

Artificial Intelligence Compliance

May 2023

Building a better
working world

What is AI compliance?

Since 2018, the EU is working on ensuring that the use of AI in EU is safe and ethical. EU has adopted both AI strategy and Whitepaper as well as works on a draft AI Act since April 2021.

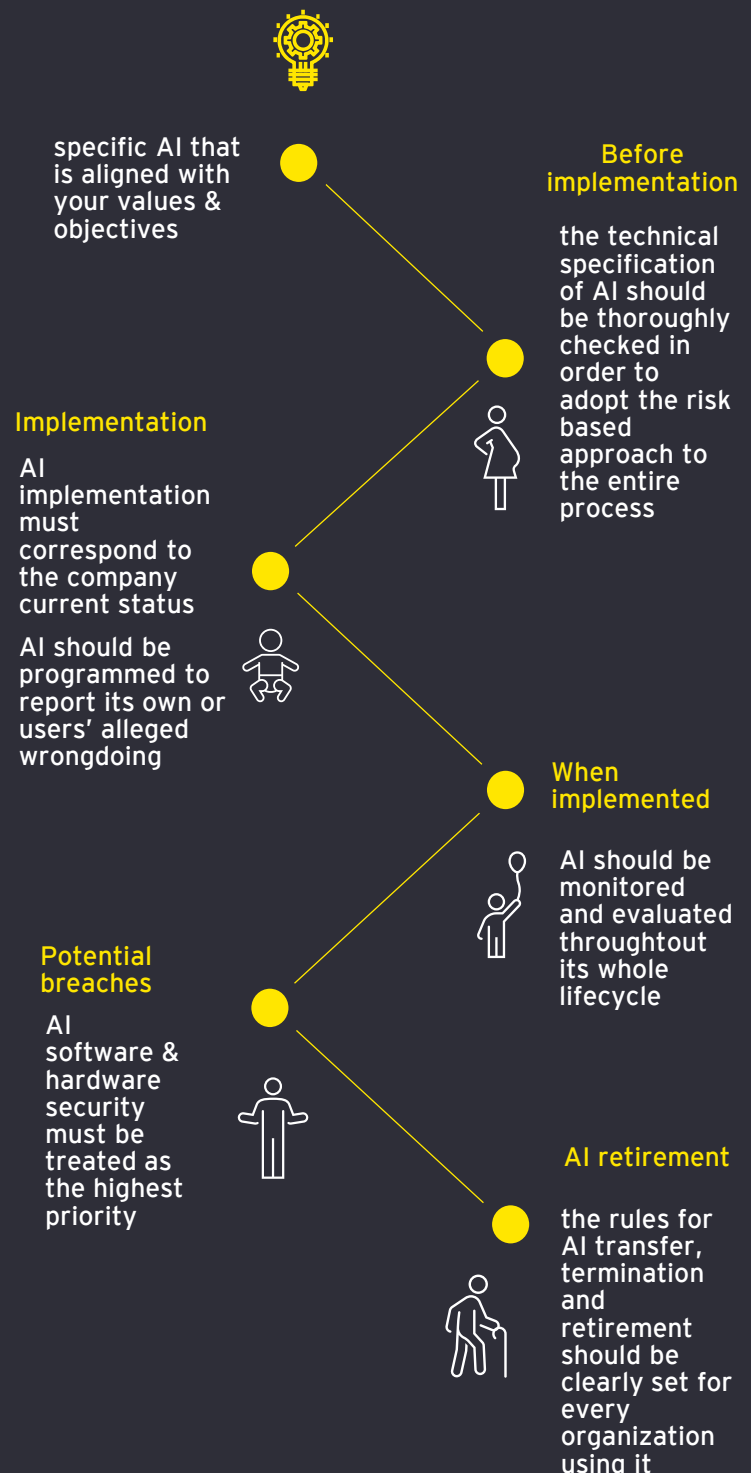

Many issues that are planned to be regulated in the AI Act are in fact enforceable nowadays already: based on GDPR & cybersecurity regulations (resilience), non-discrimination (based on labor law, competition law), civil law general rules (e.g. liability).

AI compliance current challenges

- ▶ The AI act will cover many systems that were previously not considered as AI but only machine learning.
- ▶ AI systems are divided based on the risk associated to them, for example:
 - ▶ High risk systems: HR systems, credit assessments, biometric identification, traffic, oil, gas, energy systems
 - ▶ Medium risk systems: chatbots
 - ▶ Low risk systems: spam filters.
- ▶ Every system producer, distributor and user are responsible for AI compliance and must assess the risk associated with the AI systems they hold.
- ▶ Based on the risk assessment, specific security measures must be introduced to ensure AI is transparent and explicable, robust, accurate, secure and non-discriminatory.
- ▶ Specific procedures including risk and data management, accountability, transparency and human oversight must be introduced.
- ▶ Risk management is a continuous process and regular checks must take place.

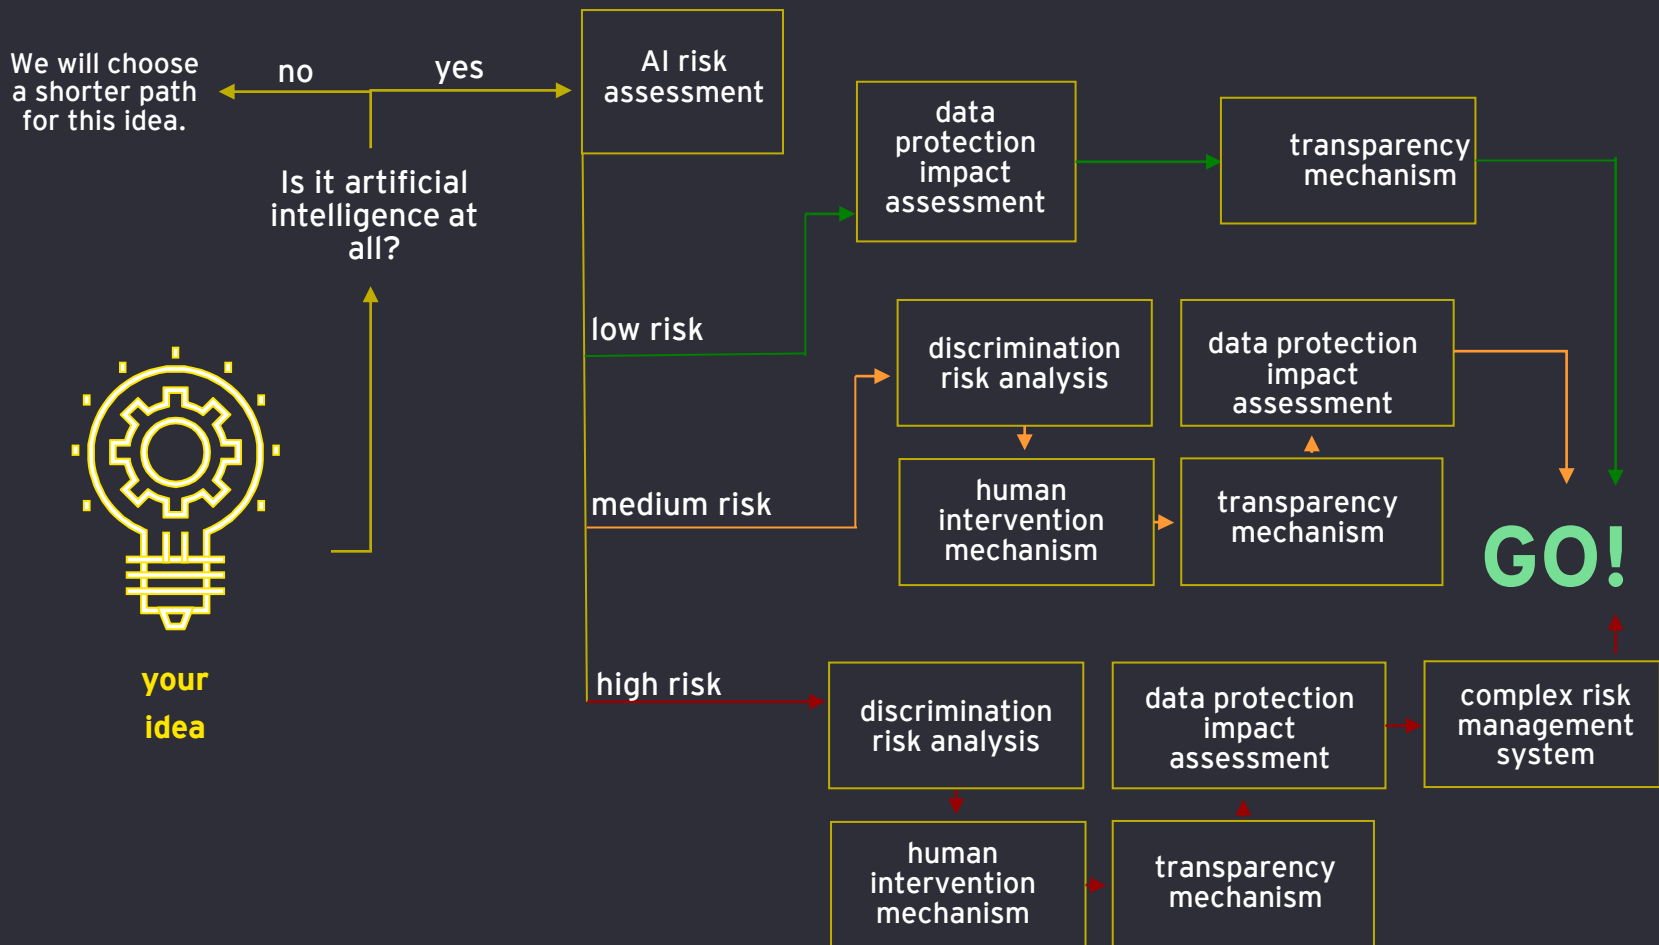

Why act now?

AI compliance requires actions already at the beginning of the AI lifecycle to ensure mature rather than superficial compliance.
