Reverse-charge services. If an Ecuadorian taxable person imports services, it must self-assess and determine the applicable VAT when the expense is recognized and recorded in the accounting books. The tax must be paid the next month from the date in which the self-assessment was issued. When paying for the services, the purchaser must withhold the VAT.

Leased assets. The time of supply of leased assets is every month against the invoice or every duly established period of time as agreed in the lease agreement.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is either the date of importation or the date on which the goods leave a duty suspension regime.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

Input tax may be recovered with respect to the following:

- Exportation of goods and services (some restrictions apply)
- Importation and local acquisition of goods and raw materials used in the production of exported goods
- The provision of goods or services to governmental entities (some restrictions apply)
- The activities of audiovisual, television and cinematographic productions (some restrictions apply)

The recovery may be achieved through the offsetting of VAT receivable against VAT payable or through a claim to the tax authorities.

If a taxable person registers a VAT amount for which a credit exists as an expense, the expense is not deductible for income tax purposes.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Ecuador is five years. The use of the VAT credit paid on local purchases and imports of goods and services can be used for up to five years (if not this, VAT should be recorded as a nondeductible expense). The specific request for the reimbursement of VAT credit is not allowed.

If it is presumed that the resulting tax credit cannot be offset with the VAT incurred within the following six months, the taxable person may request a refund when it is originated by withholdings. Service exporters are required to receive payment from abroad in order to be granted the VAT refund, along with the requirement that the foreign payment is made through a local bank account with the account holder being the nonresident person.

Nondeductible input tax. In general, input tax is nondeductible when the expenses are not related to sales levied with standard-rated VAT (12%). In general, input tax incurred on personal expenses that are not directly related to the taxable economic activity cannot be recovered.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Food
- Clothing
- Housing

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Travel expenses
- Expenses related to the acquisition, use or ownership of vehicles, computers or other goods used in the exercise of the economic activity levied with 12% VAT

Partial exemption. Taxable persons that produce goods or supply services that are subject to 12% VAT may recover the full input tax paid, netting it with local acquisitions. The same treatment applies to VAT taxable persons that export goods and services. Input tax can be recovered with respect to imports of fixed assets and goods, raw materials and services necessary to produce and trade taxable goods and services.

Taxable persons that exclusively produce or sell goods or supply services that are subject to VAT at the zero rate (other than exports of goods or services) are not entitled to any input tax recovery.

VAT taxable persons that supply goods or render services that are subject to VAT at both rates (12% and 0%) may recover a proportion of input tax.

The recovery percentage is calculated using a pro rata method, using the ratio of the total value of supplies made at the standard rate plus exports to the total value of all supplies made. The following is the ratio:

$$\frac{\text{Supplies subject to a rate of 12\% + exports}}{\text{Total sales + exports}}$$

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Ecuador. However, use of the method could be reviewed during an assessment by the tax authorities. Special methods are not allowed in Ecuador.

Capital goods. There are no special input tax recovery rules for capital goods. For capital goods, the general input tax recovery rules apply, i.e., only the tax related to the taxable sales can be deducted. If they are used for both taxable and exempt transactions, then the pro rata method should be applied.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax (credit VAT) recoverable in a month exceeds the amount of output tax (debit VAT) payable, the excess credit may be carried forward to offset output tax in the following tax period. As such, the recovery may be achieved through the offsetting of VAT receivable against VAT payable or through a claim to the tax authorities.

Pre-registration costs. For input tax incurred on pre-registration costs, the sales receipt must be issued in the name of the company, with its respective tax ID. However, usually these types of costs are not able to be recovered since there are no invoices or receipts issued in the name of the taxable person at the stage of pre-registration.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Ecuador.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred upon purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Ecuador.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Ecuador is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. In general, a VAT taxable person must issue an invoice for all taxable transactions performed, including exports. Such invoices are necessary to support a tax credit. A full VAT invoice is only required for supplies greater than USD50.

Credit notes. Credit notes are documents that are issued to cancel operations, accept returns and grant discounts or bonuses. The credit notes must record the denomination, series and number of the sales receipts to which they refer. The acquirer, or who in its name receives the credit note, must enter in its original and copy the name of the acquirer, its tax ID or passport ID, and date of receipt. Additionally, the credit notes must comply with the general requirements established for VAT invoices.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Ecuador, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in Ecuador.

It is allowed but not mandatory for certain small businesses under the simplified regime (RIMPE "popular business"). This includes special taxable persons, exporters, internet-based sellers, issuers and administrators of credit cards, financial institutions and entities that develop television and communication activities. Nevertheless, any taxable person can apply to the tax authority to issue electronic invoices.

"Special taxable persons" are defined as companies or individuals subject to a special tax regime that includes regulations that are not applicable to all taxable persons. A taxable person will be considered as a "special taxable person" if the Ecuadorian IRS decides it through an official resolution. The taxable person must be considered as "special" regarding the volume of its transactions and strategic interest for the IRS.

Within the simplified regime, for those classified as "popular business" (i.e., entities with annual gross revenues of up to USD20,000), they are not obliged to issue any type of invoice

(i.e., electronic or conventional), but are obligated to issue "sales notes", therefore, they are not subject to VAT. For individuals not obliged to keep accounting and popular business, it is expected the IRS to issue a resolution establishing the thresholds to start issuing electronic invoices.

Taxable persons must issue electronic invoices for the supply of the goods and services. The electronic invoices must be forwarded to the Ecuadorian IRS and the purchaser, when issued. The no compliance of the latter may cause the imposition of sanctions to the provider such as the closing of facilities.

To issue electronic invoices, the taxable person must comply with the following requirements:
1) Electronic signature
2) Software that generates electronic receipts
3) Internet connection
4) Access credentials to the online IRS system

Taxable persons are not obligated to request a previous authorization from the IRS to issue electronic invoices, as the IRS authorizes ex officio all taxable persons. With the authorization issued by the IRS ex officio, the following environments are enabled:
1) Testing environment: the taxable person can review the operation of the electronic invoice process, adjust the system and correct possible errors. The invoices issued in this environment do not have tax validity.
2) Production environment: the taxable person may begin issuing electronic invoices in this environment. All electronic receipts authorized in the Production Environment have tax validity.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Ecuador. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Ecuador. It applies to self-consumption or donation transactions and for imported services (see the Reverse-charge services subsection above, under Section E. Time of Supply). For self-consumption or donation, the legal requirements applicable are the same as for a normal sales invoice. For imported services, the local entities must issue a sales and purchase receipt in order to charge the VAT over the services billed from abroad.

Proof of exports. Ecuadorian VAT is not chargeable on supplies of exported goods or services. However, to qualify as zero-rated, exports must be supported by customs documents evidencing that the goods have left Ecuador. Specifically, the following four parameters must be met:
1) Provider of the services must be an Ecuadorian tax resident
2) User or beneficiary of the services must not be domiciled or be resident in Ecuador
3) Use or exploitation of the services by the user or beneficiary must take place fully abroad, although the rendering of the services is performed in the country
4) Payment for the services is not charged back as a cost or expense of local companies or individuals in Ecuador

Foreign currency invoices. Invoices related to supplies made in Ecuador must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the United States dollar (USD).

Supplies to nontaxable persons. A full VAT invoice is not required to be issued for supplies less than USD50.

Records. In Ecuador, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include sales receipts, supporting documents and withholding receipts. In Ecuador, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. Taxable persons must store tax records for at least seven years.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Ecuador. Electronic sales receipts must be archived digitally. However, all other records must be kept physically on paper.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns are generally submitted monthly. VAT returns are due between the 10th and the 28th day of the month following the end of the return period. To determine the filing deadline for a VAT taxable person, the tax administration uses the ninth number of its tax identification number (RUC). In case of special taxable persons, they must file their tax return up to the 11th day of each month. If this date coincides with a mandatory day of rest or national or local holiday, it will be moved to the business day following this date.

Taxable persons who perform only zero-rated (0%) VAT-rated sales and purchases must file a VAT return semiannually (i.e., every six months). The return is due between the 10th and the 28th day of July (for transactions performed between January and June) and January (transactions performed between July and December). The tax authority will determine which taxable persons must file their VAT returns semiannually through a general resolution that it will publish in the future. At the time of preparing this chapter, no further details have been released on this.

Periodic payments. VAT payment in full is due between the 10th and the 28th day of the month following the end of the return period. VAT shown in tax returns must be paid in US dollars. The payment must be paid online via the website of the IRS. This is an online platform for all taxable persons that have a tax ID in Ecuador. Through this platform, any taxable person can file its tax returns and pay any VAT due online. The online payment can be made automatically, by syncing the taxable person's bank account to the system, after signing a debit agreement. It is also possible to pay through the IRS website with both credit and debit cards.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Ecuador for all taxable persons. All VAT returns must be electronically filed according to the schedule specified above and using the software provided by the tax authority, which can be downloaded from the tax authority website (www.sri.gob.ec).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Ecuador.

Special schemes. Small businesses. Micro, small and medium-sized enterprises which have been granted more than one month to pay their taxes must file the VAT return within one month, and pay the tax owed to the tax authority within three months, as from the issuance of the invoice.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Ecuador.

Supplementary filings. Supporting transactional information. Taxable persons must submit supplementary information on transactions made regarding purchases or acquisitions, sales or revenues, exports, voided receipts and withholdings. This information is denominated "Anexo Transaccional" and is filed electronically through the tax authority's digital applications.

Correcting errors in previous returns. A substitute VAT return can only be filed where more tax is due than originally paid, or changes to fiscal obligations or changes to control processes. The filing will vary depending on the obligation.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Ecuador.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. There is a specific penalty in Ecuador for the late tax ID registration (between USD30 to USD125, depending on the type of taxpayer).

Penalties for late payment and filings. Penalties for noncompliance with VAT obligations include fines of up to five times the amount lost by the tax authorities, closure of the business and imprisonment.

Penalties for errors. In case of errors that imply an additional VAT payment, interest applies. Other regulatory infractions may be subject to penalties up to USD1,500.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details (i.e., the general tax ID, which covers VAT, as well as all taxes) may result in a penalty from USD30 to USD125, depending on the type of taxable person. For further details, see subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Tax fraud is typified in the Organic Criminal Code and is punishable by deprivation of liberty from one to seven years.

Personal liability for company officers. The legal representative and company accountant are the only persons responsible for the information submitted to the IRS. However, note that the IRS is entitled to review the information proportionated by the taxable person.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Ecuador is four to six years. This is from the date of the tax return (but depends on the case).

B. Scope of the tax

All local and imported goods and services are subject to VAT except those specifically exempted. Services are defined in the VAT law as "any work that is imported or performed locally that is not classified as goods."

The VAT law provides a table with tax rates that are applicable to certain goods and services (either instead of the general VAT rate or in addition to the general VAT rate):
- Goods and services subject to table tax rates only
- Goods and services subject to table tax rate in addition to the VAT rate

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment rules" that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Egypt the "effective use and enjoyment" definition is not mentioned in the Egyptian VAT law. However non-established businesses (i.e., suppliers of services) are required to register for VAT under the simple registration in that jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons but residents in Egypt (i.e., business-to-consumer [B2C] supplies).

Under the "simple/limited VAT registration" non-established businesses selling taxable goods or rendering taxable services to residents in Egypt (B2C supplies) but not registered with the tax authority will be required to have a simple/limited registration for VAT compliance purposes. The simple/limited registration will be required for non-established businesses as follows:
- Service providers are obligated to register under the simplified registration system and submit their VAT return on a monthly basis starting from June 2023.
- Suppliers selling goods are provided a grace period of two years starting from January 2023.

This will apply on all taxable goods and services.

For business-to-business (B2B) supplies the registered entity as a recipient of the service will be responsible party of remittance of local VAT using the reverse charge mechanism.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In Egypt, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT where the following conditions are met:
- There must be a case of liquidation or ceasing of business to be out of the scope of VAT
- The acquiring company must be a VAT registrant

Transactions between related parties. In Egypt, for a transaction between related parties, the value for VAT purposes is calculated at open market value. The commodity value taken as the basis for the tax assessment shall be its price according to the market forces and transaction circumstances.

C. Who is liable

Any natural person or legal entity whose gross sales value reaches the registration threshold (EGP500,000) after the date of enforcement of the VAT law in any financial year or part of it, must register with the tax authority within 30 days from the date of exceeding the threshold. There is no registration threshold for the businesses that are providing services subject to schedule tax.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Egypt does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Voluntary registration is allowed in Egypt if the total value of a natural or juridical person's sales of goods and services that are subject to VAT has not reached the prescribed VAT registration threshold. A natural or juridical person may submit an application for registration with the competent tax authority using Form No. 1 – VAT, according to the following procedures and conditions:
- Its turnover in the 12 months prior to the submission of application should not be less than EGP150,000 and its paid-up capital should not be less than EGP50,000.
- It should have a permanent headquarters where it exercises the activity subject of registration.

- It should have a valid tax card.
- Should it be the case, a registered person may apply for deregistration only after the lapse of 24 months from the date of registration unless the registered person ceases the activity completely before that date and provides the tax authority with relevant evidence.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is allowed in Egypt. This is only allowed for branches. In addition to a separate VAT registration for each branch (once they have met the registration criteria), it is possible to register all the branches as one group. All the branches will be treated as one entity upon group registration. As such, this means that all members of a VAT group in Egypt are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties. There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group.

Fixed establishment. A foreign business is deemed to have a fixed establishment for VAT purposes in Egypt under certain circumstances. Also referred to as "permanent establishment," it is defined in the VAT and corporate tax law as premises through which the activity is practiced, including the following:

- The management headquarters
- The branch, office, factory or workshop
- The mine, oil field or gas well, quarry or any other place for extracting natural resources
- The building site, the construction or installation project

Non-established businesses. For supplies made by a nonresident to a resident nontaxable person (i.e., B2C supplies), the nonresident provider is required to register and account for VAT on such supplies. The nonresident must apply for registration under the simplified supplier registration system.

For supplies made by a nonresident to a resident taxable person (i.e., B2B supplies registered under the VAT law) and the service is necessary for the recipient's activity, the VAT is required to be self-accounted for by the customer. See the subsection Reverse charge below. However, if the business registered for VAT is receiving a service not necessary to its business, the recipient, whether a registered business, a governmental authority, a public authority or any other entity, is obligated to calculate the tax due and remit it to the tax authority within 30 days from the date of sale, unless the nonresident service provider is registered under the simplified registration system.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are not required in Egypt.

Reverse charge. The VAT guidelines issued on 22 March 2023 to nonresidents and the Executive Regulation issued in January 2023 have widen the scope and detail for the reverse-charge methodology as below.

For B2B supplies, the Egyptian resident, VAT-registered taxpayer is obligated to self-account for VAT on supplies received as importer and supplier at the same time as long as the service is necessary for its business.

For B2C supplies, legal non-VAT-registered entities receiving or importing services from nonresidents are obligated to calculate the tax due on these services and remit it to the tax authority within 30 days from the date of rendering the service, unless the nonresident rendering the service is registered under the simplified registration system. A legal non-VAT-registered entity can fulfill its VAT obligations by submitting Form No. 111, which is specifically designed for this purpose.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Egypt.

Digital economy. Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2C supplies are required to register and account for VAT in Egypt. This is done by registering under the simplified registration regime, see the Non-established businesses subsection above.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for B2B supplies are not required to register and account for VAT on supplies in Egypt. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse charge subsection above).

VAT guidelines mention examples of services that could be considered as "electronically supplied services," which include the following:
- Supplies of digital content, such as e-books, movies, TV shows, music and online newspaper subscriptions evidenced
- Website design or publishing services
- Online supplies of games, apps, software and software maintenance
- Legal, accounting or consultancy services

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Egypt.

Online marketplaces and platforms. The online marketplaces/platforms are subject to VAT, where the tax is due upon selling the commodity or rendering the service by the supplier or online marketplace (which will issue an invoice) at all stages of circulation thereof, regardless of the method of selling or rendering or circulation, including the electronic means.

Registration procedures. A local taxable person must fill in a hard copy registration form, attaching copies of the entity's tax card, commercial register and import card. The originals should be provided for review upon request. The registration form may be submitted by the entity representative with a power of attorney. The documents required to be submitted with the VAT registration application are as follows:
- Tax card
- Commercial registration
- National ID or passport for foreigners
- Company's premises rental agreement
- Article of association
- Power of attorney for the representative

The VAT registration application must be made in person at the ETA.

For a nonresident taxable person, it should create an account on the Egyptian tax authority's website. The documents required to be submitted with a VAT registration application are as follows:
- Nationality (country of incorporation for a legal person)
- National tax identification number
- Tax residency country
- Registered address of the business
- Name of the contact person responsible for dealing with tax authorities
- Telephone number of the contact person
- Electronic address of the contact person
- Website URLs of nonresident suppliers

Deregistration. An entity wishing to deregister should submit a request in writing to the tax authority. This can be done through complete termination or liquidation of the activity related to a taxable commodity or service, or assignment of such activity to third parties (successors), along with documentation proving the submission of the tax registration document and the cancellation of the entity in the commercial register.

Changes to VAT registration details. A taxable person is obliged to notify the ETA where there is a change in its VAT registration details within 30 days as of the date of the change. The notification should be made using Form No. 6 – Registration.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 14%
- Reduced rate: 5%
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exported goods and services

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%

- Machinery and equipment used in manufacturing purposes. The payment of the tax due on such machinery and equipment will be suspended whether imported from abroad or purchased from the local market for factories and the same will be applicable for production units for use in industrial production. The same suspension will be applicable for imported machinery and equipment for trading purposes upon providing the documents that such machinery and equipment will be used in manufacturing purposes.
- Machinery and equipment used to provide services to the "service sector," which will be collected upon importation of such machinery or purchase from local market. However, if any of the above fails to prove the purpose of machinery usage or even its production units, 14% will be applicable on such machinery and equipment.

The VAT law has two types of tables attached, stating certain goods and services are subject to certain VAT rates, other than the general VAT rate (i.e., special rates). This list is known as "table tax."

Examples of goods and services subject to table tax

Special rates apply to a number of goods and services, as follows:
- Tobacco and tobacco products
- Petroleum products
- Food vegetable oils, fluid, solid, purified or refined or mixed – 5% (*)
- Animal and plants oils and fats for food, partially or entirely dehydrated, solid or purified anyway else, refined without any further processing – 5% (*)
- Crackers and flour products – 5% (*)
- Processed potatoes
- Fertilizers, agricultural pesticides
- Gypsum
- Contracting work and construction (supply and installation), except for those undertaken for the establishment, maintenance or restoration of places of worship – 5% (*)
- Soap industrial detergents for home use
- Air-conditioned means of transportation, such as buses and trains between the governorates
- Professional and consultancy services
- Media and program production – 5% (*)

(*) Rates provided as an illustrative example

Goods and services subject to the table rates and the VAT general rate (14%), with a right to deduct the input tax up to the application of VAT at the general rate:
- Soda water – 8%+14% ()
- Nonalcoholic drinks – 8%+14% ()
- Alcoholic drinks

- Beer (alcoholic and nonalcoholic)
- Aromatic preparations (skin or hair care) – 8%+14% ()

- Air conditioning and cooling devices and units and their independent units
- Golf carts and similar vehicles – 10%+14% ()
- Passenger cars
- Communications services through cellular phone networks
- Rental or sales value of Commercial trademark – 1%.

() Rates provided as illustrative example

The term "exempt" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

A a table lists 57 exempted goods and services (with no right to deduct input tax) including:
- Tea, sugar and coffee
- Banking services
- Medicines and active substances based on a decision issued by the Egyptian Medicines Authority
- Health care services
- Production, transfer, sale or distribution of electric current
- Education, training and research services
- Sale and rental of land and residential and nonresidential buildings
- Free services that broadcast through radio and television

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Egypt.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic tax point under Egyptian VAT law is the time when the transfer of the ownership of the goods or the rendering of service to the buyer takes place, including if the supplier is an importer.

The following are treated as the time of sale, whichever happens the earlier:
- Issuing the invoice
- Delivery of the goods or rendering the service
- Payment of the price for goods or the service charge, whether wholly or in part

Deposits and prepayment. A deposit or prepayment is considered to be the tax point if payment takes place before issuing the invoice or the delivery of goods or the rendering of services (as outlined above).

Continuous supplies of services. If services are supplied continuously, a tax point is created each time the vendor issues an invoice.

The following are considered to be services of a continuous nature:
- Communication and facsimile services
- Contracting services of construction and building
- Cleaning and guarding services
- Transport services of goods and materials

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The time of supply for goods sent on approval for sale or return is the transfer of the ownership of goods or the services rendered from the supplier to the buyer, even if the supplier is the importer. According to the provisions of the VAT law, the following is considered to be the transfer of ownership, and the time of supply is whichever is earliest:

- Issuing the invoice
- Delivery of the goods or rendering of the service
- Payment of the good's price or the service charge, whether wholly or partially or on credit, or by any other means of payment, in accordance with the different conditions of payment

If the goods are sold but are returned to the seller, the supplier upon originally calculating and paying across the VAT is entitled to deduct the VAT due on the value of its sales, the VAT previously paid or calculated in respect of its returned sales with the following terms and conditions:
- The supplier may only deduct the VAT that has already been paid on the returned goods.
- The returned goods should be in a resalable condition, with the respective information included in the regular books and records of the supplier, including confirmation that its value has been refunded to the customer including the VAT or adding it to its account in the supplier's books and records.
- The supplier must issue a dated addition/discount notice with a serial number including the data of both the supplier and customer.

Where the goods are not sold but are not returned, no VAT implications apply.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in Egypt for supplies of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Leased assets. According to the VAT law, a lease payment is considered as a payment for a service subject to the general rate of 14%, provided that the legal title of the asset does not pass to the lessee.

Imported goods. The VAT on imported goods is due on customs clearance.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT charged on goods and services supplied to it for business purposes. A taxable person generally recovers input tax by deducting it from output tax, which is VAT due on supplies made. Where input tax exceeds output tax in any period, the taxable person will receive a refund for the credit balance due.

Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Egypt, VAT paid on imports of goods including machines and equipment, and VAT self-assessed on the acquisition of reverse-charge services, provided it is related to selling taxable goods or rendering a taxable service.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally accompany a claim for input tax.

In Egypt, VAT is accounted for on a monthly basis, and taxable persons have the right to recover input tax on a monthly basis.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Egypt is five years. This time limit is from the date of the invoice.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). Input tax may also not be recovered on table tax. Input tax incurred in relation to exempt supplies also cannot be recovered.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Table tax whether on goods and services subject to this tax or inputs of goods and services subject to this tax

- Input tax included as part of the tax-deductible cost of an item for the purposes of the annual corporate income tax return; additionally in case there is adjustment in the VAT included in the cost elements to be as one of VAT accounts, it will be acceptable for recovery
- Exempted goods and services
- Input charged by simplified vendors

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to taxable business use)

When calculating the tax, the following should be deducted from the tax due on the sales value:
- Tax paid or accounted for returned goods (i.e., via a credit note)
- Tax charged on inputs, including the tax charged to the goods and services sold by the registrant through all distribution phases, according to the conditions and situations that will be provided by the executive regulations relating to the VAT law

Input tax is the VAT incurred or charged to the registrant upon purchasing or importing goods and services, including machinery and equipment, whether directly or indirectly related to the sale of goods and services subject to VAT.

Partial exemption. Input tax incurred on exempt supplies of goods or services is not allowed to be deducted by the taxable person.

If some of the sales of goods and services by the registered person are taxable, and some others are tax exempt or subject to the schedule tax during the tax period, deductions must be made in the following manner:
- The total tax on inputs relating to the sale of a commodity or provision of a service subject only to the tax is deducted, whether the sale is made during or after the tax period.
- The tax on inputs that are only used for sales that are tax exempt or that are subject only to the table tax cannot be deducted, whether the sale is made during or after the tax period.
- The tax on inputs that are used in the sales of which some are subject to the tax and some others are tax exempt or are subject only to the schedule tax are deducted based on the ratio of the taxable sales to the total sales.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in Egypt. Special methods are not allowed in Egypt.

Capital goods. The general input tax recovery rules apply to input tax incurred on capital goods purchased for trading purposes. However, some special rules apply for the recoverability of VAT incurred on capital goods, as follows:
- If the capital goods are subject to VAT at the general rate of 14%, the input tax can be deductible immediately upon issuing the first VAT return.
- If the capital goods that are subject to table tax (the table rates attached to the VAT law), the taxable person cannot deduct the input tax but can claim for input tax refund after six respective months (six respective VAT returns).
- If the capital goods are exempted from VAT, no input tax deduction or refund is allowed.

Refunds. VAT refund is allowed for both resident and nonresident VAT registrants.

A refund of VAT is permitted for resident VAT registrants in the following situations:
- The tax previously collected or charged to exported goods and services. This applies whether exported in its original state or included as a component in other goods and services. The refunded tax should not exceed the credit balance provided that the value of the exports will be paid to a bank under the supervision of the Central Bank of Egypt according to the rules it specifies or pursuant to any of the payment methods or other methods of settlements specified in the Executive Regulations, provided that the value of exports is not less than the inputs value thereof.

- Tax is collected by mistake.
- A credit balance results after more than six consecutive periods have lapsed.

In all cases of applying for a refund, a certificate signed by a chartered accountant must be one of the documents signifying the right of the taxable person to deduct the tax or refund the same.

The ETA has amended the VAT refund process and clarified all steps to curb delays in applying for a VAT refund. The steps for applying for VAT refunds are as follows:
1) Submission of application and receipt of response to the application
2) Internal correspondence between the investigating tax departments and other relevant tax departments
3) Execution of local entries, documents and export certificates
4) Clarification for refunds in cash or by bank transfer
5) Clarification of the calculation of the production rate
6) Processing VAT refund applications

A refund of VAT is permitted for nonresident VAT registrants under the simplified vendor registration regime. Under this scheme, nonresident registrants can seek a refund of the input tax they have incurred in Egypt related to their taxable activities. The refund process involves submitting an application along with supporting documents. VAT refunds are typically issued within 45 days. Currently, refunds are provided in Egyptian pounds (EGP), but from December 2023, other currencies will also be available.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on purchases on pre-registration costs in Egypt is only recoverable if it was incurred before the issuance of the VAT law in 2016. This is because the guidance on this is outdated as the introduction of the VAT law was in 2016, and no additional guidance on this area has been released by the tax authorities.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in Egypt.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred in relation to noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Egypt.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Egypt is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Invoices must be issued before or after the sale. Sales invoices must be serially numbered and include the VAT registration number, address and contact details of the supplier. Based on the instructions issued by the ETA, a taxable person must maintain the original invoices for approval by the ETA for inspection at a later date.

Credit notes. Credit notes are mainly required for sales returns and can be deducted within the following VAT returns. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply. It must be cross-referenced to the original VAT invoice.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Egypt for all taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for all taxable persons in Egypt. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Egypt.

Electronic invoicing rules and conditions are as follows:
- A company should obtain an electronic signature certificate from the Misr for Central Clearing, Depository and Registry (MCDR) or the Egypt Trust to digitally sign the documents and link it to a token. The signature certificate and token should be obtained after signing an agreement with one of the above-mentioned entities authorized by the tax authority in this regard and payment of a minimal fee.
- Registration is done by creating a taxpayer digital identity.
- The company should use one of the following acknowledged/approved coding system to link it with its internal coding system:
  – Global Standers Coding (GS1)
  – Global Product Classification (GPS) system/EGS, which is a coding system invented by the tax authority
- If a company has an enterprise resource planning (ERP) system, it should implement the necessary steps to integrate its ERP system with the e-invoicing system and test the e-invoicing system's functions on required scenarios. The ETA developed a new portal to be used by companies that do not have a system for issuing their invoices and can be used by a specific company issuing a minimal number of invoices per month (less than 200 invoices) after obtaining the tax authority's approval.

After the recent update to the electronic invoice system, the system is now applicable to all activities. In addition, it is also applicable to import and export operations, as the exporter cannot complete the export process without the electronic invoice, and it cannot obtain export grants without the electronic invoice.

As per Decree No. 188 of 2023, issued in April 2023, which amended Article 42 of the Executive Regulation of the Unified Tax Procedures Law, electronic invoices or electronic receipts should have certain requirements in addition to the data stipulated in Article 37 of the Unified Tax Procedures Law as follows:
- Code of the product or service determined by a decision of the head of the tax authority
- Using Central Bank exchange rates when issuing an invoice in foreign currency
- Identification of the buyer (i.e., company, person, foreigner) in the issued invoices or receipts
- Using the company's activity code and the branch code that issued the invoice or receipt
- The national number of the buyer, beneficiary or the passport number of the foreign person if they are not registered with the tax authority and if the value of the invoice or receipt exceeds an amount determined by a decision of the head of the tax authority
- Identification number Universal Unique Identifier (UUID)
- Quantity sold
- Type of tax/taxes or fee if any
- QR code

The electronic receipt must also include the following:
- Point of sale device serial number
- Payment method
- The reference identification number in the case of returned receipts and credit notes
- Payment/subscriber number in the case of a utility receipt

Specifically for the supply of professional services, an electronic receipt must also include:
- Name of the service provider and the tax registration number
- National ID of service provider
- Address of the main center/branch
- Registration number in the association

- Beneficiary name/national ID
- Supply of service date
- Type of service performed
- Value due
- Schedule tax due
- Service code number

In addition to the above, note that all taxable persons registered in Egypt are required to issue their invoices using the electronic invoicing system effective from the date assigned to their batch (the last batch was on 15 December 2022).

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in Egypt. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in Egypt.

Proof of exports. Exports are evidenced by the customs clearance certificate (Customs Form No. 13). This evidence is needed to support the seller to charge VAT at the zero-rate on the export sale.

Foreign currency invoices. As well as issuing invoices in the domestic currency (which is the Egyptian pound [EGP]), invoices can be issued in a foreign currency for supplies made between local entities. Foreign currency invoices are permitted for supplies made by non-established businesses. It is recommended to include the same information as given above for VAT invoices.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. A taxable person is required to maintain proper books and records to record its transactions. In Egypt, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include invoices, accounting books and records, and any related documents to the transactions.

In Egypt, VAT books and records can be kept outside the country. However, this only applies for electronic archiving, as records can then be kept locally in Egypt or abroad. Whereas hard copies must be kept locally in Egypt.

Record retention period. A taxable person must retain such records together with copies of the invoices for five years following the end of the fiscal year when the entries are made.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Egypt. Records can be kept and archived electronically.

I. Returns and payments

Periodic returns. VAT and table tax returns are generally submitted monthly. A monthly tax return for the VAT and table tax, or either one of them, should be filed within one month grace period, from the month end. Currently the VAT return and the table tax return are included in one VAT format, as all VAT registrants are entitled to submit such format monthly according to its business activity.

A VAT return should be filed even if no taxable sales of goods or services are achieved during the tax period. Non-submission of the VAT return within the due dates entitles the tax authority to make a deemed assessment. The tax authority will be liable to provide the basis of this deemed assessment.

Periodic payments. The payment should be filed within one month from the month end and be transferred to the tax authority's bank account through authorized banks.

An article has been added to the executive regulation of the unified tax law outlining that where the settlement of a service fee or goods sold was done so in a foreign currency, the VAT due on such sold goods or services provided should be in the same foreign currency after deducting the related input tax from the collected output tax in the foreign currency.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is mandatory in Egypt for all taxable persons. VAT returns must be filed electronically online (https://eservice.incometax.gov.eg or https://www.eta.gov.eg)

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Egypt.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in Egypt.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Egypt.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Egypt.

Correcting errors in previous returns. Correction of errors can be done online through amended VAT returns unless the taxable person is under an ongoing evasion case or has received an inspection request. The difference in VAT due between the original VAT return and the amended VAT return will be subject to an additional tax. This additional tax is calculated at a rate of 1.5% of the tax value or the unpaid table tax, including the tax resulting from the return modification, for each month or a part thereof, as from the termination of the period fixed for settlement and up to the payment date.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Egypt.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Where transactions have taken place before VAT registration and such transactions reach the stated threshold without the person in charge registering, the taxable person's errors will be treated as evasion. The taxable person is required to pay the VAT due, plus 1.5% of the VAT due for each month the registration is late, or part of it, plus 100% of the total due amount. Where the taxable person has not resolved or finalized the evasion status with the ETA, the responsible person (e.g., in-charge partner, manager or CEO) shall be penalized by imprisonment for a minimum of three years and a maximum of five years and a fine of a minimum of EGP5,000 and a maximum of EGP50,000, or one of these two penalties.

Penalties for late payment and filings. For late payment of VAT, an additional payment is due for each month or part of the month starting from the tax payment deadline until the date of payment, in addition to fines and penalties that will be determined according to the delayed period for the late payment and declaration.

Penalties for errors. In Egyptian VAT law, errors mean the difference in tax calculations resulting in a decrease in tax due. As such, the penalties for errors are the same as those for late payment and filings.

As per the unified tax law for the mandatory electronic invoicing, failure to comply may result in prosecution and fines ranging from EGP20,000 to EGP100,000. For further details, see the subsection Electronic invoicing above.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authority of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Tax evasion sanctions include the following: For the taxable person:
- Imprisonment: the in-charge partner, manager or CEO shall be the responsible for this fraud and the burden of proof is on the individuals that no fraud has occurred
- Penalty payment will be determined by the concerned department at the ETA

- Payment of the VAT, table tax and additional tax
- Prison duration to be doubled if repeated within three years

Tax evasion considers a person to be breaching honor and honesty.

For the tax advisor:
- Ceasing the accountant from practicing its profession for one year
- In case of repetition, penalties and sanctions are doubled.

Personal liability for company officers. In certain legal entity structures, company officers can be held personally for VAT errors. Penalties would be equal to the VAT/remaining VAT due.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Egypt is five or six years. It is six years in case of evasion. The tax authority can examine transactions up to five years from the date of transaction/invoice.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

• The transfer of tangible goods or rendering of services physically taking place in El Salvador

- The purchase of imported services by a taxable person in El Salvador
- The importation of tangible, movable goods from outside El Salvador, regardless of the status of the importer
- Self-consumption of inventories by VAT taxable persons or transfers of tangible goods for promotional purposes
- The exportation of tangible, movable goods from El Salvador to another jurisdiction

Withholding VAT. Taxable persons classified as large taxable persons (defined as domiciled or non-domiciled in El Salvador, with annual net income of USD500,000 or more) by the tax authorities are obliged to apply a 1% VAT withholding upon the payments for the acquisition of goods and services from other taxable persons with different classification.

Taxable persons upon the supply of goods and services by which payments are received through debit/credit cards are liable to 2% VAT withholding. The issuers and/or administrators of the debit/credit cards are designated as withholding agents upon payment of debit/credit card sales. The payments on account constitute an advance payment of the VAT, which can be credited against the assessed tax at the end of the period.

Taxable persons classified as large taxable persons by the tax authorities are obliged to charge a 1% VAT perception upon the transfer of goods to form part of the current assets made to other taxable persons with different classification.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In El Salvador, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

However, note that the VAT law establishes that for the purposes of the exportation of services and goods as taxable events, subject to VAT at a 0% rate, the concept of exportation should be understood as the definitive transfer of ownership of movable goods, intended for use and consumption abroad, and the provision of services carried out locally, to users who do not have domicile or residence in El Salvador, and intended to be used exclusively abroad. In the case of import of services as a taxable event, the VAT law provides that there shall be an importation of services when the activity that generates the services is carried out outside El Salvador and the services are provided to a client domiciled in the country that uses them in El Salvador. The importation of services is taxed at a 13% VAT rate, and the reverse-charge mechanism should apply. This means that the non-domiciled supplier should not register in El Salvador for VAT purposes, the local customer should comply with all VAT obligations.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be outside the scope of the tax under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as outside the scope of VAT. In El Salvador, a TOGC is treated as outside the scope of VAT, of which there are no specific conditions. The VAT law establishes that in transfers of movable goods as a VAT-taxable event in the context of a TOGC, the taxable event should be considered as configured only with respect to the transfer of movable goods/inventory.

Transactions between related parties. In El Salvador, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties. However, specific rules apply to all taxes, of which for transactions between related parties the value should be at the arm's-length principle, and consequently, establishes a fair market value. The tax authority is empowered to adjust the value of a transaction for both VAT (and income tax) purposes when the tax resulting thereof was lower than the hypothetical tax that would have resulted from an arm's-length transaction. The following rules are provided by the Tax Code to determine a fair market value:

- A fair market value in local operations shall be understood as the sale price of the goods or services in businesses or establishments located in the country that are not related to the taxable person, and that transfer goods or provide services of the same kind.
- In the transfer of goods or provision of services abroad, the market value shall be the price used by other entities different from the taxable person and not related to it, in the transfer of goods or provision of services of the same kind from El Salvador to the same destination country abroad. In the case of imports, the market price will be the price that the goods or services of the same kind have in businesses or establishments not related to the taxable person, in the country where the goods or services were purchased, plus transportation costs or expenses, if applicable.
- To establish the market price when there are more than three providers of the goods or services, the price information of the three providers shall be sufficient for assessment purposes, and an average price will be used to this end.
- When in the national or international market there are less than three providers of said goods or services, the price information of existing providers, or of at least one of them, will be sufficient for assessment purposes. In the first case, the average price will be adopted and in the second, that of the only provider.
- In no case shall the taxable person or its related entities be included among the providers whose prices are used as the assessment basis of the fair market price; if this is done by the tax authorities due to a lack of visibility of the relation between related parties, the act should not be invalidated. If for any reason the fair market price cannot be determined, the tax authorities will establish it by using the price or consideration that the audited taxable person has received from non-related purchasers of goods or services, different from the ones to which the provision of goods or services at a lower or higher than fair market price was carried out.

C. Who is liable

Any individual or business that has an annual turnover greater than approximately USD5,715 or that owns fixed assets valued at approximately USD2,285 or more must register as a VAT taxable person. The requirement to register also applies to permanent establishments in El Salvador of foreign entities. In addition, entities and individuals must pay VAT when any of the taxable events occur.

Exemption from registration. Individuals qualified as "Excluded Subjects" should not register for VAT purposes in El Salvador. "Excluded Subjects" are individuals that have provided services or transferred goods (taxed and exempted) in the last 12 months for an amount of less than approximately USD5,719 and with total assets of less than USD2,287. If these thresholds are surpassed, such individuals should be considered taxable persons (i.e., VAT taxpayers) and register for VAT. For further information see the Excluded subjects subsection below, under Special schemes, Section I. Returns and payment.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. Individuals whose turnover is below the registration threshold may register voluntarily as VAT taxable persons. Apart from the registration requirements outlined below under the subsection Non-established businesses, they also have the option to register for VAT voluntarily, where they may want to do so to recover local input tax. No special regime exists for small taxable persons in El Salvador.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in El Salvador.

Fixed establishment. In El Salvador there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the Income Tax Code (ITC) rules on permanent establishment (PE) also apply to VAT. The Salvadoran tax laws and regulations do not provide for a PE rule in the traditional sense (i.e., a business presence test applicable to non-domiciled entities that would allow local authorities to tax profits attributable to such PE as income of a domiciled entity). However, there is reference to the concept of PE in the ITC that states that entities are considered domiciled in the country for tax purposes where legal entities domiciled abroad, registered under the local commerce registry, which have branches, agencies or establishments that operate permanently within the country.

To this end, it is understood that the branches, offices or establishments operate permanently within the country whenever they maintain a fixed place of business, with infrastructure installations of their own or leased up, with personnel hired within the country and the taxable person carries out its economic activity therein in a material and perceptible manner in El Salvador.

Furthermore, the tax authorities provide guidance that a PE should be understood when a non-domiciled entity operates or carries out economic activities in El Salvador utilizing under any concept or title and in a continuous or habitual manner, facilities or fixed places of any kind in which all or part of the activity is carried out, or when acting in El Salvador through an authorized agent to contract in the name of and on behalf of the subject domiciled abroad, who habitually exercises said faculties. The following should be considered PEs: the headquarters of management, branches, agencies, offices, factories, workshops, warehouses, stores or other establishments, mines, quarries, oil or gas wells, agricultural explorations, forestry or livestock, any other place of extraction or exploitation of natural resources, and works or construction projects, installation, assembly and supervision.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in El Salvador. In principle, a non-established business must register for VAT if it transfers tangible goods or renders services in El Salvador on a regular basis. To register for VAT, a non-established business must provide the tax authorities with the following:

- A copy of its Articles of Incorporation, legalized by a Salvadoran consulate (or with an apostille), together with an official translation into Spanish
- Any other documentation required by the tax authorities, including registration of a tax representative

Tax representatives. Businesses that are established outside El Salvador must appoint a resident tax representative to register for Salvadoran VAT purposes. The tax representative is jointly and severally liable for VAT debts with the business that it represents. The liability is limited to the value of the property or assets to be administered, unless the representatives had acted with malice or gross negligence, in which case the tax representatives are severally liable with their own assets up to the amount of the total tax due.

Reverse charge. The Salvadoran VAT law establishes a reverse-charge mechanism for business-to-business (B2B) supplies. Under this mechanism, the customer must self-assess, withhold and pay the VAT due. The reverse-charge mechanism applies if the taxable activities (services performed or used within the country) are rendered by a non-established business. The consumer or resident taxable person may offset the VAT paid for the services with VAT debits under the general VAT rules.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in El Salvador.

Digital economy. There are no specific indirect tax regulations regarding the digital economy.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for both B2B and business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT on supplies in El Salvador. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due by way of the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in El Salvador.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in El Salvador.

Registration procedures. The time limit for an individual or entity to register as a taxable person for VAT purposes is within 15 days following the initiation of operations. To register, the process to file Form F-210 must be completed in person. Individuals must also attach a copy of their unique identity document, and for non-established businesses, a copy of their passport or residence card.

Legal entities applying must attach the following documentation:
- Deed of incorporation, merger or other deed duly registered before the Commerce Registry
- Legal identification document (Documento Único de Identidad or a passport) of the entity's authorized legal representative, election credential or power of attorney (i.e., special, general, judicial or administrative)
- Proof of payment to the VAT Registry

If the entity wishes to register as an importer, it must make that clear in the request for registration. After reviewing the documents, if there are no observations from the tax authorities, the documents are normally promptly issued after the documentation is filed.

Deregistration. Whenever a taxable person ceases operations as a consequence of dissolution, liquidation or a merger, it should deregister before the tax authorities and request the cancellation of its Tax ID (Número de Identificación Tributaria) and Contributors' Registration Number (Número de Registro de Contribuyente); also, it must request the annulment of unused invoices, VAT invoices, with specification of its authorized serial number, explaining the motive for cancellation.

Changes to VAT registration details. Whenever there is a change in the taxable person's VAT registration details (i.e., name, type of business or any other information regarding the taxable person), such changes must be duly notified by filing Form F-210. Such form must be filed every time there is a change in the taxable person's information, and it must be filed within five business days following the date of the change. The notification must be made in person.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 13%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exportation of goods and services
- Transfer of goods and services made to individuals or businesses authorized under the Free Trade Zone Law and the International Services Law (provided that the goods and services are necessary for the authorized activity)

The term "exempt" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to tax and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Health services offered by public institutions
- Rental of houses and apartments for noncommercial purposes
- Public land transport
- The importation by registered VAT taxable persons of machinery used as a fixed asset in the production of goods and services that are not exempt (if the assets are registered with the tax authorities 30 days in advance)
- Education provided by private or public institutions authorized by the Ministry of Education
- Certain financial services regarding interest payments made by domiciled and non-domiciled financial institutions (domiciled financial institutions must be authorized by the Superintendence of the Financial System, and the non-domiciled financial institutions must be authorized by the competent authority in their country of origin and qualified by the Central Bank of Reserve)
- Water services offered by public entities
- Personal insurance services and reinsurance

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in El Salvador.

E. Time of supply

The taxable event when VAT becomes due is called the "tax point."

For the supply of goods, the tax point is the earliest of the following events:
- The issuance of the invoice, receipt or other document related to the transaction
- Delivery of the goods
- Receipt of payment

For the supply of services, the tax point is the earliest of the following events:
- The issuance of the invoice, receipt or other document related to the transaction
- Provision of the service
- Receipt for payment (total or partial).

Deposits and prepayments. There are no special time of supply rules in El Salvador for deposits or prepayments. However, deposits and prepayments as a result of a transfer of goods and services are considered a taxable event and the VAT becomes due, as per the general time of supply rules.

Continuous supplies of services. For continuous supplies of services rendered in return for periodic payments, the tax event is the earlier of the issuance of the invoice or the due date established for the periodic payment, notwithstanding the date of payment for the service.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The taxable event for goods sent on approval and sold is the earlier of the issuance of the invoice or receipt of payment. There is no taxable event when goods sent on approval are returned to the seller.

Reverse-charge services. There are no special time of supply rules in El Salvador for the supply of reverse-charge services. As such, the general time of supply rules apply.

Leased assets. The taxable event for leased assets (movable goods) is the earlier of the issuance of the invoice or receipt payment.

Imported goods. The taxable event for imported goods is when the goods clear all customs formalities for importation (definite importation).

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax, which is VAT paid on the purchase of goods and services for business purposes. Input tax is generally credited against output tax, which is the VAT charged on supplies made. Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in El Salvador, VAT paid on imported goods and VAT self-assessed on reverse-charge services. In general, the input tax credit is allowed for ordinary business expenditure that is indispensable to the taxable person's taxable activity (i.e., the business activity that generates output tax).

There is no set time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in El Salvador. This mean that effectively the input tax (VAT credit) may be carried forward indefinitely until its complete recovery. A valid tax document referred to as "proof of tax credit" or an "import declaration" must support every claim for an input tax credit. This documentation only needs to be available upon request from a tax audit but does not need to be presented at the moment of filing the VAT return.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur).

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Acquisition, importation or entry of supplies or food when it is not the taxable person's ordinary business
- Purchase, import, leasing, maintenance, improvement or repair of new and used vehicles that by their nature are not strictly necessary for carrying out the ordinary business activities of the taxable person
- Use of any type of services in hotels and the lease or sublease of real estate or the use of any other services that are not used in core business activities
- Purchase of airline tickets, except those strictly related to business trips
- Acquisition, importation or sale of clothing, jewelry or shoes, if this is not the taxable person's ordinary business, among others

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Acquisitions of movable, tangible goods destined to form part of the current assets
- Disbursements for the use of services in the ordinary course of business provided they are not intended for the construction or alteration of real estate property
- General expenses intended solely for the purpose of achieving the objects, business or activity of the taxable person

Partial exemption. If a taxable person makes both taxable and exempt transactions, it may not deduct the input tax incurred in full. It may deduct only the amount of input tax related to the goods and services used in taxable transactions and not the input tax that relates to exempt transactions. Where input tax is incurred that relates to both taxable and exempt supplies, the business must carry out a proportionality calculation to determine the amount of input tax recoverable. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption." The apportionment may be calculated based on the value of taxable transactions carried out compared with the total turnover. No approval or confirmation is required from the tax authority for using this apportionment method. The calculation is only based on total turnover and no other methods are available.

Approval from the tax authority is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in El Salvador. This is a mandatory method for taxable persons that carries out both taxable and exempt transactions, and it is established in Section 66 of the VAT law.

Special methods are not allowed in El Salvador.

Capital goods. Input tax generated on the acquisition of capital goods to form part of the current assets may be recovered by the taxable person. If the operations carried out during the month are partially taxable, exempt and/or not subject to VAT, the input tax credited against the output tax will be determined proportionally to the taxable operations. If the input tax is higher than the output tax, the excess of the VAT credit may be carried forward to offset against output tax due in subsequent VAT periods. Currently there is no definition of capital goods in the Salvadoran legislation. The basis for the input tax calculation generally is the price or remuneration agreed in the supply of goods or services, or the customs value in imports and entries.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax recoverable in a particular month exceeds the amount of output tax payable, the taxable person obtains an input tax credit. The credit may be carried forward to offset against output tax due in subsequent VAT periods.

A cash refund or Public Treasury notes may be claimed only if the credit relates to export activities. An input tax credit related to export supplies may be carried forward to offset output tax in the following VAT period. If the credit cannot be fully offset against output tax within a tax period, the taxable person may request an offset of other tax liabilities, including input tax withheld, perceived or generated as a result of the import of goods, or a refund of the excess amount.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in El Salvador is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., bad debts) cannot be recovered in El Salvador.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in El Salvador.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in El Salvador is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must generally provide VAT invoices for all taxable supplies made, including exports. However, for supplies made to other VAT taxable persons, a "proof of tax credit" document must be issued. A proof of tax credit document is required to support a claim for the input tax credit. Proof of tax credit documents must be issued in triplicate (with two copies provided to the customer of the goods or services). Invoices must include an official invoice number (NCF) and the taxable person's registration number (NRC), and it must show the VAT amount separately, among other requirements.

If the nature of a business makes it impractical for a taxable person to issue tax invoices, the tax authorities may authorize the use of cash registers and computerized systems to issue tickets (cash receipts) instead of invoices.

Credit notes. Price reductions, discounts or bonuses may be excluded from the VAT base if they are included in the proof of tax credit document or in credit and debit notes. A credit note must contain the same information as a tax credit document.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in El Salvador, for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory for certain taxable persons in El Salvador.

In August 2022, the Salvadoran Legislative Assembly approved a legal reform to the Tax Code that included provisions to enable electronic invoicing in El Salvador. The timeline to define a mandatory and general implementation of electronic invoicing for all taxpayers was delegated to the tax authorities. The implementation program designed by the tax authorities to define the criteria to require taxpayers to implement electronic invoicing is not publicly available. In practice, tax authorities notify this to taxpayers via email. This said, electronic invoicing implementation remains voluntary for most taxpayers. Once electronic invoicing has been implemented by taxpayers, all operations, whether with the government, businesses or consumers, are subject to the documentation requirements set by the electronic invoicing regulations, and they are not allowed to issue physical documents with the exception of tickets/receipts issued by cash registers or computerized systems, which can be continued to be issue physically until 30 June 2024.

At the time of preparing this chapter, the timeline for the mandatory and general implementation of electronic invoicing has not been defined. Some taxpayers, mostly those classified as large taxpayers, have already been notified directly by the tax authorities of their obligation to issue electronic invoices. Therefore, electronic invoicing is mandatory only for certain taxpayers in El Salvador.

In general all taxpayers must continue issuing physical invoices to document their operations, unless they (i) voluntarily implemented electronic invoicing or (ii) they were directly required by the tax authorities to implement mandatory electronic invoicing.

Simplified VAT invoices. Individuals registered as VAT taxable persons whose supplies in the previous year are equal to or less than USD50,000, must issue and deliver in transactions with final consumers a simplified sales invoice, only with respect to taxable or exempt transfers of tangible assets or services, which total amount of the operation is less than or equal to USD12.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in El Salvador. It only applies to the self-consumption of inventory by taxable persons. The VAT law considers self-supply a taxable event and defines it as when a taxable person consumes goods of their own inventory for their use or of their shareholders, executives or employees. It should be considered as such all goods missing in the inventory of which exit is not derived from chance or force majeure or from causes inherent to the operations or normal activities of the business. It should not be treated as self-consumption of those goods from inventory that are transferred to the company's fixed assets, as long as these are necessary for the business's activity. This is a VAT-taxable event and the input tax derived from it is not deductible. These operations must be documented through a final consumer invoice.

Proof of exports. For the exportation of goods to qualify for the zero rate, a definitive transfer of the goods that are to be used or consumed abroad must occur. Exports must be supported by customs documents that prove the goods have left El Salvador. Suitable evidence includes export invoices and bills of lading.

Foreign currency invoices. VAT invoices and tax credit documents must be issued in the domestic currency, which is the Salvadoran colón (SVC), the United States dollar (USD), or Bitcoin, if the place of supply is El Salvador. However, in practice, SVC have been removed from circulation and all transactions are made in USD.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. No VAT invoice is required to be issued for supplies to nontaxable persons, unless requested by the customer. If the customer is not registered for VAT, a final consumer invoice should be issued. The tax authorities may authorize the use of cash registers and computerized systems to issue tickets (cash receipts) instead of invoices.

Records. In El Salvador, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include:
- Purchase ledger book (Libro de Compras)
- Sales ledger book to final consumers (Libro de Ventas a Consumidor Final)
- Sales ledger book to taxable persons (Libro de Ventas a Contribuyentes)

The formal accounting documents must be complemented by the necessary auxiliary books and supported with the corresponding legal documentation that allows the tax authorities to clearly establish the taxable events, expenses, estimates and all the operations that allow to establish its real tax situation. The referred sections also regulate that registries shall be made in chronological order, in Spanish and in a legal tender. The operations shall be registered as they are carried out, and only a delay of 10 business days for tax purposes is allowed.

In El Salvador, VAT books and records must be held within the country. Taxable persons have the option to hold their accounting records in the offices of the parent company or at the address registered with the tax authority.

Record retention period. Taxable persons must keep records for 10 years for the VAT documents and up to five years after the liquidation of the business.

*Electronic archiving. E*lectronic archiving is allowed in El Salvador. Electronic archiving of VAT documents may be done after four years from the issuance or reception of the documents, as long as the integrity of information is guaranteed, and the documents are available and accessible to the tax authorities when required. Also, the conversion process must be certified by an external auditor. This period may be shortened if the taxable person submits a request, and the tax authorities approve. Electronic invoices must be kept by taxable persons for a period of 10 years from the date of their issuance, which includes the graphic representation of the electronic invoice as well.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns are submitted monthly. Form F-07 must be submitted by the 10th working day of the month following the end of the return period. A return must be filed even if no VAT is due for the period.

In addition, Form F-930, the monthly VAT return of withholdings and collection of VAT, must be filed every month within the first 15 working days of the month following the end of the return period.

Periodic payments. Payment of VAT in full is due on the same date as the VAT return submission, i.e., by the 10th working day of the month following the end of the return period. By legal disposition, the tax due may be paid in SVC or USD. However, in practice, SVC has been removed from circulation and all transactions are made in USD.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in El Salvador. Electronic filing is allowed provided that the taxable person has created a user ID on the tax authority's website and carried out the necessary procedure to use the portal (https://portaldgii.mh.gob.sv/ssc/home).

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in El Salvador.

Special schemes. Excluded subjects. "Excluded Subjects" are individuals that have provided services or transferred goods (taxed and exempted) in the last 12 months for an amount of less than approximately USD5,719 and with total assets of less than USD2,287. Taxable persons that acquire goods or services from these individuals should document these operations with invoices for excluded subjects.

If these thresholds are surpassed, such individuals should be considered taxable persons (i.e., VAT taxpayers) and register for VAT.

If a taxable person ceases to operate and no longer makes taxable supplies, it can proceed to deregister for VAT. If the taxable person starts operating again it should register for VAT.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in El Salvador.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in El Salvador.

Correcting errors in previous returns. In case of errors or omissions, the VAT return can be rectified online, on the same platform of the tax administration used to file the monthly VAT return. Taxable persons have a maximum of two years after the expiration of the term to file the return, to modify and rectify any amounts on such return.

The VAT debit may only be modified within three months of the delivery of the goods or the receipt of payment of the services.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in El Salvador.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. In the event of late registration, a penalty of three minimum legal wages would be applicable. This penalty applies regardless of whether interest and penalties are assessed for unpaid VAT.

Penalties that are calculated on the monthly minimum legal wage are based on the commerce and services sector (approximately USD365).

Penalties for late payment and filing. Late payment and filing are penalized as follows:
- Filed with no more than a month of delay: 5% of the unpaid tax
- Filed with more than a month but less than two months of delay: 10% of the unpaid tax
- Filed with more than two months but less than three months of delay: 15% of the unpaid tax
- Filed with more than three months of delay: 20% of the unpaid tax

If no unpaid tax is reported, the penalty will be equal to one monthly minimum wage (approximately USD365). However, no penalty for late filing should be less than two monthly minimum wages (approximately USD730).

A 75% penalty reduction is available if a voluntary filing and payment is done. A 30% penalty reduction is available if the filing and payment is voluntary, and the tax authorities have identified the noncompliance issue.

Penalties for errors. Filing a modified return to correct an incorrect payable tax is penalized with 40% of the unpaid taxes, which should not be less than one monthly minimum wage (approximately USD365).

Filing the return with incorrect data is penalized with a 10% on the difference of the payable tax assessed by the taxable person and the payable tax determined by the tax authorities, which should not be less than two monthly minimum wages (approximately USD730).

Filing the return with missing, incomplete or incorrect information related to general information of the taxable person is penalized with two monthly minimum wages (approximately USD730).

Filing the return with missing, incomplete or incorrect information related to VAT documentation is penalized with four monthly minimum wages (approximately USD1,461)

All penalties are subject to a potential reduction according to the rules explained above.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty equivalent to two monthly minimum wages (approximately USD730) according to Section 235 c) of the Tax Code. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Criminal tax avoidance penalties are based on the amount of the evasion or attempted evasion. If the amount of unpaid taxes ranges from approximately USD11,430 to USD34,285, the penalty is imprisonment for four to six years. If the amount of unpaid taxes exceeds approximately USD34,285, the penalty is six to eight years of imprisonment.

In the case of VAT taxable persons that are obligated to apply a proportionality method on the input tax credit (i.e., partial exemption), the amount of the evasion will be determined on a 12-month basis period and the penalty is imprisonment for four to six years if the unpaid VAT ranges from approximately USD34,285 to USD57,140. If the amount of unpaid taxes exceeds approximately USD57,140, the penalty is six to eight years of imprisonment. The rules and penalties apply when the taxable person has input tax credit in one or more tax periods that affects other periods in which a tax avoidance was detected.

If the unpaid taxes plus the corresponding penalties are paid to the tax authorities, no criminal fraud penalties are imposed.

Penalties for tax evasion under the Salvadoran Criminal Code include imprisonment for a period of four to eight years.

The Salvadoran Tax Code regulates penalties for unintentional or intentional tax avoidance. If tax avoidance is considered unintentional, the penalty is 25% of the unpaid tax. For intentional tax avoidance that results in an underpayment of tax that is below the criminal amount, the penalty is 50% of the unpaid tax.

Personal liability for company officers. According to Section 43 of the Tax Code, the sole administrator or legal representatives of legal entities during the period that includes their management, may be held personally liable for events that lead to tax evasion. The liability of these representatives should be limited to the equity or value of the assets that they administered, unless such representatives acted with intent, fault or gross negligence. In that case, they should be considered as jointly liable and will respond with their own assets up to the total amount of the tax owed.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in El Salvador is three years. The statute of limitations for the tax authority to review tax returns and the compliance of tax obligations is three years from the deadline to file the tax return and five years when no return was filed.

The tax debt cannot be reduced after three months following the delivery of the goods or the provision of the services.

B. Scope of the tax

The following transactions are subject to VAT in Equatorial Guinea (EG):
- Goods sold or assigned for valuable consideration
- Services provided
- Self-consumed goods and services
- Imports
- Other operations done by individuals or legal entities in their sphere of professional, individual or business activities, including extraction industries of all kinds

When these operations are performed in EG, they are subject to VAT, unless they are included in the list of exemptions, even though the domicile of the individual or legal address of the debtor corporation is located outside the territorial borders of EG.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In EG, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Transfer of going concern rules do not apply in EG. As such, VAT applies to all sales of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets.

Transactions between related parties. In EG, there are no specific rules that indicate the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties.

C. Who is liable

All individuals and legal entities habitually or occasionally and independently performing the economic activities of production, trade or rendering services, as well as all operations connected to the said activities, including extractive, farming and liberal professional or similar activities, are subject to VAT in EG.

Moreover, any individual or legal entity, reflecting VAT in an invoice or any other document, for the fact of having invoiced it, is required to declare and pay the said VAT.

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in EG does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. There is no specific registration for VAT in EG. Resident businesses (those that carry out operations or provide remunerated services in EG for more than three months within a calendar year or six months within two consecutive calendar years) are required to register with the tax administration in order to receive a tax identification number for all their tax obligations.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in EG.

Fixed establishment. In EG there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes. However, the tax law provides criteria used by the tax authorities for those relating to the notion of tax residence in EG (which applies to VAT). To this end, the tax law generally provides that any person established in EG for more than three months per year or more than six months out of a total of two consecutive years and carries out activities or provides remunerated activities in EG.

For resident legal entities, the tax authorities consider permanent establishments to be establishments that meet the following conditions:
- Is constituted in accordance with Equatoguinean laws
- Has its registered office in EG
- Has its effective seat of management in EG

According to the tax law, VAT is an indirect and general contribution that applies in cascade, is based on consumption, and affects both the usual and occasional turnover of companies, professionals and individuals.

Non-established businesses. Non-established businesses are not required to register for VAT in EG. A WHT of 15% is accounted for on payments made by resident companies on behalf of non-resident companies.

Non-established businesses can voluntarily register for VAT in EG and if done so, must appoint an authorized and solvent agent with the EG tax authorities, resident of Equatorial Guinea, who will be jointly and severally liable with it for the payment of VAT. However, there is no mechanism to collect input tax incurred by non-established businesses in EG.

Tax representatives. A non-established (nonresident) taxable person must appoint near the EG tax administration an authorized and solvent agent, resident in EG, who will be jointly and severally liable with it for the payment of VAT.

In the event a taxable person fails to appoint an agent, then both VAT, as well as any fines that may be payable, will be paid by the client on behalf of the party with no permanent place of business in EG.

Reverse charge. When the supplier of services is nonresident in EG and cannot collect and remit the VAT, the customer (who must be VAT-registered in EG) established in EG should account for the VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in EG.

Digital economy. There are no special rules related to supplies made within the digital economy in EG.

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-business (B2B) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT. Instead, the customer must self-account for VAT via the reverse-charge mechanism (see the subsection Reverse-charge above).

Nonresident providers of electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are not required to register and account for VAT. As such, no VAT is accounted for on the supply.

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in EG.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in EG.

Registration procedures. There is no specific registration for VAT in EG. The registration with the Ministry of Finances is sufficient for all tax obligations.

For such purposes, each legal entity engaged in economic activity, no matter what the nature or output, and who is classified as a taxable person, is obliged to submit to the tax administration its registration. The deadline to submit the registration request (by paper format) to the tax administration in person, is two days following the commencement of the activities in EG.

The documentation to be provided to the tax administration for registration purposes is the following:

- Name or company name
- Name and surnames of its legal representative
- Seed capital and increases, if any, used in its businesses
- Copy of the bylaws and articles of incorporation in which the purpose and capital stock are stated, names and interests of the partners or shareholders
- Principal place of business; district, town or village
- Activities of the company
- Reason for registration

Upon registration, a tax identification number will be issued, which is used for all taxes and not specific to VAT.

Deregistration. The deregistration at the EG Ministry of Finances is applicable for all tax obligations. The deregistration request should be filed to the Ministry of Finances within 45 days following the end of the activity. In addition to the documentation listed above for the registration, for deregistration the taxable person should also provide the notarial deed of dissolution or liquidation of a company and the reason for deregistration. After the filing of the said documents, the tax administration usually sends to the taxable person a tax audit notification including all the necessary documentation to be provided. The deregistration certificate is issued by the tax administration at the end of the inspection and the payment of the additional debt, if any.

Changes to VAT registration details. The taxable person should notify the tax administration in writing about any change in its VAT registration details (e.g., company name, address). There is no deadline provided by the law, but it is advisable to send the notification during the month the said change occurs.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 15%
- Reduced rate: 6%
- Zero rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate, reduced rate, or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Insulin and its salts
- Quinine and its salts
- Antibiotics
- Pharmaceutical products

- Rice
- Prepared foods for children
- Books and schoolbooks

The term "exempt" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to tax and don't qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Raw agricultural, livestock, fishing and hunting products sold directly to the end consumer by the owner
- Sale of products resulting from soil and subsoil extraction activities
- Operations transmitting real estate between individuals that do not qualify as real estate developers and that are subject to asset transfer tax
- Interest generated by foreign loans

- Services provided in the field of school or university teaching by public and private establishments or similar agencies
- Importation and sale of school or university books
- Sale of newspapers and periodicals, not including income received from advertising
- Rental of unfurnished houses
- Operations relating to the international traffic of:
  - Ships or vessels used in industrial or commercial activities on the high seas

- Social, educational, sports, cultural, philanthropic, or religious services or operations provided to their members by nonprofit benevolent and charitable agencies, so long as said operations can be directly related to the collective defense of the moral or material interests of their members. However, these are taxable when they are in a situation of competition with the private sector
- Importation of equipment goods
- Amounts deposited by the Public Treasury into the Central Bank in its capacity of issuing bank, as well as proceeds of the operations of said currency issuing bank
- Suspensive Customs systems to defer or suspend taxation can be accorded to mining, oil and timber companies. Nonetheless, the right to said systems must be sole and limited exclusively to investment goods strictly necessary to practice the activity in the implementation, prospecting or research phases

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in EG.

E. Time of supply

The VAT time of supply (or tax point) is defined as the as the event in which the necessary legal conditions are fulfilled leading to the enforceability of the tax. Enforceability is defined as the right of the Public Treasury to demand that the taxable person pay the tax by a specific date.

For goods, the general rule is that the tax point is when the right to dispose of the goods as owner is transferred. If the sale contract stipulates that the supplier retains ownership of the goods, the tax is due at the time of the physical transfer of the goods from the supplier to the buyer.

For services, the tax point is the date when payment is received. In principle, if the consideration for a supply of services is paid in instalments, VAT is due on the receipt of each instalment. For transfers of real estate, the tax point is at the date of transfer.

Deposits and prepayments. The collection of advance payments (prepayments) for supplies of goods does not give rise to VAT (except in the case of continuous supplies of goods). The tax due point for advance payments for services occurs on collection of the payment.

Continuous supplies of services. For the continuous supplies of services, the tax point is when payment is received.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in EG for goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the normal time of supply rules apply.

Reverse-charge services. The tax point for reverse-charge services is at the time that the tax is incurred.

Leased assets. For leased assets, the tax point is when the interest or payment is due.

Imported goods. For imported goods, the tax point is the time of the declaration of the goods into EG.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax incurred in relation to the acquisition of goods and services necessary for the business.

Invoices must show the tax identification number of the parties, the invoice number, the transaction date, the price and the applicable VAT.

Moreover, any natural or legal person that charges VAT on its invoice shall be bound to declare and remit the corresponding tax.

Following these provisions, VAT charged is in practice remitted when there is a balance further to the application of VAT deduction mechanism.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in EG is two years. The right to a deduction can be exercised until the end of the second fiscal year following that of the chargeability.

Nondeductible input tax. Taxable persons that do not have in their possession the invoices or the respective import declarations naming them the actual recipient have no right to deduct VAT. Moreover, VAT is not be deductible on exempt transactions.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Self-consumption and subsidies for equipment exempt from VAT
- Payment of damages that are a compensation of a transaction subject to VAT
- Private vehicles used for nonbusiness purposes

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- VAT stated on purchase invoices issued by the providers, whenever these latter are legally authorized to charge VAT
- VAT paid at the time of import

- VAT levied on goods equipment, excluding private vehicles, as well as their spare parts and their respective repair expenses
- Consumables used for business purposes such as paper, ink, computers, furniture, etc.

Partial exemption. Taxable persons that make both taxable and exempt supplies are authorized to deduct the VAT levied on goods and services acquired by applying a prorated amount of the deduction. This prorated amount is calculated based on the fraction of the turnover relating to operations that are deductible.

The above fraction is the ratio of:
- Amount of respective income for transactions subject to the VAT, as the numerator
- Total amount of income of any kind obtained by taxable person, as the denominator

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard method in EG. Special methods are not allowed in EG.

However, the prorated deduction calculation is carried out during the filing of the corporate income tax (CIT) return or tax inspections, which are done on a yearly basis. The prorated figure will be set per fiscal year and not on a monthly basis. The prorated figure established at the end of the fiscal year is then valid for monthly returns for the following fiscal year.

Capital goods. There are no special input tax recovery rules for purchases of capital goods. Normal input tax deductibility rules apply (see above). Note that the importation of certain capital goods are exempt from VAT.

Refunds. When the amount of VAT deductible for one month exceeds that of VAT due, the surplus constitutes a tax credit to be compensated with the VAT due for the following period. The deduction right can be exercised until the end of the second fiscal year after that of enforceability.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax incurred on pre-registration costs in EG is not recoverable.

Bad debts. Output tax incurred on bad debts can be recovered in EG; however, it is not regulated by the VAT law. But based on the CEMAC regulation n°07/011 (dated 19 December 2011), such bad debts may be able to be deducted in EG. For unpaid transactions, when the debt is really and definitively irrecoverable, the rectification of the invoice can be done by sending a duplicate of the initial invoice with sufficient regulatory information, including "invoice remained unpaid for the sum of X price excluding VAT and for the sum of X corresponding VAT that may be deducted."

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in EG.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in EG is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Each taxable person is required to issue and deliver invoices for goods delivered or services provided to its clients, whether they are registered taxable persons or not, as well as down payments received for said operations and that give rise to the enforceability of the tax.

In case goods or services are acquired without an invoice, the party acquiring those will be jointly and severally liable for the respective tax on said operations, except when it reports this circumstance to the tax administration.

Credit notes. VAT credit notes might be issued by a supplier to a customer to reflect a reduction in, or discount applied to, the price originally invoiced, or the cancellation of the invoice related to the goods or services supplied.

A credit note must be cross-referenced to the original invoice and contain the references of the invoices that are amended or canceled.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in EG, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in EG. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in EG.

To be valid, an electronic invoice must contain all the compulsory information, same as normal full VAT invoices (i.e., paper invoices). However, in practice, it is recommended to issue paper invoices, as electronic invoicing is not officially authorized by the tax administration.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is not allowed in EG. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Self-billing. Self-billing is not allowed in EG.

Proof of exports. Zero VAT rate is applied to exports. However, the corresponding export return should be certified by the customs services. This certified document might be used as evidence that the goods were exported from EG.

Foreign currency invoices. The domestic currency in Equatorial Guinea is the Central African CFA franc (XAF). However, the local legislation does not prohibit transaction in foreign currency. Transactions may be realized in one of the currencies of the two parties or in any other currency accepted by both parties to the transaction. Regarding the cash payment, this should only be made in XAF.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. There are no special invoicing rules for supplies to nontaxable persons in EG. As such, full VAT invoices are required.

Records. In EG, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include the following accounting registries, apart from the accounting books (journal, ledger, general balance of accounts, inventory book) required by the OHADA (acronym for the French Organisation pour l'harmonisation en Afrique du droit des affaires, which translates into English as "Organization for the Harmonization of Corporate Law in Africa") accounting regulation:

- A registry book of all invoices issued separated into those belonging to operations that are subject, exempt, not subject and self-consumption
- A registry book of invoices received
- A registry book of investment goods
- A book with current accounts of clients and suppliers

In EG, VAT books and records must be held within the country. All accounting documents (including invoices) must be kept in EG and be available at any time during a tax inspection.

Record retention period. Taxable persons should keep all accounting items showing income and expenses for five years following the respective supplies.

The abovementioned accounting books must allow a precise determination of the following for each settlement period:

- Total amount of VAT that the taxable person has charged to its customers
- Total amount of VAT that suppliers have passed on to the tax administration during the same settlement period and that taxing imported goods

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in EG. Accounting documents can be archived in electronic format. However, these documents should be available for tax audit at the request of the tax administration.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. VAT returns should be made on a monthly basis, within the first 15 days following when payment was received for supplies.

The taxable basis is the turnover obtained during the previous month. In case the taxable person does not perform any transaction during the month, they are required to file a mandatory nil return.

All invoices corresponding to the concerned month should be annexed to the return before the filing in order to avoid the rejection of the said return.

If a taxable person is partially exempt (makes both taxable and exempt supplies), they can file a separate annual return for regularization purposes for the prorated amount it has claimed as input tax during the calendar year.

Periodic payments. The VAT payment should be made immediately after the corresponding declaration (i.e., 15th of the month following the recovery of the amount). However, in practice, the tax administration allows that the VAT returns should be filed by the 15th of the month following the transaction and the corresponding payment by the end of the same month. For example, July 2024 VAT return should be filed by 15 August 2024, and the corresponding payment should be proceeded by 31 August 2024.

The banks can only transfer the money into the bank account of the Public Treasury if the settlement note signed by the tax administration is joined to the wire transfer order.

VAT is normally paid on a monthly basis. However, at the end of the calendar year, all taxable persons must carry out a VAT payment reconciliation. Any outstanding output tax must be paid to the tax authorities. Any outstanding input tax can be requested from the tax authorities. The request should be addressed to the General Director of Tax and Contributions for the amounts equal or less than XAF500,000. For the amount higher than XAF500,000, the request should be addressed to the Ministry of Finances, Economy and Planification.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is not allowed in EG. The original return form, purchased at the tax administration at XAF2,000 (approx. EUR3.50 per copy), should be filled, signed, stamped and submitted to the tax administration for the issuance of the corresponding settlement note. This settlement note allows taxable persons to proceed to the VAT payment near the bank, then confirm the said payment at the Public Treasury and the General Direction of Tax and Contributions.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in EG.

Special schemes. No special schemes are available in EG.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in EG.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in EG.

Correcting errors in previous returns. At any time, the tax administration will correct material factual and arithmetic mistakes, by operation of law or at the request of the interested party, so long as a year has not gone by since the act subject to the correction was announced. Such corrections must be done in person and in writing. No specific penalties apply if the errors are corrected voluntarily.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in EG.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. In the case of late registration, the taxable person will be punished with a fine from half to the full amount of the tax due with a minimum of XAF150,000, per month or fraction of month.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Penalties for late filing and payment of VAT amount to 60% of the amount due.

Penalties for errors. The EG tax administration allows a taxable person to amend their tax returns in case of error. Thus, in case of insufficient reporting or any error in the VAT return, a taxable person might file an additional return requesting an additional settlement note or the amendment of the return previously filed depending on the case.

In case the amendment is made within the deadline to file the return (i.e., by 15th of the month), no penalties will be due. Otherwise, the 60% penalties mentioned above will be applied.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. VAT penalties may increase to 100% of the amount due in case of fraud.

Personal liability for company officers. In the case of violations committed by entities, their administrators that did not carry out the necessary actions that were their responsibility for compliance of the violated tax liabilities or accepted the noncompliance by their subordinates or adopted agreements that made these violations possible will be ancillary liable of the tax violations and of the total amount of the tax debt.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in EG is five years. This is the period that the tax authorities can go back to review returns, identify errors and impose penalties.

Taxable persons can correct errors or omission in the VAT return before the tax administration carries out its annual tax audits.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT applies to the following transactions:

- Supply of goods or services made in Estonia by a taxable person
- Supply of services with a place of supply not in Estonia (that is, services are provided through a seat or fixed establishment located in Estonia to a person who is registered as a taxable person or taxable person with limited liability in the EU or who is a person from a non-EU country engaged in business)

- Reverse-charge services received by a taxable person in Estonia (that is, services for which the recipient is liable to pay the VAT)
- The intra-Community acquisitions of goods from another European Union (EU) Member State by a taxable person (see the chapter on the EU)
- The importation of goods into Estonia (except for VAT exempt imports), regardless of the status of the importer

Quick Fixes. Pending introduction of a "definitive" system for the VAT treatment of intra-Community supplies of goods to taxable persons, the EU has adopted Quick Fixes for intra-Community trade in goods. For an overview of the Quick Fixes rules, see the chapter on the EU. For documentary requirements, see Section H. Invoicing, subsection Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies.

As of 1 January 2020, VAT Quick Fixes were implemented into the Estonian law regarding the Council Directive (EU) 2018/1910. There are no variances from the EU law into the local Estonian law.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, EU Member States can apply use and enjoyment rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the EU to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the EU from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the EU under the use and enjoyment provisions, a non-EU supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every Member State where it has customers that are not taxable persons. For information regarding the rules relating to VAT registration, see the chapters on the respective countries of the EU.

In Estonia, only telecommunications, broadcasting and electronic services are subject to the "used and enjoyed" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. In Estonia, a transfer of a going concern (TOGC) is not a taxable transaction, where the transfer of an enterprise or a part thereof falls within the meaning of the Law of Obligations Act and the interpretation of various legal cases. However, this means that there is no clear guidance from the tax authorities on the TOGC rules and as such, each transfer is determined on a case-by-case basis.

Transactions between related parties. In Estonia, there are no specific rules for the value for VAT purposes for transactions between related parties.

C. Who is liable

A taxable person is an individual or a business entity (including a public entity and municipality) that makes taxable supplies of goods or services in the course of a business in Estonia. This rule also applies to a branch or fixed establishment of a foreign business entity.

The VAT registration threshold is annual supplies in excess of EUR40,000, counted from the beginning of a calendar year. A non-established business without a fixed establishment in Estonia that makes a taxable supply must register for VAT in Estonia if the place of supply is Estonia and if the supply is not taxed by the Estonian taxable person (purchaser). The registration obligation arises from the time of the supply, regardless of the threshold of EUR40,000. A business that is liable to register for VAT in Estonia must notify the VAT authorities of its VAT registration liability within three days.

Exemption from registration. The VAT registration obligation does not arise if all the taxable supplies of the person are zero-rated supplies, except unless it is an intra-Community supply of goods and the supply of services of which the place of supply is not in Estonia and the services are provided to a taxable person or a taxable person with limited liability as registered by the other Member State.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. A business established in Estonia of which the supplies do not exceed the registration threshold may voluntarily register for VAT.

The tax authorities have the right not to register persons who are unable to prove that they are performing business activities or are about to begin business activities in Estonia.

Group registration. A parent company and its subsidiaries may apply to register as a VAT group. Other persons may apply to register as a VAT group if these persons are economically and organizationally related and if more than 50% of the shares, holding company or votes of each company to be registered as a VAT group are owned by one and the same person or if the persons are related on the basis of a franchise contract. One single VAT registration number is provided to all members of the VAT group.

The effect of grouping is that no VAT is charged on supplies between group members if the person that acquired the goods or services as a result of the transaction uses them entirely for the purposes of that person's taxable supplies.

All members of a VAT group in Estonia are jointly and severally liable for VAT debts and penalties.

There is no minimum time period required for the duration of a VAT group. A VAT group can only disband once the Estonian Tax and Customs Board makes a decision on the deletion of the VAT group, within 30 days as of the receipt of the application.

Holding companies. In Estonia, a pure holding company cannot be a member of a VAT group.

Cost-sharing exemption. The VAT cost-sharing exemption (in accordance with VAT Directive 2006/112/EEC Article 132(1)(f) has been implemented in Estonia. This provides an option to exempt support services that the cost-sharing group supplies to its members, providing certain conditions are met (in accordance with specific requirements laid out in Estonian VAT law).

According to Estonian VAT law, VAT shall not be imposed on the supply of services provided by an independent association of persons to their members, provided that the following conditions are met:

- The service is directly necessary for the main activity of the member, which is exempt from tax or is not subject to value added tax.
- The fee paid for the service does not exceed the costs incurred upon the provision of the service and the tax exemption of the service does not affect competition significantly.

Fixed establishment. There is no definition of a fixed establishment (FE) in Estonian VAT law. In practice, the tax authority only applies the permanent establishment (PE) rules. They equate the PE and FE rules. A permanent establishment means a business entity through which the permanent economic activity of a nonresident is carried out in Estonia.

Non-established businesses. A "non-established business" is a business that has no fixed establishment in Estonia. A non-established business is not required to register for Estonian VAT if all of its supplies are covered by the reverse-charge procedure (under which the recipient of the supply must self-assess VAT). A non-established business that has a fixed establishment in Estonia must register for VAT under the same conditions as Estonian business. A fixed establishment or resident legal person must be registered for VAT if it makes taxable supplies in Estonia totaling more than EUR40,000 from the beginning of the calendar year.

Tax representatives. The appointment of a tax representative is required for non-EU entities that are not established in Estonia. EU entities that are not established in Estonia may appoint a tax representative. A tax representative may not be used by a third-country taxable person that provides electronically supplied services and has opted for a special arrangement. A tax representative must be a legal entity established in Estonia or a branch of a foreign entity registered in Estonia and must be accepted by the tax authorities.

Effective 1 January 2022, a non-EU business that does not have a permanent establishment in Estonia is not obliged to appoint a fiscal representative when registering as a taxable person in Estonia, with whose country of residence the EU has concluded a mutual assistance contract concerning administrative cooperation, the fight against fraud and the recovery of claims relating to the VAT. Currently, the only non-EU country with which such a contract has been concluded is Norway.

At the time of preparing this chapter, according to the draft act on amendments to the VAT Act and the Taxation Act, effective 1 January 2024, third-country persons engaged in business who do not have a seat or a permanent business establishment in the EU and with whose country of residence the EU has concluded a mutual assistance agreement, which in its scope corresponds to the provisions of Council Directive 2010/24/EU and Council Regulation (EU) No. 904/2010, will be able to apply the One-Stop Shop (IOSS) arrangement. Essentially, the scopes of mutual assistance agreements that are a condition for registration as a person implementing IOSS arrangement and registration as a taxable person in Estonia are differentiated as a result of the amendment, which will allow UK taxable persons to register themselves in Estonia as VAT-liable person without appointing a tax representative. This amendment is pending final approvals in the Parliament, but it is expected to pass.

Reverse charge. In general, the reverse-charge mechanism is applicable, and the Estonian VAT taxable person is obliged to charge VAT upon the acquisition of goods or the receipt of services from a foreign taxable person who is not registered for VAT purposes in Estonia and does not have a fixed establishment in Estonia. The VAT charged can be deducted as an input tax credit on the declaration if the goods or services are used for the taxable business.

Domestic reverse charge. The domestic reverse-charge VAT applies to supplies of immovable tangible property (which are optionally taxed), waste (scrap) metal, certain metal products and gold if both parties to the transaction are taxable persons and the transaction is considered a taxable supply.

Digital economy. Specific VAT rules apply to cross-border supplies of goods and services sold via the internet (e-commerce) in all EU Member States with effect from 1 July 2021. These new rules apply to all direct sales to nontaxable persons (in practice these are mostly private individuals), but we refer to these rules as e-commerce VAT rules because most of these transactions are conducted via the internet. In general, the place of supply is in the country of consumption, i.e., where the goods are shipped to or where the buyer of the goods or services resides, subject to any "use and enjoyment" provisions that may override this rule (see Section B, Effective use and enjoyment subsection above). Therefore:

- For supplies of services made by a nonresident supplier to a to a business customer (B2B), the business customer is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, using the reverse charge.
- For supplies of goods made by a nonresident supplier to a business customer (B2B), where the goods are transported from another EU Member State, the business purchasing the goods is responsible for accounting for the VAT due, as an intra-Community acquisition. If the goods come from outside the EU, the purchaser may have to report an importation of goods.
- For supplies of goods or services made by a nonresident supplier to a to a final consumer (B2C), the supplier is generally responsible for charging and accounting for the VAT due at the rate applicable in the customer's country (unless the supplier's sales fall beneath the distance selling threshold of EUR10,000 with effect from 1 July 2021). This VAT can be reported using a single VAT registration, using a "One-Stop-Shop" mechanism.

For more details about intra-EU distance sales, see the chapter on the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, an e-commerce supplier may have a choice of how to account for VAT on its B2C supplies.

Local VAT registration. A nonresident supplier may choose to register for VAT in each Member State and account for VAT on all supplies made and recover input tax in accordance with local rules (see the Non-established businesses subsection above). Non-EU businesses may be required to appoint a fiscal representative for accounting for the VAT due on these transactions.

In Estonia, upon registration, it is required to attend the procedure in person, i.e., the person seeking registration cannot email or send the registration form by post or fax. However, it is possible to use either an authorized person or a tax representative for the procedure.

To register as a VAT-liable person, an application for registration (form KR), an application for registration as a nonresident taxpayer (form R2), power of attorney and trade register extract of the company are submitted to the Estonian Tax and Customs Board by email (to kmkr@emta.ee). Forms KR and R2 must be signed by an authorized person, i.e., the person on the trade register extract or authorized person in which case the document based on which the authorization has been granted is needed. Power of attorney grants the right to file/receive VAT registration documentation and conclude agreement to use the e-tax reporting portal on behalf of the company. Power of attorney must be certified by notary and apostille or legalized.

The fiscal representative of a nonresident is a person to whom a corresponding activity license has been issued by the tax authority and whom a nonresident may authorize to represent them for the performance of the obligations arising in Estonia.

All the rights and obligations of a nonresident extend also to the fiscal representative. The fiscal representative is required to ensure that the nonresident's monetary and non-monetary obligations arising from tax legislation are performed within the set term and in full.

The appointment of a fiscal representative does not change the obligations of the nonresident, as they are still liable for fulfilling their tax obligations in Estonia.

A nonresident of a third country engaged in business with no permanent establishment in Estonia must appoint, upon registration as a taxable person, a fiscal representative, who has been approved by the tax authority. In addition, the nonresident must also notify the tax authority of the fact by ending a copy of a contract concluded with the chosen fiscal representative by email (to emta@emta.ee).

The tax authority shall register a person as a taxable person by entering the data concerning the person in the register of taxable persons as on the date on which the registration obligation arose, within five working days as of the receipt of the application. Upon registration, the tax authority shall issue one VAT identification number for all purposes and for all taxable persons. The structure of the number is always EE and 9 digits (e.g., EE012345678).

One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, a supplier can choose to account for the VAT due under the EU One-Stop Shop (OSS), which can be used for intra-EU cross-border supplies of goods and all cross-border supplies of services made to final consumers in the EU. Unlike the previous Mini One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) scheme that applied until 30 June 2021, the OSS is not limited to cross-border supplies of electronic services, telecommunication services and broadcasting services.

The OSS is an electronic portal that allows businesses to:
- Register for VAT electronically in a single Member State for all intra-EU distance sales of goods and for B2C supplies of services
- Declare and pay VAT due on all supplies of goods and services in a single electronic quarterly return.

The OSS can be used by businesses established in the EU and outside the EU. If a supplier or a deemed supplier decides to register for the OSS, it must declare and pay VAT for all supplies (goods as well as services) that fall under the OSS.

An Estonian legal person (taxable person) can submit the application for registration online in the e-services environment of the online portal (e-MTA) by choosing "Registers and inquiries," – "Registration," then – "Registering as a user of special schemes for e-commerce and services (OSS/IOSS)." To submit an application, the fiscal representative (i.e., the person with the right to represent a legal person) must grant the necessary access permission to other representative parties (i.e., third-party compliance providers). The access permission for using the service of the special schemes OSS/IOSS is included in the following packages of e-MTA access permissions:

- Packages for legal person's representative and sole proprietor's representative, and the accountant's package include the access permission "Managing applications for and declarations of special schemes for e-commerce and services (OSS/IOSS)," which allows full use of the service.
- Package for viewing the data of legal person and package for viewing the data of sole proprietor include the access permission "Viewing applications for and declarations of special schemes for e-commerce and services (OSS/IOSS)," which allows use of the service without the right to amend data.

When a taxable person begins to add the application, the selection with two possible types of application shall be open:

- Union scheme (OSS, goods and services)
- Non-union scheme (IOSS, services, EU number)

The users of the MOSS special scheme, registered in Estonia, who wish to continue to apply the dilated special scheme (OSS), have no obligation to submit a new application for registration. Their valid applications are automatically carried over. A person who becomes a deemed supplier from 1 July 2021 (e-shop, electronic interface or other electronic trading place) shall fill in the field "Electronic interface" in the application (make a checkmark in this field). By default, this field is not filled in.

As a rule, the special scheme shall be applied from the first day of the quarter following the quarter when the taxpayer submitted the application to the tax authority for the implementation of the special scheme. For example, if the application was submitted on 5 July, the special scheme shall be applied automatically from 1 October.

For more details about the operation of the OSS, see the chapter on the EU.

Import One-Stop Shop. Effective 1 July 2021, the Import One-Stop-Shop (IOSS) scheme applies for B2C distance sales of goods from outside the EU.

Effective 1 July 2021, VAT is due on all commercial goods imported into the EU regardless of their value. The actual supply is subject to VAT in the country where the goods are imported (the country of destination). The IOSS facilitates the declaration and payment of VAT due on the sale of low-value goods (i.e., consignments valued at less than EUR150 per consignment). It allows suppliers selling low-value goods dispatched or transported from a non-EU country to customers in the EU to collect, declare and pay the VAT due. If the IOSS is used, the importation into the EU is exempt VAT.

An Estonian legal person (taxable person) can submit the application for registration online in the e-services environment of the online portal (e-MTA) by choosing "Registers and inquiries," – "Registration," then – "Registering as a user of special schemes for e-commerce and services (OSS/IOSS)." To submit an application, the fiscal representative (i.e., the person with the right to represent a legal person) must grant the necessary access permission to other representative parties (i.e., third-party compliance providers).

When a taxable person begins to add the application, the selection with three possible types of application shall be open:

- Application for import scheme (IOSS, goods, IM number)

- Application of an intermediary (IOSS, goods, IN number)
- Application of a taxable person intermediated (IOSS, goods, IM number, the intermediary shall submit the application in the name of the person intermediated).

The taxable persons who are engaged in distance selling of goods, imported from third countries to end users whose place of residence is in the EU, can use the IOSS special scheme.

The special scheme shall be applied from the day when the user of the special scheme receives the registration number for the IOSS special scheme.

For more details about the IOSS, see the chapter on the EU.

The use of the IOSS special scheme is not mandatory. If VAT is not collected via the IOSS scheme, the importation of goods into the EU is subject to import VAT in the country of final destination, and the Member State can decide freely who is liable to pay the import VAT, which could be the customer or the seller (or an electronic interface).

Postal Services and Couriers Scheme. If the IOSS is not used and the customer is liable for the import VAT due on the supply (and importation) of consignments with a small intrinsic value (i.e., less than EUR150), the VAT can be collected using the special scheme for postal services and couriers.

In Estonia, upon the implementation of this special scheme, the end user pays VAT to the person who presents goods in customs (usually to the provider of the postal service, to the express company or to the customs agency) – therefore, in contradistinction to the IOSS special scheme, the end user does not pay VAT in e-shop at the moment of the sales transaction.

This special scheme can apply to a business that:
- Presents in customs the import declaration of the goods on behalf of the actual purchaser as indirect representative
- Is the holder of the goods
- Transports the goods to the consignee whose place of residence is in Estonia

This special scheme is targeted, first of all, to postal operators and providers of express services who usually declare the import of goods with a small value on behalf of the consignee and are the holders of the goods within the meaning of the Customs Code (holder of the goods is the person who is the owner of the goods or who has a similar right of disposal over the goods as the owner; or who has physical control over the goods).

Upon the implementation of this special scheme, the imported goods are always taxable at the standard VAT rate (20% in Estonia).

A business applying this special scheme that presents the goods in customs pays VAT collected from the end users to the tax authority once a month. VAT shall be paid by the 16th day of the month following the month when VAT was collected. For more details about the special scheme for postal services and couriers, see the chapter on the EU.

Online marketplaces and platforms. Under the new EU VAT e-commerce rules, effective 1 July 2021, taxable persons that "facilitate" certain B2C sales of goods are deemed to have purchased and then supplied those goods themselves. This means that the single supply from the "underlying" supplier to the final consumer is split into two deemed supplies:
- A supply from the supplier to the facilitator (deemed B2B supply)
- A supply from the facilitator to the final customer (deemed B2C supply). Any intermediation service provided by the facilitator is disregarded for VAT purposes

This provision does not cover all sales facilitated via the facilitator. It only covers distance sales of goods imported from non-EU jurisdictions in consignments with an intrinsic value not exceeding EUR150. The jurisdiction of residence of the supplier using the facilitator is irrelevant. The supply to the facilitating platform is VAT exempt and the supplies made by that platform follow the e-commerce VAT rules as described above. In addition, the provision also covers sales within the EU, if the supplier is not established within the EU. This applies to both local shipments within one Member State as well as intra-Community shipments. In both cases, the final customer must be a nontaxable person.

In Estonia, if the intrinsic value of the goods, imported from a third country and resold to the end user whose place of residence is in the EU, exceeds EUR150 or if the actual seller of the goods is a person located in the EU – in such case the e-shop is not responsible for the taxation of the goods with VAT.

The obligation to register in Estonia for VAT liability (and also the right to get back from the tax authority the amount of VAT paid upon the import of goods) shall arise for a third-country business whose company has a registered office in a third country and who has no permanent establishment in the EU if:

- It transfers through the e-shop, owned by any other business, to the end user its goods that are located in Estonia, and this e-shop, according to new rules, is treated as the purchaser and reseller of the goods (although the transfer of the goods to e-shop is the supply taxable at 0% VAT rate in such case).
- It owns the e-shop itself, sells as deemed supplier through its e-shop to the end user the goods located in Estonia of the other third-country business and has not registered for the OSS special scheme.

For more details about the rules for online marketplaces, see the chapter on the EU.

Vouchers. The VAT Act in Estonia differentiates a single-purpose voucher (SPV) and a multi-purpose voucher (MPV). The voucher is an SPV if the voucher-related place of supply of the goods or services and the amount of VAT due are known at the time of the issue of the voucher. A VAT obligation on the transfer of an SPV arises on the date when the full or partial payment for the voucher has been received. The voucher is an MPV if, at the time of the issue, the place of supply of the transferred goods or provision of service or the collectible VAT is not known. For an MPV, the VAT obligation arises on the date when the goods have been handed over or services have been provided.

Registration procedures. Taxable persons must submit an application for registration (form KR) to the Tax and Customs Board at a service bureau of the Tax and Customs Board, online via the self-service environment e-Tax Board or by email. The application can be submitted in PDF format by email (to kmkr@emta.ee), completed in Estonian, digitally signed, and submitted by a legal representative (who has to identify themselves) or an authorized person (authorization required) or a notary or via e-maksuamet/e-toll (e-Tax Board/e-Customs). To submit the application for registration as a person liable to VAT in the e-Tax/e-Customs, the user has to have the power (authorization) "KMKR avalduste esitamine" (submission of VAT applications) given by a legal representative of a taxable person.

Non-established businesses must register in person, i.e., the person seeking registration cannot email or send the registration form by post, fax or through the e-Tax/e-Customs. However, an authorized person may act for the taxable person. The authorization must be digitally signed or proved by notary and apostilled (apostille is not needed for specific countries).

The tax authority shall register a person as a taxable person within five working days as of the receipt of the application or additional documentary (if required).

Deregistration. A taxable person that ceases to be eligible for VAT registration must deregister. That is, it must notify the VAT authorities that it must cease to be registered. A taxable person may also request deregistration if its taxable turnover drops below the annual registration threshold. However, deregistration is not compulsory in these circumstances. Tax authorities can remove a taxable person, that is not performing business activities, from the VAT register.

Changes to VAT registration details. The Estonian Company Registration Portal is an environment that allows companies to amend registry data. The portal allows electronic submitting of changing the company name and address. The Company Registration Portal entry is automatically sent to the Tax and Customs Board.

The Company Registration Portal can be used for notifying the registrar about changes in the primary field of activities by only self-employed persons and general and limited partnerships who are not required to submit annual reports to the registrar. Business associations can submit their field of activities and changes thereof only with their annual reports.

Non-established businesses must submit application for nonresident taxable person on changes in register entries concerning the termination of activities, liquidation of the permanent establishment and changes in other information (form R4) by post, fax or through the e-Tax/e-Customs. However, an authorized person may act for the taxable person.

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
- Standard rate: 22% (with effect from 1 January 2024)
- Reduced rates: 5%, 9%, 13% (with effect from 1 January 2025)
- Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services, unless a specific measure provides for a reduced rate, the zero rate or an exemption.

Effective 1 January 2024, the standard rate of VAT in Estonia is 22% instead of the current 20%. Until 31 December 2025, a taxable person has the right to continue applying the 20% VAT rate on turnover from contracts concluded before 1 May 2023, provided that the contract stipulates the use of the 20% VAT rate and does not allow for the possibility of revising this rate when the tax rate changes. A taxable person implementing special arrangements for cash accounting for VAT has the right to declare and pay VAT at the rate of 20% if turnover occurs in 2024 for goods sent or made available or services provided in 2023, for which an invoice with a VAT rate of 20% has been submitted in 2023, but the payment is received in 2024.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

- Exports of goods
- Listed exported services
- Intra-Community supplies of goods
- Seagoing vessels, equipment, spare parts and fuel for seagoing vessels
- Aircraft operating on international routes, equipment, spare parts and fuel for named aircraft
- Goods supplied and services provided to international military headquarters located in Estonia if the tax incentives are laid down in an international agreement, or for the performance of the duties to the armed forces of a NATO Member State participating in the common defense effort, except Estonia, and the civilian staff accompanying them
- A transport service for the conveyance of goods out of the customs territory of the EU or to a third country that is part of the customs territory of the EU (effective 1 July 2022, where the services are supplied directly to the consignor or consignee)
- A transport service for the import of goods (effective 1 July 2022, where the services are supplied directly to the consignor or consignee)

- Transport service for the conveyance of non-EU goods into the customs territory of the EU, where the goods are placed under a customs warehousing procedure, a free zone, an inward processing procedure, a transit procedure or a temporary admission procedure with total relief from import duties or under temporary storage (effective 1 July 2022, where the services are supplied directly to the consignor or consignee)
- Organization of transport services referred to in the preceding points and ancillary services relating to such conveyance of goods (effective 1 July 2022, where the services are supplied directly to the consignor or consignee)

Examples of goods and services taxable at 5%

- Periodicals and e-periodicals (with effect until 31 December 2024)

Effective 1 January 2025, the current reduced VAT rate of 5% applicable to press publications will increase to 9%. A taxable person implementing special arrangements for cash accounting for VAT has the right to declare and pay VAT at the reduced VAT rate of 5% until 2026 if turnover is generated from the provision of press publications, both on a physical and digital medium in 2025, but the goods were sent or made available or the service has already been provided and an invoice issued for it before 1 January 2025. Publications containing mainly advertising or private advertisements or mainly with erotic or pornographic content or video or music content are excluded from the scope of the reduced rate.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 9%

- Medical equipment and products for handicapped people
- Books and e-books (excluding textbooks and workbooks related to the national curriculum)
- Accommodation and accommodation services with breakfast, excluding any goods or services accompanying such services (with effect until 31 December 2024)
- Periodicals and e-periodicals (with effect from 1 January 2025)

Effective 1 January 2025, the reduced VAT rate of 9% will no longer apply to accommodation services and VAT on accommodation services will be calculated using a new reduced rate of 13%. A taxable person implementing special arrangements for cash accounting for VAT has the right to declare and pay VAT at the reduced VAT rate if turnover is generated from the provision of accommodation services in 2025, but the service has already been provided and an invoice issued for it before 1 January 2025. As the VAT rate will increase to 13% from 1 January 2025, the first VAT return on which the turnover is declared with a 13% tax rate is submitted on 20 February 2025.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 13%

- Accommodation and accommodation services with breakfast, excluding any goods or services accompanying such services (with effect from 1 January 2025)

The term “exempt supplies” refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to VAT and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

- Health care services
- Real estate transactions
- Financial services
- Insurance and reinsurance services
- Insurance mediation
- Educational services (only noncommercial basic education)
- Lotteries and gaming
- Postal services
- Learning materials related to education

Option to tax exempt supplies. A taxable person may opt to apply VAT to certain transactions that would otherwise be exempt from VAT if the taxable person has correctly and promptly notified the tax authority in writing. The tax authority must have been notified during the same tax period as the taxed supply or in an earlier period. The option to tax must be applied continuously for at least two years.

The following supplies are eligible for the option to tax:
- The leasing or letting of immovable property (or parts thereof), except private dwellings
- Immovable property and parts thereof, except private dwellings
- Investment gold under certain conditions
- Financial services, including the following:
  - The supply of securities
  - Deposit transactions for the receipt of deposits and other repayable funds from the public
  - Borrowing and lending operations, including consumer credit, mortgage credit, leasing transactions, settlement, cash transfer and other money transmission transactions
  - Issuance and administration of noncash means of payment (for example, electronic payment instruments, traveller's checks and bills of exchange)
  - Guarantees and commitments and other transactions creating binding obligations to persons
  - Transactions carried out for their own account or for the account of clients in traded securities provided in the Securities Market Act and in foreign exchange and other money market instruments, including transactions in checks, exchange instruments, certificates of deposit and other such instruments
  - Transactions and acts related to the issuance and sale of securities
  - Money brokerage and management of investment funds

Other financial transactions that are not exempt from VAT, as well as factoring, are taxable at a rate of 0% or 20%, depending on the status of the customer.

The transfers of greenhouse gas emission allowances are treated as securities and thus excluded together with any related transactions from the list of exempt from VAT supplies and they are subject to VAT at a rate of 20%.

The supply of insurance services, including insurance services provided by insurance brokers and insurance agents and reinsurance, are exempt services with no option to tax.

The VAT Act provides a new definition of "building land," which is an unimproved immovable that is planned for building or for which a building notice has been submitted or the intended purpose of the cadastral unit of which is over 50% residential land or commercial land or these jointly. Any land that is destined for building is subject to VAT.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point." The basic time of supply for goods and services is the earliest of the following events:
- The delivery of goods
- The performance of services
- Receipt of full or partial payment

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply for deposits and prepayments is deemed to be the date on which full or partial payment is received for the goods or services or, in the case of the receipt of services, full or partial payment is made.

Continuous supplies of services. If the provision of services continues for longer than a period of taxation, the services are deemed to have been provided and received during the taxable period in which the provision of the services terminates. In the case of the provision of regular services to the same purchaser, the time at which the services are provided and received is deemed to be the taxable period overlapping with the end of the period of time for which an invoice is submitted or during which payment for services received is to be made as agreed, but not later than after 12 calendar months. Upon the regular provision of service, in the case of which a tax liability arises for the recipient of the service, within a longer period of time than one year, the supply of the service shall be deemed to have been rendered as of the commencement of the provision of the service on 31 December of each calendar year if the services have not been paid for and the provision of the services has not been completed within the period.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. There are no special time of supply rules in Estonia for the supply of goods sent on approval for sale or return. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for supplies of reverse-charge services is the earliest of the following events:
- When the Estonian buyer receives the service
- When the Estonian buyer makes a payment

Leased assets. In case of operational leases, the time of supply rule for services applies (as outlined above). In the case of capital leases, the time of supply rule for goods rules applies (as outlined above).

Imported goods. The time of supply for imports is when the goods clear customs.

Intra-Community acquisitions. The intra-Community acquisition of goods takes place on the 15th day of the month following the month in which the goods are dispatched or made available or on the date on which an invoice is issued for the goods if the invoice is issued prior to the 15th day of the month following the month in which the goods are dispatched or made available to the purchaser. This is different in the case of a transaction that was originally not treated as intra-Community turnover, but then the grounds for a transaction cease to exist and the transaction shall be deemed to constitute an intra-Community supply of goods. In such cases, the intra-Community acquisition of goods shall be deemed to have been affected on the date on which those grounds ceased to exist.

Intra-Community supplies of goods. An intra-Community supply takes place on the 15th day of the month following the month in which the goods obtained via an intra-Community acquisition and are dispatched or made available or on the date on which an invoice is issued for the goods if the invoice is issued prior to the 15th day of the month following the month in which the goods are dispatched or made available to the purchaser. This is different in the case of a transaction that was originally not treated as intra-Community turnover, but then the grounds for a transaction cease to exist and the transaction shall be deemed to constitute an intra-Community supply of goods. Then intra-Community supply of goods shall be deemed to have been created on the date on which the grounds ceased to exist.

Distance sales. There are no special time of supply rules in Estonia for supplies of distance sales. As such, the general time of supply rules apply (as outlined above).

Call-off-stock. As of 1 January 2020, a call-off-stock definition will be implemented into the Estonian law regarding the Council Directive (EU) 2018/1910. Under the new definition, call-off-stocks is considered as goods that are delivered to a stock in another Member State for the purpose of transferring the goods to another Member State's taxable person. The transport of call-off-stock to another Member State is no longer deemed an intra-Community supply if the goods are transferred within 12 months after the arrival to another Member State's taxable person, if the new acquirer is found during the 12 months or if the goods are returned to Estonia.

Chain transactions. From 1 January 2020, a chain transaction will be considered as intra-Community supply in case goods are transferred to a taxable person of another Member State and if the same goods are transferred successively. The goods must be transferred directly from the first transferor to the final acquirer in another Member State.

If the goods are delivered to another Member State by the reseller upon notifying the transferor of its VAT registration number in the Member State of departure (same as the transferor), then the supply of goods between the transferor and reseller is a domestic supply of goods and the transaction by the reseller is regarded as the intra-Community supply. If the reseller is registered as a taxable person in the other Member State, the supply of goods between the transferor and reseller is intra-Community supply.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

A taxable person may recover input tax (which is VAT charged on supplies of goods and services) where it is used for business purposes. Input tax is generally recovered as an offset against output tax, which is VAT charged on supplies made. Input tax includes VAT charged on goods and services supplied in Estonia, VAT paid or payable on imported goods and VAT self-assessed for reverse-charge services and/or goods received from outside Estonia.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Estonia is three years. However, 60 days is the time period during which the tax authorities can check the corrected VAT return.

A valid tax invoice or customs document must generally support a claim for input tax. Invoice or customs documents are not needed if the reverse-charge mechanism is applied, and other evidence is presented.

Input tax is deductible if an invoice has been issued and the goods or services have been supplied or if full or partial payment is made.

For imported goods, input tax is deducted on the basis of a customs declaration.

An invoice may be issued on paper or, subject to acceptance by the acquirer of goods or the recipient of services, by electronic means.

Nondeductible input tax. Input tax may not be recovered on purchases of goods and services that are not used for business purposes (for example, goods acquired for private use by an entrepreneur). In addition, input tax may not be recovered for some items of business expenditure.

The following lists provide some examples of items of expenditure for which input tax is not deductible and examples of items for which input tax is deductible if the expenditure is related to a taxable business use.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Business and employee entertainment
- Business use of home telephone
- For company cars only 50% input deduction is allowed

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Hotel accommodation for a business trip
- Business gifts valued at less than EUR10
- Parking
- Mobile phones
- Travel expenses – company cars (passenger cars purchased, hired or leased and related maintenance costs, including fuel and repair):
  - Full (100%) deduction if exclusively used for business purposes on a continuous basis for at least two years. In this case, within two years, the company car is used also for non-business purposes, 50% of the input tax deducted, except from maintenance costs, shall be paid back to the tax authority. When the purpose of use of the company car changes, the taxable person must apply the tax treatment for partly business use of the car continuously for at least one year.

– If personal use of such a car is carried out, input tax up to 50% can be deducted and such status must be maintained for a year, i.e., full business use can be claimed only after a year.

Partial exemption. Input tax directly related to making exempt supplies is generally not recoverable. If an Estonian taxable person makes both exempt supplies and taxable supplies, it may not deduct input tax in full. This situation is referred to as "partial exemption."

In Estonia, the amount of input tax that a partially exempt business recovers may be calculated using either of the following methods:
• General pro rata
• A two-stage method, which includes a direct attribution of input tax

The general pro rata method is based on the percentage of taxable and total supplies in the preceding calendar year. The recovery percentage is used provisionally during the current year and is adjusted at the end of the year based on the actual value of taxable and total supplies made.

The two-stage calculation consists of the following stages:
• The first stage identifies input tax that may be allocated directly to both taxable and exempt supplies. Input tax allocated directly to taxable supplies is deductible, whereas input tax directly related to exempt supplies is not deductible.
• The second stage identifies the amount of the remaining input tax (for example, input tax on general business overhead) that may be allocated to taxable supplies and recovered. The calculation is performed using the general pro rata method based on the value of supplies made.

A partial deduction is based on the proportion of taxable supplies for which input tax deduction is allowed, made during a calendar year in Estonia and abroad, compared with the total amount of supplies made by the person during a calendar year in Estonia and abroad.

Approval from the tax authorities is not required to use the partial exemption standard methods (i.e., either the general pro rata or the two-stage method, as outlined above).

Special methods are allowed in Estonia, but only with written permission from the tax authorities.

Capital goods. Capital goods are items of capital expenditure that are used in a business over several years. Input tax is deducted in the VAT year in which the goods are acquired. The amount of input tax recovered depends on the taxable person's partial exemption recovery position in the VAT year of acquisition. However, the amount of input tax recovered for capital goods must be adjusted over time if the taxable person's partial exemption recovery percentage changes during the adjustment period.

In Estonia, the capital goods adjustment applies to immovable property for a period of 10 years and to other fixed assets for a period of 5 years. The adjustment may result in either an increase or a decrease of deductible input tax, depending on whether the ratio of taxable supplies made by the business has increased or decreased compared with the year in which the capital goods were acquired.

A capital goods adjustment is also required if a taxable person transfers immovable property used for less than 10 years and if the supply is exempt from VAT. In these circumstances, the taxable person must recalculate its entitlement to input tax paid on acquisition of the immovable property and for related goods and services. A taxable person may opt to charge VAT on the sale or leasing of immovable property (the option may not be applied to the sale or lease of living space). If the transfer is subject to tax, no capital goods adjustment is required.

In Estonia, the capital goods adjustment also applies to immaterial fixed assets, for example, software development expenses.

Refunds. If the amount of input tax that is deductible for a VAT period exceeds the amount of output tax that is chargeable in the same period, the taxable person has a VAT credit. The taxable person may choose to use the VAT credit to offset other tax obligations or penalties, or it may request a refund. Refunds are made within 60 days after the due date for payment. However, this period may be extended for up to 120 days if the tax authorities have just reasons to check the circumstances of the VAT refund application further.

Pre-registration costs. If a taxable person has, prior to the person's date of registration as a taxable person, acquired goods, except for fixed assets, intended for transfer or for the manufacture of goods to be transferred, the taxable person shall have the right to deduct the input tax on such goods in the taxable period during which the goods were transferred as taxable supply.

A taxable person that has received services prior to the person's date of registration as a taxable person shall have the right to deduct the input tax on such services in the taxable period during which such services were provided as taxable supply.

The input tax on fixed assets acquired before registration of a person as a taxable person may be deducted if the person has not used the fixed assets prior to the registration.

Bad debts. Effective 1 January 2022, output tax accounted for on supplies that do not get paid by the recipient (i.e., a bad debt) can be recovered in Estonia. The supplier can claim relief from VAT on bad debts incurred, provided that all the following conditions are met:

- The VAT invoice, which is wholly or partially unpaid, has been issued by the taxable person for the goods supplied or services provided.
- The VAT amount calculated on this supply has been declared in the respective monthly VAT return.
- The debt claim has not been alienated.
- At least 12 months (this will not be applicable if the claim exceeds EUR30,000, when there must be also a court settlement that has entered into force), but not more than three years, has elapsed from the due date of payment of that VAT invoice.
- The claim has been written off in the accounting of the taxable person, as it was unable to collect that claim, regardless of its efforts to make the utmost for collecting that claim, or the costs for recovering that claim will exceed the estimated income to be accrued.
- If the claim exceeds EUR30,000, then such claim must be proved with the court settlement that has entered into force.
- The recipient of the goods supplied, or services provided, is not a related person in the meaning of the Income Tax Act.
- At the month of write-off of the claim, the taxable person has informed in writing the recipient of the goods or services about the write-off of the claim in its accounting and has specified therein the VAT amount related to the written-off claim.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Estonia. If in the accounts of the taxable person it is not possible to separate input tax paid on goods or services used for business-related purposes from input tax paid on goods or services used for noneconomic activities, i.e., purposes not business related, the taxable person must request that the tax authority determines the amount deductible.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Estonia is recoverable. The Estonian tax authorities refund VAT incurred by businesses that are neither established nor registered for VAT in Estonia. Non-established businesses may claim Estonian

VAT to the same extent as VAT-registered businesses. VAT is refunded if the following conditions are satisfied:
- The taxable person is required to pay VAT as a business in its country of residence.
- An Estonian taxable person may deduct VAT under the same circumstances on the import of goods, the acquisition of goods or the receipt of services.

EU businesses. For businesses established in the EU, refunds are made under the terms of EU Directive 2008/9/EC. The VAT refund procedure under the EU Directive 2008/9 may be used only if the business did not perform any taxable supplies in Estonia during the refund period (excluding supplies covered by the reverse charge). For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Find below specific rules for Estonia:
- The application must be submitted electronically through the tax authorities of the country of residence to the Estonian tax authorities by 30 September of the year following the period of refund.
- VAT paid in Estonia is refunded to an EU taxable person on the basis of an electronic refund application submitted to the Estonian tax authorities by tax authorities of the other EU Member State.

Non-EU businesses. For businesses established outside the EU, refunds are made under the terms of the EU 13th Directive. For full details, see the chapter on the EU.

Estonia applies the principle of reciprocity; that is, the country where the claimant is established must also provide VAT refunds to Estonian businesses. Estonian VAT is only refunded on the condition of reciprocity to taxable persons of Norway, Iceland, Israel, Switzerland and the UK.

Find below specific rules for Estonia:
- A non-established business from a non-EU state may request a refund of VAT by filing the application form KMT
- The application may be completed in Estonian or in English
- It may be submitted by the non-established business or by an authorized representative to the following address:

  Estonian Tax and Customs Board
  Lõõtsa 8a
  15176 Tallinn
  Estonia

- The application for a refund of tax must be accompanied by the following documents:
  - Original invoices to support the claim for VAT refund
  - For an authorized representative, a power of attorney
  - A certificate issued within the preceding 12 months by the tax authorities in the country where the claimant is established, indicating that the claimant was a taxable person when it made the purchases
- For non-EU taxable persons, the following conditions must be met:
  - The amount requested must be at least EUR320 for the year
  - The country where the applicant business is resident must refund VAT to Estonian residents under the same conditions
- The VAT authorities refund VAT claimed within six months after the date on which the application is filed
- The minimum claim amount is EUR320 and there is no maximum claim amount
- The deadline to submit the refund is 30 September

Note that effective 1 January 2022, persons from non-EU countries are entitled to a refund of input tax relating to the OSS special scheme supply, whether or not Estonian taxable persons in their country of establishment are entitled to a refund of VAT and whether they are liable to VAT in the country where they are established.

Late payment interest. In Estonia, the tax authorities may be liable for late payment interest of 0.06% per day (for both EU and non-EU non-established businesses) if the refund is not processed in a timely manner.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. A taxable person must generally provide a VAT invoice for all taxable supplies made and for exports. Invoices are not automatically required for retail transactions unless requested by the customer. A VAT invoice is required to support a claim for input tax deduction.

Credit notes. A VAT credit note may be used to reduce the VAT charged and reclaimed on a supply if the taxable value changes (for example, when goods are returned goods, or a discount is granted). The credit note must refer to the original VAT invoice for the supply that is being amended.

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is mandatory in Estonia for certain taxable persons.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is mandatory in Estonia. This is in line with EU Directive 2014/55/EU (see the chapter on the EU). This has been in effect from 1 January 2019.

For B2B and B2C supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Estonia. This is in line with EU Directive 2010/45/EU (see the chapter on the EU).

There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Estonia. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

In general, an electronic invoice may be issued subject to acceptance by the acquirer of goods or the recipient of services. At the request of the tax authority, the tax authority must be granted access to electronically stored invoices.

For the EU VAT in the Digital Age (ViDA) proposals, refer to the chapter on the European Union.

Simplified VAT invoices. A simplified invoice may be issued upon the provision of transport services for passengers and invoices printed by automated machines (parking meters and automated petrol stations). The total amount in the simplified invoice may not exceed EUR160 exclusive of VAT.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Estonia. A self-billed invoice may be issued on the condition that there is a written agreement between the two parties that contains the procedure for the acceptance. The self-billing invoice must make reference to "self-billing."

Proof of exports and intra-Community supplies. Estonian VAT is not chargeable on exports of goods (i.e., zero-rated). An export supply must be accompanied by evidence confirming that the goods have left Estonia (e.g., the customs export declaration, the seller's invoice, proof of payment). Documents that certify the provision of zero-rated services include a written service agreement or written letter of intent, the purchase invoice and proof of payment.

An intra-Community supply of goods must be evidenced by documents confirming the transfer of the goods and the transport of the goods to another Member State. As of 2020, a taxable person must declare and submit a report on its intra-Community Sales Listing for the zero-rate to be applicable (see the subsection below Supplementary filings). It is also required that the VAT registration number of the acquirer in the other Member State is indicated. See the subsection on the Quick Fixes above.

No special documentation applies in Estonia for evidencing the application of the Quick Fixes. Normal intra-Community documentation rules apply.

Foreign currency invoices. If an invoice is issued in a foreign currency, the amount of VAT must be converted to the domestic currency, which is the euro (EUR), using the official exchange rate quoted by the European Central Bank (ECB) on the date of the transaction.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. It is not required to issue an invoice to nontaxable persons if the transfer of goods or provision of services is for personal use, except in the case of distance selling, the transfer of a new means of transport or treating goods transferred to third-country nontaxable persons as exports.

Distance selling. For intra-Community distance sales made B2C, a full VAT invoice must be issued. However, if the supplier operates the OSS regime, then no full VAT invoice is required unless requested.

Records. In Estonia, examples of records that must be held for VAT purposes include copies of invoices issued by or on behalf of that taxable person and invoices for goods acquired or services received by or on behalf of the person, in a chronological order and in the original form. An accounting source document is a certificate that content and format shall, if necessary, allow a competent and independent party demonstrating the circumstances and veracity of the occurrence of a business transaction. Invoices are an example of an accounting source document.

In Estonia, VAT books and records can be kept outside of the country. The place and manner at which invoices are preserved may be chosen by the taxable person on the condition that the invoices or information could be made immediately available at the request of the tax authority. Records can be kept in or outside of Estonia. There is no repatriation period set in Estonian taxation regulations, thus the taxable person should be able by any time provide by request of tax authority, provide all required accounting source documents, invoices.

Record retention period. The retention period of records is at least seven years as of 1 January of the year following the preparation or receipt of the document or, in the case of files or dossiers, the making of the last entry therein. Customs declarations certifying the import of goods shall be preserved for seven years as of the beginning of the calendar year, following customs formalities. The record retention period is 10 years from 31 December of the year of transaction for the person implementing special arrangements on an electronic communications service and electronically supplied service.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Estonia. Estonian tax authorities maintain the electronic storage of the VAT declarations.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. Estonian taxable persons must file VAT returns monthly. Returns must be filed by the 20th day of the month following the end of the tax period.

Invoices must be disclosed in the VAT return appendix in the following cases, which must be fulfilled simultaneously:
- Invoices on which the transferor of the goods or provider of services has marked the supply taxable at the 20% and 9% VAT rates.
- Invoices with a total amount (without VAT) that makes up at least EUR1,000 for one transaction partner during the taxation period. The transaction partner-based threshold shall be calculated separately for purchase and sale invoices.

Periodic payments. Payment of VAT in full is required on the same date as the VAT return submission deadline, i.e., the 20th day of the month following the end of the tax period. All VAT liabilities must be paid in euros. VAT can be paid to tax authorities by bank transfer, by bank link or credit card using the tax authority's electronic self-service environment "E-Tax Board" or in person by card payment terminals or cash in service bureaus and customs offices. "Bank link" is an e-commerce payment method in the Baltic States that allows the consumer to log on to their internet bank account and confirm a prefilled payment. A bank link can be used in E-Tax Board by the customers of SEB Bank, Swedbank, Luminor Bank, LHV Pank and Coop Pank.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Estonia, but not mandatory. VAT returns can be submitted electronically using the tax authority's electronic self-service environment "E-Tax Board." Electronic filing becomes obligatory for persons who have been VAT liable for at least 12 months. A taxable person can continue submitting paper forms after the tax authority approves a formal application.

However, digital reporting is the preferred method for filing VAT returns in Estonia. The Estonian Tax and Customs Board has developed the electronic tax filing system called e-Tax portal for taxable persons to submit tax declarations by inserting and uploading data to e-Tax portal.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Estonia.

Special schemes. Travel agents. VAT applies to the margin between the total amount paid by the customer and the total cost (inclusive of VAT) of travel agent's acquired goods and received services.

Secondhand goods, original works of art, collectors' items and antiques. VAT applies on the difference between the sales and purchase price of the goods that has been reduced by the VAT contained therein. The special scheme is applicable only if the goods are purchased for the purposes of resale. Effective 1 January 2022, the option is available to calculate the taxable amount to be declared for the resale of the secondhand goods during the whole taxable period on the basis of the difference between the selling price and the purchase price of the secondhand goods that are subject to the special arrangement. Therefore, the taxable person applying the special arrangement is not required to determine the taxable amount separately for each item. Instead, the taxable amount may be determined on the basis of all the sales and purchase transactions during the entire taxable period. Such a calculation of the taxable amount is justified in cases where normal accounting is too complex. The consent of the tax authority is required to use this basis.

Immovables, scrap metal, precious metal and metal products. A transferor may transfer the goods exclusive of VAT to an acquirer that calculates and pays the amount of VAT under the domestic reverse charge.

Cash accounting. All taxable persons of which the annual turnover does not exceed EUR200,000 can opt for cash-basis VAT accounting instead of accrual-basis accounting. Effective 1 July 2022, the right to deduct input tax arises at the time when the tax becomes chargeable. Therefore, according to which a taxable person has the right to deduct input tax on the purchase of goods or services from a taxable person applying the special arrangement for cash accounting for VAT in accordance with the payment for the goods or services, in the extent of the amount of input tax calculated on the amount paid.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Estonia.

Supplementary filings. Intrastat. A taxable person that trades with other EU countries must complete statistical reports, known as Intrastat, if the value of either its sales or purchases of goods exceeds specified thresholds. Separate reports are required for intra-Community acquisitions (Intrastat Arrivals) and for intra-Community supplies (Intrastat Dispatches).

In Estonia, Intrastat declarations are required only from taxable persons of which the total annual value of trade from and to EU countries exceeds the statistical threshold in the year preceding the accounting period.

For 2023, the threshold for Intrastat Arrivals is EUR400,000, and the threshold for Intrastat Dispatches is EUR270,000. At the time of preparing this chapter, the thresholds for 2024 are not known.

Intrastat Arrival and Intrastat Dispatch reports are filed monthly and must be submitted by the 14th day of the month following the reporting period. If a person that is required to submit an Intrastat report has carried out no intra-Community trade in a previous taxable period, a "zero" Intrastat report must be filed.

EU Sales Lists. An Estonian taxable person who has made intra-Community supplies of goods or services during a tax period, or who has transferred goods as a reseller in a triangular transaction during a tax period, must submit a report on its intra-Community supplies of goods and services (Form VD) together with the VAT return to the tax authority by the 20th day of the month following the end of the tax period.

If no intra-Community supplies were made in the relevant period, no report is required.

If the ownership of a new means of transport is transferred to a person in another EU country and if the means of transport will be transported to that EU country, a copy of the sales invoice must be submitted together with the report.

Special reporting obligations for payment service providers. According to the draft act on amendments to the VAT Act and the Taxation Act, starting from 1 January 2024, payment service providers will be required to store data on cross-border payments by payee and transmit this data quarterly to the tax authority. The amendments transpose Council Directive (EU) 2020/284 into the Estonian VAT Act and aim to detect cross-border VAT fraud and improve competitive conditions in e-commerce.

A threshold is provided to cover only those cross-border payments that can be related to economic activity. If the total number of cross-border payments per payee exceeds 25 per quarter, the payment service provider is obliged to store data on the payee and the payments, which must be submitted regularly to the tax authority.

The payment service provider is obliged to store the data electronically for three calendar years from the end of the calendar year in which the payment was made. Information must be submitted to the tax authority for each quarter by the end of the month following the quarter, i.e., on 30 April, 31 July, 31 October and 31 January, in the e-service environment of the tax authority. If the number of cross-border payments to the same recipient does not exceed 25 and the obligation to provide information does not arise, the payment service provider must confirm this separately in the e-service environment of the tax authority.

The payer's payment service provider is not obliged to store or transmit data on cross-border payments if at least one of the payee's payment service providers is located in an EU member state (for example, Estonia).

At the time of preparing this chapter, although the draft act on the matter has currently not been approved by the Parliament (passed second reading 25 October 2023 and is due for the final third reading), it will most likely be passed and will enter into force on 1 January 2024.

Correcting errors in previous returns. If some data has remained undeclared by an oversight in a previous VAT return or is incompletely or incorrectly filled in, there is a possibility to make amendments to the VAT return. Amendments to the VAT return can be made online by using the E-Tax Board or by paper, to the service bureaus. This option can only be used where the taxable person has been registered for VAT for less than 12 months or if fewer than 5 invoices are included in the annex to the VAT return.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Estonia.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. Penalties and interest are assessed for late registration for VAT and delay in remitting the VAT payable to the tax authority. Failure to register with a tax authority is punishable by a fine of up to EUR3,200.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Interest at a rate of 0.06% per day is charged on amounts of VAT underpaid or paid late. Penalty for not submitting monthly tax returns is punishable by a fine of up to EUR1,300 if the initial warning by the tax authorities is ignored and an additional EUR2,000 if the second warning is ignored. In addition, the penalties are subject to income tax at a rate of 20/80 as nonbusiness-related expenses.

The tax authorities suspended the calculation of interest on tax arrears for the COVID-19 period with retroactive effect as from 1 March until 25 May 2020. After the COVID-19 period, the default interest rate has been lowered from the usual 0.06% per day to 0.03% per day until 31 December 2021.

Penalties for errors. Penalties and interest can be assessed for errors discovered after the tax audit conducted by the tax authority. In addition, a person may be fined up to EUR3,200.

There are no specific penalties associated with the late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details. This is because the Company Registration Portal entry is automatically sent to Tax and Customs Board. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Intentional submission of false information to decrease VAT obligation or increase claim for refund is punishable by a fine of up to EUR32,000.

Personal liability for company officers. Company officers can be held personally liable for errors and omissions in VAT declarations and reporting in Estonia. Specific penalty details are outlined below:

- The failure to submit information or submission of incorrect information to tax authorities for the purpose of reduction of an obligation to pay a tax or obligation to withhold or increase a claim for refund, if a tax liability or obligation to withhold is thereby concealed or a claim for return is unfoundedly increased by an amount corresponding to or exceeding major damage, is punishable by a pecuniary punishment or up to five years' imprisonment. Major damage is damage or extent of offense that exceeds EUR40,000.
- The same act, if a tax liability or obligation to withhold is thereby concealed or a claim for refund is unfoundedly increased by an amount corresponding to particularly great damage, is punishable by one to seven years' imprisonment. Particularly great damage is damage or extent of offense that exceeds EUR400,000. In addition, the court may impose extended confiscation of assets or property acquired by the criminal offense.
- For a criminal offense, the court may impose a pecuniary punishment of 30 to 500 daily rates. The court shall calculate the daily rate of a pecuniary punishment on the basis of the average daily income of the offender.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Estonia is three years. The limitation period for an assessment of tax is three years. In the event of deliberate nonpayment/intentional failure to pay or withhold a tax, including the incurred/creation of tax arrears in the case of the criminal offense committed by the person, the limitation period for an assessment of tax is five years. The limitation period begins to run on the due date for submission of the tax return that was not submitted or that contained information on the basis of which the tax amount was calculated incorrectly. The time limit for taxable persons to voluntarily correct errors in previous VAT returns is also usually three years.

B. Scope of the tax

VAT is collected on "taxable supplies" of goods and services consumed in Eswatini (i.e., domestic supplies), as well as on importation of goods and services into Eswatini.

There are other transactions by a taxable person that are treated as taxable supplies, and these include goods taken for own use, goods given away as gifts and hire purchase leases.

Effective use and enjoyment. To avoid instances of non-taxation or double taxation, jurisdictions can apply "use and enjoyment" rules that allow a service that is "used and enjoyed" in the jurisdiction to be taxed or prevent a service that is "used and enjoyed" outside the jurisdiction from being taxed. If a service is taxed in the jurisdiction under the "use and enjoyment" provisions, a non-established supplier of the service may be required to register for VAT in every jurisdiction where it has customers that are not taxable persons. In Eswatini, no services are subject to the "use and enjoyment" provisions.

Transfer of a going concern. Normally the sale of the assets of a VAT-registered or VAT-registrable business will be subject to VAT at the appropriate rate. However, a transfer of a business as a going concern (TOGC) may be exempt from VAT under certain conditions. A TOGC is the sale of a business or part of a business capable of separate operation including assets. Where the sale meets the conditions, the supply is treated as exempt from VAT. In Eswatini, a TOGC is treated as exempt from VAT where both the transferee and transferor are registered persons.

Transactions between related parties. In Eswatini, for a transaction between related parties the value for VAT purposes is calculated at the fair market value.

C. Who is liable

Anyone who is making taxable supplies and meets the registration threshold (SZL500,000) is liable to register for VAT in Eswatini. The registration threshold only applies for domestic supplies. For importation of goods, everyone is charged VAT, and there is no requirement to register, as the VAT is collected directly by the Eswatini Revenue Service (ERS).

Exemption from registration. The VAT law in Eswatini does not contain any provision for exemption from registration.

Voluntary registration and small businesses. At the Commissioner-Generals's discretion with regard to the following:
- Taxable person needs to have a fixed place of business
- Taxable person to evidence ability to maintain proper accounting and record keeping
- Taxable person must be providing taxable supplies as defined

Any other person that wishes to register, but doesn't meet the registration threshold, may apply to the Commissioner-General, showing that they have a physical place of business in Eswatini and that they are making taxable supplies in Eswatini. The registration is approved at the Commissioner-General's discretion.

Group of individuals (not businesses), especially associations and clubs, can be registered for VAT under a single VAT registration at the discretion of the Commissioner-General.

Group registration. Group VAT registration is not allowed in Eswatini.

Fixed establishment. In Eswatini there is no legal definition of a fixed establishment for VAT purposes.

Non-established businesses. Non-established businesses can register for VAT in Eswatini through a resident agent with a resident public officer. A non-established business is only required to register for VAT in Eswatini once it exceeds the registration threshold.

Tax representatives. Tax representatives are allowed, but not compulsory. However, the supply of the service by the agent on behalf of the principal is deemed to be supply by the principal.

Reverse charge. The reverse charge applies in Eswatini for business-to-business (B2B) supplies of services from a non-established service provider. VAT is due on the supply of imported services, where the importer of the services self-accounts for VAT. It only applies where the importer of the services does not have a requirement to register for VAT in Eswatini, because it does not exceed the registration threshold or it only makes exempt supplies in Eswatini. The importer of the services is not required to register, but required to pay the VAT due, 30 days from the date of receipt of the invoice from the foreign supplier. It must complete a special form to the tax authorities for the payment due.

Where the importer of the services is registered for VAT in Eswatini, and they are making fully taxable supplies, they are not required to account for VAT on the imported services from the non-established business.

Domestic reverse charge. There are no domestic reverse charges in Eswatini.

Digital economy. There are no special VAT rules in Eswatini for supplies within the digital economy. Normal VAT rules apply. There is, however, in the VAT law a special place of supply rule for electronically supplied services, which covers the provision of websites, software, images, distance trading, etc. The place of supply for such services is deemed to be where the recipient uses/obtains advantage of the service, i.e., in Eswatini.

Nonresidents providing electronically supplied services for business-to-consumer (B2C) supplies are required to register and account for VAT in Eswatini, only if such supplies exceed the registration threshold. Otherwise, there is no requirement to register and account for VAT on such supplies.

Nonresidents providing electronically supplied services for B2B supplies are not required to register and account for VAT in Eswatini. Instead, the customer is required to self-account for the VAT due via the reverse-charge mechanism (see the Reverse-charge subsection above).

There are no other specific e-commerce rules for imported goods in Eswatini.

Online marketplaces and platforms. No special rules exist for online marketplaces and platforms in Eswatini.

Registration procedures. Businesses must apply for VAT registration by completing and submitting a taxable person identification number (TIN) and an RG01(a) registration form, and attach (where/if applicable) the following:
- Certified copy of a Certificate of Incorporation (for companies only)
- Certified copy of Form J (for companies only)
- Certified copy of Power of Attorney (where applicable)
- Certified copy of personal identity document (of the Public Officer)
- Certified copy of partnership deed (if the business is a partnership)
- Deed of trust (where applicable)
- Deed of sale (if it is a takeover)
- Constitution (only for NGOs and welfare organizations)
- Certified copy of Trading License

The TIN registration form may be collected from the nearest ERS office or downloaded from the ERS website. The ERS will review the application and inform the taxable person of the outcome within 30 days. Where necessary, the ERS may conduct inspection of taxable person businesses. When registered, a taxable person will be issued a registration certificate with TIN to be quoted in all correspondences with the ERS.

VAT registration can be done online or manually, i.e., physically submitting an application form at the tax authorities.

Deregistration. A taxable person is required to complete and submit the VAT deregistration form and indicate the reason for applying for deregistration. The form can be submitted to the nearest ERS office. Deregistration for VAT is on a voluntary basis, but normally arises from a tax audit. The Commissioner-General can deregister a business if it is determined that a business is no longer meeting the registration requirements, i.e., not meeting the registration threshold.

Changes to VAT registration details. Any changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details must be communicated to the tax authorities in writing within 14 days of the changes. Such changes include:
- Any changes to the business physical location, contact details and bank details
- Change in the circumstances that made one qualify for registration
- Changes in the business activities

D. Rates

The term "taxable supplies" refers to supplies of goods and services that are liable to a rate of VAT, including the zero rate.

The VAT rates are:
• Standard rate: 15%
• Zero-rate: 0%

The standard rate of VAT applies to all supplies of goods or services unless a specific measure provides for the zero rate or an exemption.

Examples of goods and services taxable at 0%

• Goods or services exported
• International transportation of goods or passengers or connected goods or services
• Maize meal, maize, beans, milk, brown bread, samp, rice, fresh fruit and vegetables and fresh eggs, vegetable oil (except olive oil), paraffin and animal feeds
• Farming input such as fertilizers, seeds (excluding flower seeds) and pesticides
• Prescription drugs and medicines
• School textbooks
• Petrol, diesel and liquid gas

The term "exempt" refers to supplies of goods and services that are not liable to tax and that do not qualify for input tax deduction.

Examples of exempt supplies of goods and services

• Financial and insurance services (both long and short term)
• Postage stamps
• Land and buildings not used for commercial and industrial purposes
• Lease or letting of residential immovable property
• Education, burial, cremation, medical, dental, nursing and social welfare services

Option to tax for exempt supplies. The option to tax exempt supplies is not available in Eswatini.

E. Time of supply

The time when VAT becomes due is called the "time of supply" or "tax point."

The tax point for services is the earlier of when the invoice is issued or payment is received. The basic tax point for goods is the earlier of when the goods are delivered, the issuance of the invoice or when payment is received.

If no invoice and no receipt of income is received, then there is no VAT liability.

Deposits and prepayments. The time of supply for deposits and prepayments is the receipt of the deposit/prepayment.

Continuous supplies of services. The time of supply for continuous supplies of services is the earlier of receipt of the payment for service being consumed or the issuing of an invoice.

Goods sent on approval for sale or return. The time of supply for goods sent on approval for sale or return is the earlier of the date of change of ownership, receipt of payment or issuing of invoice.

Reverse-charge services. The time of supply for reverse-charge services is time the service is consumed/received by the customer.

Leased assets. The time of supply for leased assets is the time the assets are made available under the lease agreement.

Imported goods. The time of supply for imported goods is the time the goods are cleared by Customs for use in Eswatini.

F. Recovery of VAT by taxable persons

For input tax recovery, a valid VAT invoice must be issued for the supply. A taxable person can only claim a refund upon a submission of a VAT return and where the input tax is more than the output tax.

The time limit for a taxable person to reclaim input tax in Eswatini is five years. Input tax can only be claimed in the period in which the tax invoice is issued. However, a VAT return can be amended within five years from the date the return was lodged.

Nondeductible input tax. The underlying principle is that input tax is claimable only where it has been paid on taxable supplies and charged by a registered taxable person. As such, input tax credits on the purchases attributable to the supply of exempt goods or services are prohibited.

Examples of items for which input tax is nondeductible

- Entertainment (includes expenses relating to hotel accommodation, food and beverages, hospitality)
- Passenger motor vehicle
- 50% of mobile telephone services

Examples of items for which input tax is deductible (if related to a taxable business use)

- Entertainment (if the taxable person is in the business of providing entertainment), e.g., hotels, food and beverages
- Passenger motor vehicles (if the taxable person is in the business of car sales and hire)

Partial exemption. Partially exempt businesses are not allowed to claim input tax credits on the purchases attributable to the supply of exempt goods or services. Consequently, mixed supply businesses are required to apportion input tax claim based on the portion of their taxable supplies.

There is no requirement to apply to use the partial exemption standard method. However, the Commissioner-General reserves the right to approve the apportionment calculation, hence it is advisable to seek the Commissioner-General's approval.

Special methods are not allowed in Eswatini.

Capital goods. Input tax credit is allowed to a taxable person, on becoming registered, for input tax paid or payable in respect of all taxable supplies of capital assets, made to the person prior to the person becoming registered; or, imports of capital assets, made by the person prior to becoming registered, where the supply or import was for use in the business of the taxable person, provided the goods are on hand at the date of registration and provided that the supply or import occurred not more than six months before the date of registration.

Refunds. If for any tax period, a taxable person is due a VAT refund, the Commissioner-General must refund the excess within two months of the due date of the return or within two months of the date when the return was filed if the return was not filed by the due date.

Pre-registration costs. Input tax credit is allowed to a taxable person, on becoming registered, for input tax paid or payable in respect of all taxable supplies of goods (not services) made to the person prior to the person becoming registered; or, imports of goods, made by the person prior to becoming registered, where the supply or import was for use in the business of the taxable person, provided the goods are on hand at the date of registration and provided that the supply or import occurred not more than four months before the date of registration.

Bad debts. Where a taxable person has supplied goods or services for a consideration and has paid the full tax on the supply to the Commissioner-General but has not received payment, in whole or in part, from the person to whom the goods or services are supplied; and has taken all reasonable steps to the satisfaction of the Commissioner-General to pursue payment and reasonably believes that they will not be paid, the taxable person may reduce the output tax by that portion of the tax paid for which payment has not been received. Further provision is made to define reasonable steps and they include:
(a) Creditors own letters of demand to debtor, in vain.
(b) Engagement of external debt collector who failed to collect the debt.
(c) The debt must be non-disputable and final.
(d) There must be a reasonable relation between the monetary size of the debt and the costs implication in connection with the recovery attempts.
(e) The business relations with the debtor must have ceased.

Noneconomic activities. Input tax incurred on purchases that are used for noneconomic activities is not recoverable in Eswatini.

G. Recovery of VAT by non-established businesses

Input tax incurred by non-established businesses that are not registered for VAT in Eswatini is not recoverable.

H. Invoicing

VAT invoices. Only a valid tax invoice will be considered for the purposes of the VAT Act, and this tax invoice must be issued within 30 days of the supply being made and the seller must retain a copy of the invoice.

The seller may issue a duplicate invoice clearly marked "COPY" where the buyer has lost the original invoice.

Credit notes. A credit note is issued to correct a genuine mistake or to give a credit to your customer under the following situations:
(a) Goods invoiced as standard-rated that should have been exempt or zero rated
(b) If the supply did not take place
(c) If the nature of that supply has been fundamentally varied or altered
(d) If the previously agreed consideration is being altered by agreement with the recipient (including a discount)
(e) If substandard goods are accepted by the customer at a reduced price
(f) If goods are returned or services are not accepted
(g) If goods and services are supplied for an unconfirmed consideration

Electronic invoicing. Electronic invoicing is allowed in Eswatini, but not mandatory.

Scope of electronic invoicing. For B2B, B2C and business-to-government (B2G) supplies, electronic invoicing is allowed but not mandatory in Eswatini. There is no threshold beyond which taxable persons are required to adopt electronic invoicing in Eswatini. The requirements related to electronic invoicing are the same as those for paper invoicing.

However, there is no provision in the VAT Act for electronic invoicing. The VAT Act is silent on the nature of invoicing, i.e., whether manual or electronic. The VAT Act only specifies the characteristics of an invoice. Therefore, in practice both manual and electronic invoicing is acceptable provided they meet all the specifications of a VAT invoice.

Simplified VAT invoices. Simplified VAT invoicing is allowed in Eswatini for supplies that are less than SZL3,000. The simplified invoice must contain the seller's details, including address and TIN, date of invoice, description and quantity of goods, value of supply and VAT charged.

Self-billing. Self-billing is allowed in Eswatini. It only applies to sugar mills that purchase sugar cane from sugar cane farmers. Self-billing is only allowed upon application and approval with the tax authorities. There is no requirement for an agreement to be in place between seller and buyer.

Proof of exports. For an export to qualify for a zero rating, a registered taxable person must obtain and be able to show as proof of export in every export transaction:
(a) A copy of the bill of entry or export certified by the customs authorities.
(b) A copy of the invoice issued to the foreign purchasers with tax shown at zero rate.
(c) Evidence sufficient to satisfy the Commissioner-General that the goods have been exported, in the form of an order form, or signed contract with a foreign purchaser, or transport documentation that identifies the goods as follows:
  (i) Transit order or consignment note issued by the Swaziland Railways for goods exported by rail.
  (ii) Copy of an airway bill for goods exported by air.
  (iii) Copy of a transport document for goods exported by road.

Foreign currency invoices. All amounts on VAT invoices are to be expressed in the domestic currency, which is the Swazi lilangeni (SZL). Where an amount is expressed in a currency other than Swazi lilangeni, the amount must be converted into Swazi lilangeni at the average daily selling exchange rates of the previous month for the currency concerned.

Supplies to nontaxable persons. A full VAT invoice is not required to be issued for supplies to nontaxable persons, unless requested by the consumer.

Records. In Eswatini, examples of what records must be held for VAT purposes include invoices (original invoices must be kept for supplies made and copies of invoices must be kept for purchase invoices), VAT account, general financial documents, financial statements, and accounting documents.

In Eswatini, VAT books and records must be held within the country.

Record retention period. All records and accounts, including tax invoices, debit and credit notes, must be kept for a minimum of five years and made available for inspection to an authorized officer of the ERS on demand.

Electronic archiving. Electronic archiving is allowed in Eswatini. However, there is no specific provision on electronic archiving in the VAT law. It is important to retain sufficient records and accounts in formats that enable the ERS officers to examine them effectively.

I. Returns and payment

Periodic returns. "Category A" returns are filed monthly, and the turnover of the registered person must not be less than SZL20 million per annum. "Category B" returns are filed quarterly and the registered person in this category is anyone that does not qualify to be in Category A.

Returns are due before the 20th of the following month for both Category A and B returns.

Periodic payments. For taxable persons in Category A or B, payment of tax must be made on or before the date the return is due to be filed. Where payment is in terms of a notice from the ERS, the due date must be as specified in that notice. However, the Commissioner-General has, through Practice Note No. DT-VAT/011-14, authorized the payments of tax in advance of the VAT return due date.

Electronic filing. Electronic filing is allowed in Eswatini, but not mandatory. Taxable persons have the option to file VAT returns electronically or manually. To access the online filing portal, a taxable person must be registered for online filing with the tax authorities.

Payments on account. Payments on account are not required in Eswatini.

Special schemes. Cash accounting. Taxable persons that are permitted to use the cash basis are required to account for VAT to the extent that payment has been made or received. Only businesses whose annual value of taxable supplies does not exceed SZL3 million can use the cash basis of accounting. Regardless, even if a taxable person is on the cash basis method, tax invoices must still be issued.

Annual returns. Annual returns are not required in Eswatini.

Supplementary filings. No supplementary filings are required in Eswatini.

Correcting errors in previous returns. An amended return may be submitted together with a notification detailing the reasons why the return is being amended. The notification amendment must be submitted within five years after the return was filed.

Digital tax administration. There are no transactional reporting requirements in Eswatini.

J. Penalties

Penalties for late registration. A taxable person is liable to pay an additional tax equal to double the VAT payable during the period for which it failed to register for VAT on time. The VAT payable is to be calculated from the time the taxable person was supposed to register.

Penalties for late payment and filings. Failure to submit a VAT payment on time and for late filings is an offense and an additional tax at 2% per month will be payable. Furthermore, the taxable person may be liable, on conviction, to fines or imprisonment or both.

Penalties for errors. Registered persons will be liable to a penalty of SZL2,000 to SZL6,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or to both. There is no specific description of what an "error" is for such penalties and this will depend on the Commissioner-General's view.

The late notification or failure to notify the tax authorities of changes to a taxable person's VAT registration details may result in a penalty of no less than SZL2,000 but no more than SZL6,000 or imprisonment of not more than three years or both such fine and imprisonment. Where failure to notify the Commissioner-General is deliberate or reckless, a fine of no less than SZL6,000 but no more than SZL15,000 or imprisonment of up to six years or both such fine and imprisonment may be imposed. For further details, see the subsection Changes to VAT registration details above.

Penalties for fraud. Registered persons will be liable to a penalty of SZL6,000 to SZL15,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six years, or to both. There is no specific description of how fraud is defined for such penalties and this will depend on the Commissioner-General's view.

Personal liability for company officers. Any person acting in the capacity of a company representative as a nominated officer, director, general manager, company secretary or similar position will be held liable for the company's offenses and will be liable to the specified penalties above, and/or imprisonment.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations in Eswatini is five years. The Commissioner-General is empowered to issue an assessment within a period of five years from the date the return was lodged. However, in case of fraud, gross or willful negligence, an assessment can be made any time.

A. At a glance

The European Union (EU) consists of the following 27 Member States :

Austria	France	Malta
Belgium	Germany	The Netherlands
Bulgaria	Greece	Poland
Croatia	Hungary	Portugal
Cyprus	Ireland	Romania
Czech Republic	Italy	Slovak Republic
Denmark	Latvia	Slovenia
Estonia	Lithuania	Spain
Finland	Luxembourg	Sweden

For more details on the VAT territories in each Member State, see the relevant chapters.

B. Scope of the tax

EU VAT applies to four taxable transactions:

- The supply of goods for consideration within the territory of a Member State by a taxable person acting as such
- The intra-Community acquisition of goods for consideration within the territory of a Member State by a taxable person acting as such (and in some other instances)
- The supply of services for consideration within the territory of a Member State by a taxable person acting as such
- The importation of goods (regardless of the status of the importer)

Exports and intra-Community supplies of goods are not separate taxable transactions, but "normal" supplies of goods that are VAT exempt (or rather, subject to the 0% VAT rate) ensuring that the goods can leave the territory from where the supply is made. In this section we will outline the EU VAT treatment of cross-border supplies of goods and services.

A taxable person is any person who, independently, carries out in any place any economic activity. Examples of economic activities are the activities of producers, traders or persons supplying services, including mining and agricultural activities and activities of the professions, as well as the exploitation of tangible or intangible property for the purposes of obtaining income therefrom on a continuing basis. Owning shares of a subsidiary is not considered an economic activity, unless the owner of the shares performs taxed activities for consideration for that subsidiary.

For information on fixed establishment rules in the EU, see Section D. Services in the Single Market, subsection Fixed establishment below.

Group registration. Member States can choose to consider separate entities as a single taxable person if sufficient financial, organizational and economic links exist between these entities. Transactions between members of these "VAT groups" are not taxable transactions. We refer to the country chapters for more information.

Transfer of a going concern. Member States can choose to consider the transfer of a going concern (TOGC), which is described as the transfer of a totality of assets (goods and/or services) or part thereof, as no supply of goods or services. In those cases, the person to whom the goods and/or services are transferred is to be treated as the successor to the transferor. We refer to the individual Member States chapters for more information.
